a far-off work more desirable yet ours surely lie at hand. For a diversity of tasks are around us, one makes tears to flow and another wipes them away, and if we live to make others happy we will find joy lies not without but within us. A selection on "Kindness" was then read by James Bonner, Jr., containing much good advice. "Kindness planted as a seed springs up a flower. It may also be compared to lighting another man's candle from your own, which loses nothing of its own brightness, but in giving makes another bright. Write your name by kindness and love and you will never be forgotten. Many wait to say a kind word until too late; if they are not given spontaneously, they evaporate or fall devoid of feeling." A recitation by Sallie Ivins, "Meeting Day," was pleasantly rendered, and followed by a few words of appreciation from Anna K. Way, of Philadelphia. The committee to fix up the old graveyard reported a contribution to aid in the work. After the announcement of the program for the next meeting, and a short silence, the meeting adjourned.

A. C.

WARMINSTER, PA.—A conference under the care of the Philanthropic Committee of Abington Quarterly Meeting was held at Warminster on First-day afternoon, the 14th instant. The clerk being detained by the rain, Elizabeth L. Parry conducted the meeting. Elizabeth Lloyd gave an address on Temperance, in which she gave the results of some of the latest scientific investigations concerning alcohol. Charles Bond spoke at some length on the advantages of legal prohibition. Brief remarks were also made by Isaac Parry, Rachel Bond and Warner Hallowell.

CINCINNATI, O.—The Friends' Association has just completed a successful year's work. The closing meeting was held at the home of Florence Laws, Fifth month 31st. After the usual silence the program was opened with the reading by Edwin L. Griest of a poem entitled "Achievement." The first topic for the afternoon was "The Young Friends' Association Movement." The subject was presented by Lida Layman, who instead of writing a paper, read very interesting letters from Eliza H. Worrell, of Philadelphia, and Edward B. Rawson, of New York, which gave comprehensive sketches of the work from the organization of the first Association in 1888, the object of which was "to gain a thorough knowledge of the history and testimonies of the Religious Society of Friends" and by bringing the young people of the society into closer acquaintance and association to insure their active interest in its affairs and intelligently promote its principles." There are now 64 Associations, in eleven States and Canada.

The talk by Eugene Foster on "What Should be Expected of it?" was hopeful and encouraging. He said that the future of the Young Friends' Association depends upon itself. If it looks entirely to the past, glorying in the history and greatness of the Society in former years, it will soon die out; but if it looks to the future, and tries to extend its present-day influences, advancing the principles of the Society, which are needed more to-day than ever before; if it follows the plans of all successful enterprises, and enters heartily into active, unselfish work for others, it has before it a great future.

A poem called "Religion" read by Grace Hall, completed the program, and the meeting closed in silence.

GRACE D. HALL, Ass't Clerk.

LINCOLN, VA.—An Emerson Birthday Meeting was held in the Goose Creek meeting-house, Fifth month 31st, and was well attended. Jesse H. Brown presided and Bertha J. Smith served as secretary.

The chairman opened the meeting with readings from "The Oversoul" and, remarks upon Emerson's poetry and his literary and religious writings. Recitations were given from his poetry and readings from his essays and addresses from current magazine and newspaper articles concerning him, all to show the depth and beauty of his writings and at the same time their wonderful simplicity and charm. The beauty of his character, his humility, his truthfulness, his consideration for his mother and his family and his friends and his careful and efficient attention to all the common, practical efforts of life were brought out and commended. The chairman gave reminiscences of meetings with him many years ago.

An interesting letter from John J. Janney of Ohio, was read, sending his greetings and expressing his interest in the subject of the meeting.

Those who recited from his poetry were Mary Taylor, Ella Smith and E. Bentley Gregg. Others who took part were Elizabeth Russell, Dr. Geo. R. Roberts, R. Alice Brown, Cornelia Janney, George Hoge, Ellen H. Smith, Hugh R. Holmes and Agnes W. Gregg.

The meeting was pronounced a success, interesting and profitable. Its object will be fully attained if any shall be induced to learn more of this great poet, seer, philosopher and prophet of the soul.

J. H. B.

EDUCATIONAL.

GWYNEDD BOARDING SCHOOL REUNION.

The second reunion of the old pupils of Gwynedd Boarding School, founded by Joseph Foulke in 1818 and discontinued in 1860, was held on the morning of the 15th instant in the auditorium of the Young Friends' Association Building. Forty-four former pupils were present, ten of whom were over 80 years old, while the youngest was 58. The wives and children of pupils increased the number in attendance to nearly seventy. A letter of regret was received from the oldest living pupil, Isaac Mather, of Abington, who is 97 years of age.

Hugh Foulke, who was principal from 1852 to 1860, read a very interesting history of the school, and a number of short speeches added much to the pleasure of the occasion.

Since the meeting a year ago eight members have died, one of them being Howard M. Jenkins. Of those who attended the school in the 30's the following were present: Robert Hatton, Malvern, Pa.; Henry R. Fell, Trenton, N. J.; Augustus Sleight, Quakertown, Pa.; Milton Cooper, Coopersburg, Pa., and William Balderston, Dolington, Pa.

The question of future meetings was considered, and resulted in a determination to effect an organization of voluntary membership of pupils and descendants of Joseph and Elizabeth Foulke, and for the accomplishment of the same an executive committee was appointed.

WILMINGTON FRIENDS' SCHOOL.

On Sixth-day, the 12th instant, Friends' School, Wilmington, Del., closed one of the most successful years in the history of the school. The enrollment this year was 225, an increase of 48 over last year's attendance. The closing exercises of the Primary and Grammar School departments were held in the assembly room of the school at 10 a. m., and were largely attended. The Commencement exercises were held in the meeting-house, across from the school building at 3 p. m. There were eight graduates: Meta H. Barr, Isabel G. Carhart, Adeline H. Day, Mary L. Hoopes, Edna C. Lecarpentier, S. Rodmond Smith, Willard Springer, Jr., and Mildred R. Taylor. The speakers with their subjects were as follows: Meta H. Barr, "The Caesar of History and of Shakespeare," S. Rodmond Smith, "The Government Ownership of Railroads," Mildred R. Taylor, "Millet, the Peasant Painter." Dr. Albert E. Hancock, of Haverford College, delivered the address to the graduates. Of the graduating class Meta Barr will enter Bryn Mawr, Mary Hoopes, Swarthmore, Rodmond Smith, Cornell, Willard Springer, Lafayette, and Mildred Taylor, Smith College.

The following will comprise the faculty for the year 1903-1904: Herschel A. Norris, Principal, Latin; Caroline L. Crew, English and German; Floyd P. Johnson, French and Greek; Bertha L. Broomell, Mathematics; Nathan H. Manakée, Science; M. Gail Jack, Reading and Elocution; Clawson S. Hammit, Free-Hand and Mechanical Drawing; Caroline B. Drew, in charge of Boys' G. S.; Elizabeth A. Sensenig, in charge of Girls' G. S.; Laura A. Yerkes, Mary Wilson Pyle, Primary School, Francis C. Pyle, Manual Training; Mary A. Taylor, Kindergarten; Sarah E. Hamilton, Gymnasium Director for Girls.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

THE Schofield School issued its last Bulletin for the term in Fifth month and its printer has gone to Buck Hill for the summer. There have been 78 students in the boarding department the greater part of the school term, many of whom have worked a part of the time to earn money to pay for their schooling during the remaining months. The Commencement exercises included an entertainment by the Glee Club, a joint public meeting of King's Sons and King's Daughters, and a program prepared by the alumni. The Commencement Address was delivered by Rev. R. C. Bedford, Beloit, Wis., Secretary of Board of Trustees, Tuskegee Institute.

The Laing School at Mt. Pleasant, S. C., closed Fifth month 21st with appropriate exercises; 230 pupils were enrolled during the month. Fifteen children have been cared for in the Home during the winter. The old women in the Shelter are all very feeble, and the assistance rendered has been barely sufficient to make them comfortable. The Dorcas Room will be kept open one or two days in the week during the summer providing enough barrels are sent by the friends of the school. For information respecting barrels write to Virginia Marsh, Box 7, Mt. Pleasant, S. C.

Albert Cook Myers will go to England early in Seventh month to collect material for another book, which is to be entitled "The Immigration of the English-Quakers into Pennsylvania, 1682-1750." He has been chosen Joshua Lippincott Fellow of Swarthmore College, and will spend next year at the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, where he has been appointed Honorary Fellow in American History.

On Seventh-day a class of little children from Lansdowne First-day School, with their teacher, visited the children's wards of the Pennsylvania Hospital, West Philadelphia, taking flowers and picture books to the sick children. The teacher was unable to decide whether the visit gave greater pleasure to the visitors or the visited.

Elizabeth Powell Bond will sail on the Philadelphia from New York on the 24th, expecting to attend Woodbrooke Summer School of the English Friends at Birmingham. She expects to sail on her return on Eighth month 29th.

A note from Isaac Vale, of Hardy, Nebraska, renewing his subscription to the INTELLIGENCER, reminds us that he is approaching his 92d year and is one of our oldest subscribers.

LITERARY NOTES.

In the Dial (Chicago) for Sixth month 1st, is given a list of 100 books of recent publication, recommended for summer reading. Twenty of them are on nature and out-of-door subjects and are as follows:

- Buckham, James. "Where Town and Country Meet." Jennings & Pye. $1.00 net.
 Colquhoun, Ethel. "Two on their Travels." A. S. Barnes & Co. $2.50 net.
 Ely, Helena R. "A Woman's Hardy Garden." Macmillan Co. $1.75 net.
 Fitzherbert, S. W. "The Book of the Wild Garden." John Lane. $1.00 net.
 Going, Maud. "With the Trees." Baker & Taylor Co. $1.00 net.
 Henshall, James A. "Bass, Pike, Perch, and Others." Macmillan Co. $2.00 net.
 Hill, Lucile E. (editor). "Athletics and Out-Door Sports for Women." Macmillan Co. $1.50 net.
 Holder, Charles F. "Big Game Fishes of the United States." Macmillan Co. $2.00 net.
 Keeler, Harriet L. "Our Northern Shrubs." Charles Scribner's Sons. $2.00 net.
 Long, William J. "School of the Woods." Ginn & Co. $1.50 net.
 Miller, Olive Thorne. "True Bird Stories." Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.00 net.

Milman, Helen. "My Kalender of Country Delights." John Lane. $1.25 net.

Nuttall, Thomas. "Birds of the United States and Canada." New Revision and Annotated Edition by Montague Chamberlain. Little, Brown & Co. $3.00.

Parkhurst, H. E. "Trees, Shrubs, and Vines of the Northeastern United States." Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.50 net.

Roberts, Harry. "The Tramp's Handbook." John Lane. $1.00 net.

Sanford, L. C. and others. "The Water Fowl Family." Macmillan Co. $2.00 net.

Scott, William L. O. "The Story of a Bird Lover." The Outlook Co. $1.50 net.

Weed, Clarence Moores. "The Flower Beautiful." Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $2.50 net.

Weed, C. M. and Dearborn, Ned. "Birds in Their Relation to Man." J. B. Lippincott Co. $2.50 net.

Whiting, Charles G. "Walks in New England." John Lane. $1.50 net.

In "The Physiological Aspects of the Liquor Problem," edited by J. S. Billings, M.D., we have the results of invaluable and painstaking scientific research. It belongs to the same series as "Substitutes for the Saloon," published two years ago, which has been widely read and discussed. In the present work Professor Atwater writes on the Food Value of Alcohol, Professor R. H. Chittenden of Yale on the Influence of Alcohol on Digestion, and Dr. John J. Abel on the toxic element in alcoholic beverages; among other writers on special topics, Dr. C. F. Hodge treats of the Influence of Alcohol on Growth and Development, Dr. J. S. Billings deals with the Relation of Drink Habits to Insanity, and Dr. A. C. Abbott writes of the Influence of Alcohol on Resistance to Infection.

(Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, Mass. 2 vols. 8 vo, $4.50.)

An interesting account of the Southern Educational Conference is given in the Southern Workman for this month. The magazine also contains Booker T. Washington's address on Collis P. Huntington, delivered at the dedication of the Collis P. Huntington Memorial Library, at Hampton, Va. In an interesting sketch entitled "A Changed Ideal," a graduate of Hampton tells how a question and answer in the Police Gazette, which he read when a boy, gave him the information that the doors of that institution were open to colored boys, and turned his thoughts from prize fighting to higher things.

BUCK HILL FALLS ASSEMBLY.

The program of evening entertainments during the Assembly at Buck Hill Falls is as follows:

- Sixth month, 2d-day, 22d. Address, The Evolution of our Discipline, Joseph Elkinton, Jr.
 3d-day, 23d. Lecture, Irish Poetry, J. Russell Hayes.
 4th-day, 24th. Lecture with Readings, James Whitcomb Riley, M. Paul Pearson.
 5th-day, 25th. Readings from Harris and Ruth McEnery Stuart, M. Paul Pearson.
 6th-day, 26th. Address, Alfred C. Garrett.
 3d-day, 30th. Lecture, (Ill.), Judea, Jesse H. Holmes.
 Seventh month, 4th-day, 1st. Lecture, Joseph S. Walton.
 5th-day, 2d. Reading, The Last Word, Helen G. Borton.

Other entertainments will be arranged later.

"I HAVE had a singularly happy life," wrote Jessie Benton Fremont not long before her death; "happy in the loving friendship of my father, of my husband, of my sons, and now of my grandsons. Other things are clouds only, but behind them shines steady and splendid the lasting thing—home love."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE SIGNIFICANCE.

Up and down through the city
Rushes the loud-whirring car ;
Warnings clear and shrill
Signal its course afar.

And the nervous strife of its pulsing life,
Now tinged with calm at need,
Is eloquent sign of the life of the time
Which the hurrying passers lead.

Out from the heart of the city
Steams the fast-breathing train ;
Lines of glittering steel
Beckon it onward amain.

And the vibrant force of the iron horse,
Its marvellous power and strength,
Betoken aright the people's might.
Through the country's breadth and length.

Forth from the wharfs of the city
Ships that are tall-masted glide ;
Paths of ocean profound
Fearless they heavenward ride.

And their stately haste o'er the billows' waste,
Their poise and strength and glee,
Are symbols deep of the powers that sleep
In the lands that encircle the sea.

Joining the ways of the city,
Linking the parts of the land,
Nation and nation uniting,
Runs an e'er-strengthening band.

And the heightened play and the widened sway
Of our word and deed and thought
Are emblems sure of what shall endure
In the works that man hath wrought.

ANNA WILDMAN.

INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

PEACE between capital and labor, is that all that you ask ?
Is peace then the only thing needful ?
There was peace enough in Southern slavery.
There is a peace of life and another peace of death.
It is well to rise above violence.
It is well to rise superior to anger.
But if peace means final acquiescence in wrong,—if your aim is less than justice and peace, forever one,—then your peace is a crime.

—Ernest Crosby.

THE SANDMAN.

The Sandman comes across the land,
At evening, when the sun is low,
Upon his back, a bag of sand,—
His step is soft and slow.
I never hear his gentle tread,
But when I bend my sleepy head,
"The Sandman's coming!" mother says,
And mother tells the truth, always!

He glides across the sunset hill,
To seek each little child, like me :
Our all-day-tired eyes to fill
With sands of sleep, from slumber's sea.
I try my best awake to stay,
But I am tired out with play ;
"I'll never see him!" mother says,
And mother tells the truth—always!
—Marie van Vorst, in Harper's Magazine.

METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR FIFTH MONTH, 1903.

Mean barometer,	30.159
Highest barometer during the month, 2d,	30.501
Lowest barometer during the month, 22d,	29.890
Mean temperature,	66
Highest temperature during the month, 20th,	93.
Lowest temperature during the month, 2d,	36.
Mean of maximum temperatures,	76.3
Mean of minimum temperatures,	55.5
Greatest daily range of temperature, 1st,	31.
Least daily range of temperature, 31st,	7.
Mean daily range of temperature,	20.7
Mean temperature of the Dew Point,	53.
Mean relative humidity, per cent.,	70.2
Total precipitation, rain, inches,	2.08
Greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours, 1.15 inches of rain, on the 29th and 30th.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more precipitation, 11.
Number of clear days 15, fair days 9, cloudy days 7.
Prevailing direction of the wind from northeast.
Thunder storms on 18th, 20th, 28th, 29th.

SENSIBLE TEMPERATURE DATA.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 68° on 30th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 40° on 2d.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 56.8°.
Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 70° on 21st and 28th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 40.5° on 1st.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 57.8°.
Mean of wet bulb thermometer for this month, 57.3°.

NOTE.—The means of the daily maximum and minimum temperatures, 76.3° and 55.5° respectively, give a monthly mean of 66°, which is 3° above the normal, and 2.6° above the corresponding month in 1902.

The total amount of precipitation for the month, 2.08 inches, is 2.16 inches less than the normal, and about one-third of an inch less than fell during Fifth month, 1902.

JOHN COMLY, Observer.

Centennial Avenue, Philadelphia, Fifth month 30th.

WORK FOR PEACE IN ENGLAND.

THE annual report of the Peace Society (England) expresses satisfaction at the conclusion of peace in South Africa, at the visit of the Colonial Secretary, which it urges should have been made before the war, and at the steps which are being taken to restore and re-settle the devastated countries. It notes, moreover, that the conclusion of Peace does not necessarily mean its establishment, and refers to the various wars which have succeeded or are in progress.

It rejoices at the better and more amicable feelings between this country and others, especially France, but points to the growth of militarism and the preparation of the country for conscription as a serious danger which requires watchful attention.

On the other hand, the progress of arbitration during the year has been remarkable. Decisions have been reached in eight cases in which the principle had been invoked; and there have been twenty-eight new cases, including eleven stipulations for arbitration in connection with the Venezuela difficulty. This is a record number. The report makes special reference to some of these, especially the Venezuela case, and that of the Alaska Boundary, which latter has been referred to a mixed commission for settlement.

The work of the society has been greatly increased during the year. A larger number of public meetings has been held; and four new agents have been appointed. "Peace Sunday" was observed on Twelfth month 21st, when 38,112 invitations were sent out from the central office to all ministers in charge in the United Kingdom, and others. To these, 3,771 replies were received, promising 5,820 sermons and addresses, and 231,718 copies of literature were distributed. This, however, does not represent the total amount of the literature distributed which has been going on throughout the year. "Peace Sunday" was also observed in France. A circular of invitation was sent out from the Society's Bureau in Paris to 1,526 protestant pastors and preachers, and met with a cordial response.

The circulation of the Society's organ, the Herald of Peace, has increased, and the paper itself has undergone considerable improvement. A new paper for the young has been started, entitled the Olive Leaf, which is published as a supplement to the Herald of Peace.

The Report concludes by a further reference to the dangerous military movements in the country as an incitement to fresh effort. It affirms that these awaken greater apprehension from the fact that the majority of people seem hardly awake to their character, and that they have had but feeble countervailing influences in the official and organized Christianity of the day, and that if the Christian Church were doing its duty in regard to the question of International Peace, there would be no longer any necessity, or even room, for the labours of the Peace Society.

PATENT MEDICINES AND THE DRINK HABIT.

MISS MAUD BANFIELD, "The Journal's Trained Nurse," in the May number of The Ladies' Home Journal, has an article entitled, "About Patent Medicines," in which she speaks strongly and plainly on the danger connected with the free sale and enormous consumption of patent and proprietary medicines—bitters, tonics, etc.—many of which contain large quantities of alcohol. How great a percentage of alcohol some of the most popular of these nostrums contain may be understood from the following list, which is quoted by the writer from the report of Dr. Bumgardner, in the "Transactions, Colorado State Medical Society for 1902." They may, therefore, be relied upon as authoritative and up-to-date :

Greene's Nervura	17.2
Hood's Sarsaparilla	18.8
Schenck's Seaweed Tonic	19.5
Brown's Iron Bitters	19.7
Kaufman's Sulphur Bitters	20.5
Paine's Celery Compound	21.0
Burdock Blood Bitters	25.2
Ayer's Sarsaparilla	26.2
Warner's Safe Tonic Bitters	35.7
Parker's Tonic	41.6
Hostetter's Stomach Bitters	44.5

These figures are startling, and they become more so when it is remembered that the daily doses of these mixtures are large, and the number of their consumers legion. Doubtless many of those who, listening to the specious advertisements which recommend them, indulge in their use, would never dream, under ordinary circumstances, of partaking, even for health's sake, of the tremendous doses of alcohol which, under the name of tonic or bitter, or some other fallacious appellation, they are daily swallowing. When it is remembered, on the one hand, how insidiously the alcohol habit is formed, and, on the other, how enormous are the quantities of these medicines manufactured and sold, there is much point in the question quoted by the writer of the article referred to, from a medical journal, "American Medicine," which, in a recent issue asked: "Why do not the temperance people fight the patent medicine enemy?" and went on to say: "That is a question we would like to have any member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, or other similar organization answer. If it is admitted that the army canteen made drunkards, surely the patent medicine syndicates make a thousand times as many." . . . "The bitters are stronger than whisky, far stronger than sherry, port, etc., and claret and champagne far behind." Miss Banfield quotes the New York Medical News, of September 20th last, as saying: "As the remedies are prescribed to be taken in tablespoonfuls, or even larger doses, three times a day, it can easily be understood why they give a delusive sense of well-being, and increase the appetite of those who take them. . . . In woman, particularly, the origin of the craving for liquor is often a mystery to her family and friends. Undoubtedly, the taste for spirits not infrequently begins with indulgence in these so-called 'tonic' remedies, which have done and are doing an incalculable amount of harm." No wonder there is at least one of the insurance companies which requires its medical examiner to ask each applicant: "What patent medicines have you used in the last five years?" —[Christian Guardian.]

Be Accurate.

THOROUGHNESS implies accuracy. Glittering generalities may have their place, but it is not in the class-room. Dean Briggs thinks it "next to impossible to find a youth who can copy a list of printed names without mis-spelling," a result which might be expected when "we leave the strait and narrow way and wobble all over the flowery meadows." There is no more valuable result of training than the habit of absolute exactness, and no greater menace to life in any phase than its lack. Failure to grasp the exact thought of the speaker, to report exactly what has been heard, is a fruitful source of trouble wherever it occurs, and the world has a right to demand that our schools and colleges shall train their students to be accurate, if nothing else!

Examination papers and unexpected tests often bring discomfiture in their train. "Mount Carmel is the place where Elijah sat when he was fed by a crow"; "Galilee received its name from Galileo, who once wrote a history of Palestine," were the results of one student's reading of Hebrew history. A chance remark of a teacher that the desert life of the Semites gave time for reflection and bred seers and prophets, men of religious and philosophic thought, came back to her, at the next written test, in the somewhat startling declaration that "in the desert men had nothing to do, and so became philosophers." In this era of the eye and ear specialist, may we not hope for some discovery which shall lead to keenness of vision and clearness of hearing, that we may catch, not the mere words, but the thought underneath?—[President Woolley, in Harper's Bazar.]

A City Country Club.

CITY people who spend the coming summer in the country may adopt either of two attitudes. They may snub or patronize the country folk, gain their ill will, and leave all parties the worse for the contact; or they may identify themselves with the interests of the place they visit, and thereby do good and get good, as have the summer residents of a hill town in Massachusetts.

This village is four miles from the railway, and has only three hundred and fifty inhabitants. The summer visitors number about fifty; they are not wealthy. Nature has favored the town, but it was too small and poor to improve its opportunities. So residents and summer people united in a city country club, open to all at a nominal charge, "for the promotion of pastime and for the permanent uplifting of the town."

Without much money, mainly by means of "bees," in which every one joined, the worst roads were mended and the roadsides were cleared of rubbish; a common, a wayside park, golf-grounds and a tennis-court were laid out; a neglected spring was made accessible, and a watering-trough was set up on a road where there had been none within five miles. A piano was bought for the town hall, several excellent entertainments were given, and every fortnightly meeting of the club was followed by a "sociable" that brought together townsfolk and visitors.

Material results already appear. "Summer people" find the town more attractive, partly because it is not so barren of conveniences. The property of permanent residents is increasing in value, and since the club started more land has been sold than had changed hands in twenty-five years before. But such an enterprise serves ends and uses that money cannot measure. It is the spirit of it that we commend to all, who, in the months to come, will have it in their power to promote sympathy and establish "neighborliness" between the country and the town.—[Youth's Companion.]

"Thirty Poisonous Plants."

SEND to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., for free pamphlet entitled "Thirty Poisonous Plants." Every one who loves to roam in fields and forest should know the poisonous plants. It is very fortunate for those who are fond of rambling through the fields and woods that most of the plants in that government list are poisonous only when eaten. Nearly all cases of skin poisoning are from poison-ivy or poison-sumac.

It will doubtless surprise many who read this pamphlet of "Thirty Poisonous Plants" to learn that the lady's-slippers or moccasin flowers are included in the list. A poisonous oil similar to that of poison-ivy is secreted in the leaf hairs, especially at the fruiting season. The leaves and flowers of the lily-of-the-valley are also poisonous when taken internally. The taste, however, is very bitter, so no one is likely to eat them.

The beautiful mountain laurel is so often eaten by sheep, resulting in their death, that the farmer calls it sheep-laurel, or poison-laurel.—[St. Nicholas.]

How a Spider Used Sixpence.

A FRIEND of mine noticed near his camp a trap-door spider run in front of him and pop into its hole, pulling the "lid" down as it disappeared. The lid seemed so neat and perfect a circle that the man stooped to examine it, and found to his astonishment that it was a sixpence. There was nothing but silk thread covering the top of the coin, but underneath mud and silk thread were coated on and shaped convex (as usual). The coin had probably been swept out of the tent with rubbish. As is well known, the doors of trap-door spiders' burrows are typically made of flattened pellets of earth stuck together with silk or other adhesive material. The unique behavior of the spider in question showed no little discrimination on her part touching the suitability as to size, shape, and weight of the object selected to fulfil the purpose for which the sixpence was used.—[Sydney Bulletin.]

Wendell Phillips's Apt Reply.

A NUMBER of years ago Frances E. Willard made a temperance address in Boston. During her stay in the city, a young man happened to call upon Wendell Phillips, who entertained him until late in the night telling of the old abolitionist days, and showing him relics of their struggle. As the young man rose to depart, he said to Mr. Phillips:

"Mr. Phillips, I think if I had lived in your time I would have been heroic, too."

Mr. Phillips, who had gone to the door with his caller, pointed to the saloons down the street, and his voice was keen with indignation.

"Young man," he said, "you are living in my time, and in God's time. Did you hear Frances Willard last night? Be assured that no man could have been heroic then who is not heroic now. Good-night."—[Gathered.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

AN important decision sustaining the principle that the provisions and restrictions of the United States Constitution do not extend of their own force over territory newly acquired by the United States has recently been handed down by the United States Supreme Court. Hawaii was annexed to the United States in 1898; the Territorial government was not created until 1900. During this interval a Japanese was convicted of murder by the majority vote of the jury, according to the law of the Hawaiian Republic. An appeal being made to the Supreme Court the verdict was sustained by five of the judges, while four of them, including Chief Justice Fuller, handed down a vigorous dissenting opinion, claiming that this decision means that Congress may exercise sovereign power over acquired territory, in violation of the constitution.

In the English Parliament, on the 9th instant, Chancellor of the Exchequer Ritchie moved the second reading of the budget bill, which contained a clause repealing the war duties on grain. Henry Chaplin, a Conservative member, in the interest of the new protective policy advocated by Secretary Chamberlain, moved an amendment striking out the repealing clause. In the debate which followed James Bryce and others defended the policy of free trade, saying that America's prosperity is owing to her natural advantages and internal free trade. Premier Balfour's speech was non-committal, urging careful examination before changing a time-honored policy. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 42 to 28. A majority of the Conservatives and also of the Unionists joined the Irish and the Liberals in voting against the protective tariff on grain.

THE murder, by officers of the army, of the King and Queen of Servia, together with all their adherents of any influence, rid the Servian people of an intolerable royal house, in a way that horrified the civilized world. King Alexander was a weakling dominated by the beautiful Queen Draga, for whom the people did not have any respect and whom they thoroughly hated. There seems to have been no popular disturbance and no opposition to the election as King of Peter Karageorgovitch, the exiled head of the rival royal family. One of the conditions of Peter's acceptance of the throne is that those directly implicated in the assassination and revolution shall be exiled.

THERE seems now to be no danger of serious trouble in the anthracite region. The convention called to consider the refusal of the operators to recognize the representatives of the miners on the board of conciliation was in the full control of President Mitchell and passed off quietly. It is understood that the three representatives duly elected by the miners of the three districts will be recognized by the representatives of the operators, and there is reason to hope that the differences existing will be amicably settled.

Six officers of the B'nai B'rith, the representative association of the Jews in America, on the 15th instant discussed the condition of the Jews in Russia with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay, and presented a tentative petition which they desired the Government, unofficially or semi-officially, to assist in presenting to the Czar. President Roosevelt assured them of his friendly feeling, and said he had been notified by the Russian Ambassador that the Governor of Kisheneff has been removed; that between three and four hundred of the participants in the outrages have been arrested, and that these men would be punished to the utmost that the law would permit.

The Johnstown tragedy has been duplicated in Oregon. Heppner, a town of 1,250 inhabitants, was destroyed by a cloudburst at 6 p. m. on the 14th, and it is estimated that 500 lives were lost. All communication with the outside world was cut off, but a courier was sent to nearby towns and the next day at noon a relief train left Dalles with nurses, physicians and supplies. In New Mexico Albuquerque and other places along the Rio Grande, are reported as in imminent danger on account of the sudden rising of the river from cloudbursts in the mountains. From Montana come reports of floods that interfere seriously with railroad traffic.

NEWS NOTES.

On the 12th instant over seven inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours at Port Jervis, N. Y., and did much damage in the Delaware Valley.

All cargo records in the immigration movement have again been broken, one ship bringing to New York no less than 2,854 steerage passengers.

The Liberty Bell has been sent from Philadelphia to Boston to be a feature of the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill, on the 17th.

On the 10th instant President Roosevelt attended the wedding, at Cleveland, Ohio, of Ruth Hanna, daughter of Senator Hanna, and Joseph Medill McCormick, of Chicago.

ONE of the big ships that left New York last week carried over 1,000 steerage passengers, largely servant girls, apparently bound on a visit to homes in Ireland and other parts of Europe.

On the morning of the 10th Philadelphia was covered for half an hour by clouds of intense blackness; nearly an inch of water fell in fifteen minutes, accompanied by continuous thunder and lightning.

The Philadelphia Country Week Association has opened its headquarters at 1412 Arch street, where contributions will be gratefully received. Beginning next month a special train will leave the city every Fifth-day, conveying the children to country farms.

The report of the Interstate Commerce Commission shows that the railroads of the United States added 5,234 miles to their total mileage during the last fiscal year, a record of construction greater than for any year since 1890. This brings the total single track mileage to 202,471.

PORTO RICO is furnishing a market of $1,000,000 a month to the producers and merchants of the United States, which is five times as great as in the years preceding annexation. The amount of goods exported from Porto Rico to this country has increased in about the same ratio.

PROFESSOR ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL has resigned the presidency of the national geographic society of Washington, his desire being that it may have a geographic specialist at its head. The society is to have a beautiful new home built as a memorial to Gardiner G. Hubbard, the father-in-law of Professor Bell, who was its founder and supporter.

On the 9th instant President Baer testified before the Interstate Commerce Commission that at the present price of coal the Reading Company can make barely 4 per cent. on its investment. A dispatch from Pottsville, Pa., bearing the same date, stated that owing to the increased price of anthracite enormous sums are about to be invested in new coal openings, including $3,000,000 that the Reading Coal and Iron Company will spend for this purpose.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

6TH MO. 21. — MEETING AT WHITE Plains, N. Y., at 35 Greenidge Avenue. Dr. Jesse H. Holmes expects to be present.

6TH MO. 21. — A CONFERENCE UNDER the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the meeting-house at Birmingham, at 2.30 p. m. Subject: Improper publications. Addresses by Dr. Joshua D. Janney and others.

6TH MO. 21. — A CONFERENCE UNDER the care of the Philanthropic Committee of Western Quarterly Meeting, in Hockessin Meeting-house, at 2.30 p. m. Opening address by Arthur H. Tomlinson, of Swarthmore, Pa.

6TH MO. 27. — SCIPIO QUARTERLY MEETING, at North Street, N. Y. Ministers and elders the day before at 2 p. m.

6TH MO. 28. — SCHUYLKILL MEETING, 10.30 a. m., will be visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit smaller branches.

6TH MO. 28. — A CONFERENCE UNDER THE care of the Philanthropic Committee of the Yearly and Quarterly Meetings will be held in the meeting-house at Langhorne, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Henry W. Wilbur, of New York, will address the meeting on the subject of "Temperance."

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

Clearance of Carpets

At the present clearance prices, it will pay to buy now to meet any probable want during the next year, for the present condition of the carpet market indicates that regular prices in the autumn will be fully a third higher than our sale prices—two dollars will go as far as now as three dollars will go four months hence.

Some full rolls, some part rolls, and a great many single-room lengths. All from our regular stock, and each number the best in its grade, for all these goods are from the best makers only:

$1.65 Bigelow Axminsters, $1 and $1.25
$1.50 Savonniere Carpets, 85c and $1.10
$1.40 Axminster Carpets, 85c and $1.00
$1.15 and $1.25 Axminsters, 85c and 95c
$1.40 and $1.50 Wilton Velvets, $1, $1.10
$1.10 and $1.25 Velvet Carpets, 75c, 85c
$1.50 Best Body Brussels, 75c and $1.00
90-cent Tapestry Brussels Carpet at 65c
70c and 75c Tapestry Brussels at 55c
70c and 75c Ingrain Carpet now 55c

There are plenty of remnants too—pieces large enough for small rooms: these at even greater reductions.

Customers should bring room measurements, and the choosing should be done at once.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1377 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 663 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

These trade-mark criss-cross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
 Unlike all other flours. Ask Grocers. For book or sample write Farwell & Rhines, Watkown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a, FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
 Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
 Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night; $2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
 *Phone 1-33-55.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
 J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P.
 TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

If everybody could have adequate life insurance at no cost at all, what a step in the march of civilization!

The next best is the safest at the lowest cost, furnished to and by the members of the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA. AND RETURN.

VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY, ACCOUNT NATIONAL CONVENTION BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION OF AMERICA, JULY 9TH-12TH, 1903.

On July 6th to 9th, inclusive, round trip tickets will be sold to Atlanta, Ga., via the Southern Railway on account of above convention at rate of one fare, plus $1.00, from trunk line territory, final limit July 15th.

By depositing ticket with special agent at Atlanta on or before July 15th and payment of fee of fifty cents, an extension of final return limit may be obtained to August 15th, 1903. The round trip rate from Philadelphia will be $22.50, proportionately low rates from other points.

Side trips tickets will be sold from Atlanta to various points on July 13th and 14th, final limit, ten days, at rate of one first-class fare, plus 25 cents for the round trip.

Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

"The principal ingredient in all these patent medicines is the same." "It must be a powerful drug. What is it?" "Printer's ink."

I know a well-bred little boy who never says "I can't"; He never says "Don't want to," or "You've got to," or "You sha'n't"; He never says "I'll tell mamma!" or calls his playmates "mean." A lad more careful of his speech I'm sure was never seen!

He's never ungrammatical—he never mentions "ain't"; A single word of slang from him would make his mother faint! And now I'll tell you why it is (lest this should seem absurd); He's now exactly six months old, and cannot speak a word! —[St. Nicholas.]

SOMETHING can be done by law to help in such development, something can be done by the administration of law, but in the last analysis we have to rely upon the average citizenship of the country to work out the salvation of the nation. The law can do something, but the law never yet made a fool wise or a coward brave or a weakling strong.—[Theodore Roosevelt.]

THE Boer general Snyman, his wife and five children, and the wife and little daughter of General Fouche, have arrived in New York city, on the way to the Boer colony which is to be established in the Mexican state of Chihuahua. General Snyman said Mexico was chosen instead of America because of the United States immigration laws, which require the possession of a certain amount of ready money to insure that the immigrant shall not become a public charge.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
 N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Dookhobors. By Joseph Ekinoto. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
 N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
 Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
 1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
 5 PHONES.

Merchants' Trust Company,
611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
SURPLUS 50,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 42,349.29
Interest allowed on Deposits, Titles to Real Estate held, and conveying same. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit
Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum
JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
HORACE B. FRANKSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
CHARLES F. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS
NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
S. DAVIS PAGE, VARRIN G. GREIFFER,
JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED J. PHILLIPS,
THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
EDWARD S. SAVES, EGGAR DUDLEY FARRIS,
JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. FRANKSON.

United Security
Life Insurance
and Trust Company
OF PENNSYLVANIA
603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Capital, $1,000,000
Surplus and undivided profits, 500,000

Banking and General Trust Co. Business
OFFICERS:
WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.
HENRY LABAREE JAYNE, Counsel.
FRANCIS H. HEMPERLY, Actuary.
T. HEWSON BRADFORD, M.D., Medical Director.

DIRECTORS:
William M. Coates, William H. Lucas,
Caleb J. Milne, William R. Verzer,
V. C. Sweetman, J. W. Hampton, Jr.,
Charles Porter, Orlando Crease,
Robert Doroan, L. Layton Register,
John G. Carruth, Esmonde H. Austin,
William Bault, Silas W. Pettit,
Joel Cook.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER
TELEPHONE
1313 VINE STREET
ESTABLISHED 1860

BREAD MACHINE
FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour end mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (TRUS BROS., Inc.) 502 1/2 State St., Philadelphia

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, $ 4,457,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
David G. Alsop, Actuary
C. East Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
C. Walter Barton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

Samuel R. Shipley, James V. Watson,
T. Wistar Brown, William Longstreth,
Henry Haines, Edward H. Ogden,
Richard Wood, Thomas Scattergood,
Charles Hartshorne, J. Preston Thomas,
Asa S. Wing, Robert M. Janney,
Philip C. Garrett, Marriott C. Morris,
Frarg H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

VERY LOW RATES TO MANY POINTS REACHED BY SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The Southern Railway Company announces the sale of tickets at extremely low rates from points on its lines for the following special occasions.

Asheville, N. C., Southern Educational Association, June 30, 1903.
Asheville, N. C., National Dental and adjunct Societies, July 24-31, 1903.
Athens, Ga., Summer School, July 1-August 9, 1903.
Atlanta, Ga., National Convention B. Y. P. U., of America, July 9-12, 1903.
Knoxville, Tenn., Summer School, June 23-July 31, 1903.
Monteagle, Tenn., Bible School, July 1-August 30, 1903.
San Francisco, Cal., and Tuskegee, Ala., Summer School, June 26-August 7, 1903.

Above rates open to the public. Tickets will be sold to above points from all stations on Southern Railway. Detailed information can be had upon application to Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

A NATURAL MISTAKE.—He had recited to his class the story of Abraham entertaining angels unaware. Feeling that the children might not know the meaning of the word "unaware," he asked them if they did. One little hand went up promptly, and the smallest girl in the class said:

"The thing you wear next your skin."
—[Harper's Magazine.]

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

WALL PAPER OF

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices

Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets (Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

ANSWOWNE AND FARBY SAVING BANK AND TRUST COMPANY

LANSING, PA.

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

JOSEPH WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer. W. LANS VRELDEN, Vice-President. JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President. MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary. LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Will prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor. of perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, SIXTH MONTH 27, 1903.

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

WALTON & FRENCH

Ocean view unexcelled Bell 'Phone No. 36
Will remain OPEN throughout the year

The Rose Valley Guest House

MOYLAN, DEL. CO., PA.

Between MEDIA and SWARTHMORE.

A quiet and beautiful retreat. Vernon Run and Ridley Creek wind through the valley. Boating and swimming. Pure water. Our own garden. Good train service and trolley Address

NATHAN KITE, Moylan, Pa.

The Bartram,

Accommodates
200 guests.

WILDWOOD, N. J.

Pleasantly situated within 200 feet of beach. Especial attention given to the menu.

J ALFRED BARTRAM, Owner and Manager.

THE HOBART,

Write for booklet.

310 SEVENTH AVE., NORTH ASBURY PARK, N. J.
Address E. H. BAKER, Formerly of Atlantic City.

The Marlborough.

Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Under entirely new management. One block from bathing grounds and hot sea baths. For particulars Address SAMUEL B. LIPPINCOTT, 17 Sea View Avenue.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particulars address

SARAH J. FAXSON and SISTERS

NEW ARBORTON

Kept by Friends

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Half block from the sea. For particulars address

HANNAH BORTON,

Hot salt baths. 7 Sea View Ave., Ocean Grove, N. J.

The Pennhurst,

Second House
from Beach.

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,

Atlantic City, N. J.

Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.

M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

J. Linden Heacock

Oscar M. Hokaason

HEACOCK & HOKAASON

ARCHITECTS

Telephone Connection 932 Chestnut Street, Philad'a

Morgan Bunting

Arthur Shrigley

BUNTING and SHRIGLEY,

ARCHITECTS

Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—THE CO-OPERATIVE HOUSE-keeping Association will have one vacancy after July 5th, for young woman boarder. Apply E. H. S., 140 N. 45th Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—BY FAMILY OF FOUR ADULTS, a furnished house in country, convenient to the city, for part of the summer, at a nominal rent. Best care would be taken. Address S. F. B., this Office.

WANTED.—POSITION AS ASSISTANT IN institution, Friends' boarding home or school. Address F. K. D., this Office.

WANTED.—YOUNG WOMEN TO ENTER the Training School for Nurses of West Philadelphia Hospital for Women. Apply to M. E. Kelsey, Superintendent, 4925 Parrish Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early, Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

HELEN G. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Lost Word," by Henry van Dyke as an evening's program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After fifth month 5th for particulars address Helen G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

FRIENDS' PRIVATE COUNTRY HOME and institutions for reduced children. Parental care. Best references. Sumner Board. MRS. EASTBURN, Lahaska, Bucks county, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1297 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm. Desirable location. Address S. 100 Spring Hill Avenue, Conshohocken, Pa.

FOR RENT.—W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hote Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $2.60) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

The Making of Book-plates is somewhat of a specialty with us, by which we mean that we make a specialty of doing this work well. Prominent designers have said as much

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE

BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1919-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

I stand upon my native hills again,

Broad, round and green, that in the summer sky,
With gariture of waving grass and grain,
Orchards, and beechen forests, basking lie;

While deep the sunless gleens are scooped between,
Where brawls o'er shallow beds the streams unseen.
—Bryant.

It would be very gratifying if we could interest more of our New York Friends in Buck Hill Falls. The splendid support the settlement has so far received has been mainly from Philadelphia, although this city is nearly twenty miles further away than is New York.

The D. L. & W. R. R. is fully alive to the great beauty and possibilities of the Pocono Region, and in addition to the usual train service, which is good, they have now put on a train leaving New York at 1 o'clock on Fifth-, Sixth- and Seventh-days and running through to the Delaware Water Gap without a stop. This train reaches Cresco, our station, in three hours and fourteen minutes, and it is possible for business men to leave Cresco on a Second-day morning at 6.14 and be in New York City by 9.30. Other good trains leave New York 8 a. m. and arrive at Cresco 11.46 a. m.

4 p. m. 7.45 p. m.
All trains run through without change of cars and carry parlor cars. The evening train has a first-class dining car service.

The distance from New York to Cresco is 107 miles, and the excursion fare $4.45.

Already six New York Friends have become interested in the settlement, and we would welcome many more. We hope to make Buck Hill Falls a common meeting ground for members of all our yearly meetings.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pocono Pines Assembly

AND

Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing. 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager,
Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME. WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
*3 TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXVI. 401
POETRY: THE WORLD AND THE WORLDS, 401
THE THINGS THAT ARE MORE EXCEL-LENT. 401
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson,—Continued. 402
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
Paul's Early Life. 404
TIRED MOTHERS. 405
EDITORIAL:
The Religious Training of Children. 406
One Thing To Do. 406
Notes. 407
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS. 407
SOCIETY NOTES. 408
NOTES OF ENGLISH FRIENDS. 408
WHAT DOES COLLEGE PARK ASSOCIATION
OF FRIENDS STAND FOR? 408
LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—V. 410
HELP FOR THE FLOWER MISSION. 412
CONFERENCE, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC., 412
EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT. 413
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES. 413
LITERARY NOTES. 414
POETRY: The Humble Bee. 414
MISCELLANY: Freedom of Development for Women; Encouraging Beggary; Kindness that Worked; Vines as Ornaments. 415
CURRENT EVENTS. 416
NEWS NOTES. 417
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS. 416

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
(633 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: (Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWEDD STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shourd, 2012 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourd, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.

Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Reams collected.
Keystooper and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. E. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

Young Friends' Review
Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, Editor,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
*Phone 1-33-55.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,
FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.
J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.
Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.
Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Jenkintown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.
For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars, address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B.S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars, address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-28 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, SIXTH MONTH 27, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 26.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XXVI.

No description of light can give an idea of it without the sense of vision; so the Author of all good, the Sun of the spiritual world, can only be known through the influence of his light, or spirit, immediately revealed to our spiritual perception.

JOHN JACKSON.

THE WORLD AND THE WORLDS.

WHEN comes the silent night, the good God shows
There still are worlds on worlds for us above,
And so a sense of comfort in us grows,
And we can rest watched by the lights of love.

But when the active morning dawns, the sun
Shows us the one rich world that is right here,
And so devotion for our task is won,
And so our duty is divine and dear!

—William Brunton, in Unity.

THE THINGS THAT ARE MORE EXCELLENT.¹

"As we wax older on this earth,
Till many a toy that charmed us seems
Emptied of beauty, stripped of worth,
And mean as dust and dead as dreams,
For gauds that perished, shows that passed,
Some recompense the Fates have sent:
Thrice lovelier shine the things that last,
The things that are more excellent."

THESE verses of William Watson embody the experience of every thoughtful man or woman. In some moment of quiet retrospect, such as this meeting hour, when we have temporarily escaped from the rush and turmoil of our strenuous lives, there comes upon us the keen realization of the vanity of much of our daily striving. We ask ourselves seriously, What is it all for? What am I accomplishing that will in any essential way benefit the world or myself.

Now let us this morning in all earnestness ask ourselves these questions. Let us consider whether we are choosing toys and the gauds and the shows to the exclusion of what is more substantial and permanently valuable. Happy shall we be if, when we take this inventory of our lives, we recognize among the mass of what is empty and unsatisfactory a fair proportion of those "thrice lovelier things that last, the things that are more excellent." And we shall recognize some of these unless our lives have been singularly barren. Thoughtless and willful as most of us are at times, assuredly no one has entirely missed the blessings of true friendship, high ideals, appreciation of beauty and human sympathy, and if we have had any or all of these, we have not missed altogether the real goods of life.

¹ Read to the students of Swarthmore College when assembled preparatory to meeting Fifth month 31st, 1903, by Ferris W. Price.

But all must acknowledge that they have often been false to the noble stir within them, and too ready to accept a weak and frivolous substitute for the object of their aspirations. It is always easier to follow the phantoms of ambition, of fashion, of routine, to be carried away by passion and prejudice and temporary gratification of sense than to live according to our own highest standards. It is easier, but it is fatal; and, in proportion as we yield to these tendencies, we impoverish our lives. First, then, among the things that are more excellent we may place steadfast fidelity to the highest convictions. The divine impulse is within us; but our free human wills must co-operate. And is it not the universal experience that the real gains of life have been the result of such co-operation?

Can it be that the youngest person present has not at some time or other learned this lesson? Every act or part of an act of his life, whether work or play, that was animated and dominated by conscience, was not only a source of satisfaction at the time, but has stayed with him ever since, and is as real and precious now as at any time in the past. It is something to which he can cling in time of discouragement and defeat which renews his faith in his own worthiness and make him more likely to be worthy in the future.

There have always been Jeremiahs among men, prophets of ill, pessimists, who see the wickedness of the world and are hopeless of its regeneration. Their message has its value. We must give the proper measure of heed to their warnings, which are not without foundation, but the world is not and never has been all ugly and bad. Even in the wickedest days of Rome, we have reason for knowing that many beautiful lives were lived. Much more is this true in our later and better days of professed Christianity. All about us are physical and moral beauties no less obvious than the physical and moral deformities to which we are prone to give our attention. To see the good and the beautiful by which we are all surrounded, we need merely open our eyes and candidly observe. Whether we be in counting-house or class-room, in the church or in the slums, in our own country or in foreign lands, we shall meet people in whose aspirations we can recognize nobility, with whom we shall find some ground of sympathetic association in good works and words, with whom it will be a joy to live.

Mrs. Wiggs in her Cabbage Patch, in the midst of squalid surroundings, and in a most discouraging situation found some satisfaction denied to many of us who are apparently more favorably placed in the world, but who have less happy spiritual endowments. And if we have not the temperament of a Mrs. Wiggs, we can try to develop such a one,—and we are told that there is great virtue in trying. To have gained the faculty of seeing good about us is another of the things that are more excellent.

Nor does this imply the supine acceptance of our present situation. The present situation is for the present, and we cannot change it, any more than we can the past. We are bound to gather from it the best, not the worst, that it has to offer; and this will mostly be good enough for the present if we do our part. But let us make the future better if we can, either by putting ourselves into better relations with our surroundings or by changing those surroundings, and never be satisfied, always looking for openings to higher efficiency and enjoyment. To quote again from Watson's poem, we must have "a large and liberal discontent," a discontent which will ensure a natural and healthy growth, without embittering the present. To have within us this stimulus to growth is still another of the things that are more excellent.

We are accustomed to measure the wealth of so-called rich men in dollars. It is an obvious fact, and a trite enough statement, that such a standard is false. Though we may not acknowledge that either money or the love of money is the root of all evil, certainly no one can claim that it is the source of all good. There are other forms of wealth not less important, and to some of these it is worth while to recall your attention to-day. One of our students confessed to her teacher the other day that the thesis subject which he had assigned her had at first seemed very unpromising. However, she undertook it loyally as she was accustomed to do in her college work; and before long she discovered that the subject assigned was full of interest for her. A new field of thought had been opened in her mind, one that will broaden her mental horizon, add to her interest in the history of the race, and be a valuable possession through life. How wise is the young person, who, with the years still before him, makes it his aim to lay up a store of such wealth as this. Though intellectual interests may be considered earthly treasures, they have some of the essence of divinity; and they are at least like heavenly treasures in that they are free from the dangers of moth and rust and thieves. Each worthy accomplishment or hobby that enables us to appreciate better what our poet Watson calls "the gains of science, gifts of art," and makes us more interesting and useful to our fellows, is more precious than money and will last much longer.

Whether we give our attention to some branch of natural science which takes us into "God's out-of-doors," or devote ourselves to pictures or music, history or literature,—all of which more fully reveal the Creator and his workings in men, we shall in any case find ourselves richer. Time cannot henceforth hang heavy, or life seem empty or tiresome. Every moment will have its interest and use. As Cicero says in his magnificent eulogy of culture: "These pursuits strengthen youth, delight old age, are an ornament in prosperity, offer a refuge and solace in adversity, are a source of pleasure in the privacy of the home, do not interfere with our success in the world, and are with us at all times and places." Among the accumulated treasures of our past, not the least important and valuable, as we look back from old age, will appear to us the intellectual interests awakened by intelligent observation and devoted study.

And what shall we say of the things that are less excellent, for of these, too, we have all had our share? They have been allowed to crowd out the better things of life, to fill more or less completely our time and attention,—and to no purpose. As we think of these we must be painfully impressed with the enormous waste that we have incurred. As a general thing, this waste has not been confined to our pleasures and recreations, which are often as proper and necessary as any of the so-called serious occupations. In fact, when we carefully weigh the acts of our lives, we shall find fully as large a proportion that is light and valueless among those concerns which at the time seemed of the utmost importance.

With what seriousness we attend to the petty details of dress, etiquette, houses and furniture, and the thousand and one matters of social routine; and yet, if we carefully examine our motives, how much more we have been actuated by the desire to be like other people, to be thought to know how to do things, than from any supposed excellence in the action itself. How futile have been our efforts, how unsatisfying the results! In these and many other ways, we allow ourselves to be swept along by ambition or vanity, or to drift helplessly with the current, or at the most to splash ineffectually in the same little pool of social and intellectual environment.

Before us are set all the good things of life. They are many and freely offered. For some wise purpose, which we may guess but cannot know, men are permitted to choose evil instead of good, non-essentials instead of essentials, to lead unhappy or profitless lives instead of those which are rich and useful. The decision is to be made every day, as long as we live. Let us reverently ask for the wisdom that is able to direct our choice.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

BY JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

In the Danish island of Santa Cruz, where our travelers first landed, slavery still existed, and their request to hold a religious meeting was refused by the Governor, he probably being afraid that they would say something to create dissatisfaction among the slaves. From a letter written to the Sharon pupils, the following extracts will give an idea of the new surroundings in which our Friends found themselves.

"As we came in sight of the Virgin Islands, covered with green foliage, we could hardly realize that in so short a time as thirteen days we were carried from the leafless forests and snow-capped hills of our native land to a clime where vegetation is never checked by frosts, but continual verdure and spring-like beauty ever reign. It is almost like coming into a new world. No longer do I see the forests and the wild flowers among which I have been accustomed to walk with you in our botanical excursions and pleasant ramblings by the waters and the woods, but here the lofty cocconut bearing its rich fruit grows profusely, the beautiful mountain cabbage, whose stately and regular columns resemble the pillars of some ancient castle as they grow by the roadside, the curious silk cotton tree, the dense tamarind whose foliage offers a shelter from the sun and rain, the tibit tree, the banana, the plantain, the orange with its blossoms, its green and ripe fruit, the lemon, the lime, sugar-apple, sour-sop, forbidden fruit, shaddock, bread fruit, and a great variety of fruit trees altogether new to me, with abundance of the most beautiful plants and flowers, growing in wild profusion without the aid of human culture, attract the notice of a stranger and open a wide field of investigation and enquiry, while they gratify curiosity and delight the eye."

After some paragraphs describing the cultivation of sugar cane and the horrors of slavery as it there existed, the letter continues:

"Ought we not seriously to consider how far we are contributing to the sum of human suffering and strengthening the hands of the cruel oppressor by using the produce of slave labor, especially those luxuries which we could so well do without? . . .

"So great is the temptation held out by the high price of slaves in the slave countries that many adventurers go to the coast of Africa and capture thousands of the natives of that injured country, bring them in crowded slavers across the Atlantic, and supply the markets of Cuba, Porto Rico and South America, where they are sold to the highest bidder, like cattle in the shambles. . . . Since we have been in the islands two of these slavers have been taken by the British and 400 native Africans thereby rescued from the hands of the wicked robbers and sellers of flesh and blood."

After landing and finding a boarding house, where they partook of some delicious fruit, the first thing our travelers did was to look around them. During a ride across the island they saw large gangs of slaves at work under the care of an overseer, but on the whole the condition of the slaves was greatly in advance of many other countries. Each was allowed a little patch of ground on which he might cultivate crops and raise pigs and poultry and sell these in the markets. If desirous of obtaining liberty he might demand an appraisal of his value and buy his freedom of his master, whether the latter wanted to sell or not. The Danish Government also introduced a school system and required the masters to send their slaves to school a portion of the time until they were fifteen years old. The Friends were rather shocked, however, to see a boy over twelve years of age leading a horse in a public road, entirely destitute of clothing, and young men in the streets too scantily covered for decency.

They next went to the island of St. Thomas. Here the Governor was disposed to allow them to hold meetings, but on learning that the Governor General of the islands at Santa Cruz had forbidden meetings to be held there he changed his mind. Concerning the Danish islands we make some extracts from John Jackson's narrative.

"From observations we were able to make, we should judge the standard of morality was very low among the colored people, and we were sorry to find, upon inquiry, that but a small amount of care is bestowed by the religious sects tolerated, towards elevating their condition, and it is probable but little pains will be taken in this respect, while they remain in the condition of slaves.

"The Moravians have an establishment near this town, and we understand that a degree of kindness was exercised by these brethren towards the slave population. This we should naturally expect to find among a people noted for their general benevolence.

"The Danish Government keeps vessels of war constantly cruising in the neighborhood of their own possessions, with a view to prevent the escape of slaves to the British islands, which is frequently, and notwithstanding the vigilance exerted, often successfully attempted. The distance between the English and Danish islands being in some places less than a mile, many of these poor creatures make desperate efforts, by swimming and otherwise, to obtain their liberty by treading on British soil. How appropriate, we thought, was the expression of Cowper,

"They touch our country and their shackles fall!"

The next island visited was Tortola, which belonged to Great Britain. The slaves having been set free here there were no obstacles interposed to the holding of meetings. The first they attended was held in a Methodist meeting-house on a First-day morning, when about eight hundred persons were present. All grades of complexion, from the fairest European to the darkest negro skin, were indiscriminately mixed throughout the house, and the neat appearance of those assembled was noticeable. In the afternoon they held an appointed meeting at Kingston, three miles from Roads Town, where the morning meeting was held; here there was a settlement of colored people, mostly native Africans, liberated from slave ships by British vessels. This meeting is thus described in the narrative:

"When we reached there we found about five hundred men, women and children, collected near the beach, who soon gathered round us, and we held a meeting under the dense foliage of a cluster of tamarind trees. We remembered the days when our forefathers first landed on these shores, and collected the long-neglected African slaves around them, not for the love of silver or gold, but because they felt them to be their brethren, to whom they were sent to publish the glad tidings of the gospel of peace. . . . When the meeting closed they seemed unwilling to part until we had taken nearly every one by the hand—neither would they consent to our walking back, but, launching one of their boats, two of their sturdy oarsmen soon landed us at Roads Town, in time to attend a meeting appointed for us there in the Methodist chapel."

In the island of Tortola the travelers noted how cheerfully and earnestly the colored people performed their labors—very differently from the slow motions of the slaves of Santa Cruz. They were also very much pleased with the plantation schools. Passing a plantation where a large number of laborers were working near the roadside the President of the island remarked that he did not suppose the condition of that company had been much bettered by emancipation, as many of them were old and infirm, and had always been kindly provided for by their former master. They asked an old man how he liked freedom, and he replied, "Oh, very well, massa." When the President asked him if his master was not kind to him, and if he did not give him plenty to eat and drink, he said, "That is all true,—our massa was kind enough to us,—he always gave us plenty to eat; but while we were in slavery we had to eat it with a sorry heart."

On Twelfth month 15th the three Friends were taken in a barge to Virgin Gorda, twenty miles distant. On this island they found many of the colored people working in a copper mine which had recently been re-opened. Their experiences there are best told in John Jackson's words:

"Charles O'Neal, a young colored man, and one of the head carpenters at the mines, gave us much information in respect to the condition of the people. During our stay upon the island he provided for us the best his house could afford, without reward—desiring no other than our prayers for his preservation.

"In the evening we had a large meeting with the inhabitants. A great number of all classes of the people were present, and it has seldom been our lot to see a more attentive audience. The distinction of sect, caste or complexion seemed to be lost sight of. In the gospel relation these must ever vanish: man must recognize all as his fellows, before he can say, 'One is our master, even Christ, and all we are brethren.' We were led to open to these people some of the simple truths of the Christian religion,—showing them that it stood not in 'meats and drinks, divers washings and carnal ordinances,' but in righteousness, peace, and joy in a holy spirit. Our mission was to call them to Christ, and to his works within them, as the means of redemption; and to that obedience to the teachings of the Spirit of Truth, which constitutes the uniform ground of acceptance with God, in every age, of all those who fear him and work righteousness.

"These views appeared to comfort many, who had been taught to believe that good works were of but little avail, and that religion consisted mainly in subscribing to abstract theories and opinions, and a conformity to the ceremonies of the church. A poor woman who had brought her sick infant to us and implored us to perform the ceremony of baptism,—saying that, as there was no resident clergyman on the island and the circuit preacher would not be among them for a fortnight, she feared the child would die, and without baptism she had been taught to believe it would not be saved,—seemed greatly comforted on finding we considered water baptism of no importance. We have been informed that the clergy of the different sects, since the date of emancipation, have strongly urged the free colored people to conform to this and other ceremonial rites, as essential to religion: whereas, during the times of slavery, such conformity was seldom thought of, much less recommended. Why they should stand less in need of baptism when in a state of slavery than now, is not easy to conjecture, unless it be that under their former condition they had not the means to pay for an initiation into church fellowship. It is greatly to be feared that much of the hard earnings of the poor people of this and other islands is exacted from them to support those who call themselves ministers of Christ, but who, contrary to all precedent or example of Him or his apostles, and in violation of his command, preach for hire and divine for money."

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be Continued.)

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 23.

PAUL'S EARLY LIFE.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey the lusts thereof.—

Romans, vi., 12.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xxvi., 1-9;

Romans, vii., 9-24.

PAUL, the "Apostle to the Gentiles," was born in Tarsus, near the northeastern corner of the Mediterranean Sea. The plains of "flat Cilicia" stretch away to the eastward, while to the north and west the country is mountainous. Tarsus was the capital of the then Roman province of Cilicia, a university town, a center of caravan trade, "no mean city." Its educational advantages are especially to be noted. The Greek historian Strabo says that, in all that relates to philosophy and general education, it was even more illustrious than Athens or Alexandria. It was, of course, in the main a Greek city, speaking the Greek language, and dominated by Greek thought. The government was Roman. Roman officials and Roman soldiers were constantly in evidence, while all political matters went according to Roman custom.

We have seen that the various wars and disasters of the Jews had scattered them far and wide throughout the known world. Every city of any importance in the whole Roman world had its Jewish inhabitants. Many of the great trading centers had their Jewish quarter, especially assigned to the Hebrews, provided with synagogues and conducted essentially according to "the law." Babylonia and Egypt had very large Jewish populations, and in the Greek cities of Asia Minor they were no unimportant factor. It will not be forgotten that there was a division among the Hebrews as to their attitude toward Greek thought and civilization. The Sadducees accepted both, prided themselves on being men of the world; while the Pharisees confined themselves strictly to their own history, law, literature and life. This division was not confined to Judea, but extended throughout the dispersion, though the distinction was probably not as sharp in the Hellenic cities as it was under the shadow of the temple. It was not a distinction of language; probably most of the Jews of Egypt and Asia Minor spoke Greek, in ordinary conversation. It was rather an attitude of mind—that of welcoming or rejecting the influx of new ideas, new manners, new views, good, bad and indifferent, which flowed in upon the East with the Greek conquest.

We find the family of Paul among the Pharisees—"of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of Hebrews; as touching the law a Pharisee" (Philippians, iii., 5). Paul was therefore brought up in strict Jewish fashion. Though he breathed a Greek atmosphere, he did not receive a Greek education. He was trained from his earliest youth in the details of the law, and he so lived that he could say (Philippians, iii., 6) "touching the righteousness which is in the law," he was "found blameless." He learned the trade of tent-making, for the rabbinical law required every boy to learn a trade; but he was not, apparently, dependent upon it for a livelihood; there are many indications in his life . . . that he was not poor, that at least he had means of support independent either of his industry or of the churches which he served" (Abbott). About the age of twelve he went up to Jerusalem and entered there the Jewish university, under the great Jewish teacher Gamaliel (Acts, xxii., 3). "It was he who once gave counsel in the Sanhedrin to release the accused apostles, since their work, if it were of man, would come to naught, while if it were of God, it was in vain to oppose it" (Schurer). The effect of his studies was to greatly increase and intensify the zeal of Paul for the law. He came to be "of the strictest sect of our religion." He believed that "the law" (the Pentateuch) was literally handed down to Moses on Mt. Sinai. He believed that this law was the only thing worthy of serious study. Moreover, he believed that the ceremonial portions (Leviticus, etc.), being duties to God, were more important than the moral law, which had to do only with our duties to men. He fasted often, he observed the feasts days with scrupulous care. He violated none of the harassing details of the laws of the Sabbath. He lived up to all the petty requirements of the law of ceremonial cleanness.

"And yet he was not satisfied, for he had an ethical nature. He half-consciously believed that there was more in righteousness than hand-washing, Sabbath observance, synagogue attendance, tithing and fasting. He believed in justice and mercy, in temperance and righteousness; and, although, as touching the ceremonial law, he was able to be blameless, yet his ethical ideal always transcended his practice, and he never attained it. . . The experience of Paul before his conversion was doubtless a vague, uninterpretative, strange unrest" (Abbott). Like other Jews he looked ardently for the speedy coming of the Messianic king. And he must have heard early of the claim of the Christians at Jerusalem that Jesus was that Messiah—a claim which must have seemed to him preposterous and almost blasphemous. It was in this state of mind that he attended the trial of Stephen.

THE Quakers have realized the Christian ideal more perfectly than any other sect of Christians.—[John Fiske.]

TIRED MOTHERS.

A MOTHER who had more than her share of worry and work in caring for an invalid husband and two delicate children would sometimes find her powers flagging as she toiled on, faithfully endeavoring to perform the apparently endless duties of each day.

When becoming sensible of this extreme weariness she would quietly put aside her work, setting the irons on the fire to heat meanwhile, perhaps, so there would be no time wasted, and would say to her 7-year-old boy:

"Now, Henry, mother feels that she must rest a little while, and she wants you to wake her in just ten minutes. Don't let me sleep any longer than that; ten minutes will be quite sufficient."

And the little man, sitting as still as a mouse where he could note the gradual relaxing of his mother's features, would faithfully follow the hands of the clock until they marked off the appointed time, when he would awaken her. Refreshed, she would then go cheerfully to work again. And this was how she accomplished an amount of work that made her the wonder of friends.

Her example might be followed with benefit by all. Of all capacities in which we can train ourselves, that of being able to sleep readily is the most valuable. It is a habit that can be acquired, and once acquired will add years to the life of man or woman.

The latter, in particular, should covet it, for, while women can work hard, they are apt to give way beneath the strain of long hours. The best plan when the energies are felt to be failing is to just turn aside from everything and rest. While a ten-minute nap might not be sufficient in all cases, it should not extend over half an hour. For some singular reason, a long siesta in the daytime rather enervates than refreshes.

It is very hard to follow advice like this when one is overwhelmed with tasks and every minute seems precious; but to do so will be profitable in the end. It is all the difference between doing the work with a feeling of depression and weariness and doing it with cheerfulness and vigor.—[Public Ledger.]

THE unity of the Spirit does not mean uniformity of opinions. These belong to the head rather than the heart, and may be left to follow the lead of a heart that is conceived to be right toward God. It is not right to respect others' opinions of every sort, but it is right to respect others who are honest in their opinions. In running with one another the race that is set before us, are we called upon to copy exactly each other's steps, and so get our eyes off the goal, or to be looking unto the "Author and Finisher of our faith, who for the joy set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame"? If we, with eye fixed on Him, so run as to obtain, He will not criticize us for our individual gait, but the uniform aim of eye and step towards Him will be the unity with which He is well pleased.—[The Friend, Philadelphia.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, SIXTH MONTH 27, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE RELIGIOUS TRAINING OF CHILDREN.

THIS is an age of surpassing activity and interest in education. The schools are offering more subjects and better instruction than ever before. It is the concern of parents that their children shall be equipped by careful and extended intellectual training for the duties of the industrial, commercial and social life ahead of them. Physical training keeps pace with its mental co-worker. Gymnasiums and athletic grounds form an adjunct of all well equipped schools. Manual training is establishing its claim upon the time of students. The study of hygiene and sanitary laws arrests the attention of all intelligent people. There was never a time when children were trained with a view to attaining such a many-sided development as they are at present.

We profess to believe that above the physical vigor, beyond mental acumen and the highest products of brain culture, we have another life which is the essential part of us, the vitalizing, spiritual force which makes us the children of God and the heirs of the Most High. This higher nature of ours we believe follows the laws of growth. It develops by what it feeds upon toward the ideal of infinite perfection toward which the spirit tends. Are we keeping pace in the training of the religious life of our children with the wonderful advancement made in this respect in the material and purely intellectual realms? How does the time and thought expended upon developing a boy's soul-life compare with the amount expended upon acquiring a knowledge of foreign languages or the principles of higher mathematics? We are not indifferent in these matters. The First-day school does its share of the work of religious training as faithfully as it can, and there are many evidences (the summer class at Buck Hill Falls among them) that there is a desire among the teachers in these schools to become better qualified for the work. But a work so vastly more important than all other branches of a child's education, and one that cannot be taught as a separate and abstract addition to his school course but must form an essential and controlling factor in his every-day thinking and doing, cannot be successfully looked after by a fixed ethical or religious lesson once a week. The large end of responsibility in the matter must rest with the parents. Without doubt all parents among whom the INTELLIGENCER circulates earnestly desire the best spiritual gifts for their children, and strive, as far as they know how, to train their children to religious lives. Yet many candidly confess "I do not know how to do this thing;" or, busy with material cares, trust that the children will somehow develop as they would have them without the expenditure of special effort.

The question for us is a difficult one. We have abandoned formalism. Family prayers and largely the fixed reading of the Scriptures have gone with it. We are a silent people religiously, and the conversation in the home turns upon any topic save those that touch the individual soul-life; that frequently develops unaided and alone. We half satisfy ourselves with the thought that the life that is of God will be his special care, we need not concern ourselves about it. All life is of God and He entrusts the care and culture of much of it to our charge and keeping; do we know that it is otherwise in our religious life? The religious results of environment and training suggest that this, no less than the intellectual life, needs our care. It is this existing need to which the attention of our readers is asked. Organized religious training seeks methods of work. The effort of the home must be dependent upon existing conditions and individual idiosyncrasy, resting as a basis upon the facts that no one can teach another to be Christlike who has not been first a learner at the Master's feet, and that a belief in God so firmly fixed that agnosticism and atheism can never shake its foundation is the starting point for all religious teaching.

ONE THING TO DO.

WHEN we set ourselves against lynching and against meeting brutal crime with punishment no less brutal, it does not mean that we are any less stirred up over the matter than the lynchers are, nor that we feel any less than they that we must do something to put an effective stop to such crimes or no longer count ourselves men. We know that nothing can justify a community in dispensing with a fair trial even for the foulest criminal nor in resorting to brutality even in the administration of the most undoubted justice; and we know also that lynch law proceedings are not effective in preventing such crimes. And yet we feel as was expressed editorially in one of the Wilmington, Delaware, papers a few days ago that "there is no solution in sight of the problem that is raised by such crimes. There is nothing to be done to prevent their repetition, and even the vigilance of the officers of the law and the personal caution of every citizen in the protection of his children, do not serve to prevent the frequent telling of similar stories.'

But do we not have a hint toward the solution of the problem in the record of the negro now under arrest at Wilmington, as given in the daily papers? "White is a negro with a bad record. He was released from the New Castle county workhouse about three months ago, where he had served a term of five years for assault on Daniel Quill, a well-known citizen of Hockessin, with intent to commit murder. Previous to that time he had served a term of four years in Pennsylvania on the charge of rape, and had also served six months for breaking into a house. Out of his twenty-seven years of life nine and a half have been spent in prison."

This may well set us thinking seriously and to the point, along the line of making our prisons effective reformatories and real safeguards to our civilization, and not merely places of punishment. No prisoner should be dismissed until there is every reason to believe that he is fit to be abroad in a civilized community.

New York State has made some important experiments along this line, and it is time we were bestirring ourselves to put in practice all over the country some of the lessons that have been taught at Elmira and Sing Sing.

A NUMBER of papers have been urging a determined move in the direction of doing away with the barbaric noise, the rowdyism and drunkenness and the annual slaughter of the "Fourth of July" celebrations. It is not enough to condemn these things, nor is it enough to pass ordinances prohibiting the worst features of the usual celebration. Temperance organizations, First-day Schools, Young Friends' Associations and others could do a good work by arranging for lawn parties with exercises and entertainments of a kind that would be helpful instead of distracting, degrading and dangerous. This is one of the many directions in which we might effectively work against evil by crowding it out.

WE regret that two typographical errors were overlooked in the fifth stanza of Anna Wildman's poem which appeared last week: "wharfs" should be wharf, and "heavenward" should be havenward.

GERMANY is paying $750,000,000 a year for beer and other alcoholic stimulants, and there is a growing sentiment that that is too much. The mere fact that the international temperance congress was held in Bremen is encouragement for the belief that the old sentiment that no German could drink too much beer is weakening. Drunkenness in the German army and navy has been checked by strict regulations. What is yet more important is the progress of the work of educating public opinion by temperance societies. There is a conviction on the part of authorities high in power that it is essential to German prosperity that German thirst should be kept within bounds.—[Harper's Weekly.]

BIRTHS.

OWEN.—In Philadelphia, Sixth month 6th, 1903, to Joseph B., Jr. and Lydia Bradshaw Owen, a daughter, who is named Alberta Owen.

MARRIAGES.

COX—THOMAS.—At the residence of the bride's father, William W. Thomas, Eagle Bridge, N. Y., Sixth month 3d, 1903, at 2.30 p. m., William Wasson Cox, of Rochester Junction, N. Y., and Jennie Abigail Thomas.

JANNEY—REEDER.—At the home of the bride's parents, in Solebury township, Bucks county, Pa., on Fifth-day, Sixth month 18th, 1903, under the care of Solebury Monthly Meeting of Friends, Charles Janney and Martha Reeder, daughter of Eastburn and Ellen K. Reeder.

KERNS—BALDERSTON.—On Fifth-day, Sixth month 18th, 1903, at the residence of Walter Balderston, Trenton, N. J., Eli T. Kerns, of New Brunswick, and Elizabeth M. Balderston, of Lambertville, N. J.

DEATHS.

COMLY.—In Bustleton, Philadelphia, on Sixth month 5th, 1903, Elizabeth T. Comly, daughter of the late John and Emaline Comly, aged 43 years. Interment at William Penn Cemetery, Somerton.

ROBERTS.—At his late residence, 572 Harrison street, San Francisco, California, Fourth month 20th, 1903, James B. Roberts, aged 80 years.

He was raised a Friend, near Unionville or West Chester, in Pennsylvania, and was connected with the Speakman, Smedley, and Darlington families of that locality. He came to California in 1850, and soon after identified himself with the Presbyterian church, where he remained a devoted and active member during the balance of his life, mostly holding office in the church of his adoption; he was also greatly interested in missionary work in foreign lands. Although thus engaged he never lost an opportunity to attend Friends' meeting when traveling Friends were announced, and frequently spoke, in meetings and out, of his education and experiences among Friends in his early life.

SCOTT.—At his late residence, No. 507 Harrison street, San Francisco, California, Fourth month 28th, 1903, Irving M. Scott, in his 66th year.

He was born and educated near Baltimore, Maryland. His father, John Scott, was a minister of the Society of Friends (Orthodox), and 25 years ago attended and spoke at the Friends' meeting in San Francisco on First-days generally; he died a few years ago over 90 years old.

Irving learned the trade of a machinist and applying himself diligently thereto became the head of the great corporation known as the Union Iron Works, the largest ship-building concern on the Pacific Coast, and recently merged into the ship-building trust, so-called, on a money value basis of several million dollars. Those who had business relations with him speak highly of his integrity.

THOMPSON.—In Newtown, Pa., on Sixth month 7th, 1903, Susanna Thompson, wife of Albert Thompson, aged 80 years.

TWNING.—In Newtown, Pa., on Fourth-day, Sixth month 10th, 1903, Hannah B. Twning, aged 83 years and 1 day.

WAY.—At her home, Wilmington, Delaware, Fifth month 25th, 1903, Josephine H., widow of the late Chandler R. Way, in her 69th year.

"She hath done what she could." These comforting and assuring words of the blessed Master to the humble woman seem very applicable to this dear friend and sister. Though not performing any great deed, she was a minister for good in a quiet, gentle way; her soul went out for the betterment of humanity. She was so faithful and untiring in the loving service in her home that her health finally gave way, thus rendering her unable, in her dear husband's last illness, to give the watchful care that had so comforted him. They are now reunited, sharing the joys of the "Heavenly Mansion."

F.

YARDLEY.—On Sixth month 14th, 1903, at 1737 Arch street, Philadelphia, Anna Warner Yardley, daughter of Mary T. Hancock and the late William W. Yardley, of Yardley, Bucks county, Pa., aged 25 years.

SOCIETY NOTES.

JAMES POUND, of Sparta, Ontario, writes that his daughter Irena lives at Ames, Iowa, where her husband, G. L. McKay, is Superintendent of the Dairy Department of the Agricultural College. Both are members of the Society of Friends and they would be glad to entertain Friends' ministers traveling through the West. There is a commodious room at the College fitted for holding meetings and ministers of all denominations are welcome.

At Lansdowne, Pa., Monthly Meeting, held Sixth month 22d, three persons were received into membership and application was made for another. All of these are minors having one parent a member. A committee was appointed to solicit funds for the furnishing of the new meeting-house, which will be completed in the fall.

Jesse Holmes from Pa., and Henry M. Haviland from Brooklyn attended the White Plains Meeting on the 21st of Sixth month and were very interesting and encouraging in their remarks. M. A. C.

Word comes from Genesee Yearly Meeting that the meetings, though small, were very earnest. A full report of the proceedings, which came too late for this issue, will appear next week.

NOTES OF ENGLISH FRIENDS.

ENGLISH FRIENDS seem to have been very active in establishing adult schools lately. Five were started in one county (Northamptonshire) during Fifth month. Altogether, eighteen new schools are recorded in One and All for Sixth month.

Henry S. Newman in London Yearly Meeting said, "The Adult School is rapidly becoming the workingman's church. It is also becoming a democratic national movement." He thought it behooved Friends to take a much larger and more active share in this movement, although "we might find ourselves rather in the position of servants of the movement than controlling it." The Friends, in this adult school work have from the beginning, or almost so, made a strong point of it that these schools are undenominational. The relation of the Society to the members of the schools and to the "missionary meetings" growing out of them, have come to be quite a problem, and much attention was given to the subject in the discussions during the Yearly Meeting.

During the discussion in London Yearly Meeting of the report of mission work in Turkey it was remarked that in the growing mission in Constantinople "the same sort of difficulties arose as in England, in that while some were very anxious to draw in the rough and drunken and dirty to the meetings, older members feared that this would be disturbing to the meetings."

The Anti-Slavery Committee of London Yearly Meeting has occupied itself during the past year chiefly in working for the abolition of slavery in Zanzibar.

The mission of English Friends at Pemba, on the east coast of Africa, was the first of a series of industrial stations, a chain of which extends across to Uganda in the heart of Africa. Among those making up this chain is the mission of American Friends (Orthodox) at Kavirondo.

The Conference on the Ministry is to be held in Eleventh month. The exact date of it and whether it will be held in London or in some provincial center will be decided on and announced later.

WHAT DOES COLLEGE PARK ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS STAND FOR? ¹

As an association of Christians for religious worship and work, we cannot well go forward nor look forward without meeting this question. It has seemed to me that an effort to formulate some answer to it would be profitable for every one of us. The position we occupy is unique. With fraternal fellowship towards Christians of all denominations, we do not see our way clear to closer organic union with any of them. Recognizing the various forms of Divine worship as good for those who choose them, we gather apart a little company, to worship in our simple mode. This separateness from larger communions can be justified only by strong reasons. There is but one adequate criterion by which to determine the rightness of such a course. What is most conducive to our own spiritual growth and strength? How can we best serve the cause of our common Master? Most of us are birthright members of the Society of Friends. Different estimates will be set by different persons upon the value and importance of such a birthright. For myself, I have ever prized it as a sacred gift of God. My view of the Divine Providence that is over us all forbids the thought that the place, the environment, the opportunities in which our lives are set, are an accident. I feel that the Christian heritage into which I was born is a part of the stewardship and responsibility for which I am accountable to the Giver of all. We have not shared this birthright without having our possession of it, and our attachment to it put to severe tests. We have lived in days and conditions that try both foundations and superstructures. And if the principles of Quakerism are still dear and essential to us, they are ours not by education alone, but by settled conviction and experimental appropriation. By our connection, therefore, with the Society of Friends, we hold a well-defined relation to other Churches, a relation which in this paper need not be dwelt upon, further than to say that the spirit of this association is one of sincere affection towards our fellow Christians of other names and of cordial appreciation of their character and work. Furthermore we welcome brotherly co-operation with them in the common cause of promoting truth and righteousness in the earth, so far as can be done without surrender of any testimony given us by our Lord to bear. This attitude is strengthened, not only by the deepening sense of human brotherhood, but by the feeling, also, that the great fundamental principles of Christianity are one with all who love and serve our Lord Jesus Christ. The basis of unity is large. But within its compass there is also large diversity. "There are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit; differences of administration, but the same Lord; diversities of operations, but the same God which worketh all in all." We believe that every branch and every member of the Church of Christ is called to perform some distinctive function in His body. We would not magnify denominational differences, neither would we ignore them to the elimination of one feature of our common Christianity, which they represent. We would accept, then, as a little portion of the Society of Friends, our share of the mission to which it has been called. That mission we conceive to be to promulgate and demonstrate the spiritual realities of the kingdom of God; to bear witness in word and life to the immediate presence of Christ, in this dispensation of the Spirit, to enlighten, to teach, to lead the individual believer, to call and inspire his ministers, and to be head over all in his Church. All Christians will admit this, but it has been the distinction of Friends to express their faith in a more practical way, in their manner of worship, and the type of their ministry. If in calling attention to this difference I place emphasis upon it, it is because I believe that while it becomes us to dwell in that spirit of humility which would prefer others to ourselves (in view of their faithfulness, and of our own shortcomings), we are still called to this distinguishing testimony. Herein is to be found the reason for our position—that for which this Association distinctively stands.

¹ Read by Joel Bean at the spring meeting of College Park Association of Friends, San José, Cal.

Holding common ground with all Christians in our faith in God, and in the revelation and manifestation of the Father, which has been given us through the Son; and in the great doctrine of the incarnation, the Divinity and Humanity, the perfect life and perfect sacrifice, the resurrection and ascension of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, we feel it laid upon us to bear special and practical witness to our faith in the spiritual virtues which Christ came to reveal and ever lives to make real to the souls of men. To bear clear witness to any truth requires something of concentration and of isolation. They are lonely points of assent that command the largest views. And so there may be a separateness without exclusiveness. He who was the embodiment of full-orbed truth, and of all-comprehending love, had in the supreme test to stand alone. While we can make but little claim as to attainment, our separateness does not mean narrowness of outlook or of feeling. It is because our position is liable to such an aspect, and therefore to be misunderstood, that there seems a peculiar need to make clear what our Association stands for. The Society of Friends, like other Churches, has been rent by successive separations. A prominent member of Indiana Yearly Meeting, in a late article in "The American Friend," on "What We Ought to Do," deplores these as weakening the Society in America; while in England, with the same differences, the Society has kept together and become consolidated in greater strength. He concludes that we ought to labor to heal the breaches and to draw together. College Park Association stands for this very thing. Members of the divided branches have come together here as Friends and brethren, united in the faith of our fathers, and in the love of Christ. But here another question confronts us. Why is it, at the same time, we are aloof from the Friends' Church of California? Some of us are bound to this body by many ties of kindred, of friendship, and of long association in days past. Moreover we own a bond of Christian fellowship with dear friends there, and a glad recognition of their devotion and service, as

"Friends with whom our feet have trod
The silent aisles of prayer;
Glad witness to their zeal for God
And love for men we bear."

But within the last twenty-five years such changes of view and of practice have come over this and some others of the Western Yearly Meetings, that we no longer stand together on the same constitutional basis on which all with the entire Society were once thoroughly united. If we might now assume that the "Friends' Church" of our State would welcome us and tolerate us in their organization, would it be fair to them for us to seek incorporation with them, without heartily sanctioning and supporting the pastoral system, and formal order of worship which they are committed to, and could we do this without loss of the very identity for which we stand. They believe these changed methods are best for them. We cannot see them to be so for us. Our attitude towards them is not one of antagonism, but of brotherly interest, and desire not without hope, that we may all be led on to higher ground, where we may be reunited, in larger conceptions of truth, and closer union with our Lord. We would gladly see removed every barrier to unity of faith and service, with them and all others. But we are not at liberty to adopt a pre-arranged program of vocal exercises for our meetings for worship, at the cost of abandoning the silent waiting upon God in dependence upon the presence and presidency of Christ to break the bread of life to our souls, and to bestow and direct the exercises of spiritual gifts.

I said our position is unique. Some may have the idea that we stand apart from the Society of Friends at large. This is not the case. The time-honored mode of worship to which we adhere is still that which is maintained by Friends in England and Ireland, in Philadelphia and Baltimore Yearly Meetings, in parts of New England and North Carolina, in the scattered meetings of the Australian colonies, in the smaller bodies of the separated Friends in America, and by the large branch of the Society cut apart by the great division seventy-five years ago.

Our position is not one of exclusiveness, but inclusiveness on the broad basis of original Quaker principles, as represented by the fathers and standard writers and exponents of the Society, through its past history, by Fox and Barclay and Pennington and Penn 250 years ago, and in the last century by Woolman and Grellet and Elizabeth Fry and John Bright and our own poet Whittier, and a host of kindred spirits. Not as a separate Church, but in connection with the historic Society of Friends, we stand for fraternity and fellowship with all of the same household of faith and spirit and life and practice. One of the most hopeful movements of the past year is the concern and effort on the part of some of our most enlightened and loyal young Friends in the East, to find some way of preserving that time-honored mode of worship which has proved conducive to our individual deepening and strengthening in the interior life, and at the same time to encourage and facilitate the full exercise of the gift of teaching along with an aggressive and ingathering evangelical ministry. Such a result would clear the way for the fusion of elements that need each other—for the closer unity in which lies greater strength.

In attempting an interpretation of the purpose for which this Association stands, I assume no authority to speak for any but myself, yet in the issues we have had to meet there has been a committal to the purpose and principles here pointed out, so unanimous that I venture to offer them as the reason for which as an organization we exist. The principles of primitive Christianity revived in original Quakerism have stood the test of advancing experience, of increasing knowledge, and of critical research wherever they are known, not only as a theological creed, but as vital forces of life. They have often been held in limitations that have obscured their beauty, and hindered their spread. They oppose no progress to higher ground, no enlightenment to truer conceptions, no development towards "the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." All truth, natural and supernatural, whether discovered or revealed, is within the Holy Spirit's domain. The greatest thoughts of the Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man, the interdependence and solidarity of the human race, are of His inspiration. The things of Christ are his to show us; the example of Christ, the love of Christ, the teaching of Christ, his sympathy and suffering and sacrifice for us, are made real to us by the Spirit. The faith cannot be vain that the providence over all is ordered by infinite love; and the truth cannot be wrong that all suffering, blind and purposeless though much of it may seem to our little range of vision, is destined to work out an eternal good.

"Our human hearts cannot too closely lean on God." Our faith and hope can never exceed His purposes, whose thoughts are as "far above ours as the heavens are higher than the earth." The world is gaining a truer conception of God, a clearer hold of Christ, a better knowledge of the Bible, a deeper sense of human needs and of the exigencies of the age. All these call for a larger faith in the ultimate conquest of the Heavenly Kingdom, and a larger hope of the destiny for which we were created. For these let us stand and labor and pray. J. B.

It is officially predicted that the number of immigrants from Canada to the United States this year will be not less than a million. On the other hand official reports show that the total immigration into Canada for the past five months of the present year was 49,537, consisting of 25,169 English, 5,169 Scotch, 1,215 Irish, 18,984 foreigners, the total immigration during the first five months of last year having been 27,444.

ANDREW D. WHITE, formerly Ambassador to Germany, has suggested that the universities of the country adopt a plan of public service instruction, and intimated that some wealthy philanthropists stand ready to back such a plan with $20,000,000.

LETTERS FROM ISAAC H. CLOTHIER.—V.

Steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm,

At Sea, Fifth month 30th, 1903.

EDITORS FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

WE arrived in Paris Fourth month 22d, after an all night ride from Cannes, and spent just three weeks there. While my family were busily engaged in the occupation of shopping, dear, I believe, to every feminine heart—even to a certain extent in the Society of Friends—I spent a considerable portion of my time in a study of the streets and the life of the city as shown therein.

No avenue I have ever seen equals in stately beauty and attractiveness the Champs Elysees. It runs from the Place de la Concorde to the Arch of Triumph, perhaps one and a half miles, and is easily double the width of our Broad Street, the lower half having public gardens on each side, and the upper flanked with fine residences as the gradual ascent to the Arch is made. Standing at the latter a magnificent view presents. The site is the highest ground in the city proper, and on this eminence stands the imposing and costly Arch commenced by Napoleon to commemorate his victories, but not finished till Louis Philippe's time, 1836, long after the great conqueror and the great vanquished had died in exile.

Radiating from and converging to the large open space on which the Arch of Triumph stands, like the spokes of a wheel, are twelve avenues, forming a combination of effect quite unequalled so far as my experience goes.

The narrowest of these avenues would seem to be as wide as Broad Street, and some, besides the Champs Elysees—notably the Bois de Boulogne and the Avenue of the Grande Armee—are twice as wide. The view of the Arch from every direction is very fine, and the prospect, standing at the Arch and gazing first through one avenue, then another, is something quite unique. But confining ourselves to the one principal thoroughfare, as we look down the Champs Elysees, we see at the end of the avenue the Place de la Concorde, an open paved square of about forty-eight acres, and through it the garden of the Tuilleries and the Palace of the Louvre bounding the view perhaps two and a half miles away.

The Champs Elysees is notably the great driving street, and the number and style of the equipages to be seen thereon every fine afternoon are not to be described. They drive around the Arch and into the Avenue Bois de Boulogne, through which we now look in the other direction and see about a mile and a half away the gateways which mark the entrance to the Bois de Boulogne Park, the great driveway and resort of Paris. From the Place de la Concorde to the Park entrance, perhaps three miles, is the great promenade of Paris, as the broad streets between the pavements are the greatest driveways, and the number of vehicles and the equestrians with the crowds of people on the footways, form a most interesting sight. Few days passed while we were in Paris that I did not walk the entire distance through the Boulevards, the Place de la Concorde, the Champs Elysees, and Bois de Boulogne to the entrance to the Park, and sometimes a considerable distance through the latter.

The entry of King Edward VII. into Paris occurred on Fifth month 1st, and was an interesting event for both the French and English people, and to all Americans, who, like ourselves, chanced to witness it. The newspapers have long ago told of the elaborate preparations for his reception in decoration and in every arrangement for the pageant to show the good will of the nation, not to the individual, but to the King, as representative of the authority and majesty of England. Almost everywhere was there more or less decoration, but along the streets where he would pass at any time during his stay, there was the most elaborate display of English flags intertwined with the colors of France, and of kingly crowns mingled with the "RF" of the Republic.

My wife and daughter, with some friends, were favored with a window, and saw the stately pageant sweep around from the Place de la Concorde into the Rue Royale near the British Embassy on the Rue St. Honore, while I had standing room on the Champs Elysees on an improvised stand.

I have seen no estimate of the number of people who saw the procession, but I should roughly estimate it as not less than five hundred thousand. The whole affair was of course most spectacular and impressive. The royal train arrived about three o'clock p. m., but long before that time the crowds began to gather along the streets. I was much impressed with the apparent ease and success with which the French police handled the crowds, and without severity, as well as the good order and respect shown by the people to authority. For an hour before the procession passed, the immense crowds were an interesting study, and when the distant booming of cannon announced its coming, the excitement grew intense, though the great crowds were wonderfully quiet and orderly. The streets were kept entirely clear from curb to curb, in sharp contrast with the dense mass of people on the footways and at every point of observation.

Preceding the procession came a line of mounted gendarmes extending from curb to curb, though the gendarmes on foot thickly distributed along the line had made all things ready. Soon after came a magnificent landau looking as though it might contain the King himself, but no! it is the Chief of Police, riding alone, and with an eagle eye assuring himself at the last that the arrangements are complete. More gendarmes, and then the cry, "Here come the Cuirassiers," and a body of perhaps one hundred and fifty cavalrymen came into view, with helmets flashing and swords clanging, and in the midst, but so placed as to be plainly seen by every one, a four-horse landau, each horse with an outrider and two footmen up behind, in which sat King Edward and President Loubet. The King almost constantly acknowledged the general and respectful, though not uproarious, greeting of the people, by bowing right and left, as the gayest of gay cavalcades swept slowly by, and the sight awaited for so many hours was over in a few moments, followed by the dispersion of the immense crowd, a great sight in itself. We saw the King once or twice again, but not under such spectacular circumstances as attended his entry into the city.

As an evidence of the good will of one great nation to another, the spectacle was highly interesting, and the elaborate arrangements and ceremonies might be accepted as evidencing and perhaps cementing mutual good will between the two nations, even though it may be claimed such evidences are too superficial to be of essential value. But whatever tends in the slightest degree to encourage good will and fraternity between great nations is well worth while.

Our sojourn abroad was ended by a two weeks' stay in London, where we arrived Fifth month 13th. My street rambles here were perhaps more extensive even than in Paris, and thoroughly enjoyed. Space does not permit any description thereof nor of the omnibus rides which I also took almost constantly. For a penny or two one can ride miles in this way, and a view from the seats on top is decidedly the best and most interesting method of seeing the city which can be obtained in any way or at any price.

On our first First-day in London, Fifth month 17th, I attended Westminster Meeting, and met there for the first time, by appointment, Percy Bigland, the partner of the Quaker Wedding; and with my wife and daughter spent the evening with himself and wife at their home, they spending the next evening with us at our hotel.

London Yearly Meeting began with the Meetings for Ministry and Oversight on Fifth month 18th, and the regular sessions on Fifth month 20th. It is held at Devonshire House in Bishopsgate Street, Without, away down in the business part of the city, not far from the Bank of England.

I attended three sittings, Sixth-day afternoon, Fifth month 22d, and Second-day morning and afternoon, the 25th. All three of these were joint sessions, men and women together. The sitting on Sixth-day afternoon was mainly devoted to Reports of the Peace Committee, and considerable interesting discussion ensued. On Second-day, both morning and afternoon, I sat with our friend, John William Graham, who arrived from Manchester on First-day evening, and joined us at our hotel, and spent the evening, as well as the evening of the Second-day, taking the late train back to Manchester.

The subject of the continuance of the system of paid workers in the home mission work was discussed at length by a number of able speakers. I had the privilege of listening to and meeting in person a considerable number of Friends, whom I had never seen before, but whose names were very familiar, among whom were Thomas Hodgkin, Joseph Storrs Fry, William C. Braithwaite, William Littleboy, Caleb Kemp, John Stevenson Rowntree, Joshua Rowntree, Thomas Humphrey, George Cadbury, etc., etc. I was much interested in the proceedings, and in comparing them with our own order of business.

The length of this letter precludes any further comment on this interesting subject, or any mention of much besides that interested me in our stay in London. Time did not permit other than short excursions outside the city, but on the last Seventh-day we were there, I took a railroad ride of perhaps one hundred and sixty miles to the little town of Street, Somersetshire, which my ancestor emigrated from in 1713, and where his lineal descendants of my name still live, some of them in the old homestead in which he was born.

I stayed the one night with Thompson S. Clothier and his wife Esther Clark, daughter of William and Helen Bright Clark, whom I met at dinner, as well as their son, Roger Clark and his wife (daughter of our friends, William P. and Emma C. Bancroft), with whom we breakfasted.

I greatly enjoyed attendance at Street Meeting in the morning. The Clerk of the Yearly Meeting, John Moreland, attends this meeting, but was naturally absent in London, and by the kind invitation of William Clark, I sat with him at the head of the meeting.

In order to reach London that evening, Thompson Clothier and his wife drove me in the afternoon twelve miles across the beautiful country to Bridgewater, where I took the train and joined my family and John William Graham at 8.30, and was able to attend yearly meeting next day, the last day practicable, as we sailed on Fourth-day morning from Southampton on the Kronprinz Wilhelm, one of the finest and fastest steamships thus far constructed.

On this voyage we have some well-known passengers, among them Senator Scott and wife, named in my last letter; Joseph H. Choate, Ambassador to England; Robert S. McCormick, Ambassador to Russia, and his wife, and the wife of our Minister to Germany, Charlemagne Tower. The latter, with her husband, I have known for a number of years, and I was privileged to become acquainted with and to see considerable of Ambassadors Choate and McCormick. I was much impressed with the former. It is generally admitted that we could not expect to put our best men in all diplomatic posts, and that in the presidency the popular choice sometimes falls on the available candidate as such, but it seems to have been a tradition almost since the foundation of the republic, that to the Court of St. James we should send as representative the highest type of man we can produce, uniting the American scholar, statesman and gentleman. All these qualifications seem to be most happily combined in our present Ambassador, and it is indeed a high privilege to be in his company under such favorable conditions.

These closing lines are written at sea the afternoon before our expected arrival. We are having a great run, 564 to 578 knots each twenty-four hours, and would even stand a chance to equal the best Trans-Atlantic record were it not that we have run 125 miles out of our course to avoid icebergs. But I am not anxious to break any record, nor desirous to shorten the trip, for most inviting as the prospect is of home, family, and friends, I can but think "Oh the too short voyage, the delicious days at sea, and the rare companionship!" But is it not fitting that our memorable trip should be thus crowned with a return voyage, the only drawback to which is its shortness, and also fitting that we should not cast reluctant, backward glances on that which has gone, however full it may have been of rich and helpful experiences, for the future may contain even greater, fuller things for us, and with the eye of faith we may be sure of the morrow. I. H. C.

HELP FOR THE FLOWER MISSION.

The Friends' Flower and Fruit Mission was organized this spring by the Committee on Mission Work among Women and Children.

Flowers have been distributed on Second-days, at one o'clock, for the past five weeks, from the Friends' Neighborhood Guild, 151 Fairmount Ave.

Contributions of flowers come regularly from West Chester, Lansdowne, Media and Malvern, Pa., and from Moorestown, Woodstown and Pemberton, N. J.

The friends who have the new mission in charge wish to thank all contributors for the flowers and to express their appreciation of the care taken in packing the hampers as in all cases the flowers have reached their destination in excellent condition.

Much gratitude is also felt for the aid given by the distributors. In many cases the pleasure which comes from the giving of pleasure has been their reward. The children in the narrow courts are wild with delight at the gift of a flower and unselfishly eager to point out the houses where the sick and suffering of their acquaintance may be found.

This paragraph is an appeal for workers during Seventh and Eighth months. So many people leave the city during these two months that it has been found impossible to secure sufficient help by private solicitation. It is hoped that many who read this will send their names and the dates on which they can serve to Alice Fussell, Media, Pa.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

MISSION SCHOOL PICNIC.—New York Afternoon First-day School had its annual picnic on Seventh-day, the 20th, at the old meeting-house at Flushing. The party met at the ferry at 10 o'clock,—about 40 children, with three teachers, three mothers, and one member of New York Monthly Meeting, who kindly accompanied them and had an oversight of the party. The stormy weather prevented other mothers and babies from going. However, it did not rain during the morning. The trip on the ferry and the trolley ride were much enjoyed by the children, who sang and waved small flags. The Friends at Flushing were ready to receive the children, and had provided jumping-ropes for their amusement. The children ran and played in the grass, regardless of its being wet, and soon some of them had to be taken into the meeting-house to have their clothes dried by the fire. About noon the lunch was served. This consisted of sandwiches of various kinds, milk, ice cream and cake. After lunch the entire party was loaded into two great wagons and taken for a drive to Bayside. At a most beautiful hillside the wagons were stopped and the children went to pick daisies. They returned with their arms laden with daisies and black-eyed Susans. It would have made a very interesting picture, the children closely packed in the wagons with their arms full of flowers, but there was not sunshine enough for photographing. Before the meeting-house was reached on the return trip, it was raining hard. Ice cream, sandwiches, and cake were again served, and the party started for home. The city was reached about 5 o'clock, when the rain was still falling, but not with much force. Flushing Friends take each year a great deal of trouble to give pleasure to these children, and also go to considerable expense. The children seem to appreciate the kindness. As they reached the meeting-house on their return from the ride the air resounded with their cries of "Three cheers for Mr. Bell." It is largely owing to the exertions of Abraham Bell, of Bayside, that the outing is such a great success.

These children are mostly Irish and Italian from the district east of the meeting-house in New York. When the father is "working" they are fairly well-to-do. When sickness comes, or the father loses his place from any cause, there are hard times. To some of the mothers, with their babies, the trip to Flushing is the only visit to the country they have each year, and they look forward to it with much pleasure.

MICKLETON, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association held at the meeting-house, Sixth month 13th, was opened by the president, Martha White, who read a portion of the 12th chapter of St. Luke.

Mary Owen read from Janney's History; Rachel M. Haines read a selection from the Discipline. A letter written by Isaac H. Clothier was read by Hannah A. Heritage. A very interesting article entitled "The First Children's Farm," was read by Annie W. Heritage. A reading, "Sprinkle Sunshine," was given by Esther L. Rulon. The following questions were assigned: "Did Pennsylvania and New Jersey Friends ever have two distinct yearly meetings, and if so, where were they held?" Clara Heritage. "What South Jersey town was founded by a Friend who was formerly a Major of Cavalry, and what was this man's name?" Hannah L. Peaslee. "When and where was the first general Yearly Meeting of Friends in New Jersey held?" Howard Rulon.

A. C. BRADSHAW, Secretary.

Educational Department.

FRIENDS' CENTRAL SCHOOL, PHILADELPHIA.

The closing exercises for the term at Friends' Central School were held on Sixth month 18th and 19th. On the former date occurred the class-day ceremonies, in the lecture-room, which was tastefully decorated with the school colors, blue and gray, and with palms and flowers, for the occasion. There was a large attendance.

The program was as follows: salutatory, Madeleine Katherine Gill; girls' history, Bertinia Hollowell; boys' statistics, James Abraham Walker; girls' presentations, Emma Jane Wilson; boys' history, Henry Woolman Shinn; class song; boys' presentations, Earnest Royal Everett; girls' prophecy, Alice Martin Hawkins; girls' statistics, Grace Pennypacker; boys' prophecy, Frederick Harold Gaston; valedictory, Bernard Aubrey Hilliard.

The officers of the class are: girls' class—president, Madeleine Katherine Gill; vice-president, Elizabeth E. Johnson; secretary and treasurer, Lillie M. Hill. Boys' class—president, Bernard Aubrey Hilliard; vice-president, James Abraham Walker; secretary, Frederick Harold Gaston; treasurer, Henry Woolman Shinn.

Group portraits of the girls' and of the boys' sections of the class of 1903 were presented to the school, and accepted by the principals of the respective departments, Anna Walter Speakman and J. Eugene Baker.

The commencement was held in Race Street Meeting-house on the morning of the 19th. Edmund Webster, of the committee of management, presided. Anna Walter Speakman opened the exercises by reading from Scripture. The following productions were then presented by members of the graduating class: essay, "The Place of Leisure Hours in Education," Alice Keim; oration, "Achievement as an Essential of Greatness," Henry Woolman Shinn; essay, "Children in Poetry," Marion E. Pennypacker; oration, "Public Opinion in America," James Abraham Walker; essay, "The Poetry of Humble Life," Marion S. Comly.

Diplomas were then awarded to the following graduates, to whom the principals gave affectionate words of advice and farewell:

Classical Course—Edith Yohe Blakey, Mary E. Brey, Marion S. Comly, Bertinia Hollowell, Alice Martin Hawkins, Elizabeth Edith Johnson, Alice Keim, Grace Evans Mickle, Miriam Arnold Myers, Lillie E. Schulte, Blanche Grace Steinbach, Flora Estelle Straub, Harriet Mary Thompson, Elizabeth Dixon Wilson, Emma Jane Wilson, Nathan Wright Buzby, Jr., James Abraham Walker.

Scientific Course—E. Virginia Bisler, Madeleine K. Gill, Elizabeth Paxson, Walter Trayner Baker, Walter White Carter, Bernard Aubrey Hilliard, Samuel Blair Luckie, Jr.,

Henry Woolman Shinn, Barclay White, Jr., Carlton Williams, George Cornog Williamson, Jr.

Literary Course—Bessie Orr Clarke, Ella W. Cleaver, Olive Roberts Cooper, Mary Bernard Cranston, Jane Roberts Harper, Lillie M. Hill, Sara Thompson Marshall, Ethel Cheney Neal, Marion Edith Pennypacker, Grace Rosenberg, Rial K. Taylor, Elizabeth E. Townsend, Alma Casseres, Vind R. William DeCoub, Jr., Frederick Harold Gaston, William Edson Stager, Warner McKechnie Swain.

Joseph Swain, LL.D., president of Swarthmore College, delivered the address to the graduates. He dwelt upon the growing necessity for higher and broader education, the true meaning of the word culture, and the necessity for the cultivation of the three-fold nature, with character building as the highest essential.

Of the girls who graduate this year, six will go to Swarthmore College, and two to Bryn Mawr. Of the boys, five will go to Swarthmore, and six to the University of Pennsylvania.

The Annie Shoemaker Scholarship at Swarthmore College was awarded to Jane Roberts Harper, and the I. V. Williamson Scholarship at the same institution to Barclay White, Jr.

ABINGTON FRIENDS' SCHOOL.

The Commencement and Class-day exercises took place at 10 a. m., on the 17th instant. Joseph Swain, President of Swarthmore College, gave the address; his subject was "The Elements of a Successful Life." David K. Goss, ex-Superintendent of the Indianapolis Schools and now principal of a private school in Strasburg, Germany, also spoke, comparing the industrial conditions and life of the German to that of the American and drawing some useful lessons therefrom for the graduates. After the presentation of the diplomas by Principal George M. Dunning, the class-day exercises were given.

The names of the graduates are Marion Prosser Baker, Wilmington, Del.; Florence Ina Bryan, Wyncote, Pa.; Esther L. Cox, Malvern, Pa.; Edith Hollowell, Ivyland, Pa.; Morris Jarrett, Horsham, Pa.; John Carrell Morris, Hatboro, Pa.; John Carle Parry, Jr., Wyncote, Pa.; Anna Walton Quigley, Willow Grove, Pa.; John Roth Roberts, Jenkintown, Pa.; Horace E. K. Stapler, Abington, Pa.; Donald Wearie Wilkie, Washington, D. C.

The Williamson Scholarship to Swarthmore College was awarded to J. Carle Parry. The assembly room of the school was crowded to its utmost capacity. The school year just closed has been a very successful one.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

At George School Commencement Principal Walter announced that the boys' dormitory now being erected at the George School would be known by the name of Drayton Hall, it being named for the birthplace of George Fox, in Leicester-shire, England.

Watson Bavington, of Byberry, who is interested in many business enterprises in Philadelphia, and was President of the Farmers' Hay Market for many years, attended meeting in San Francisco on the 14th and seemed interested in the proceedings, although quite different from the quiet meetings held at Byberry. He was traveling with some of the many excursions to the coast this year, and returned by way of Yellowstone Park.

Robert Barclay, who spoke at one of the sessions of London Yearly Meeting, is seventh in descent from the Apologist. He came into the Yearly Meeting as one of a deputation from the Bible Society of which he is Treasurer. In his remarks he said he "felt that he owed almost every thing to the Society of Friends, to his godly bringing up amongst them, and to the teaching he had received."

Mary Anna Jenkins, of Gwynedd, left Philadelphia on the morning of the 20th, for Chicago, where she will visit her sons, Thomas A. Jenkins and Edward Jenkins. She expects to spend some time with her daughter, Anna J. Webster, in Mankato, Minn. Her son Arthur accompanied her to Chicago.

Daniel Griest, who is looking after the land settlements for the Santa Fé Railroad Co., reports two sales to Friends of Illinois and Ohio, at Le Grand, California, who have moved there and taken possession, David P. Morris and Joseph K. Mills. This is a desirable part of the State for agricultural and fruit growing purposes.

At the Commencement of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, on the 17th, the degree of master of science was awarded to R. Grant Bennett, teacher of chemistry and physics at George School.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE many thoughtful readers who have been helped by Charles Wagner's "Simple Life" will welcome a new book by him entitled "The Better Way" (McClure, Phillips & Co., New York). This second volume which has a strain of sadness in the opening chapters, is dedicated to his son, who died in his sixteenth year, and by whose bed of pain much of it was written. The greater part of it is in the form of a dialogue between himself and a Friend who has ever been by his side, whom he has come to know as "another self, a good genius, a near and superior spirit who untangles from the perplexities of life that which is sure and essential."

In the first chapter, the author speaks of a time when he lost his little boy, who had just learned to walk, in a spot where rocks and precipices were near at hand, and after an hour's agonizing search found him safe inside of a high garden wall, befriended by strangers. Then he adds:

"Now the wall between him and us is of another height. But the scene of childhood comes back to me, when I believed him lost, fallen into some abyss, while in truth he was happy, welcome, cared for; and I see in it a symbol of what is passing on the other side of the wall."

A few selections from the counsels of the Friend will give some idea of the stimulus to right action and healthy living which pervades the book.

"In the very depths of yourself dig a grave. Let it be like some forgotten spot to which no path leads; and there, in the eternal silence, bury the wrongs that you have suffered. Your heart will feel as if a weight had fallen from it, and a divine peace will come to abide with you."

"Preserve your good humor. It is a signal of defeat for all the enemies of the soul. It is homage rendered to God from the midst of uncertainties. It is among the highest and purest acts of faith."

"Every yoke is a revelation to him who bears it worthily. All misery, high or low, is a messenger to tell us of our brothers whose misery is the same as ours."

"Guard with care that passion for the better which dwells within you. Dare affirm what you love, what you know to be honest. Do not fear to speak your convictions, and if necessary to cry them aloud. Know that in some hours to resign one's self to silence is a coward's part."

"Yes, it is indeed you who have done this thing, and it will be well for you to remember it, in order not to judge others. But what good can come from being disgusted with yourself? Not disgust, but care, courage and foresight are needed for healing the sick."

The Berea Quarterly gives most interesting glimpses of the mountain folk of the south, their customs, their language, their eagerness to take advantage of any opportunities for improvement, and of the work of Berea College in helping them to educational advantages. The number for Fifth month has an account of the conference at Berea of mountain-school Superintendents, a word on the "Educational Outlook in the South," by President Front, who had just returned from the Educational Conference at Athens, Ga., an article on the "Mountain Farm—A Good Birthplace," and some interesting information about homespun "bed-kivers."

The leading article in Scribner's Magazine for this month is a description by Edward Whymper, the well-known mountain climber, of "A New Playground in the New World." Accompanied by four professional mountaineers and a photographer he spent the summer of 1901 in the Rocky Mountains of Alberta, British America. His description of the adventures that befell the party is full of life and spirit and the illustrations suggest scenery of unsurpassed grandeur, though the names of mountains, streams and waterfalls are comparatively unknown.

General John B. Gordon contributes an article on "Antietam and Chancellorsville"; there are several good stories, an illustrated article on "The Cliff-Dwellers," and poems by William Young and Florence Earle Coates.

THE HUMBLE-BEE.

BURLY, dozing humble-bee,
Where thou art is clime for me.
Let them sail for Porto Rique,
Far-off heats through seas to seek;
I will follow thee alone,
Thou animated torrid-zone!
Zigzag steerer, desert cheerer,
Let me chase thy waving lines;
Keep me nearer, me thy hearer,
Singing over shrubs and vines.

Insect lover of the sun,
Joy of thy dominion!
Sailor of the atmosphere;
Swimmer through the waves of air;
Voyager of light and moon;
Epitauric of June;
Wait, I prithee, till I come
Within earshot of thy hum,—
All without is martyrdom.

When the south wind, in May days,
With a net of shining haze
Silvers the horizon wall,
And with softness touching all,
Tints the human countenance
With a color of romance,
And infusing subtle heats,
Turns the sod to violets,
Thou, in sunny solitudes,
Rover of the underwoods,
The green silence dost displace
With thy mellow, breezy bass.

Hot midsummer's petted rone,
Sweet to me thy drowsy tone
Tells of countless sunny hours,
Long days, and solid banks of flowers;
Of gulfs of sweetness without bound
In Indian wildernesses found;
Of Syrian peace, immortal leisure,
Firmest cheer, and bird-like pleasure.

Aught unsavory or unclear
Hath my insect never seen;
But violets and bilberry bells,
Maple-sap and daffodils,
Grass with green flag half-mast high,
Succory to match the sky,
Columbine with horn of honey,
Scented fern with agrimony,
Clover, catchfly, adder's-tongue
And brier-roses, dwelt among;
All beside was unknown waste,
All was picture as he passed.

Wiser far than human seer,
Yellow-breeched philosopher!
Seeing only what is fair,
Sipping only what is sweet,
Thou dost mock at fate and care,
Leave the chaff, and take the wheat.
When the fierce northwestern blast
Cools sea and land so far and fast,
Thou already slumberest deep;
Woe and want thou canst outsleep;
Want and woe, which torture us,
Thy sleep makes ridiculous.

—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Freedom of Development for Women.

MEN value the ballot highly for themselves. They would not be satisfied with influence. When votes are counted out, or tally-sheets forged, we try to send the guilty persons to the penitentiary for depriving American citizens of a vote in choosing the law-makers who are to govern them; but we see no harm in doing the same thing to our own sisters and wives.

It is often said that woman suffrage is just, but that there is no need of it, because women have no interests separate from those of men. That argument was used to me only lately by an eminent political economist. I said, "Suppose a railroad runs through a town, and a woman owns a large property in that town and yet cannot vote on the question of raising a subsidy; are her interests necessarily the same as those of every man in the town?" He answered, "That is a very rare case." My friends, that case is universal. Suppose a widow is trying to bring up her son in the principles of morality, and a saloon is opened on the corner opposite her house. I do not speak as an advocate of prohibition, for I am not one; but I do say that the interest of the mother is different from that of the man who sells liquor. Or suppose she is bringing up a daughter; she has a sacred right to protect her daughter from a libertine. Her interest is certainly different from that of the tempter.

Men have given women what they consider liberal treatment. They say, "You are not to sit on the jury or help make the law, but we will be fair with you; we will do the right thing by you." That may be part of the morality of civilization, but it is not the morality of justice.

The widest liberty is the condition of healthiest development. Home is a happy place, I hope; but what would a man's development be who had only his home life? He would be dwarfed—"cribbled, cabined and confined." Women are to-day better mothers than ever before, because they have been allowed more freedom of development.—[Wm. Dudley Foulke.]

Encouraging Beggary.

WHILE wiping the perspiration from his forehead, a porter who sat down to rest on the steps of the subtreasury in Wall Street, New York, felt something drop in the hat which he held in his hand. It was a nickel which some passer-by had given to him, mistaking him for a beggar. The porter, after his first indignation, decided to sit there a while longer to see what would happen, and before he went home to supper nearly five dollars had been dropped into his hat. As a result of the "charity" of the people in the street, he gave up the position where he was earning an honest living, and became a beggar, because it paid better; and the man who gave the nickel that led to this downfall doubtless went home that night congratulating himself on his kindness to a fellow creature in need.—[Youth's Companion.]

Kindness That Worked.

PERCHED on top of a load of boxes of merchandise the driver was belaboring his horse with a whip and shouting to him to "get up!" but the four feet remained resolutely glued to the pavement. The animal found the load too heavy; the wheels stopped at State and Madison streets, and despite the clangor of the cable gongs, the cutting blows from his driver's whip, and his explosive language, the horse stopped to rest. The policeman who guards that part of the corner where the horse balked, came forward, brandishing his club.

"Get up there, bones!" he shouted. "Bones" looked wearily at the blue-coat, flopped back his ears, but didn't budge. The policeman tried thumping his legs with his billet. This, too, was of no avail. Then the driver and policeman renewed their vocal and castigatory efforts with greater zeal. But the horse stood firm.

A tall man, with kindly blue eyes, a reddish brown beard, and wearing a black cape overcoat, broke through the crowd that was watching the scene. "Let me try to make him move," he said. The driver relaxed his tight reins, and the policeman stepped back. The man with the red beard loosened the bit in the horse's mouth, patted his head, wet with sweat, and talked to him kindly. The animal at once exhibited signs of thankfulness. He rubbed his nose on the man's shoulder and was given a caress in return. After a few seconds the humane stranger said with a smile:

"Now, old fellow, come on with the load."

The horse settled down slowly to the work, his legs quivered under the heavy burden, and then the wheels began to revolve again.—[Chicago Tribune.]

Vines as Ornaments.

VINES lend themselves with facility to many and varied uses. Walls, pillars and embankments may be clothed in them; walks exposed to the burning sun may be covered; and a back porch, a post sunk in a neglected spot, a sunny back door, all furnish opportunities for thrifty vines. For permanent effect, nothing surpasses the Boston or Japanese ivy. It is hardy and luxuriant, climbs firmly and does not run across openings of doors, windows etc. For flowering effects clematis paniculata is supreme, and when intermingled with the scarlet, ever blooming honeysuckle the effect is dazzling in the extreme. For the thrifty home maker, whose garden is planned with a view to utility, the grape-vine appeals with two-fold interest, and for picturesque effects the wild-grape vine is especially adapted.—[The Delineator.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

In the recent German Reichstag elections the "Socialists" made sweeping gains. In the Kingdom of Saxony they polled 100,000 majority over all other parties. They will probably have 80 members in the new House. This does not mean a wide spread of socialism pure and simple. The program upon which the party made the campaign included such issues as these:

One vote for every man and woman, payment of members of Parliament, responsibility of the government to Parliament, local self-government and the referendum, substitution of militia system for great standing army, freedom of speech and the press, legal equality of the sexes, disestablishment of the churches, free non-sectarian schools, with compulsory attendance. The particular issue was the Kaiser's call for a big navy and a stronger army.

THE English Cardinal, Vaughan, Archbishop of Westminster died on the 19th. He was of an old English family. From the time of his ordination he has felt a keen interest in the "heathen" under British rule, but his first work in evangelization was among the negroes of Maryland. It was in America that he raised most of the money for the missionary college in London. As Cardinal he made some stir in English "Church" circles by his frank declaration against the validity of Anglican orders. His wonderful, pertinacious, incessant labors in the cause of temperance are known, but it is not generally known how effective they were by reason of the man's great common sense, sympathy and broad views, which were the results of his fine culture and keen intelligence. As owner of one of the ablest publications in England, the Tablet, he displayed his intellectual strength and exerted a powerful influence on Catholic thought.

APPROPOS of the "walking delegate" difficulty in connection with the strike in the building trades in New York, George P. Sullivan, a labor leader and Mayor on a labor platform of Derby, Conn., has said some wholesome things bearing on the labor problem. "The walking delegate," he says, "will soon be a thing of the past, and high-salaried officers will give way to laborer leaders of labor. He has received scores of letters from business men commending the stand he has taken, and others from union men urging him to head a new and more conservative trades union movement.

NEWS NOTES.

GENERAL DIAZ has once more been nominated by the Mexican National Liberal Party for the presidency.

WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE has resigned from the Civil Service Commission, and is succeeded by A. W. Cooley, of Westchester, N. Y.

THE commercial cable between San Francisco and Manila is complete, giving direct communication between the United States and the Philippines.

At the World's Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at Geneva, on the 11th, Lady Henry Somerset was re-elected president.

THE Venezuelan Government has paid to Germany the $60,000 due this month, as stipulated in the protocol, in partial liquidation of the German claims against Venezuela.

THE Atlanta Cotton Mills and the Enterprise Mills, of Augusta, Ga., because of the high price of cotton, have shut down indefinitely, throwing 2,000 persons out of work.

ELIZABETH COOMBS ADAMS, grand-daughter of President John Adams (daughter of Thomas Boylston Adams), died on Sixth month 13th, at Quincy, Mass., at the age of ninety-five.

THE confirmed criminal, George White, the negro who assaulted and murdered Helen Bishop, a young girl, near Wilmington, Delaware, was taken from jail by a mob and burned at the stake.

THE Cunard Line has withdrawn from the passenger agreement of the North Atlantic Conference, which means that the line is out of the "Steamship Trust," but does not necessarily mean a rate war.

CHIEF FACTORY INSPECTOR DELANEY, of Pennsylvania, has announced his purpose to see that the laws against child labor are enforced. No child under 13 years of age will be allowed to work, and authentic certificate of birth or baptism will be required.

HARVARD gave one of the prominent parts on her commencement program to Leslie P. Hill, a negro student from Orange, N. J. He intends to go back for graduate work next year, with the ultimate view of teaching, possibly at Tuskegee.

AMBASSADOR CLAYTON has cabled the State Department from Mexico that the Mexican Government has deposited to his credit $1,420,682 on account of the Pius Fund award. The money will be remitted to Archbishop Riordan, Bishop of San Francisco.

THE textile strike at Lowell, Mass., which began on the 30th of Third month and involved 17,000 operatives, is at an end. It has cost in wages about $1,300,000. It is a defeat for the strikers, the high price of cotton making the 10 per cent. increase in wages impossible.

A SCIENTIFIC expedition leaves New York on the 27th to explore the Labrador peninsula. The party of seven was organized and will be led by Colonel Willard Glazier. The main object is to reach and cross the Height of Land, which has never been attempted.

JAMES T. METCALF, Superintendent of the money order division of the Postoffice Department, and one of its oldest employees, was dismissed for acts in connection with the proposed award of the contract for money order blanks to a firm by whom his son was employed.

ELIZABETH CABOT AGASSIZ, the honorary president of Radcliffe College, who for some time has felt unequal to the responsibilities of the position, has resigned. She is succeeded by Le Baron Russell Briggs, Dean of Harvard, whose appointment marks a still closer connection of Radcliffe with the University.

THE Czar telegraphed his good wishes to King Peter of Serbia and expressed the hope that God would assist him in the enterprise he has undertaken for the happiness of his people. Austria has also given him immediate recognition. England and America have held back. Our Minister to Greece is accredited also to Serbia and Roumania, with residence at Athens.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

6TH MO. 27.—SCIPIO QUARTERLY MEETING, at North Street, N. Y. Ministers and elders the day before at 2 p.m.

6TH MO. 28.—SCHUYLKILL MEETING, 10.30 a.m., will be visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit smaller branches.

6TH MO. 28.—A CONFERENCE UNDER THE care of the Philanthropic Committees of the Yearly and Quarterly Meetings will be held in the meeting-house at Langhorne, Pa., at 2.30 p.m. Henry W. Wilbur, of New York, will address the meeting on the subject of "Temperance."

6TH MO. 29.—FRIENDS' FLOWER AND Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Ave., at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

7TH MO. 4.—NEW YORK MONTHLY Meeting at 15th St. and Rutherford Place, New York, at 2.30 p. m.

7TH MO. 5.—JOSEPH POWELL, OF DARBY, has appointed a Meeting for Divine Worship, to be held in Plymouth Meet-

THE first tract put forth in this country for the cause of peace was written in 1809 by David L. Dodge, a merchant of New York City, father of the present William E. Dodge. The title of the tract was "The Mediator's Kingdom Not of This World." It was in Mr. Dodge's parlor that the New York Peace Society, the first in the world, was organized in August, 1815, though the proposition to form one had been put forth by him in 1812. David L. Dodge is therefore rightly entitled to be called "The Father of the Modern Peace Movement."—[Advocate of Peace.]

THE trouble and worry and wear and tear that come from hating people make hating unprofitable.—[Our Dumb Animals.]

ARMSTRONG & McKELLY
Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS
Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK
Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR } Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN }
ATLANTIC }
BRADLEY }
BROOKLYN } New York.
JEWETT }
ULSTER }
UNION }
SOUTHERN } Chicago.
SHIPMAN }
COLLIER }
MISSOURI } St. Louis.
RED SEAL }
SOUTHERN }
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO
Philadelphia.
MORLEY } Cleveland.
SALEM } Salem, Mass.
CORNELL } Buffalo.
KENTUCKY } Louisville.

IN painting, as in everything else, experience counts. It should tell what to use and how to use it.

Get the best experience by employing a responsible, practical painter, and remember the word "painter" on a card or sign does not make a painter. Experience does this.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

THE BRITISH FRIEND.

PUBLISHED ON THE 15TH OF EACH MONTH.

Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading "The Truth" among thoughtful enquirers.

The June Issue (specially enlarged) Contains:
 Full account of London and Dublin Yearly Meetings.
 "Religion in London," by Philip H. Wicksteed, M.A.
 "The Mosely Industrial Commission to America," by J. Carter, M.A.
 "Light and Leading," by Mary A. Wallis.
 "Labour Legislation in New Zealand," by Joshua Rewinter.
 "Popular Fioduism," by Joseph Taylor.
 "Idealism in Education," by M. Carra Sturge.

A distinctive feature is made of Reviews, and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to those engaged in religious and social work.

Subscription, 6s.6d. ($1.58) per annum, post free. Specimen copy on application.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER:
 EDWARD GRUBB, M. A.,

Devonshire Chambers,
 Bishopsgate Without, London, E. C.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patronage give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
STEAMSHIP LINES
 FROM
PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
 O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Uptown office, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
 J. C. WHITNEY, sd V. P. and T. M. W. P.
 TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

You can live without life insurance, but you won't live so much.

Nothing adds to the zest of living like knowing your family is protected by a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

(Included from page 410.)

ing House, at 3 p. m. The youth are particularly invited. At the close a reading will be given: Subject, "The Divine Immanence."

7TH MO. 5.—THE FRIENDS OF WHITE Plains will meet at Sarah Knowlton's, 45 Lexington Ave., for religious service. All Friends are welcome.

7TH MO. 5.—READING MEETING, 11 A. M., will be visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meetings Committee to visit smaller branches.

THE FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION acknowledges receipt of the following contributions to the Children's Country Week Association:

The Fellowship Circle of the King's Daughters, $5.00
 Cash, 5.00
 Emily B. Smith, 5.00

Amount, $15.00
 Also from the "Fellowship Circle of the King's Daughters," 4 bundles of clothing containing 137 garments.
 JOHN COMLY, Superintendent.
 Sixth month 21, 1903.

PENNSYLVANIA CHAUTAUQUA.

REDUCED RATES TO MT. GRETNA VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

For the Pennsylvania Chautauqua to be held at Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 1st to August 5th, 1903, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell special excursion tickets from New York, Philadelphia, Chestnut Hill, Phoenixville, Wilmington, Perryville, Frederick, Md., Washington, D.C., East Liberty, Butler, Indiana, Connellsville, Bedford, Clearfield, Martinsburg, Bellefonte, Waterford, Canandaigua, Wilkesbarre, Tomhicken, Mt. Carmel, Lykens, and principal intermediate points, to Mt. Gretna and return, at reduced rates. Tickets will be sold June 25th to August 5th, inclusive, and will be good to return until August 13th, inclusive. For specific rates, consult ticket agents.

LITTLE DOT—"Mamma says th' cat is full of 'lectricity."
 Little Dick—"Of course. Put your ear down on 'er an' you can hear the trolley."
 —[Good News.]

AN obedient husband up in Franklin county, Maine, was objecting to doing certain work about the house, and he quoted Scripture to his wife, showing that the household duties should properly be assigned to the woman. The good wife replied by reading to her astonished liege ll. Kings, xxi. 13: "I will wipe out Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down." That husband has wiped the dishes ever since.—[Gathered.]

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope), 21 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
 N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham, 64 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.12. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."
 —FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.11.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Dunkhobors. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
 N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIETETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
 Unlike all other flours. Ask Grocers.
 For book or sample write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
 5 PHONES.

NO USE OF CROSSING.—Somewhere in Dixie land, a member of the "po' h white trash" endeavored to cross a stream by means of a ferry owned by a black man. Booker T. Washington gives the conversation in The Cosmopolitan:

"Uncle Mose," said the white man, "I want to cross, but I hain't got no money."

Uncle Mose scratched his head. "Doan' you got no money 't all?" he queried.

"No," said the wayfaring stranger, "I haven't a cent."

"But it done cost you but three cents," insisted Uncle Mose, "ter cross der ferry."

"I know," said the white man, "but I haven't got the three cents."

Uncle Mose was in a quandary. "Boss," he said, "I done tell you what. Er man what's got no three cents am jes' ez well off on dis side er der river as on de oder."—[Baptist Commonwealth.]

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna. JOSEPH L. JONES

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal, 1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

KNOWN FACTS ABOUT SERGE SUITS.

The best Serge Suits made in this country are manufactured by the Stein-Bloch Co., of Rochester, N. Y. These Suits are cut, sewed and finished by high-class men tailors, right in the Stein-Bloch factory, which is famous as being the cleanest, best-lighted and best-ventilated clothing factory in the world. These facts are well known to every clothing dealer of importance in America.

We are sole sales-agents for Stein-Bloch clothing in this city, and the demand has increased over ten-fold since we assumed the agency.

None of the Stein-Bloch Serge Suits are regularly sold under $15.00, and the better grades run up to $30.00, with several prices between.

The Stein-Bloch Serge Suits are imitated, of course; but no other manufacturer seems able to produce quite as good an effect in style and fit.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, DEPOSITARY, UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION. REGISTER AND TRANSFER AGENT. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
E. B. MORRIS, President.

VERY LOW RATES TO MANY POINTS REACHED VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The Southern Railway Company announces the sale of tickets at extremely low rates from points on its lines for the following special occasions.

Asheville, N. C., Southern Educational Association, June 30-July 3, 1903.

Asheville, N. C., National Dental and adjunct Societies, July 24-31, 1903.

Athens, Ga., Summer School, July 1-August 9, 1903.

Atlanta, Ga., National Convention B. Y. P. U., of America, July 9-12, 1903.

Monteagle, Tenn., Bible School, July 1-August 30, 1903.

San Francisco, Cal., and Above rates open to the public.

Tickets will be sold to above points from all stations on Southern Railway.

Detailed information can be had upon application to Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA. AND RETURN.

VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY, ACCOUNT NATIONAL CONVENTION BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION OF AMERICA, JULY 9TH-12TH, 1903.

On July 6th to 9th, inclusive, round trip tickets will be sold to Atlanta, Ga., via the Southern Railway on account of above convention at rate of one fare, plus $1.00, from trunk line territory, final limit July 15th.

By depositing ticket with special agent at Atlanta on or before July 15th and payment of fee of fifty cents, an extension of final return limit may be obtained to August 15th, 1903. The round trip rate from Philadelphia will be $22.50, proportionately low rates from other points.

Side trips tickets will be sold from Atlanta to various points on July 13th and 14th, final limit, ten days, at rate of one first-class fare, plus 25 cents for the round trip.

Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets

(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE Sifts the flour and mixes to 1lb. of best bread in 3 minutes. Send subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (OTIS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 522 1/2 Market St., Philadelphia

LANDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

LANDOWNE, PA.

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.

2 per cent. paid on Current Deposits.

4 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANE VERBORN, Vice-President; J. MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS W. MARLINA, Solicitor. Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Aims at prompt service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, SEVENTH MONTH 4, 1903.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Green Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $2.60) per day

Full Tariffed Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

Illino-Kon-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

VALTON & FRENCH

Ocean view unexcelled Bell's Phone No. 26

Will remain OPEN throughout the year

GRACE HILLA

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Appointments first-class. Near ocean and bay. MRS. CLARA L. FLITCRAFT, 408 Central Avenue.

THE PRINCETON,

Permanent and Transient Boarding for Friends.

215 E. 14th Street, New York City.

The Batram,

Accommodates 100 guests.

WILDWOOD, N. J.

Pleasantly situated within 200 feet of beach. Especial attention given to the menu.

J ALFRED BARTRAM, Owner and Manager.

The Marlborough. Kept by Friends.

CEAN GROVE, N. J.

Under entirely new management. One block from bathing grounds hot sea baths. For particulars Address SAMUEL B. LIPPINCOTT, 17 Sea View Avenue.

THE DRIEWOOD

CEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Res. For particulars address SARAH J. FAXSON and SISTERS

The Penhurst,

Second House from Beach

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHU,

116 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts K. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUAILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,

Atlantic City, N. J.

Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.

M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

FOR RENT.—EIGHTEENTH MONTH 1ST to 29TH, AT BUCK HILL FALLS, in cottage near Ina, on a level walk from it, and one of the best locations in the settlement, two double rooms, with private bath and toilet en suite, adjoining a sitting-room of good size with open fire; also a large and attractive second floor porch. Fully furnished. Address "O," this Office.

WANTED.—POSITION AS HOUSEKEEPER or matron in institution, boarding-school, boarding-house or apartment-house. Address V. H., this Office.

WANTED.—THE CO-OPERATIVE HOUSE-keeping Association will have one vacancy after July 8th, for young woman boarder. Apply E. H. S., 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—POSITION AS ASSISTANT IN institution, Friends' boarding home or school. Address F. K. D., this Office.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early, Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

HELEN G. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Lost Word," by Henry van Dyke as an evening's program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After Fifth month 8th for particulars address Helge G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

FRIENDS' PRIVATE COUNTRY HOME AND instructions for refolded children. Parental care. Best references. Summer Board. MRS. EASTBURN, Lahaska, Bucks county, Pa.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 15th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

BOARDERS DESIRED IN FRIENDS' FAMILY on farm. Desirable location. Address S., 500 Spring Mill Avenue, Conshohocken, Pa.

FOR RENT.—S W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

Established 1810 at 524 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

J. Lindeo Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS

Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philad'a

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley

BUNTING and SHRIGLEY

ARCHITECTS

Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

IN DULL TIMES PREPARE FOR BUSY ONES.

The best time to plan an advertising campaign for the fall is right now when you have time to go into the matter slowly and carefully. Two weeks are better than one—let's talk it over.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE

BESTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St. Both Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

It was a fresh and glorious world,
A banner bright that was unfurled
Before me suddenly.

I looked upon those hills and plains
And seemed as if let loose from chains
To live at liberty.

—Hamilton W. Abbie.

It is a pleasure to announce that the Pennsylvania Railroad is also aroused to the growing importance of the Pocono region

Beginning Sixth month 27th, their full summer schedule went into effect.
Another important step forward is that the change of cars formerly made at Mamunka Chunk is now made at Stroudsburg, a much more convenient and comfortable junction point.

Trains now leave Broad Street Station on week days for Cresco as follows:

7 a. m. Change cars at Stroudsburg; reach Cresco 11:46.

9:15 a. m. Through train direct to Cresco with a Buffalo Parlor car. This is the most comfortable train to take. Reaches Cresco 1:06 p. m.

12 m. Change cars at Stroudsburg, where there is a wait of one hour, reaching Cresco at 5:25 p. m.

1:08 p. m. Seventh-days only. Through train direct to Cresco with parlor cars. Reaches Cresco 4:49 p. m. This is the fastest train.

3:34 p. m. Change at Stroudsburg; reach Cresco 7:45 p. m.

Returning there are a corresponding number of trains leaving Cresco at convenient hours.

The excursion round trip ticket to Cresco from Philadelphia is $5.20.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pocono Pines Assembly

AND

Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing. 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 12-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager,
Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS

IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.

809 Master Street, Philad'a, Pa.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,

N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.

* * TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXVII.	417
POETRY: SOMETHING LASTING.	417
THE BELIEF OF FRIENDS.	417
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson.—Continued.	418
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON
Paul's Conversion.	430
PERFECT PEACE.	421
A PRAYER FOR A HAPPY OLD AGE.	421
EDITORIAL:
The Voice of the People.	422
Having a Good Time.	422
Notes.	423
MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	423
SOCIETY NOTES.	423
GENESEE YEARLY MEETING.	424
FISHING CREEK HALF-YEAR MEETING.	426
VISITS OF ABEL AND ELIZABETH MILLS.	426
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	427
EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.	428
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	429
LITERARY NOTES.	429
OUR FOREIGN POPULATION.	430
POETRY: The Long Road Over the Hill.
The Old Farm.	430
MISCELLANY: Woman Suffrage; The Germans of the Northwest; A Business Parable.	431
CURRENT EVENTS.	432
NEWS NOTES.	432
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	432

J. T. JACKSON & CO.Real Estate BrokersChestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
{ 621 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: { Ahler, Montgomery Co., Pa.JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWEDD STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.Thompson Shours, 2212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shours. Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-78 D Hilbert.EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
016 Sanson Street. Philadelphia, Pa.J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis.
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents, Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK, Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.Young Friends' ReviewPublished by the New York Young Friends' Association.HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR, 19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered
Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Y. F. A. Building,140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.Convenient, Restful, Homelike.
Table d'hote 25 cents.Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.
COMFORTABLE ROOMS:
One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
*Phone 1-33-55.Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PEN A.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Sender Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,
FIFTEENTH AND RAC STS.,
PHILADELPHIA

Under care of the Monthly Meeting of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN }
Circulars on application.George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly

Meeting of Friends

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
Georg School, Penna.Abington Friends' school,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS & BOTH SEXES.
Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.
Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business.
The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to GEORGE M. DOWNING, N. S., Principal,
Abington, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogout, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.
For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.Friends' Academy,

LOJST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
Terms are moderate by reason of economy.

For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S. Principal,
Lust Valley, N. Y.SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage like; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B.

Ambler, A. M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register.
The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race streets, each Sabbath day, from 10 a. m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WODNUTTUndertaker and Embinner

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPPL 29-38 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, SEVENTH MONTH 4, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 27.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXVII.

THE call to service in meeting depends on knowledge and sympathy cultivated out of meeting.

ANNA WARNER MARSH.

In London Yearly Meeting.

SOMETHING LASTING.

HE built a house ; time laid it in the dust ;
He wrote a book ; its title's now forgot ;
He ruled a city, but his name is not
On any tablet graven, or where rust
Can gather from disuse, or marble bust.

He took a child from out a wretched cot,
Who on the State dishonor might have brought,
And reared him to the Christian's hope and trust :
The boy, to manhood grown, became a light
To many souls, and preached for human need
The wondrous love of the Omnipotent.
The work has multiplied like stars at night
When darkness deepens ; every noble deed
Lasts longer than a granite monument.

—Sarah K. Bolton.

THE BELIEF OF FRIENDS.¹

IF I were asked to tell a class of children what was the belief of the Society of Friends, and wished to tell them further, the reason for that belief, I might present the thought in this way, varying my language to suit the ages of the children. I would take a flower, a pansy perhaps, show them its construction, its bright or sombre coloring, its finely wrought veining scarcely seen by the naked eye, its velvety texture, its delicate perfume, its sturdy stem growing out of the cluster of leaves. I would try my best to show the wonderful mechanism and beauty of this embodiment of air and earth and sunshine.

Who made this flower which yesterday was a tightly folded bud and last month a tiny seed yet buried in the earth ?

Must there not have been some unseen power which caused the seed to germinate, the roots to find the elements they needed for growth, the stem to seek the sunlight, the leaf to put forth, the buds to swell and the flower to bloom ? This cannot be the work of chance, for it displays order, symmetry, method. Besides, the same miracle is repeated with countless variations, in other plants, and in each succeeding year the law of germination and growth, as old as creation and yet forever new, is an object lesson, full of Divine meaning.

As you look further about you, you will see that the same creative agency that manifests itself in a little flower, pervades and supports the whole frame work of nature. This Power or Force rules and governs not only our own little world, but the whole universe and for aught we know countless universes, far beyond our finite thought to conceive.

Such a Being who can create worlds, and maintain the "harmony of the spheres," must be above and beyond our human conception of goodness and greatness and power, and so we speak of him as "Infinite Wisdom," "Almighty God," "Heavenly Father," "Overruling Power." Our Father seems to be the most expressive and endearing title, for it not only signifies our close relationship as children, but it implies a sharing of this Fatherhood with all the creatures to whom he has given life.

Instead of thinking of this Being as one far off, an angry and avenging God, whose wrath it is necessary to appease, we know He can be nearer than any earthly parent, for we shall learn his "kingdom is within our own souls." "His mercy is from everlasting to everlasting," and "his love knows neither variableness nor shadow of turning."

Belief in this Supreme Being is the first principle of the Society of Friends.

If we are children of this Almighty Father, it is reasonable to suppose that he has conferred upon us a measure of his substance. Now what is this substance ? Very early in life we become conscious of some power within us beside that which is generated by the exercise of our physical organs.

This power, felt but not seen, invisible, but most discernible, is wholly independent of bodily vitality, and yet it is a living something, because it animates to life and growth. . . . Beautiful thought ! that the human soul is indeed the Temple of God ! Into this temple shines "the light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." And this brings us to the second article of the belief of Friends, the power of direct communion with our Heavenly Father. Immediate revelation, as we are pleased to term it. Bancroft said, "The Qualer has but one word, the Inner Light, the voice of God in the soul. That light is a reality, and therefore, in its freedom, the highest revelation of truth. It is kindred with the Spirit of God, and therefore, in its purity, should be listened to as the guide to virtue. It shines in every man's breast, and therefore joins the whole human race in the unity of equal rights."

Belief in the Inner Light must indicate a belief in the Power from which emanates that light, and so I would say that the two fundamental principles of the Society of Friends are belief in God, and in His illuminating presence in the souls of all his children. Closely allied to these principles, but subservient to them because growing out of them are, third, belief in the Scriptures, and fourth, belief that Jesus Christ was the highest manifestation of God in man. We believe in the Scriptures because they confirm the immediate revelation of the Divine will and purpose, but we claim that the real word of God in our own souls is above all recorded Scripture. It is the word of God that is with us every day and every hour, "a volume never closed—but wide open, so long as there is a listening ear to the Divine voice."

¹Read at Concord First-day School Union, held at Chester, Pa., Fourth month 18th, 1903.

Individualism in the acceptance of matters of doctrine must naturally be the outcome of our belief in the Inner Light, and this leaves every mind free to put his own interpretation upon Biblical questions that are not of vital importance. Jesus said, "Ye are my friends if you do whatsoever I command you." This is my commandment, "That ye love one another." If our love for each other is strong and abiding, we shall not want to cavil over points of doctrine, or matters of form, but will allow others the liberty of opinion we claim for ourselves.

From the recorded accounts of the life of Jesus, we see that the living word of God was so wrought into his daily existence as to present a man truly at one with his Father. Though he was tempted as we are he sinned not, but was perfect through faithfulness to that Light which early showed him that he "must be about his Father's business." According to our conception of the Divine plan we believe Jesus was sent to be our exemplar, our ideal of a perfect life; and our highest aim should be to apply his precepts and teachings to our own every-day lives. And this brings me to the fifth principle of the Society. That we should "adopt the Christ rule as the governing power" of our lives. Make real the teachings of Jesus and frequently ask ourselves what would he do if he were here to-day. We know what he did do in his short earthly life. He taught love and forgiveness to one's enemies, and reproved those who judged others' actions. He advocated religious liberty, and protested against all forms of hypocrisy, oppression and corruption. He identified himself with those who work, and magnified the holiness of service. He called his followers away from outward rituals and observances, and exhorted them to moderation, simplicity and practical righteousness. He taught that worship was communion of the soul, and that the Gospel message should be as freely given as it is received by the seeking spirit. He put conduct before belief, and the spirit above the letter.

He commenced his ministry with benedictions upon those who possessed Divine attributes, and he closed his earthly career with such a tender prayer for those whom he was about to leave, that the keynote of it, Divine Love, has been the guiding star through all the centuries since. Do you see any similarity between the teachings of Jesus and the testimonies of the Society of Friends?

If a creed is a belief, I think Friends have as distinct a creed as any other religious body. The two essential principles which form this creed are to us the simple and essential truths of the Christian religion. If from the organization of our Society, we had proclaimed these fundamental principles as our articles of faith, our creed, and taught them to our children, and to others, I do not believe there would be the misconception that exists to-day as to what Friends believe, nor would we be pained to hear the remark, "Oh, I don't believe much of anything. I am more of a Friend than anything else." Let us see to it that the children of our First-day schools are taught the principles of Christianity as understood and accepted by us. It does not matter whether these children will take our places or not in the Society. It does matter, however, that they carry into the world the weight of their united influence against war, oaths, gambling, capital punishment, intemperance, immorality, or any other evil that is foreign to the standard of love to God and love to one's neighbor that marks the highest concept of the Christian religion. CLARA BOOTH MILLER.

Media, Fourth month 18th, 1903.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

THE Friends left Virgin Gorda before daylight on Twelfth month 16th, and in a few hours reached Fat Hog Bay, Tortola, where, with a little girl for a guide, they set off through a dense thicket to Long Look, the former home of Samuel and Mary Nottingham, Friends of Bristol, England, who had owned and occupied the estate about sixty years before. They returned to England after having manumitted their slaves and given them a deed for the property in compensation for their services. John Jackson, in his narrative, speaks as follows of the effect of freedom upon these people:

"From what we could learn in relation to these people they have never abused their freedom, and although opportunities to promote their pecuniary interests have been very limited, they have sufficient for their maintenance and therewith have been content. The freedom they have enjoyed has evidently imparted to them a much more dignified manner than we discovered in those who had but lately been released from slavery. As a proof of the benefits of freedom and free labor, it is worthy of notice that, while many of the plantations in this part of Tortola, formerly under cultivation, and worked exclusively by slaves, have long since been deserted, and are now grown up a rude wilderness, the plantation of Samuel and Mary Nottingham is still yielding a comfortable subsistence to a prosperous and happy community, numbering now about eighty persons in sixteen distinct families. . . . Some of the oldest of them retain an affectionate remembrance of Friends; one aged man, now quite blind, informed us that he frequently had been with his master at Quaker meetings in New York and Philadelphia.

"We had a very interesting religious opportunity with them, and after bidding them farewell, some of their young men conducted us by a circuitous path through a dense thicket, about a mile distant, to the spot where Friends once had a meeting-house in which they assembled for social, spiritual worship. This was a place of interest to us, for here are buried the remains of several of our valued ministers from Pennsylvania and New Jersey, who visited this island about a century ago, from a sense of gospel love. The stone foundation of the meeting-house was still remaining; near it five tombs had been erected according to an ancient custom of the island. They were built of brick, about three feet above the ground, and covered over neatly with mortar. Time had made its ravages upon these mansions of the dead. The acacia spread thickly its thorny branches over them, and near them the century-blooming aloe was luxuriantly growing. Although no eulogy was engraven upon them, yet the tradition of the place is that these were erected to mark the resting-place of strangers who had visited the island and died there.

This being the Christmas season they noticed some intoxication, but were informed that it had been much worse in the days of slavery. Owing to the merriment among the people the meeting held in the court-house was not very satisfactory. One day when they were overaken by a shower of rain, they sought shelter in a small cabin that stood near the roadside. What happened in the cabin is thus told in the narrative:

'Its only inmate was an aged colored man, with whom we soon engaged in familiar conversation. 'My name,' says he, 'is Adam, I live alone, I am too old to work, I must be one hundred years old. I remember when there were but three plantations in the island. I got to be old because I always take care of myself. I get a little money by selling tamarinds, I can make a penny a day, this pays for ANCIENT BURIAL GROUND OF FRIENDS, TORTOLA. Drawn on the spot by George Truman.

1. Graves of Thomas Chalkley, John Estaugh, John Cadwallader and Mary Hunt.
2. Foundation of Meeting-house. 3. Farm of Long Look.

After taking a brief survey of these mansions of the dead, we returned to the beach where our boatmen were waiting, and in a few hours we were safely landed at Roads Town."

Two days later they made a visit to the estate of R. V. Shew, the oldest planter on the island. A slave owner from the neighboring Danish Island of St. John's accompanied them, who remarked that he thought the laborers did more work than the same number of slaves on his plantation. Here they held a meeting under the shade of a large sand-box tree, so called because its seed vessel resembles, and is frequently used as a sand-box. They noticed that the people were neatly attired and very attentive to the words of encouragement, which "seemed like a proclamation of spiritual liberty to the captive, and the opening of the prison doors to them that are bound."

The next island visited was St. Christopher's, where a number of meetings were held and the jail inspected. The Governor assured them of the island's increased prosperity since the slaves had been liberated. The Governor's private secretary was "a creole of color," whom they could not have told from a white man.

my bread, I am well contented, I expect to die before long, I been trying to live honest, so I think I shall go to heaven at last.' We were interested with the old man's simple narrative, we did not doubt its truth, 'his hoary locks proclaimed his length of years.' We made him a few small presents before we departed, leaving Adam well pleased with the interview."

The next island visited was Antigua. At its capital, St. John's, they found a library containing about five thousand volumes, with a reading room connected with it. Here the English, American and Colonial newspapers were found upon the tables. The librarian was an intelligent colored man. On this island they found good accommodations at a boarding-house kept by a colored woman. Nearly all of the hotels and boarding-houses seem to have been kept by colored people. The meeting held in St. John's on First month 3d is thus described:

"For this purpose we procured the use of a large room in our boarding house, which proved much too small to accommodate those who seemed desirous to attend. The minds of many of the different professors of religion in this place had been prejudiced against us before our arrival, so much so that we met with great opposition in our attempts to obtain a house suitable for the purpose of a public religious meeting. A large number of the respectable inhabitants were present on the occasion to-day. The meeting proved to be one of Divine favor, and although many came there with the expectation of hearing, as they said, 'the truths of Christianity controverted,' they were well satisfied with the opportunity, and acknowledged their unity with us and our labors among them. Their minds were disabused of the prejudices they had fostered against us, very many offered their services to assist in obtaining religious opportunities with the people, and from this time we found no difficulty in obtaining meetings in the town of St. John's and other parts of the island."

On this island they visited the house of correction, which they found clean and in good order, with less than half as many inmates in 1839 as in 1835. They stopped at a Moravian settlement whose numerous buildings corresponded with the simplicity and neatness observable among this people. The school here was taught by a colored man who appeared well qualified for the station. They found several schools in the island supported by a benevolent fund. A visit to one of these at English Harbor, is pleasantly commented upon.

"We were highly gratified with the manner of instruction, which appeared somewhat novel, but efficient to a remarkable degree in impressing the lessons given by the teacher. The children get no lessons by rote, the instruction is altogether oral, and the whole school, younger and older, partake in the same exercises in geography, including the use of maps, and arithmetic, natural history, etc. In this way many things are impressed on the young mind which appears to animate and interest them.

"We had two meetings at English Harbor, very much to our satisfaction; at one of these a large and mixed concourse of people assembled. It was gratifying to see the liberated slaves and their former masters meet together in the house of worship, and encouraging to witness the great attention and respect paid to our labors among them."

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(Continued next week.)

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself is not a law of love at all; it is simply a law of justice. Christ's law is 'A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you.'"

☉☉

THE world's history is a divine poem, of which the history of every nation is a canto and every man a word. Its strains have been pealing along down the centuries, and, though there have been mingled the discords of warring cannon and dying men, yet to the Christian philosopher and historian—the humble listener—there has been a divine melody running through the song which speaks of hope and halcyon days to come.—[James A. Garfield.]

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 24.

PAUL'S CONVERSION.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision.—Acts, xxvi., 19.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, ix., 1-22;

See also Acts xxii., 6-21; xxvi., 9-23.

It is not probable that Paul was a member of the Sanhedrin before which Stephen was brought for trial. But it was the custom for students of the law to attend the sessions in company with the rabbis who taught them. It is very likely therefore that Paul was present when Stephen made his address, which can hardly be called a defense. The form of law was maintained in executing sentence of death upon the Christian, the witnesses cast the first stone, laying aside their garments at Paul's feet for greater freedom of action. Paul took no active part, but "was consenting unto his death." The steadfast bearing and the courage of the martyr probably commanded the admiration of the young Pharisee in spite of himself, perhaps even arousing doubts and questionings as to the righteousness of the act. If so, he smothered them and threw himself with vindictive zeal into the effort to stamp out the offensive and blasphemous sect. He was not one who, like the cowardly Gamaliel, could shirk responsibility by easily throwing it on God. The sense of human duty was strong within him. What he felt should be done he felt himself called to do. He "laid waste the church, entering into every house, and seizing men and women, committed them to prison" (Acts, viii., 3). It is probable that the young rabbi soon made himself obnoxious even to the Jewish authorities. "Time-servers and place-holders always do weary of earnest men" (Abbott). What they chiefly desired was to avoid disturbances which might attract the attention of the Roman authorities. Yet they could hardly rebuke the zealous activities of one whose chief desire was to root out a contemptible heresy. Probably, then, it was a considerable relief to the chief priests when Paul applied to them for authority to extend his persecutions to the Christians of Damascus, thus for a time leaving Jerusalem in quiet.

Perhaps Paul had not in his whole life had such an opportunity for self-examination as in this long, solitary ride to Damascus. There were others with him, it is true; but, as they are not named nor given any importance in the narrative, they were probably servants, with whom the young rabbi would have little in common. With a mission of persecution behind him and another just ahead, his mind, doubtless, dwelt on the scenes of persecution he had witnessed. The steadfast faith of Stephen and his kindly prayer for his executioners in the midst of his sufferings, perhaps, came back to his mind. The unresisting patience of those whom he had driven from their homes, the tranquil acceptance of exile and privation as of small account—these things appealed strongly to the intense and honest nature of the future apostle. Little scenes forced themselves upon his vision—a frightened and weeping child, comforted by its mother; a longing, yet submissive, look from an exile upon his ruined home; and through all, from the interspaces of thought looked out the strong, brave faces of the martyrs. His unrecognized kinship with these high souls wrought unconsciously within him. He suffered with his victims; their griefs were upon his shoulders; so that when the vision came upon him on the road the spirit which sent the message had prepared him to receive and understand it.

The details of his experience are uncertain. The story is told three times in Acts—in the ninth, twenty-second and twenty-sixth chapters respectively. In one case the companions of Paul are said to have heard the voice, but to have seen no man (ix., 7); in another to have seen a light, but to have heard nothing (xxii., 9). In ix., 7, they "stood speechless," while in xxvi., 14, they all fell to the earth. In the last account, moreover, a phrase is added to the conversation not reported in the other two. Whether any outward phenomena attended this great experience of Paul cannot, in face of conflicting testimony, be certainly known. All the accounts agree that the companions were in some way affected; that Paul was blinded suggests some brilliant external phenomenon. But what really concerns us is the inward happening. If Paul's thoughts by the way had prepared him for the great change it was unconsciously. He did not knowingly approach conversion. But when the illumination shone round about his mind it was the thought of Jesus which at once sprang to the front. "Why persecutest thou me?" "Who art thou, Lord?" "I am Jesus. It is hard for thee to struggle against the goad of the driver—against the driving of God." Thus did the word in his soul bring up to clear vision at once the questionings of his mind and their answer. It came as a great shock. It meant the giving up of all that life seemed to offer him. He was a scholar—and his scholarly position was dear to him. He was a cultured gentleman—he loved the association of those of his class. He was a Jew and a Pharisee—how could he accept Him whom the law pronounced accursed? No wonder he was prostrated for some days by the shock. Then came to him, sent by a vision, Ananias, an unknown Christian of Damascus. Though he suffered, yet did he not hold back. He joined himself to the group of Christians, increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, "proving that this is the Christ" (Acts, ix., 22).

We often do more good by our sympathy than by our labors, and render to the world a more lasting service by absence of jealousy and recognition of merit than we could ever render by the straining efforts of personal ambition.—[Dean Farrar.]

☪

Enjoy the blessings of this day if God sends them and the evils of it bear patiently and sweetly, for this day is only ours; we are dead to yesterday and we are not yet born to to-morrow. But if we look abroad and bring into one day's thoughts the evil of many, certain and uncertain, what will be and what will never be, our load will be as intolerable as it is unreasonable.—[Jeremy Taylor.]

For Friends' Intelligencer.

PERFECT PEACE.

"THOU wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is staid on thee, because he trusteth in thee" (Isaiah, xxxvi. 3). How sweet and precious are these inspired words to those whose religious experience confirms their truth! All around them may be contention and strife; dark clouds may obscure the brightness of the sun, cold and chilly winds sweep over the earth; and yet amid the confusion, darkness and cold, how blessed to be able to realize that there is "a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it and is safe" (Proverbs, xviii., 10): Perfect peace, the kind that Jesus gave to his disciples (John, xiv., 27), that enabled them to bear a righteous testimony to an unbelieving and persecuting generation in contradistinction to the peace of the world, which persuades its followers to move onward in the current of popular opinion and seek the applause of man; it hath no tower of refuge stronger than itself, so that when the confusion, darkness and cold overtake it, its peace is turned into war and its joy into sorrow.

"A mind that is stayed on God." "In nothing be anxious: but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be known to God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus" (Philippians, iv., 6). "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity, therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness." "Commit thy way unto the Lord and he shall make thy righteousness to go forth as the light. Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him. Fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way. Fret not thyself, it tendeth only to evil doing. But those that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the land and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace" (Psalm xxxvii).

JOSEPH B. LIVEZEY.

A PRAYER FOR A HAPPY OLD AGE.

O God, our Heavenly Father, whose gift is length of days, help us to make the noblest use of mind and body in our advancing years.

According to our strength apportion thou our work. As thou hast pardoned our transgressions, lift the ingatherings of our memory that evil may grow dim and good may shine forth clearly. We bless thee for thy gifts, and especially for thy presence and the love of friends in heaven and earth. Grant us new ties of friendship, new opportunities of service, joy in the growth and happiness of children, sympathy with those who bear the burdens of the world, clear thought and quiet faith. Teach us to bear infirmities with cheerful patience. Keep us from narrow pride in outgrown ways, blind eyes that will not see the good of change, impatient judgments of the methods and experiments of others. Let thy peace rule our spirits through all the trials of our waning powers. Take from us all fear of death and all despair or undue love of life—that with glad hearts, at rest in thee, we may await thy will concerning us. Amen.—Gathered.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBOEN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, SEVENTH MONTH 4, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

THE events that have followed the lynching of a murderer in the State of Delaware show how potent is the force of public sentiment either in the administration or the nullification of law. In defiance of law and authority the people took a prisoner from the jail where he ought to have been protected, and far exceeded the old Jewish law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." Intimidated by the threats of the people the coroner gave a non-committal verdict, and anticipating the demands of a second mob the man who had been arrested as a leader of the first one was released on bail. In the reports of these occurrences in the daily papers it was stated that "the best people" either openly sympathized with the mob or approved its actions by their silence.

In this instance the criminal was in jail and there was no reason to doubt that he would be put to death by the arm of the law. The one purpose that animated the mob was a desire for revenge. The history of the past few years has shown conclusively that the savage punishment of one offender does not deter others from offending. The minister who stood in the pulpit of a Christian church and exhibited leaves spotted with the blood of the murdered girl led his hearers to think, not of the best way of preventing similar crimes in the future, but of wreaking immediate vengeance upon the offender. In striking contrast to the words of this professed follower of the Prince of Peace is the unheeded appeal from the father of the victim:

"Meanwhile the culprit is shut up with a guilty conscience, hell of itself, and knows that he must meet the demands of the law and justice with his life. Any other course of procedure would bring a kind of glory upon those of his class; would intensify the suffering of the afflicted family; possibly endanger the life of a delicate woman, and certainly dishonor the laws of our Commonwealth. Let us not try to atone for one crime, no matter how hellish, by committing another."

Lynch law has been resorted to in this country, in frontier communities, where authorized government had not been fully established, but the criminal was simply put to death in the quickest and most effectual manner, and there was often a stern dignity in the manner of the execution. It is only within a few years that burning and torturing have been resorted to. The publication of all the brutal details in these instances seem to have excited the passions of those who read them and prepared them for like atrocities when opportunity offered.

The only remedy for this unhealthy condition is the creation of a better public sentiment, and the most potent factors in this creation ought to be the schoolroom, the pulpit and the press. The spirit of the schoolroom should be sympathy for the morally weak as well as for the physically deformed, and the purpose of all school punishment should be to reform the offender or restrain him from injuring others. Ministers should constantly preach and exemplify the love that is the fulfilling of the law, and should emphasize the fact that vengeance upon the guilty does not lessen in the slightest degree the sufferings of the innocent. Newspapers should unite in inspiring a respect for the sanctity of the law, and communities where the rule of the mob has prevailed should be made to feel that their actions have dishonored our country and caused other nations to speak slightingly of American civilization. There is some excuse for monarchical Europe to pronounce republican institutions a failure when self-government degenerates into anarchy.

HAVING A GOOD TIME.

"I ALWAYS have a good time for I always take mine with me," was the remark of a well-known woman recently, as she parted with some friends who were separating to go different ways for the summer vacation. What wisdom lies concealed in these few words! And what a pity it is that we all do not possess it! For surely it is from "above," this living so near the Fountain of all good, that happiness springs spontaneously from the heart, no matter where one's lot is cast. And it does not depend on youth or wealth or freedom from care. The Friend who said it had neither. Life had been to her a long struggle for the good of humanity, and yet through all its stress and strain she keeps her youthful spirits and has "a good time" wherever she goes for rest and recreation.

We cannot get away from ourselves, no matter how far we travel, or what our surroundings, and although circumstances over which we have no control do often mar our enjoyment of life, yet it is our inner selves that make or mar our good or evil times. It was Cowper that wisely said, "Happiness depends less on external things than most suppose." Let us make and keep, by the grace of God, in whom we must have faith if we would be happy in His beautiful world, the interior right and then we can truly enjoy life anywhere.

MANY of our readers have perhaps overlooked the fact that a bill is pending in Manila for a monopoly in opium joints in the Philippines, to be sold to the highest bidder. The law proposes to limit the sale of this drug to Chinese who have already contracted the opium habit, and to use the revenue resulting from the sale of the monopoly for educational purposes. If all those who believe that such a law would be a disgrace to American civilization will write at once to President Roosevelt protesting against its enactment, it may prevent this infamy from being fastened upon our Government.

MARRIAGES.

BEAN—WEBSTER.—At the home of the bride's father, Frankford Junction, Philadelphia, Sixth month 3d, 1903, by Friends' ceremony, Irving McCoullough Bean, of Scranton, Pa., son of Irving M. Bean, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and Mabel Cherrington Webster, daughter of Albert and Anna S. D. Webster.

CUSTER—SCARLETT.—At the residence of the bride's father, Sixth month 2d, 1903, under the care of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of Friends, Horace Broades Custer, son of the late John O. and Hannah A. Custer, and Anna Morrell Scarlett, daughter of Edwin W. and the late Emma B. Scarlett, all of Philadelphia.

MAINS—POUND.—On Sixth month 10th, at the home of the bride's parents, South Yarmouth, Ontario, under the care of Lobo Monthly Meeting, David E. Mains, of Hoboken, N. J., and Cora G., daughter of Asa and Florence Pound.

MATHER—OHNEISS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Robert Ohneiss, Egg Harbor City, N. J., Sixth month 24th, 1903, under the care of Green Street Monthly Meeting of Friends, Thomas Tyson Mather and Bertha Marie Ohneiss.

MILLS—REYNOLDS.—At the home of H. J. and M. Christiansen, of Fargo, North Dakota, on Sixth month 11th, 1903, at 8 p. m., Albert L. Mills, son of Abel Mills and a member of Clear Creek Monthly Meeting, Putnam county, Illinois, and Goldie E. Reynolds, of Fargo, North Dakota.

TOMLINSON—DECOU.—At the home of the bride's mother, Trenton Junction, New Jersey, Fifth-day, Sixth month 18th, 1903, under care of Chesterfield Monthly Meeting of Friends, Dr. William Hibbs Tomlinson and Lily S. DeCou, daughter of the late Isaac and Sarah T. DeCou.

DEATHS.

CANBY.—At "Greenwood," Hulmeville, Pa., on Sixth month 18th, 1903, Arthur M., infant son of Joseph P. and Maria O. A. Canby.

COWPERTHWAIT.—At Medford, N. J., on Second-day, Sixth month 15th, 1903, Rebecca J. Cowperthwaite, in her 74th year; an esteemed minister of Medford Monthly Meeting.

HOLLINGSWORTH.—At the home of her son, Daniel, of Fallston, Md., on Third month 12th, 1903, Lois P., widow of Amos W. Hollingsworth, in the 81st year of her age.

She was a devoted Friend. Her funeral took place from the Friends' Meeting-house at Fallston, where there was a large attendance, and testimonies given regarding her life and character, she being held in high esteem in her neighborhood.

HOLLINGSWORTH.—Near Fallston, Md., in Third month, 1903, a few days after his mother, Lois P. Hollingsworth, Cyrus C. Hollingsworth, aged 48 years.

His illness was brief, and his death a severe blow to his wife and two children.

MARSHALL.—On Sixth month 28th, 1903, at the home of her parents, No. 23 River street, Trenton, N. J., Margaret S. Marshall, daughter of W. Maxwell and Laura C. Marshall, in the 34th year of her age. The interment was at Riverview Cemetery on Fourth-day afternoon, Seventh month 1st.

In the "Passing Beyond" of the young and beautiful life just closed, intense sorrow is manifested by the bereaved family and relatives, and the large circle of friends to whom she is deeply endeared. Her bright, cheery nature, her vivacity and refinement of thought were such as drew toward her the love and admiration of friends and family, and by the social circle in which she moved; she was brave and patient in illness, with a thoughtful consideration for those in attendance around her, and through her life has won all hearts by her gentleness and loveliness of character. Her helpfulness and sweet influence have cheered the lives of her many sorrowing and sympathetic friends from whom she has been so early called away. "Thus are we all gathered: the young in years, and those who are weary of the greatness of the way."

She was a member of Chesterfield Monthly Meeting, and a student at Swarthmore in the class of 1891.

MOORE.—At his residence, Duanesburgh, N. Y., Fifth month 14th, 1903, in the 69th year of his age, William Moore, a member of Duanesburgh Executive Meeting of Friends.

PANCOAST.—At his residence in Philadelphia, on Sixth month 22d, 1903, William Stacy Pancoast, aged 34 years; a member of Race Street Monthly Meeting of Friends.

He was a son of Samuel E. Pancoast, of Woodstown, New Jersey, to which place his remains were taken for interment.

ROBERTS.—At Riverton, N. J., on Sixth month 28th, 1903, Ellen Roberts, daughter of the late Richard Roberts.

She was for many years a faithful and valued worker in the household department of Swarthmore College, as director of the laundry.

SOCIETY NOTES.

THE corner stone of the Friends' Meeting-house at Lansdowne, Pa., was laid at five o'clock on Fourth-day, the 24th instant, with simple and appropriate ceremonies. Herbert S. Cloud made some introductory remarks and read Whittier's "Hymn for a House of Worship." Elizabeth Lloyd spoke briefly comparing the building of the meeting-house to the building of the individual life, of which Christ in the heart should be the corner stone. Helen Comly White read a letter from Benjamin Hallowell, Jr., now of Sandy Spring, Maryland, who was largely instrumental in starting the First-day school and meeting in Lansdowne. J. Eugene Baker read a paper in which he pictured the distant future when the contents of the corner stone would be uncovered, and wondered to what extent Friends' principles would then have been generally accepted. He also spoke of the children as the hope of the future and the importance of prayerful care in their religious training. George S. Powell then read a brief history of Lansdowne Monthly Meeting.

On Tenth month 9th, 1898, a meeting was held in Barker Hall, at which a superintendent and teachers were appointed, and pupils enrolled as members of a First-day school. The following week a meeting for worship was held at the close of the school, and such meetings have been held regularly in Barker Hall ever since. With the consent of Darby Monthly Meeting and Concord Quarterly Meeting a monthly meeting was established three years later, which held its first meeting for business Ninth month 23d, 1901, at 8 p. m. The new meeting was composed of 28 members from Darby, 27 from Race Street, 3 from Chester, 2 from Concord, 4 from Centre, and one from Goshen; 11 members have since been received on conviction, making a total of 76. (This does not include the three received at the last monthly meeting.) These extracts from the minutes were included in the history:

"We desire to place on record in humble and appreciative terms our gratitude to our Heavenly Father, inasmuch as His Spirit has been leading us, and His strong arm has upheld us through all opposition and discouragement.

"We have learned that man may be helped by the experience, the exhortation, the example of others, in matters common to him and them; but nothing can satisfy him but faithfulness in following the Light as he himself sees it.

"May the members of this monthly meeting continue to live through the years and ages to come under the influence and guidance of this same Divine Power."

A copper box containing the following articles was then deposited in the stone by Howard White, Chairman of the Building Committee: A list of the members, officers, elders and overseers of Lansdowne Monthly Meeting; a list of the officers, teachers and members of the First-day school; the historical sketch of the meeting read by George S. Powell; a pamphlet entitled "Why We Value Our Membership with Friends," prepared by a committee of Lansdowne First-day School; the "Rules of Discipline and Advices" of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting; Extracts of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, 1903; the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, Darby Progress and Lansdowne News of Sixth month 20th, and the Philadelphia Public Ledger and Evening Bulletin of Sixth month 22d, 1903.

The work upon the meeting-house is progressing satisfactorily and it is hoped that it will be finished in the early fall. The sum of $2,000 is yet needed to complete the building fund and the members will make earnest effort to raise this amount during the summer. They are all in moderate circumstances, most of them have already given largely of their individual means and are now increasing their contributions, and they will be thankful for help from others interested in their progress.

The "Free Friends" on the Vigten Islands, Norway, number 80 adults and 118 children, out of a population of about 2,000. Their doctrines and practices are only partially in accordance with our own. They are earnest and spiritually-minded, but without any idea of silence in worship. They have a crude and literal method of interpreting Scripture, which has led them to practice water-baptism, and they meet together two or three times a year for the "breaking of bread." But they have no pastors; any Christian believer can administer baptism and the "breaking of bread." A sympathetic interest is taken in them by English Friends, as also in small isolated bodies of "Friends" in France, Germany and Denmark. The "decreasing size of the meetings in Denmark," was spoken of in the recent London Yearly Meeting.

At one of the evening meetings in connection with London Yearly Meeting there was an address on "The Strenuous Life," by Arthur Mounfield, editor of the organ of the Independent Methodists. The Friend who presided at the meeting explained that "the Independent or Quaker Methodists took their rise in 1796, and, in common with Friends, used the plain language, called their buildings 'meeting-houses,' adopted an unpaid ministry (though their services are pre-arranged), and did not lay stress on the sacraments."

A movement was started sometime ago among Friends in England to do what might be possible toward replacing the libraries of religious workers in the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony who had lost them during the Boer war. The British Friend quotes some interesting letters from those who had been thus helped and "earnestly hopes that this expression of good will may be helpful towards obliterating some of the scars made by the war."

One hundred and six essays on Peace, by pupils in Friends' Schools in England were sent in in response to the offer of prizes by the Peace Committee of the Meeting for Sufferings (Representative Committee of London Yearly Meeting). The prizes, which ranged in amount from $15 to $5, were privately subscribed, and the expenditure of it by the winners is subject to the approval of the Committee.

After due consideration it has been decided by the Friends' First-day School [at Newtown, Pa.] to continue the sessions during the summer months. It has been the custom to close the school during Seventh and Eighth months. —[Doylestown Intelligencer.]

GENESEE YEARLY MEETING.

THE first business session of Genesee Yearly Meeting met at Bloomfield on Second-day morning, Sixth month 15th. After the opening minute, reports from the subordinate meetings were read, and all but seven of the representatives answered to their names.

A minute from New York Monthly Meeting for Serena A. Minard, a minister formerly of Genesee, was read. Also one for Eli H. Morris and Eliza his wife, elders from Whitewater Monthly Meeting, Richmond, Ind.

These called forth expressions of grateful acknowledgment of the strength and encouragement afforded by the presence and co-operation of visiting Friends. Besides those who had come with minutes there were present two Friends from New York to whom welcome was extended.

Following the appointment of the usual committees the report from Farmington requesting that the yearly meeting be no longer held at that place on account of the small membership and isolation of the meeting-house, was considered. It was felt that in the best interests of the Society the yearly meeting should be held next year where the attendance would be larger and the membership better represented in the transaction of the business. In the consideration of this subject it was suggested that if the yearly meeting could be held at Toronto or Buffalo it would be more central, and that most Friends could attend meetings held in either of those cities at less expense than at Farmington. There is no executive meeting at either of the cities mentioned and the matter was referred to a committee to report at a later session.

The committee on Isolated Friends reported that attention was being given to the revision of the membership list and that revised lists have been received from most of the subordinate meetings. The committee was continued.

The committee appointed to co-operate with other yearly meetings in the effort to establish communication with isolated Friends reported what had been done at the two meetings held at Coldstream and at Asbury Park. Jonathan Noxon gave an interesting account of his visit to California, where, as a member of this committee, he visited a number of Friends at their homes and attended several meetings. The one known as Joel Bean's meeting he felt himself in unity with and thought most of our members who attended it felt at home there. Epistles from Ohio and Philadelphia were read with much interest. These called forth sympathetic expression and several Friends spoke of the value of this epistolatory correspondence, through which the membership of the entire Society is kept in touch, and made acquainted with the work being done in the different meetings. It is felt to be of especial value to the smaller meetings which need the stimulus, encouragement and suggestion which the epistles afford. The meeting adjourned to Third-day morning.

Second-day afternoon was occupied by a meeting of the First-day School Association, at which the children of the Bloomfield School gave several excellent recitations. The spirit with which these were given, the value of the thoughts presented, the clear voices and distinct utterance of these little ministers was a helpful and pleasant feature of the meeting.

A paper by Charlotte Talcott on "The Social Duties of Friends" presented the thought that :

"New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth,
They must upward still and onward
Who would keep abreast of Truth."

She emphasized the thought that the Friend of to-day must meet the conditions of our time and make the application of Friends' principles to present needs rather than to the perpetuation of by-gone peculiarities.

At this session and during a short one following the meeting of the Philanthropic Committee, on Third-day afternoon, the reports and epistles were read. The former indicated varying conditions in the First-day Schools. Need was felt of more frequent opportunities for teachers to meet to compare methods and to learn from the experience of those best qualified to instruct them. It was also thought that more benefit might be derived from the literature which has been prepared for First-day School workers. Friend were urged to give earnest thought to the interests of the First-day School. Isaac Wilson and Dora Bleaker, who served as clerks at this meeting, were appointed to that service for one year. On Third-day morning the committee appointed to nominate clerks reported that they were united in proposing the names of Samuel P. Zavitz and Charlotte Talcott as clerks. The nomination was approved and these Friends were appointed for one year.

Following the reports of other nominating committees epistles from Illinois and Baltimore called forth expressions of appreciation and sympathetic comment. It was felt that these letters brought home to us a deepened sense of our responsibility as a religious organization and inspired determination to higher work. The meeting then entered upon inquiry into the condition of the Society as shown by answers to the queries. Most meetings are regularly held and faithfully attended, but in some localities the membership is small, and, in rural communities, so scattered that regular attendance is very difficult. One meeting reported that no meeting for worship had been held during the year. Friends' testimonies seem to be maintained wherever meetings are held. In regard to temperance the interest seems marked.

At a meeting of the Philanthropic Committee held Third-day afternoon, reports from the various committees indicated that, while individual interest is manifest, little organized work is being done. The conditions in Genesee are such that co-operation for philanthropic work under the auspices of the Society seems possible in only one or two neighborhoods.

The meetings for worship held on First- and Fourth-days, were very well attended, notwithstanding the rain, which fell heavily on the mornings of both days. These meetings were characterized by an earnest spirit of devotion. The helpful words of counsel and encouragement from visiting Friends were felt to be as welcome as the showers which brought refreshment to thirsting root and blade. Cords of fellowship seemed strengthened; and assurance was given to those who had come burdened with anxiety and heavy sense of responsibility that there are in the Society enough earnest workers to keep it alive and active. Friends were earnestly exhorted to invest the talents entrusted them, and lovingly reminded that upon individual faithfulness the welfare of self and of society rests.

On Fourth-day afternoon a number of Friends visited the Sand Banks. A drive to that interesting point is a privilege usually provided for visitors to the yearly meeting at Bloomfield, and many have in that way become acquainted with one of nature's most curious phenomena. Perhaps no more impressive sermon is preached at any of the meetings than that afforded by contemplation of those great, silently moving mounds of drifting sand. The Friends of Bloomfield Meeting are very pleasantly located near the shore of the beautiful Bay of Quinte, an inlet of Lake Ontario near the St. Lawrence outlet. The cultivation of fruit and vegetables to supply large canning factories in the neighborhood is one of the chief industries and many Friends' farms are admirable illustrations of the attainment of modern agriculture.

The closing session of Genesee Yearly Meeting, held Fifth-day morning, was occupied with the appointment of a representative committee, reading of epistles, the consideration of the epistle to be sent to other yearly meetings, a summary of the exercises and reports from special committees.

Of the latter, one appointed to send a memorial to various government officers opposing the spread of military spirit, reported that their communications had been courteously received and an earnest consideration of the subject promised.

The committee on correspondence with isolated members reported that much interest had been shown in response to letters sent out. Friends were urged to visit isolated members whenever opportunity offered.

The proposition to omit the word "only" from the fifth query was considered and approved by the meeting.

The Committee on Literature was authorized to continue the liberal distribution of literature, which will spread the knowledge of those principles which Friends consider essential to the highest success in life.

The committee to consider change of place for the holding of the yearly meeting in 1904 proposed that the adjournment be made to Coldstream. A cordial invitation was extended by a representative from that meeting to members of Genesee and other Friends, and, the meeting having united with the committee's recommendation the minute of adjournment was made in accordance.

RIGHTEOUSNESS in the Old Testament is not a theological word, and has to do not with a person's creed, but with a person's character.—[Ian Maclaren.]

FISHING CREEK HALF-YEAR MEETING.

THE Friends representing communities in Columbia, Northumberland, and Lycoming counties, met in semi-annual gathering at Millville, Pa., on the 17th, 18th, and 19th of the Sixth month. It was a source of regret that our worthy friend, Shadrach Eves, was confined at home by a dangerous illness, and therefore could not be with us to enjoy the interest and satisfaction of the meeting. After an expression of sympathy and regard, a message of love was sent him by the meeting for ministers and elders, of which he is a member.

Franklin Ball, of Quakertown, Pa., attended several sessions of the meeting. His labor in the ministry was very acceptable, as well as his presence in the social circle. William U. John also ministered and had considerable service on the different occasions of coming together. Besides, we were again favored with the company of William Burgess, whose years rest lightly upon him at the age of four score. He appeared in the ministry and spoke at length to the edification of those assembled.

During the week, on Fifth-day evening, a number of Friends met at the house of Sarah L. Eves to listen to the reading of a paper by Franklin Ball, entitled, "The More Abundant Life." In this article he dwelt upon the growth in grace and spiritual development characteristic of the true Christian; as being the means by which "we should have life, and have it more abundantly." In this "more abundant life" we would increase our happiness and enjoyment in this mortal state. The subject thus presented received the thoughtful consideration of the audience. When the reading of the paper was finished opportunity was afforded for comment, inquiry or approval, of which several persons availed themselves. After this the meeting closed.

Listening to the reading of the second query from time to time, the writer has been led to make the following reflections: It is thought to mark a satisfactory condition when we can answer the query that love and unity are maintained amongst us. Where love prevails there will be unity of feeling, though opinions may differ on many points. It is evident that the highest good of communities and organizations, religious or otherwise, is promoted by the working of this principle. It therefore merits our attention as a subject of the utmost importance, that we all examine ourselves and see whether we are cultivating this love, or whether we are taking that course most easy to us, in line with our ideas of selfish enjoyment. If we live for ourselves only we find that we are losing that sense of harmony which should exist between the human and Divine natures. This sense of harmony, if weakened or destroyed, allows us to fall into a state of cold formality, or drift into an indifference to religious truth. We then are deprived of the benefit of this principle of love, which in its unimpeded work would transform us into better, nobler beings. But our efforts to cultivate this boundless, everlasting love may be thwarted by ourselves, or by surrounding influences, as long as assistance from above is not sincerely and earnestly craved. First, we must put our hand to the work in full faith, and then our desires for help will be granted. This point gained, the Divine power and the human will act together, and the great work go forward which will enable us to fulfill our obligations to the Supreme Being, as well as to our fellowmen, and which will increase this Heavenly power within us to such a degree that we can readily love our enemies, which no one can do who is ruled by selfish dispositions. G. J.

Paxinos, Pa.

VISITS OF ABEL AND ELIZABETH MILLS.

WE have been solicited by several of our numerous friends to give some account of our visits and homeward journey after the close of New York Yearly Meeting. We returned with our very dear friends Joshua B. and Caroline Washburn to their hospitable home near Chappaqua, New York, thirty-two miles distant, on the 28th of Fifth month. The following morning Joshua and I made a pleasant call at Charles and Phebe Cornell's, in the village. In the afternoon we were taken to visit the new dam which is being constructed across the outlet of Croton Lake, from which the city of New York gets its supply of water. This structure, we are informed, has its base 80 feet below the surface, reaching 180 feet above, is 80 feet in width, and when completed will be the greatest structure in the world of its kind.

Seventh-day afternoon we called on Charles Robinson and daughters, and took supper at John and Mary Cox's, this home being only a few rods from Chappaqua Institute. The principal and several of the teachers came over, spending a very enjoyable season in social converse. Our home was made with our friends, the Washburns.

On First-day morning we went to their regular meeting which was attended by an interesting audience, causing us to feel that it was good to be there. In the afternoon we, with our friends, attended the regular meeting at Mt. Kisco. Not so many were present as at the morning meeting. The meeting, in a good degree, was satisfactory. We returned to J. B. Washburn's Second-day morning, the first day of Sixth month, which was my 74th birthday anniversary. We made a pleasant but brief call on J. B. and Caroline Washburn's son Howard and family. Our friends conveyed us to the home of Hannah and Phebe Fields, where with a pleasant social visit we dined. Toward evening we called on Anna Willets. This dear motherly Friend in Israel, with her children, gave us such a cordial greeting our minds were impressed with that sweet cordial love that binds with a strong cord. Thence we went to our mutual friends' home, Robert and Esther Barnes. In the evening we attended an appointed meeting at Purchase, where we met a small congregation of interested people. Here was felt the influence of the Master's presence. After enjoying a most pleasant converse we returned to the home of Robert and Esther Barnes for the night.

On Third-day morning Joshua B. and Caroline Washburn bade us farewell. We parted with these dear Friends, who have been our brother and sister in best things, with hopes and fears that possibly we should never meet again. We shall hold the pleasantest recollections of our visit with them and their very worthy daughter Jane. We made another short call upon our friend Anna Willets. Shortly after 12 o'clock Robert Barnes conveyed us to White Plains to take the train for New York City, where we arrived in due time at the Central Station. We were met by Walter and Ethel Flitcraft, the latter kindly remaining with us until our train came at 6 o'clock. We passed the east shore of the Hudson river; and the scenery was fascinating until the darkness obstructed the view. We reached Rochester at 4 o'clock and Buffalo at 6 a. m., where we changed cars. As we crossed the Niagara river on the Canada side our train halted in front of the rapids and falls for a five-minute view, which we enjoyed. Reaching Chicago at 8.55 p. m. we were met by our grandson, Ellsworth Mills. After a good night's rest we visited Harry Mills' family, he also being a grandson of ours; two of brother Henry's family, Elmira Vale and William H. Mills, also lodged at the same place.

On Sixth-day morning we started direct for our home, arriving at McNabb about 1 o'clock. We were met by some of our children, and arrived at our home about 4 o'clock, having dined with our son, William L. Mills. After an absence of eleven weeks we feel in the retrospective view that we had not made the effort to attend these yearly meetings and enjoy the social mingling in vain, feeling thankful that we had been permitted to return in safety.

ABEL MILLS.

Lostant, Illinois, Sixth month 22d, 1903.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

BIRMINGHAM, PA.—A philanthropic meeting under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee was held at Birmingham Meeting-house on First-day, Sixth month 21st. Jane Rushmore addressed the meeting on literature. She presented forcibly the importance of her theme. It is only by reading that the average man or woman gets knowledge of what is going on around us, or what has been done in the past. Our reading is of three kinds—first, we read for entertainment; second, to acquire information; third, to develop the mind, to fit it to solve the problems of life. Philanthropic meetings are only important as inciting to individual work and preparing us for it. While she did not believe in war, at all, she thought we were all wanting in the courage and devotion of the men who laid down their lives 125 years ago on these Birmingham hills for what they believed to be a righteous cause. The field in which any one can work to most advantage is among those with whom he is acquainted and somewhat in sympathy. The end and purpose of our work should be to raise the literary taste of our neighborhood to a purer and higher level. Our efforts should be directed to the young. Dr. Joshua D. Janney spoke of nature as the great book, and recommended the study of the natural sciences. He was understood to take a despondent view of the prospect of improving the children of the vicious, on account of inherited tendencies. Arabella Carter dissented with great force from this view, and gave an interesting account of an immense gathering of children in the densely populated part of Philadelphia, who listened attentively to an illustrated philanthropic lecture.

Lewis Smedley spoke of the influence of teachers of First-day schools and other schools, and recommended that school directors always employ teachers whose literary tastes are above the average of the neighborhood in which they teach. Susanna Savery spoke of the influence of teachers of public schools in promoting a taste for pure literature, and made practical suggestions for providing a reading table and making scrap books adapted to children of different ages. Lewis Palmer said these meetings are conferences, we confer together on the means of promoting reforms, and go out from them strengthened and equipped for our every-day work. The meeting was well attended. Those present felt that it had been interesting and profitable.

NEWTOWN, PA.—The meeting of the Junior Friends' Association, of Newtown, for Sixth month was held at the home of Marion and Edward Briggs. The subject of "Free Ministry" was opened with a paper on "What are the advantages and disadvantages of free ministry," by Emma J. Wilson. The subject was further discussed by George Walton in a very instructive manner, giving in a clear way both the advantages and disadvantages. "Is any change in Friends' ministry desirable?" was the subject of an excellent paper by Helen T. Brown. Eva Doan further discussed the subject by reading a paper in which she said that free ministry should, by all means, not be abolished. The subject was then opened for public discussion and brought forth many thoughts.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.—The last meeting of the Young Friends' Association met at the home of Dr. William H. Meredith, Sixth month 17. In the absence of President and Vice-president, Elmer Jordan opened the meeting and read the 9th Psalm. Hattie P. Smulling continued the reading of "The Life of Benjamin Hollowell." Isaac W. Reeder read a paper from the Friends' Journal by Isaac Clothier, subject, "The Discourse at Levi's Feast." A recitation entitled "The Sun Will Shine To-morrow," was given by Anna E. Jordan. A sketch of "The life of Robert Barclay," was read by Eleanor Fouke. A short poem "The Inquiry," was read by Milton Johnson. A voluntary reading was given by Isaac W. Reeder, "Some Account of Nicholas Brown"; also a recitation by Martha Morgan, "Crossing the Bar." Sentiments were given from William Penn, and the meeting adjourned. The next meeting will be held at the home of Penrose Roberts, Seventh month 16th, 1903.

A. B. R., Cor. Sec.

WOODSTOWN, N. J.—The meetings of the Young Friends' Association of Woodstown have been held throughout the year, with a good average attendance, and considerable interest has been manifested. We have had able papers, upon topics that concern Friends, and have had with us, Joseph Elkinton of Media, who told us about the "Doukhobors," and Judge Ashman, of Philadelphia, who gave a lecture upon the subject of "Equal Rights."

At our last meeting held Sixth month 25th, 1903, one of our young members, Helen G. Borton, who has lately returned from the Emerson School of Oratory, Boston, gave a recital "The Last Word," by Van Dyke, before a large audience. Her rendering of this selection was very impressive; there was a great stillness throughout the house, as she told of the students in that old City of Antioch, and followed the career of one of them throughout his different experiences, demonstrating that a Christian life is the only satisfying one to be led. Those who have heard this Recital feel that it is a rare treat. On motion the Association adjourned to meet again Ninth month 24th, 1903.

ELIZABETH L. DAVIS, Sec.

BURLINGTON (N. J.) FIRST-DAY SCHOOL UNION.—The Burlington First-day School Union was held at the Mount Sixth month 13th, 1903. The reports from the various schools comprising the Union were read and showed much interest, and that the lesson leaves are appreciated and greatly assist the teachers in their work.

A pleasant feature was the reading of a poem prepared for and read at the 100th Anniversary of the building of the Meeting-house, which was celebrated in 1875, a number being present who gave interesting accounts of that meeting, and of the large First-day School formerly held there, but which in recent years, by removal and death, lost many of its working members and was finally closed sometime ago. It was the desire of the Union that an effort be made to re-establish the school and to that end the following committee was appointed; Alfred Cox, Randolph Swain, Ella Lundy, George Lundy, A. Peasly Potts, Joseph F. Taylor, Sarah Lamb, Willett Shinn, Edward Warren, Charlotte Black, Laura N. Rogers, Frank S. Zelly, who will meet at the Mount Meeting-house Seventh month 5th at 10 a. m.

MANSFIELD, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met at Herbert Deacon's, on Sixth month 12th. The meeting was called to order by reading a portion of the Bible. On calling the roll thirty responded, an addition of five new members.

The literary exercises were opened by Mary S. Harvey, who gave an excellent answer to the question, "Give the origin, history and effect of Young Friends' Associations?" The first Association was called Sixth month 11th, 1888, by eleven men and woman, who agreed that this great need existed in the Society of Friends. Within a year over thirty men and women had taken up the work. The first associations were Philadelphia, Norristown, Langhorne, and Newtown. In six years the small band increased to several hundred, and in fifteen years there were sixty-four Associations and over 4,000 members. Our Association was formed on Twelfth month 22d, 1898, at Thomas S. Gibbs, and its history, we are gratified to know, has left a pleasing remembrance; with the assistance of the seniors it has created a thirst for knowledge that the rising generation will be pleased to accept." This paper was prepared by Cyrus S. Moore.

Martha E. Gibbs read an excellent answer, the question being, "How does bearing others burdens lighten our own?" "Bearing one another's burdens" is the scriptural injunction, and by so doing, ye will lighten your own. How may we bear each others burdens? Not by keeping aloof from our friends when in grief or distress, not by a solemn censure and discouraging words when our counsel or aid is asked; but by cheerful looks and hopeful, encouraging words. Let us give up the best that is at our command. If our burden at times seems too heavy to be borne alone let us take it to a friend in whom we can trust. In sorrow and affliction it is a great boon to have sympathetic friends. Let us not shut ourselves up in the darkness of despair, but seek the blessed light that may chase away the clouds that have covered our horizon, and cause the sunshine of hope and joy to fill our hearts. "No man liveth to himself alone," so cast about thee for the privilege that may be thine to lighten some despondent heart and thus fulfill the Scriptures.

Joanna Shreve gave the usual current topics. Elizabeth B. Zellely read an article from the INTELLIGENCER, entitled, "The Higher Tolerance." Edith S. Gibbs and Dorothy Deacon declaimed. Charlotte Deacon recited "The Flowers' Praise." After usual silence adjourned to meet Seventh month 11th at the home of William P. Pray.

M. E. HARVEY, Secretary.

ACCOITINK, VA.—The Young Friends' Association met at the home of Warrington Gillingham, Sixth month 7th, 1903. The meeting was opened by the president reading the 90th Psalm. A biography of Edward Stabler was read by Sarah E. Cox. Part of the fourth chapter of Janney's History was read by Ellen Lukens.

After recess and roll call Reuben R. Gillingham read a very good essay on "The Efficacy of Prayer." Lida Gillingham's recitation, "Work and Life," was enjoyed by all present. As several who were on duty were absent, Ella Gillingham volunteered an excellent recitation.

The meeting adjourned after a short session to meet at the home of Courtland Lukens, Seventh month 5th, 1903.

LEWETTA COX, Secretary.

SEVEN new Cardinals have been appointed, and but for the death of Cardinal Vaughan there would now be the full number, seventy.

Educational Department.

GEORGE SCHOOL.

THE ninth annual commencement of the George School took place on Fifth-day, Sixth month 18th. The exercises were opened with a Scripture reading, the 19th Psalm, by the Principal, Dr. Joseph S. Walton. After a few moments of silence the speakers from the graduating class were introduced. Roy S. Hutchison, of Newtown, Pa., spoke on "The Ballot and the Conscience"; R. Alice Langsdorf, of Flora Dale, Pa., on "Whittier, the Prophet of Freedom"; Florence B. Stackhouse, of Salem, N. J., on "The Tragedy of Labor"; Howard E. Smith, of Buckmanville, Pa., on "The Monroe Doctrine."

The commencement address was by President Joseph Swain, of Swarthmore College.

Dr. Joseph S. Walton, Principal of the School, made a brief address to the graduates and presented the diplomas. The class numbered eighteen. The names are: George Eliot Barlow, Colwyn, Pa.; Mary James Blackburn, Fishertown, Pa.; Sara Elma Brown, Irene, Va.; John Stokes Clement, Constitution, Md.; Ernest Reed Darby, Williamsport, Md.; Eric Esther Fox, Short Creek, Ohio; Granville Hibberd, New Windsor, Md.; Roy Schofield Hutchison, Newtown, Pa.; Rebecca Alice Longsdorf, Flora Dale, Pa.; Margaret Louise Pierpont, Paeonian Springs, Va.; James Nevins Richardson, Torresdale, Pa.; George Simpson Roberts, New Hope, Pa.; Alice Edna Smedley, Willistown Inn, Pa.; Harriet White Sheppard, Norristown, Pa.; Howard Eastburn Smith, Buckmanville, Pa.; Florence Bowen Stackhouse, Salem, N. J.; Norman Watson, Oak Lane, Pa.; Norman Butler Zimmerman, Norristown, Pa.

The scholarships to Swarthmore College were awarded to George S. Roberts and Alice E. Smedley.

Two other members of the class expect to go to college next fall, Ernest R. Darby to Lehigh University and Howard E. Smith to Perdue University. Sara E. Brown and Roy S. Hutchison expect to attend college later on.

John S. Clement, James N. Richardson and Florence B. Stackhouse will return to George School next year to do graduate work, and to assist in the work of the school. R. Alice Langsdorf will engage in public school work in Adams county. Harriet W. Sheppard will teach in Sherwood Boarding School, Sandy Springs, Md.

Among the other members of the class who expect to go into business or to take up duties at home, Granville H. Hibberd, who has taken the agricultural course, is going to put his schooling to practical test on the farm.

Dr. Walton made the announcement that the grounds devoted to out-door exercises have been named "Sharon Field," and that the new dormitory for boys is to be called "Drayton Hall," from the birthplace of George Fox.

Work is already well under way on Drayton Hall, and the committee expect it, as well as the improvements to the main building, to be ready for occupancy in time for the opening of school next fall.

VALUE OF EDUCATION.

Those who regard higher education as a social ornament, valueless except as a badge for the delight of its possessor, and those who regard culture as the private perquisite of the elect few, are alike in the wrong. The presence of men of culture and training raises the value of everything about them. It insures the success of enterprise, the safety of person and property, the contact with righteousness of thought and action which is the mainspring of right thought and right deed in the future.

Moreover, if clear thinking with clean living is good for the elect few, it is equally good for the mutable many. Culture not only raises the man above the mass, it turns the masses into men. That the multitude may imagine themselves men before they hold a man's grasp on life is the grievous danger of Democracy. Here again the University plays its part, teaching the relative value of ideals. Under its criticism men learn that good results are better than good intentions, and that they demand a far higher order of skill and courage.—[David Starr Jordan, in Atlantic Monthly.]

LOCUST VALLEY.

Friends' Academy closed a successful year on Sixth month 19th. Henry Wilbur, of New York, the speaker of the day, urged his audience to strive to live the life of service, optimistic and hopeful, doing well their life work whatever it might be. In the evening the annual meeting of the academy "Reunion" was held, and although stormy weather prevented a full attendance the evening was an enjoyable one. An interesting program was rendered, consisting of recitations by Sadie Bayles Brown, the "Reunion" paper by Emily R. Underhill, music by Daniel Underhill, Edna B. Downing and Elizabeth M. Lamb, reminiscences of early days at Friends' Academy by J. Bell, one of the first students, and a review of the years' work by Principal Jackson.

Two changes occur next year in the faculty of the school: Anna Jones, normal graduate and teacher of experience in New York State, takes the place of Eloise Leland in the Lower Intermediate, and J. Donald Zulich, of West Chester Normal, Penna., takes the position of instructor in science, left vacant by Perry C. Pike, who goes to study medicine in the University of Pennsylvania.

The pupils of the school have been, during the past year, as usual, remarkably free from serious illness. The great number of applications already received gives guarantee of a full school for the year of 1903-04. M.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

ELIZA SPROAT TURNER, who died at her home near Chadd's Ford, Pa., on Sixth month 20th, was well known in social and educational circles. Beginning in her early childhood she was a writer of satiric verse, much of which appeared in the "Woman's Journal," Boston. From her first husband, Nathaniel Randolph, who died soon after their marriage, she inherited a fortune which she devoted largely to public works. She afterward married Joseph Turner, a lawyer.

She was one of the early abolitionists and took part in organizing the first woman suffrage society in Pennsylvania. In 1876 she was active in promoting the "Country Week" movement, which has since grown to such large proportions. Early in 1877, she was the most energetic of the founders of the New Century Club, the first woman's club in Pennsylvania. Its later development in the New Century Guild for Working Women, was entirely her inspiration, she being supported by able helpers.

Tong Sing, the story of whose training in our faith is told in "A Chinese Quaker: an Unfictitious Novel," has been received as a member by Dover Monthly Meeting, New Hampshire,—he having expressed a desire to be a member of the same monthly meeting as Joel and Hannah E. Bean. The "boy" of the story, in whose education Whittier deeply interested himself, is now a man of, perhaps, thirty. He is said to be a Mandarin in China. He was a member of College Park Association of Friends, and was prepared for college by Joel Bean's daughter Lydia.

At the recent commencement of the University of Pennsylvania the degree of A.M. was conferred on John L. Carver, of the Friends' Central School, Philadelphia. The degree of Ph.D. was conferred on J. Russell Smith, who has been appointed an Instructor in Commercial Geography in the University.

Silvanus P. Thompson, the English scientist, has been acknowledged as a minister by Westminster and Longford Monthly Meeting, London.

William W. Birdsall has been elected Principal of the Philadelphia High School for Girls.

The Radical Socialist group in the French Chamber of Deputies has adopted a resolution urging the immediate negotiation of a treaty of arbitration between Great Britain and France.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE London Athenaeum gives a page review of "Sally Wister's Journal," edited by Albert C. Myers, and among other things says: "Sally Wister is one of those charming maidens whose memory has been preserved—like that of Dorothy Osborne or the Jessamy Bride—by a fortunate accident. We shall never know how many as sweet and fair have passed away and left no sign, save, perhaps, a faded sampler or a characteristic smile inherited by their grandchildren. Thus we have to make the most of the few whose charm survives, and among these a high place must certainly be given to the delightful Quaker maiden whose diary has been published by the pious care of Mr. Myers."

The Atlantic Monthly for Seventh month is largely a California number. Herbert Bashford, editor of "The Literary West," has a paper on "The Literary Development of the Pacific Coast," President David Starr Jordan of Stanford University writes upon "The Voice of the Scholar;" President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of California University treats "A National Type of Culture;" and Prof. Gayley furnishes a paper entitled "What is Comparative Literature?" Ethel J. Hussey, in "Life at a Mountain Observatory," describes the great Lick astronomical settlement.

On natural history subjects, John Muir writes a characteristic article apropos of Professor Sargent's monumental American Silva, and Bradford Torrey describes some adventures and discoveries among Western birds.

This issue of the Century is distinctively a fiction number. It contains also, however, a Wesley article by Professor C. T. Winchester of the English Literature department of Wesleyan University. Of especial interest are the "Unpublished Letters of Sir Walter Scott" with notes by Mary Ann Watts Hughes, to whom the letters were written. The article "Who was Hammurabi?" tells of the recent discovery at Susa of the earliest code of law.

Scribner's Magazine this month is mainly a war number with an article on "Gettysburg" by the Confederate General Gordon, and Charles E. Magoun's account of the War Department's administration of Civil Government in the annexed islands. Aside from these, especially interesting articles are "The Canadian Rivermen," "The Cedars of Lebanon," and "A Night in the Room of Andreas Hofer."

The single exception to fiction in Lippincott's is a paper by Maude Howe—a daughter of Julia Ward Howe—entitled "A Roman Holiday." It gives intimate details about housekeeping in the Eternal City, being her own housekeeping experiences during a hot summer in Rome. The street cries of vendors of fruit and milk are given with the musical notes, and the author's descriptions are brimming with a humor not inimical to her valuable facts.

In Harper's Magazine Professor Shaler, speaking of "Plant and Animal Intelligence," affirms that we are not justified in saying that plants have no capacity for thought. "A Port of All the World" means, of course, New York and its immigrants and descendants of immigrants. David Graham Phillips describes "The Business of Running a Church." Professor Lounsbury discusses "The Standard of Pronunciation in English."

"Navigation above the Clouds" is an account of a journey on Lake Titicaca, in South America.

The Indian's Friend is a monthly twelve-page paper, the organ of The National Indian Association, of which Amelia S. Quinton, of Philadelphia, is president. It gives a record of current legislation for Indians, suggests to workers in the cause where practical help can be given and gives a chronicle of work done by those who are actively devoting themselves to the Indian's welfare. It is a paper of the greatest interest and value to those who wish to keep posted as to what is going on along this line of philanthropic work. The editor is Marie E. Ives, New Haven, Conn. The subscription price is 30 cents a year.

OUR FOREIGN POPULATION.

Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, before a joint meeting of women's clubs in Boston, as reported in the Chicago Chronicle.

THESE are few who know how much good these immigrants bring with them, the love of art and useful accomplishments for which they find no market.

I know a man in Chicago who was put out of his rooms in a tenement because he had carved his door in the evenings when he came home weary from work and sought to tell what there was better in him. It was exquisite work, the same he had done in a church in Italy, he said, proudly, which is double-starred in Baedeker. Another had trouble with his landlord because he decorated his ceiling with stucco. This man said that he had been paid for such work at home, but he supposed he ought not to have attempted it here, where the "American people like everything smooth and such a queer white." These men were artists, but they were not appreciated in their new surroundings.

The children are eager to learn, and in many families they have adequate instructors in their parents, from whom they have inherited artistic tastes, but they grow ashamed of it, as they see that it has no reward, and they lose their heritage in our materialistic surroundings.

We once had a Greek play in Hull House, played by the fruit peddlers, who are laborers in the summer time. We found out that these Greeks knew and had read the stories of Homer, and they were delighted to play before the Americans, that they might illustrate and emphasize the fact that they were not barbarians. One man always prayed before rehearsing his part, and I asked him the reason for his prayer. He told me that he prayed for power to properly present the honor and glory of ancient Greece to the ignorant people of America, and he was absolutely sincere.

We very freely express our opinion of the immigrants to this country, but we don't always stop to think or to question what they may think of us. The answers would be informative and useful.

THE LONG ROAD OVER THE HILL.

COUSE, and meadow, and wimpling stream ;
And voices, calling to flocks that stray ;
And the loitering herd ; and the plodding team ;
And the hamlet, fair in the dying day :
Blossoming orchards, branching wide ;
A rose-gray tower ; a dusky mill,
Murmuring low, by the waterside—
And the long road over the hill !

O my soul, wilt thou farther fare ?
Here is plenty, and here is peace.
Surely blessed, beyond compare,
Are these, secure in their tranquil lease,
Who take, with thanks, what the Gods bestow—
Flower and fruit, of the fields they till—
And tarry, content, while the travellers go
By the long road over the hill.

Never the call to strife they hear—
Never the din of the moiling throng ;
But blitheful greetings, and sounds of cheer—
Praise at matin, and even-song :
These, and the mill-wheel's drowsy hum,
Pipe of bird, and babble of rill,
And the tinkle of bells, when the slow kine come
To the hamlet under the hill.

And thus, for aye, would I have them bide—
Wholly happy, and simply wise ;
Never to dream of a boon denied,
Far adventure, or vain emprise,
Never a foot from the fold should stray !
But I would be the traveller, still,
Who looks, and envies—and goes his way—
The long road over the hill.
—William Young, in Scribner's Magazine.

THE OLD FARM.

Recited by the author at an evening meeting during the week of New York Yearly Meeting.

FINE old farm, for a hundred years
Kept in the family name,
Cornfields laden with golden ears
Oft as the harvest came.

Crowded barn and crowded bin
And still the loads kept coming in,
Rolling in for a hundred years,
Till the fourth of the family name appears.

Orchard covered the slope of the hill,
Cider, forty barrels, they say,
Were sure in their season to come from the mill
To be tasted round on Thanksgiving day.

They drank as they worked and they drank as they ate,
Winter and summer, early and late,
Counting it surely a great mishap
To be found without a barrel on tap.

But as the seasons crept along
And passions fast into habits grew,
Their appetites became as strong
As ever a hapless drunkard knew.

And they worked the less and squandered more,
Chiefly for rum, at the village store,
Till called by the sheriff one bitter day,
To sign the homestead farm away.

The father all shattered and scented with rum,
The mother so sick and pale and thin,
Under the weight of her sorrows dumb,
In debt for the bed she was dying in.

Oh, how she wept ! and a flood of tears
Swept down her temples bare ;
And the father, already bowed with years,
Bowed lower with despair.

Drink ! drink ! it had ripened into woe
For them and all they loved below,
Facing them, poor and old and gray,
To sign the homestead farm away.

Many sad scenes I've met in life,
And many a call to pray,
But the saddest of all was the drunkard's wife
Signing the farm she loved away.

Home, once richest in all the town,
Home in that fatal cup poured down,
Worse than fire or floods' dismay,
Drunkard, signing the farm away !

JOHN SHOTWELL.

AMONG those who were graduated from Oberlin College on the 24th is Carroll Napier Langston, a negro of St. Louis. His brother, John Mercer Langston, was graduated from the same college in 1901. Professor Arthur D. Langston, principal of Dumas School of St. Louis, father of the young men, was graduated from Oberlin in 1877. John M. Langston, formerly a member of Congress, father of Professor A. D. Langston, was graduated from Oberlin College in 1849. Thus three generations of the Langston family have been graduated from Oberlin.

Woman Suffrage.

WOMAN suffrage should be urged, in my opinion, not from any predictions of what women will do with their votes after they get them, but on the ground that by all the traditions of our government, by all the precepts of its early founders, by all the axioms which lie at the foundation of our political principles, woman needs the ballot for self-respect and self-protection.

The woman of old times who did not read books of political economy or attend meetings, could retain her self-respect; but the woman of modern times, with every step she takes in the higher education, finds it harder to retain that self-respect while she is in a republican government and yet not a member of it. She can study all the books in the political economy alcove of the Bryn Mawr College; she can master them all; she can know more about them perhaps than any man of her acquaintance; and yet to put one thing she has learned there in practice by the simple process of dropping a piece of paper into a ballot-box—she can no more do that than she could put out her slender finger and stop the planet in its course.

Then as to self-protection. We know there have been great improvements in the laws regarding women. What brought about those improvements? The steady labor of women going before Legislatures year by year and asking for something they were not willing to give, the ballot; but, as a result of it, to keep the poor creatures quiet, some law was passed removing a restriction. The old English writer Pepys, according to his diary, after spending a good deal of money for himself finds a little left and buys his wife a new gown, because, he says, "It is fit that the poor wretch should have something to content her." I have seen many laws passed for the advantage of women and they were generally passed on that principle.

Women have lavished their strength to secure ordinary justice in the form of laws which a single woman inside the State House, armed with the position of member of the Legislature and representing a sex who had votes, could have had righted with no effort whatever. Every man knows the weakness of a disfranchised class of men. The whole race of women is disfranchised, and they suffer in the same way. —[Thomas Wentworth Higginson.]

The Germans of the Northwest.

THE author of a new book on the history of the Germans in Wisconsin presents a very interesting summary of the change that has come over the German population in the Northwest within the past two decades. The German language has rapidly gone out of use and English has taken its place, even in a city like Milwaukee, where 30 years ago one could hear little but German spoken on the street. In that same city, too, "where German blood runs in the veins of two-thirds of the population, it is harder to arouse interest in a German undertaking than in many cities where the German element is comparatively weak.

Whatever clannish German spirit there is in the country is found almost exclusively in the eastern seaport cities, instead of in the great western cities—St. Louis, Cincinnati, Chicago and Milwaukee—as formerly." This means that the process of Americanization is quickest and most complete in the West, while it is slowest in a place like New York, which remains more closely in touch with European influences than the great interior towns.—[Springfield Republican.]

A Business Parable.

ONCE a farmer had one thousand eight hundred bushels of wheat, which he sold, not to a single grain merchant, but to one thousand eight hundred different dealers, a bushel each. A few of them paid him in cash, but far the greater number said it was not convenient then; they would pay later. A few months passed and the man's bank account ran low. "How is this?" he said. "My one thousand eight hundred bushels of grain should have kept me in affluence until another crop is raised, and I have parted with the grain and have instead only a vast number of accounts, so small and scattered that I cannot get around and collect fast enough to pay expenses." So he posted up a public notice and asked all those who owed him to pay quickly. But few came. The rest said, "Mine is only a small matter, and I will go and pay one of these days," forgetting that though each account was very small, when all were put together they meant a large sum to the man. Things went on thus; the man got to feeling so badly that he fell out of bed and awoke, and running to his granary found his one thousand eight hundred bushels of wheat still safe there. He had only been dreaming.

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE President's decision to send to the Czar the petition of B'nai B'rith regarding the treatment of the Jews in Russia is not without precedent. Twice before, within the last twenty-five years, the United States has called the attention of Russia to the sufferings of Jews in Russia. There is no reason whatever to fear that international embarrassment of any nature will be caused. The following shows the tone of the petition: "Far removed from your Majesty's dominions, living under different conditions and owing allegiance to another Government, your petitioners yet venture in the name of civilization to plead for religious liberty and tolerance; to plead that he who led his own people and all others to the shrine of peace will add new lustre to his reign and fame by leading a new movement that shall commit the whole world in opposition to religious persecutions."

THE new primary election law in Massachusetts, which is compulsory for Boston and optional for other towns and cities, is a modified form of that prevailing in Minnesota. It provides that all caucuses of all parties must be held at the same time and at the regular polling places for ordinary elections where the polls will be kept open at least nine hours. For a State election delegates of each party will be chosen for the State conventions to nominate State officers. For city elections the primary makes all nominations directly without the intervention of any delegate conventions. In Minnesota the primaries make all nominations directly except in the case of State officers—thus doing away with a mass of delegate conventions that will be retained in Massachusetts.

Anybody can become a candidate on the primary election tickets of any party by securing the signatures of five voters to represent a ward, and five for each ward of a district selected at large, if he would represent a district. The different party ballots will be printed on paper of a distinct color for each party. The voter must state what party ballot he wants and his choice is to be announced so that all present may hear. He will then mark his ballot as at the regular election, and he must continue thereafter with the same party until he goes before the election commissioners of the locality and in writing requests to be enrolled with some other party.

CLARENCE DARROW, counsel for the miners before the Anthracite Strike Commission, in various addresses has been warning organized labor against excessive demands, promiscuous boycotting and unreasonable strikes. He sees peril for the unions in the limitation of production. He suggests that the aims of labor organizations should be to increase production, and to secure a more equitable distribution of wealth. Such a quest, he believes, will make unionism "lasting and triumphant," and he thinks it can be pursued to successful issue by political action.

IN connection with the "peonage" cases in Alabama there has been a great deal of talk about "a revival of slavery." The fact seems to be that the convict labor system has developed into what is as bad as slavery, and it has become necessary for the courts to adopt the most stringent measure to put a stop to it. But there is no sort of countenance of it on the part of the communities in which it exists, and the disclosures have come through the efforts of the local grand juries.

NEWS NOTES.

MAJOR JAMES BURTON POND, the well-known manager of lecturing tours, died at his home in Jersey City.

THE Chicago Railway Express Drivers, after a long strike, have been granted a wage increase of 10 per cent.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS to the number of 12,000 to 15,000 assembled in Concord, N. H., in response to the invitation of Mary Baker Eddy to visit her home.

ON Sixth month 25th work was begun on the Pennsylvania Railroad tunnel which is to extend under North River, connecting New York City with the Jersey side.

MOY WAH, a Chinese boy, was one of the winners of the cash prizes offered by the New York Times for the best essays by public school pupils on the founding of New York.

DURING the fiscal year ending with Sixth month 604,924 aliens arrived in New York as against 479,791 for the year before, an increase of 125,133.

AN explosion in a mine of the Union Pacific Coal Company at Hanna, Wyoming, caused the entombment of 200 miners. A man entering a condemned shaft caused the explosion.

PROFESSOR COUNT ANGELO DE GUERNATIS, the famous Oriental scholar of Italy, is on his way to this country for a three months' course of lectures before American universities.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON'S "Up from Slavery" is to be translated into the Zulu language for the benefit of those who are trying to better the condition of the masses of their country-men.

GOVERNOR BATES, of Massachusetts has appointed as chairman of the state board of arbitration and conciliation, Willard Howland a prominent lawyer who has served in both branches of the Legislature.

THE price of coal went up ten cents a ton on the first. On the first of next month another ten cents is to be added, and so on each month. By Tenth month 1st the price will be back at the basis which prevailed after the strike, $6.75.

THE statistics of library gifts during the past year in America, show that the money thus disposed of amounted to $10,306,407, of which Mr. Carnegie's donations were $6,679,000. These figures include books and buildings.

SOME of the bituminous miners of Pennsylvania, seem to be determined to resist the child labor law, taking the ground that boys under sixteen had better be helping to support the family than at school. Every effort, however, will be made to enforce the law rigorously.

AS a result of his experiment in rice farming near Del Rio, Texas, with a colony of four Japanese, K. Isomoto, the Japanese expert, has decided to return home and organize a colony of 100 farmers to settle on lands in the rice belt of Texas along the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

RECENT British and American consular reports show for the past ten years an increase of over 200 per cent. in the exportation of American flour to China and to ports contributing to the consumption of China, the increased consumption being due for the most part to the demand for flour among immigrants returned from the United States where they have learned to use it.

THE final make-up of the new German Reichstag is as follows: Clericals, 102; "Socialists," 81; Conservatives, 52; Free Conservatives, 19; National Liberals, 51; Richter Radicals, 21; Barth Radicals, 9; South German Radicals, 6; Poles, 16; Alsatiens, 9; Anti-Semites, 9; Agrarians and Peasants' League, 7; Hanoverians, 3; Danes, 1; Independents, 11.

BISHOP O'CONNOR, of Newark, N. J., conferred the degree of A. B. on the first graduates of the first Roman Catholic college in the United States for the higher education of women—the college of St. Elizabeth at Convent Station, N. J. The class numbered four. The young women were warned that their education was not for any other calling than that of "adorning and ennobling the Christian home."

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

7TH Mo. 4.—NEW YORK MONTHLY Meeting at 15th St. and Rutherford Place, New York, at 2.30 p. m.

7TH Mo. 5.—JOSEPH POWELL, of DAREY, has appointed a Meeting for Divine Worship, to be held in Plymouth Meeting House, at 3 p. m. The youth are particularly invited. At the close a reading will be given: Subject, "The Divine Immanence."

7TH Mo. 5.—YOUNG FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION, Accotink, Va., at the home of Courtland Lukens.

7TH Mo. 5.—THE FRIENDS OF WHITE Plains will meet at Sarah Knowlton's, 45 Lexington Ave., for religious service. All Friends are welcome.

7TH Mo. 5.—READING MEETING, 11 A. M., will be visited by Philadelphia Quarterly Meetings Committee to visit smaller branches.

7TH Mo. 5.—THE VISITING COMMITTEE of Salem Quarterly Meeting, will attend the meeting at Woodbury, on First-day morning, at 10 o'clock. John J. Cornell is also expected to attend.

7TH Mo. 6.—FRIENDS' FLOWER AND Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Ave., at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

7TH Mo. 11.—MANSFIELD YOUNG Friends' Association at the home of William P. Pray.

7TH Mo. 12.—A CIRCULAR MEETING under the care of a Committee of Western Quarterly Meeting at Mill-creek, Pa., at 3 o'clock p. m.

REDUCED RATES TO BOSTON.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

ON account of the meeting of the National Educational Association, at Boston, Mass., July 6th to 10th, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets to Boston from all points on its lines west and south of Princeton, Hightstown, Tennent and Long Branch, on July 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th, good going on those dates and good to return between July 8th and 12th, inclusive, at rate of single fare for the round trip, plus $2. By depositing ticket with Joint Agent at Boston, on or before July 11th, and payment of fee of fifty cents, extension of return limit may be obtained to September 1st. For stop-over privileges and further information consult nearest ticket agent.

Men's Summer Underwear Specials.

We aim to show every desirable make and quality and to give the best values in all grades; consequently we sell good Balbriggan Underwear at 20c a garment, and various other grades up to the finest Silk Underwear from Brette, of London. We call especial attention to the sale of excellent Underwear for men now in progress in our Eighth Street Annex:

Men's Balbriggan Underwear

Six hundred dozens in a light summer weight; shirts with long or short sleeves; strictly firsts, and worth much more than our price—20c each.

Men's Balbriggan Underwear

Very fine combed Egyptian Balbriggan; shirts have bound necks and long or short sleeves; drawers have double bicycle seats, suspender straps and French bands; strictly firsts of a 50c quality—now 39c each.

Men's Jean Drawers

The celebrated B. V. D. Pepperell make; none better made; regular 50c value—special at 39c each.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern ports. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

C. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 20, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P., and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Cleansing of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.20. By mail, $0.22. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.20. By mail, $0.22.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.20. By mail, $0.22.

The Dookhobors. By Joseph Ekinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

Seventeen Cents per year
One Thousand Dollars of Life
Insurance for Fifteen Years!
This is the record of policy No.
43,964, maturing July 5th, 1901.
Particulars free on request.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

A STATE tour party that found the people of a certain county too much interested in berries and beans to care anything for Sunday-school work, reported that county organization as "dead and berried."—[S. S. Times.]

"I DON'T want to wear my old hat to church," said eight-year-old Gladys "not even if it does rain. The trimming is all worn out, mother." "It's the best thing for you to wear on a day like this," said her mother firmly. "And you must remember that it's the inside, and not the outside, that really matters, little girl!" "Yes'm," said Gladys, eagerly, "I do remember; but the lining of that hat is worn even worse than the trimming is!"—[Exchange.]

EMERSON had read a lecture in a small country town in New England. One old lady, who had expected to find him very obscure in thought and expression, went up to him at the close of the lecture and said, "O Mr. Emerson, I understood every word you said." "Did you?" said he: "then it's all up with me."—[Christian Register.]

An old schoolmaster said one day to a minister who had come to examine his school: "I believe the children know the catechism word for word."

"But do they understand it—that is the question?" said the minister.

The schoolmaster merely bowed respectfully in reply, and the examination began. A little boy repeated the fifth commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother," and he was requested to explain it.

Instead of trying to do so, he said, almost in a whisper, his face covered with blushes:

"Yesterday I showed a strange gentleman over the hill. The sharp stones cut my feet, and the gentleman saw they were bleeding, and gave me some money to buy me shoes. I gave the money to my mother, for she had no shoes, either, and I thought I could go barefoot better than she could."—[Exchange.]

RICHARD and Cherry Kearton, who have recently brought out in England a new edition of Gilbert White's imperishable book, "The Natural History of Selborne," illustrated with photographs of the birds, animals and insects described by White, adopted methods of getting close to their subjects without alarming them which are worth the attention of amateur photographers. Sometimes they concealed themselves and their camera in a stuffed sheep, and sometimes it was a stuffed cow that they employed. On other occasions they built an artificial hollow rock near the haunt of the birds they were studying. Sometimes clothing, colored like the grass or the soil, served their purpose. They photographed not only birds on their nests, and feeding their young, but fish in the water, and dragonflies and beetles resting on leaves or stems, and even snakes in the grass.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. * Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. * * * A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 12 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

* * * All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

"The Best is the Cheapest"

Applies in a two-fold way to

"NICE"

Paints, Stains,
Enamels,
Varnishes,
Finishes.

They are the best quality possible, hence the most economical, and doubly so when you consider that they cost no more than inferior goods.

YOU CANNOT AFFORD, Mr. Property Owner, to ignore these facts when arranging for exterior painting and interior finishing.

Send for Literature.

EUGENE E. NICE

272-274 South Second Street
PHILADELPHIA

Merchants' Trust Company,

611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
 CAPITAL (paid in), $50,000.00
 SURPLUS, 50,000.00
 UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 47,349.99
 Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveying done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
 JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
 HORACE F. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
 CHARLES F. EARLY, Secretary.
 WM. B. LANE, Trust and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

NICHOLAS BRICE, T. BOLTON WINFENNY,
 S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
 JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
 JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
 THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
 CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
 EDWARD S. SAYERS, EDGAR DUDLEY FAHES,
 JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by Mrs. S. E. BERTOLETT.

WALL PAPER of

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
 Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets
 and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,
 PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,800,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,800,000
 ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES.
 ASSIGNEE AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITARY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
 FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTERAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
 INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
 Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, $ 4,487,613.08
 Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,704.17
 Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
 T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
 Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
 Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept
 J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
 David G. Alsop, Actuary
 J. Bartou Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
 Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
 C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

James V. Watson,
 William Longstreth,
 Edward H. Ogden,
 Thomas Scattergood,
 Charles Hartshorne,
 Robert M. Janney,
 Mariott C. Morris,
 Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTA, GA. AND RETURN.

VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY, ACCOUNT NATIONAL CONVENTION BAPTIST YOUTH PEOPLE'S UNION OF AMERICA, JULY 9TH-12TH, 1903.

On July 6th to 9th, inclusive, round trip tickets will be sold to Atlanta, Ga., via the Southern Railway on account of above convention at rate of one fare, plus $1.00, from trunk line territory, final limit July 15th.

By depositing ticket with special agent at Atlanta on or before July 15th and payment of fee of fifty cents, an extension of final return limit may be obtained to August 15th, 1903. The round trip rate from Philadelphia will be $22.50, proportionately low rates for other points.

Side trips tickets will be sold from Atlanta to various points on July 13th and 14th, final limit, ten days, at rate of one first-class fare, plus 25 cents for the round trip.

Chas. L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

PENNSYLVANIA CHAUTAUQUA.

REDUCED RATES TO MT. GRETTA VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

For the Pennsylvania Chautauqua to be held at Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 1st to August 5th, 1903, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell special excursion tickets from New York, Philadelphia, Chestnut Hill, Phoenixville, Wilmington, Perryville, Frederick, Md., Washington, D.C., East Liberty, Butler, Indiana, Connellsville, Bedford, Clearfield, Martinsburg, Bellefonte, Waterford, Canandaigua, Wilkesbarre, Tomhicken, Mt. Carmel, Lykens, and principal intermediate points, to Mt. Gretna and return, at reduced rates. Tickets will be sold from New York, Philadelphia, and other points to return until August 13th, inclusive. For specific rates, consult ticket agents.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Dairies. Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE - Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CROSS MEMBERS, Inc.) 524 1/2 Arch St., Philadelphia

These trade-mark crosscra lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA. SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR. K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR. Unlike all other flours. Ask Grocers. For book or sample write Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
 5 PHONES.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, SEVENTH MONTH 11, 1903.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hote Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $2.60) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

WALTON & FRENCH

Ocean view unexcelled Bell 'Phone No. 26

Will remain OPEN throughout the year

GRACE VILLA

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Appointments first-class. Near ocean and bay. MRS. CLARA L. FLITCRAFT, 408 Central Avenue.

The Bartram,

Accommodates 100 guests.

WILDWOOD, N. J.

Pleasantly situated within 200 feet of beach, Especial attention given to the menu.

J. ALFRED BARTRAM, Owner and Manager.

The Marlborough.

Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Under entirely new management. One block from bathing grounds and hot sea baths. For particulars

Address SAMUEL E. LIPPINCOTT,

17 Sea View Avenue.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particulars address SARAH J. FAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst,

Second House from Beach

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS

IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co. 809 Plaster Street, Philad'a, Pa.

WANTED.—CARE OF SEMI-INVALID, CAN give massage, or as housekeeper, care of linen room Box 106, Charming, Pa.

WANTED.—TWO REFINED YOUNG LADIES desire positions for the summer. Anything respectable will be accepted. Apply to M. H. and R. W., Taylorsville, Pa.

WANTED.—AT FRIENDS' ACADEMY, Locust Valley, L. I., a practical housekeeper. Address Amy Willets, Jericho, L. I., N. Y.

WANTED.—A TEACHER FOR A FRIENDS' primary school near Philadelphia Apply to Louis E. Ambler, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—BOARD BY A GENTLEMAN BV Ninth month 1st. Central location. Where there are but few boarders. Friends' family preferred. Address No. 1, this Office.

TUTORING.—SCIENCE, MATHEMATICS, English. B. T. Baldwin, A. M. (Harvard). Address West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—POSITION AS HOUSEKEEPER or matron in institution, boarding-school, boarding-house or apartment-house. Address V. H. this Office.

WANTED.—THE CO-OPERATIVE HOUSE-keeping Association will have one vacancy after July 8th, for young woman boarder. Apply E. H. S., 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early, Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

HELEN G. BORTON WHO IS A STUDENT IN Emerson College, Boston, is prepared to give "The Last Word" by Henry van Dyke as an evening's program for Young Friends' Associations and other meetings. After Fifth month 8th for particulars address Helen G. Borton, Woodstown, N. J.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH K. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 15 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

J. Linden Heseock Oscar M. Hokanson

HEACOCK & HOKANSON

ARCHITECTS

Telephone Connection 93; Chestnut Street, Philad'a

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley

BUNTING and SHRIGLEY

ARCHITECTS

Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

"My Printer Disappointed Me."

One hears that all too often. Good work alone couldn't have built this business—our customers know that with us a promise is a promise.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE

BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones, Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

They beckon from their sunset domes afar
Light's royal priesthood, the eternal hills;
Though born of earth, robed of the sky they are;
And the announcing radiance heaven distils
On their high brows, the air with glory fills.

—Lucy Larcom.

THROUGH A careless error in last week's INTELLIGENCER the through morning train leaving Broad Street Station was given as 9.15 a.m. This train leaves Philadelphia at 9.05 a.m. We trust none of our friends have missed it through this mistake.

The Inn entertained 256 guests on First-day, the 5th instant.

The First-day School Assembly disbanded on the 6th instant. The Conference was thought to have been helpful and stimulating and much satisfaction was expressed by those who took part.

Four new cottages were started this week. When completed this will make thirty in the settlement.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Poconos Pines Assembly

AND

Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing, 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager,

Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and

Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'!

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styler

Popular Prices

Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamond & Phil

1624 Chestnut St. Phil

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY Friends' Intelligencer Association,
 (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,

N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.

• TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXVIII. 433
 POETRY: IN UTTER DARK. 433
 FIRST-DAY SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT BUCK HILL FALLS. 433
 WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson,—Continued. 434
 FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
 Paul at Damascus. 436
 A QUALIFICATION FOR SUCCESSFUL LEADERSHIP. 437
 EDITORIAL:
 The Religious Education Association. 438
 BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS. 439
 SOCIETY NOTES. 439
 HISTORY OF DUNNING'S CREEK MONTHLY MEETING. 440
 COMMUNICATION:
 Words of Encouragement. 443
 CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC. 444
 PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES. 445
 LITERARY NOTES. 445
 POETRY: The Shadow that Lurks in Our Mind; Consolation. 446
 METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR SIXTH MONTH, 1903. 446
 BRINGING A COW TO COLLEGE. 446
 A CONCORD NATURALIST. 447
 MISCELLANY: The Passing of Brica-brac; Monks May Return to Iona. 447
 CURRENT EVENTS. 448
 NEWS NOTES. 448
 CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS. iii

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
 (Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
 CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
 619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
 ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
 939 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
 Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
 Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
 OFFICES: { Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
 325 SWARD STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
 Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shours, 2212 Wallace Street,
 Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shours, Jobbing attended to.
 CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
 1225 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
 Phone 3-5478 D Filbert.

EDWARD T. BLACK
 (S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
 The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
 616 Sanson Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis.
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa and N. J.)
 REAL ESTATE.
 Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
 PAVENS. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
 Keystoneand Bell'Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
 Telephones. Girard Building and
 216 W. Coulter St.

Young Friends' Review
 Published by the
 New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
 19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.50.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.
Y. F. A. Building,
 140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
 FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.
Table d'hote 25 cents.
 Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
 Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.
COMFORTABLE ROOMS:
 One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
 Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
 $2 each, per week.
 Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
 *Phone 1-33-55.

Swarthmore College
 SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.
 Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,
 FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
 PHILADELPHIA.
 Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.
 J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
 ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

George School,
 NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.
 Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.
 Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
 For catalogue, apply to
 JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
 George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,
 FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.
 Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.
 Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The homelike surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
 GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
 Or, Jenkintown, Pa.
 CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogonts, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,
 A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.
 The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.
 For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
 Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,
 LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
 A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
 Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
 For particulars address
 A. DAVIS JACKSON, B.S., Principal,
 Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,
 (Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)
 New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.
 For circulars address
 ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
 Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 12th and Race Streets, each Sabbath-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT
 Undertaker
 and Embalmer
 1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia
 TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, SEVENTH MONTH 11, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 28.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXVIII.

LEGITIMATE Church government is essential.
Individualism left to itself runs out in extravagance.

From editorial in The Friend (London.)

IN UTTER DARK.

IN utter dark, in bitter pain,
I reached a vague hand out for strength.
It pressed a hand that pressed again,
And all my tumult calmed at length.

The darkness brightened slow around ;
I looked to see what friendly hand
My need had grasped, and lo, I found
My foe of foes in all the land.

One angry look of strange surprise,
Then, "Take we what the Master sends ;"
He holds me to his heart and cries,
"Brother, the Lord hath made us friends."
—Phillips Brooks.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT BUCK HILL FALLS.

THE opening meeting of the assembly was held on Third-day, Sixth month 23d, in the Library room of the Inn. The exercises were opened with a Scripture reading by Jesse H. Holmes, after which he announced the purpose of the proposed meetings, and proceeded to speak of

THE AIM OF THE FIRST-DAY SCHOOL.

If we say that character-building is the aim, we use too broad a term. All life is character-building. We must make our aim more definite and have before us what kind of character we are to build. There is character tending toward business success, toward social success, toward pleasure, but we as First-day school teachers are to aim for character which will place first the control of the highest self which makes for righteousness.

THE CHILD AND THE THOUGHT OF GOD.

Annie Hillborn read a paper on God the Protector, setting forth a simple and easy method of impressing the child mind with a loving sense of the strong, infinite protecting arm of Divine Goodness, which is around us to help us and save us all the time and everywhere.

ADDRESS BY DR. WALTON.

Joseph S. Walton spoke of "The Reformation and its Problems," and opened the subject of Salvation by Faith, as compared with the doctrine of merit. This led into a defining of faith, in which several members of the meeting took part.

FOURTH-DAY.

The assembly was opened by a Scripture reading by Joseph S. Walton.

Jesse H. Holmes spoke of the NATURE OF MIND.

Since, in First-day school teaching, we are to use minds as material we should know what they are. They seem to be made of a succession of states of consciousness, each centering about some focal point and shading off into its various relations. The next focal thought comes from this fringe of relations. The one that shall follow depends on the frequency with which it has followed, its vividness, recency and congruity. We must make our ideals follow as many ordinary, frequently-occurring thoughts as possible, must present them vividly and with tact.

STORIES FOR CHILDREN.

Cora Haviland Carver talked on the use of stories for young children in the First-day school. She gave a brief review of the origin of the story, its influence upon primitive man and upon men of to-day. She gave five essentials to a good story for children. 1st. It must be in range of the listener's experience ; 2d. It must have a central thought ; 3d. It must be simple, clear, and relatively brief ; 4th. It must be dramatic ; 5th. It must have color and make use of repetition.

CHURCH AND STATE.

Joseph S. Walton spoke of Separatism on English soil, traced the rise of the established Church of England, the growth of a national church in contrast with the movement which tended to separate Church and State.

FIFTH-DAY.

The meeting opened with a Scripture reading by Isaac H. Hillborn.

THE ANABAPTISTS.

Joseph S. Walton continued his work by speaking of the Anabaptists, and centered our thought upon a re-baptism, a coming into the church by conviction, in contradistinction to infant baptism and birth-right membership.

Jesse H. Holmes followed. His topic was HABIT.

"It is in the nature of the human being to make mechanical all actions frequently repeated. This is true of mind and will as well as of body. It is vitally important to so regulate this mechanical part of us that it shall help and not hinder us. Repetition is at the basis of it. In making habits there will be awkward and inaccurate moving, thinking and willing. We must be patient with our scholars. Doing things badly is a part of learning to do them well. We must strive to learn and to impart the habit of obeying the sense of right so that it shall become easier to obey than to disobey."

SIXTH-DAY.

The assembly convened in the large tent prepared for the purpose. Matilda Garrigues read from the Scriptures.

Jesse H. Holmes continued his discourse on the OPERATION OF THE HUMAN MIND,

and the states of consciousness in the pupil which should be understood by the First-day school teacher. The mental habits of the child should be apprehended, for new ideas most readily attach to old ideas, and these vary at different stages in the growth of the child. In all First-day school teaching we should hold fast a definite aim which we want to reach, we must strengthen the ethical choice to prefer that which often seems the harder road, the way of right.

STORIES FOR CHILDREN.

Cora Haviland Carver talked on Fairy Tales, which she believes all normally developed children love and which, she thinks, if wisely selected, and fitly used will be effective means of impressing spiritual truths on the child mind.

She was asked if statements not true in fact, would not tend to impair in the child's mind the love of truth, and answered that the imagination is a Divine faculty and should be healthfully developed. All the world is a fairy tale to the very young child. Stories appealing to the imagination should therefore precede stories appealing to reason. A child may be trained at an early age to discriminate between spiritual and literal truths, the first of which many a fairy tale embodies. Emerson says "Hitch your wagon to a star." I would say to a child "Hitch your star to a wagon." Through your imagination glorify every common thing in your experience, and thus make your every-day life rich and full.

THE MYSTICS.

Joseph S. Walton described the Mystics, an ancient class of believers who tried to exalt the feelings over the intellect, the heart over the head. He said nearly all religions, that of Friends included, have recognized some measure of mysticism as an essential element of truth—the mystics said the only element. The speaker preferred to define religion as a thing of both heart and head.

In the growth of every child there is what he would call the fact age, which the teacher should recognize and tactfully manage. The speaker gave some interesting accounts of the Quietists, a class of believers who had some characteristics in common with early Friends.

SEVENTH-DAY.

Alfred C. Garrett opened the session by a reading from the Scriptures. An earnest invocation was offered by Joseph Elkinton, after which he addressed the assembly on the origin and evolution of the FRIENDS' BOOK OF DISCIPLINE.

Having given the subject extended research he spoke much of our satisfaction and edification, intellectual and spiritual.

Annie Hillborn read a paper on

GOD, THE LAW-GIVER.

She would lead the mind of the child to approve the Divine law, by showing in a simple way its necessity and beneficence. She suggested a series of questions to ask the child, such as would inevitably lead to a voluntary acceptance of Divine laws as a necessity of our very life for all of which we are glad and thankful.

This session was felt to be a season of spiritual refreshment and a fit closing of a week of devout and earnest search for light to direct in First-day school work.

H. S. K.

(To be concluded.)

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week.)

At one place visited by the Friends on the island of Antigua there was manifested at first an unwillingness to attend meeting. The people finally told them that the demands of the clergy for money were so frequent that they avoided religious opportunities on that account. On being informed that Friends did not "preach for hire or divine for money," the news of the meeting was spread gladly, and in a few hours a very large company assembled in a suitable house procured for the purpose.

While they were on this island information was received that a British cruiser had captured two slavers with several hundred captives on board. Concerning these John Jackson's narrative says: "These poor creatures will yet have to undergo a species of servitude, as it is not the practice to send them back to Africa. The particular sections of country whence many of them have been taken are unknown, being far in the interior. The plan now adopted is to apprentice them to the planters, who pay a certain sum for their services, which goes to defray, in part, the expenses incurred in their deliverance."

After speaking of the neat and comfortable dwellings occupied by many of the emancipated slaves, the narrative continues: "Nice distinctions are made on this island in regard to color—many varieties are noticed which, to the initiated, have their separate titles. It would be a happy circumstance if these distinctions were less considered than they are; but prejudices once imbedded are very difficult to eradicate. We find, however, they are passing away, and that in many instances throughout the island, posts of profit and honor are now held by persons of color. They are elected to legislative assemblies and several of the important stations on this island are now filled by those who once were slaves. These have acquired wealth and stand upon as respectable a footing as any on the island. We do not often see the real black man so prominent as the light colored. In the Marshal's office we noticed his principal clerk was a jet black man."

In one village the Friends had an interesting conversation with several intelligent young colored people on the subject of a hiring ministry and women's preaching. One of the young women remarked that she saw no good reason why their sex should not be permitted to preach, and as an evidence that they did not lack the necessary qualifications she said that one of their ministers was in the habit of employing a woman, who was a friend of hers, to write his sermons for him.

It is worthy of note that the religious nature of their errand did not interfere with John Jackson's interest in natural science. On their way back to St. John's, although it was raining, they left their vehicle to select some fine specimens of petrifications, which had been washed out by the rains.

From Antigua to Barbadoes was a journey of five and a half days, as they were obliged to beat to windward. They found in Barbadoes about six thousand Moravians and fifteen hundred Methodists. Concerning the latter the narrative says: "They have been a persecuted people on account of their opposition to slavery. Some years previous to the emancipation the popular feeling was so much against them that their chapel was totally demolished by a mob and their preachers driven from the island. They have since erected several houses of worship, and all classes would now be glad to blot out of remembrance those shameful proceedings."

Near Speightstown they found some interesting relics of the Society of Friends. An ancient place of burial, still called 'Quakers' Meeting,' contained about three-fourths of an acre and was enclosed by a substantial wall of coral rock. One epitaph which they were able partly to decipher bore the date, Ninth month 17th, 1673, aged 54 years. They were informed that the Lord Bishop was trying to get this ground and other burial places of Friends into his possession that they might be consecrated, after which his ministers could perform funeral service in them.

Friends formerly had five meeting-houses on this island, with a large membership. George Fox visited the colony in 1681, and urged those who held slaves to treat them with kindness and mercy, and give them their freedom in due time. The advocates of slavery raised a torrent of opposition against him and his friends, charging them with exciting the slaves to insurrection, and sowing the seeds of dissatisfaction and distrust. On examining the colonial records John Jackson discovered that in 1676 a law was passed forbidding Friends taking colored people to places of worship; and in 1678 a law was passed making it a penal offence for a Friend to speak at a public meeting. The preambles to these enactments showed that the free spirit of Quakerism was inimical to the system of slavery and that both could not be tolerated in the same community.

Our Friends held a number of meetings in Barbadoes and John Jackson says of them: "The more we mingle with the poor and illiterate people of these islands (and many of our meetings have been chiefly composed of them) we are made thankful that our lot has been cast among them. The deep attention they manifest on all occasions and their continual expressions of gratitude that we had been led among them to labor in the love of the Gospel, give evidence that it has been appreciated by them."

The next island visited was Trinidad, which they reached Second month 14th, after a voyage of forty-four hours, which the narrative says was "considered a short passage, but sufficiently long for comfort, as our vessel proved to be exceedingly filthy and swarming with vermin." On this island they visited a large sugar manufactory and noted the distillation of rum from the refuse. The laborers insisted upon having rum as part of their wages and difficulties were constantly occurring in consequence. As the proprietors used ardent spirits themselves they could not object to the use of them by the laborers. Our Friends set an example of total abstinence, which surprised the natives as they did not think people could remain in health without spirituous liquors.

On this island there were many Catholics and the carnival season came round while our Friends were there. Concerning this we quote a few lines from the narrative: "The dresses of the French and Spanish women are in the fashion of the olden times,—high and florid colors, with long trailing skirts sweeping the ground. Bare feet with such flowing garments are ridiculous enough, and this may often be seen. A great fondness for dress appears to generally exist among the women, with no small degree of vanity."

As the asphalt lake of Trinidad has since furnished material for miles of streets John Jackson's description of their visit to it will be read with interest. "The road which leads to the lake for nearly a mile is composed of the asphaltum which, at some former period has run down from it. That at the side of the lake is perfectly hard and cool; we rode on it the distance of one hundred yards, and then dismounting, we attempted to cross the lake on foot. This was attended with some difficulty, in consequence of the great number of chasms being filled with water. By a circuitous route we reached the middle of the lake. Here the pitch becomes softer until at last it is seen boiling up in a liquid state, running over, and covering nearly half an acre. The air was strongly impregnated with bitumen and sulphur, and the impression of our feet was left on the surface of the lake. The flow of asphaltum from this lake has been immense—the whole country for miles around being covered with it. Many attempts have been made to apply it to useful purposes but without much success."

One of the visitors who came to see them was a Mohammedan priest who had been a chief of the Mandingoes in Africa and had been captured and brought to the West Indies as a slave. Having a superior mind he was made superintendent of a plantation and soon earned enough to purchase his freedom. Others of his countrymen followed his example and then assisted other Mandingoes to obtain their freedom, until a colony of Mohammedans was formed which at this time numbered several hundred; they were conspicuous for their habits of temperance and exemplary deportment. The Mohammedans are forbidden to make slaves of those of their own faith. They looked down upon the Christians for their habits of intemperance and for holding other christians in slavery. When John Jackson told him that Friends understood the religion of Jesus as forbidding all these practices he asked. "Have you any slaves in your country?" On being told that there were nearly three million he gave a look of astonishment and indignation.

From Antigua the Friends went by way of St. Thomas to Jamaica, reaching the latter island Third month 15th. They held a large and satisfactory meeting in the suburbs of Kingston, another in the House of Correction, and on the following First-day a meeting was held in the Scotch Presbyterian meeting-house, which had been freely offered them. Feeling that their religious labors were concluded, on Third month 22d, they started on their homeward voyage.

During his stay in the West Indies John Jackson wrote long and interesting letters home. These were very largely reproduced in the published narrative from which quotations have been made.

One of his letters contains a pen-and-ink sketch of a tree, accompanied by these words. "This is a figure of the mountain cabbage tree, the most beautiful and lofty tree in the islands. It is put here in compliment to my dear little Henrietta—I suppose it is the only part of my letter she can read. My dear children—I hope they are well and a comfort to thee."

On Third month 20th, after reading of illness at home, he wrote as follows.

"The experiences of the last few months will doubtless be long remembered by us both, and I doubt not they will have the influence upon thy spirit that they have had upon my own,—to increase our dependence upon the Father of Mercies, who has often been near in seasons when the spirit of prayer has filled the temple of the soul. . . . Therefore I have desired for thee that thy faith may not in any wise fail, but let the language of thy spirit be 'Feed me with food convenient for me;' for I am satisfied it is not always the food we desire, or would prefer, that adds most to our strength or ministers most to our real comfort."

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be continued.)

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 25.

PAUL AT DAMASCUS.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Paul, an apostle—not from men, neither through man, but through Jesus Christ and God the Father.—Galatians, i., 1.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, ix., 23–31;
Galatians, i., 11–23.

THE matter of visions is one worthy of a little more extended thought. As a matter of fact, a very large part of our ordinary normal vision comes not from without, but from within. As I look out of a window I see trees waving, the white underside of some all turned to the west; I see a nearby village, distant fields and, far away, a flag flapping above a high building. Now a baby could not see these things; to him there would be certain patches of color, and nothing more. But my stored-up experience tells me of a west wind, of distinct houses, some belonging to people I know; of growing wheat or sprouting corn, of the school house underneath the flag. The outward stimulus may be very slight which starts an inward process of the greatest moment. Thus God speaks to us out of our own experience. He interprets our raw sensations into light and leading within our souls. It is idle to say that this or that vision is not true because it was not all outside the mind; no experience is outside the mind. We read ourselves into every experience—"I am a part of all that I have met." How much of Paul's vision was objective, made up of external phenomena, and how much subjective, drawn from his own diviner part, none can see. But that his vision was essentially a true one the effects of it seem to prove. The test of the truth of my outward vision lies in the success with which it allows me to adjust myself to my world; and no other test should be applied to visions such as Paul's. A flash of illumination within—however originated—showed him what after-ages have pronounced to be the truth—his vision was true.

But such a change necessarily involved many self-questionings. The student, learned in the law, must find in his stored knowledge a place for this new and incongruous conception of a crucified Messiah; and this involved a very extensive re-arrangement of the stored material. The stress and strain of daily disputes and contests made no place for such self-examination, and the new-born apostle withdrew (Galatians, i., 17) "to Arabia" for a time, returning later to Damascus. Some think "Arabia" to mean the region about Mt. Sinai, where the law, the meaning of which was now brought into question, was first given to Moses. But, passing by the dramatic fitness of this stage for this particular act of Paul's life, nothing can be more unlikely than that Paul traveled many days' journey to the southward in order to find a privacy which could as well be had close at hand; it was rather the desert country lying to the southeast of Damascus. His sojourn in solitude was probably not of long duration; it is not easy to believe with some that he spent two years in retirement. His nature was not one which required long time to adjust itself to new conditions, nor could he easily endure a prolonged season of inactivity. In any case, during this retirement we may suppose that he worked out his gospel and adjusted in his own mind its relations with "the law." It speaks much for Paul's strong, independent nature that he undertook to work out this problem for himself, instead of applying to the disciples at Jerusalem for instruction. In after time he lays great emphasis on this fact—that he "conferred not with flesh and blood," but received his teaching direct from the divine source.

Paul spent most of three years in and about Damascus, much of it doubtless in active mission work. We may suppose that he went first to the synagogue just as he did among the peoples of Asia Minor and Greece. Since his acceptance of Jesus involved freedom from the Jewish law, consistency required him to admit Gentiles equally with Jews to Christian fellowship, as indeed he did in his later labors. But earnest, ardent men are not always consistent; and Paul's training, experience and opportunities would naturally turn him to his own people. So it is impossible to know how far in these Damascus labors he included the Gentiles. We know nothing of the success of his work beyond the fact that it brought upon him the hostility of the city authorities. This would imply that Christianity had become of sufficient importance to provoke active opposition and to threaten the peace of the city; otherwise it is not clear why the Arabian king or his representatives would take any particular interest in it. The feeling against the apostle was so strong that he was obliged to hide and the gates were watched. Fortunately, a fellow-Christian lived in one of the houses built against the city wall, and with a window opening outside. From this the bold evangelist was let down, leaving behind him all his Christian connections. Naturally his first thought was to go to Jerusalem. In the epistle to the Galatians he tells us that his purpose was "to visit Cephas," and that he met no others of the apostles "save James, the Lord's brother." From Acts (ix., 26) we learn that he was received in Jerusalem with considerable distrust. But Barnabas had faith in him, making him welcome and introducing him to others. Still he was known to the churches of Judea only by hearsay. He remained in Jerusalem for about two weeks (Galatians, i., 18), and then retired to "the regions of Syria and Cilicia"—that is, to the neighborhood of his home at Tarsus.

A QUALIFICATION FOR SUCCESSFUL LEADERSHIP.

Anna May Pemberton, in the American Friend.

SINCERE humility is the primary element of greatness. Self-assertion ruins more people in public work than perhaps any other one thing. How many a public speaker has been weakened and his work brought to naught by a domineering, over-towering self-assertion. Men that are in the contest for distinction, or a high place, will find defeat, while the humble followers of truth will carry off the palms of victory.

When a reporter on the Chicago Tribune, in 1860, came to Abraham Lincoln, after his nomination for the Presidency, seeking information, so that he might write a campaign biography of him, Lincoln said: "It is a great piece of folly to attempt to make anything out of me or my early life. It can all be condensed into a single sentence, and that sentence you will find in Gray's Elegy:

"The short and simple annals of the poor."

"That is my life, and that is all you or any one else can make out of it."

The most beautiful traits of character in Abraham Lincoln were his humility and his courtesy to other people. James Russell Lowell fittingly pays tribute to these traits of character in him, in the "Commemoration Ode":

"How beautiful to see

Once more a shepherd of mankind, indeed,
Who loved his charge, but never loved to lead;
One whose meek flock the people joyed to be,
Not lured by any cheat of birth,
But by his clear-grained human worth,
And brave old wisdom of sincerity."

There was room by the side of Abraham Lincoln for every true lover of liberty; and he was ever open for suggestions from the people.

The man that is interested in reform, or the spread of Christianity, finds his life in the principles he has set out to advocate. He has no time to be thinking, "What impression shall I make?" He faithfully follows the path of duty and feels the value of every other person that has taken up the cause. With him there is no desire for monopoly; nor does he feel that everything that is done must be done under his dictation. There is no crowding out of kindred spirits, saying by his manner, "This is my work." By his side there is room for every one that has the cause at heart. He sees in others like aspirations to his own and feels the value of every one of them. He does not care to have others look upon him as a leader; but if he be a leader, it is fortunate for those that work with him, for all are on a common level.

It is not an evidence of strength for a minister to make other people feel that they cannot work with him; it is rather an element of weakness. One of the greatest hindrances to Christian work is the failure to recognize the ability of other people working toward the same end; but it is probably more often the result of ignorance than of real selfishness.

West Milton, Ohio.

RIDING one day over the plains at the head of a long detachment of men, General Custer made a sudden change of direction at the head of a column. As the men reached a certain point, they rode off to the right, rank after rank, as if an invisible hand had smitten them out of their course. The curiosity of those at the rear of the line was excited, and as they approached the point, they looked carefully to see what had caused the change of direction; and they found in the desert a bird's nest full of tiny eggs. A long detachment of men had turned aside rather than crush that bit of life in the universal aridity.—[Hamilton W. Mabie.]

36

THE workingman or the employer himself is often least qualified to give wise counsel with respect to matters that concern him most closely. The mere fact that he is performing these very things, that he is actually working, or directing, involves no endowment of knowledge. The circumstances that blood flows in our veins, and that the food that we eat disappears, do not acquaint us with the principles of circulation or the laws of digestion. Even more, when things are out of joint and an industrial conflict is threatened or has occurred, the parties to the struggle are by no means the most competent to suggest the true, lasting remedy, any more than a person who is sick, or who has suffered an injury, or is merely seeking physical betterment, can prescribe his own treatment. In such cases human experience has made it clear that the best results are obtained by having resort to, and following, the advice of him who in pure spirit and disinterested motive—be he physiologist, physician or political economist—has consecrated his life to the search for truth and to its application to human affairs.—[J. H. Hollander, in North American Review.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, SEVENTH MONTH 11, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE RELIGIOUS EDUCATION ASSOCIATION.

THE proceedings of the first convention of the Religious Education Association,¹ have appeared and copies have been sent to all members of the Association. The appearance of this volume is especially timely just now, when we are in the midst of our First day School Assembly at Buck Hill Falls. For those First-day school teachers who have been renewing their interest and enthusiasm at Buck Hill, and for all First-day school workers who want to do some studying at home and to put themselves in touch with the latest and most important thought along the line of religious education this volume of proceedings would be a good text-book.

The convention at which the Religious Education Association was formed was called to meet last Second month at Chicago, by the "Council of Seventy," an organization formed in 1895 and consisting of biblical scholars of all parts of the country. These men felt that the conditions were right for undertaking an advance movement toward the improvement of religious instruction in the United States.

The numbers who responded to the call for the convention were beyond all expectation. Prominent religious and educational workers of all parts of the country, of all faiths and of all departments of thought were present. President Angell, of the University of Michigan, in addressing the opening meeting said, "Never, I venture to say, has there been a gathering in our country with higher and nobler aims than this. And when one looks upon this vast assembly, and especially when one sees how many of the great leaders of religious thought have come here from long distances to participate in this meeting, one cannot but hope and believe that the results of it will be permanent and beneficent."

The thought that brought all these workers and thinkers together is indicated by the following from the address of President Angell: "I suppose that we who are here are generally persuaded that the advance in psychological and pedagogical study for the last twenty years has led to decided improvement in secular education. We who believe this believe also that a similar improvement may be secured in religions and moral education by similar methods and by careful study of the phenomena of religious experience in the period of youth."

The intended scope of the movement is indicated by the subjects that were discussed at the various sessions. The subject of the first session was "The Next Step Forward in Religious Education." Later sessions were devoted to Religious Education as a Part of General Education, as Conditioned by Modern Psychology and Pedagogy, as Affected by the Historical Study of the Bible. There were also sessions devoted to religious instruction in the public schools, in the home, and in young peoples' societies. There was discussion of First-day school organization, of courses of study, lesson-helpers and text-books, of First-day school teachers.

Among the speakers were college and university presidents, as Henry Churchill King, of Oberlin, Rush Rhees, of Rochester, William R. Harper, of Chicago, J. H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt, J. W. Bashford, of Ohio Wesleyan; Professors Coe, of Northwestern, Starbuck, of California, Dewey, of Chicago, Shailer Matthews, of Chicago, Sanders, of Yale; public school men, representatives of the religious press, denominational workers of all denominations.

The Association is organized somewhat along the lines of the National Educational Association. It is not designed to take the place of, nor to antagonize any of the "Sunday School" organizations already in existence, but rather to render service in unifying the efforts of the different agencies already engaged in various lines of work. It will be devoted to a forward movement in First-day school work but not only to that. It will be equally interested in the many other departments for religious and moral education; for instance, in plans for using to advantage the many libraries established in our villages and cities. As President Harper said, "Think what a power the Carnegie libraries throughout the country may be made to be if they are brought into touch with the Sunday schools and with religious work; all that is needed is a guiding hand to bring them together." Attention will be given to religious culture and biblical study in the colleges and universities. Other interests will be the training of teachers, preparation of lists of books on the different subjects of religious work and thought, provision of special material for the use of the daily press, organization of work for mothers' clubs. The Association does not propose to undertake the issue of lesson-helpers or text-books; this work can best be done, as heretofore, by the different denominations; but it can undertake to study and to discuss courses of study and lesson leaves, and to furnish the basis for lesson-helpers and text-books. "It can undertake," as President Harper expressed it, "to place religious and moral education on as high a plane as that on which secular work has come to rest."

¹ Copies to be had by addressing the Religious Education Association, 153-155 La Salle street, Chicago; $1.00 postpaid.

The "Proceedings" is a cloth-bound book of some 400 pages, and contains in full the addresses and the discussions of the convention, the history of the movement, the constitution, officers, and members of the Association. The volume may well become a permanent addition to the working library of every First-day school worker, in addition to its service as a hand-book of the Religious Education Association.

BIRTHS.

GREVEMEYER.—On Sixth month 29th, at Whiteford, Maryland, to Ernest S. and Annie Brooks Grevemeyer, a daughter, who is named Mary Elizabeth.

THOMPSON.—At New Garden, Pa., Fourth month 30th, 1903, to J. Howard and Hanna R. Thompson, a son, who is named J. Howard, Jr.

MARRIAGES.

BUFFINGTON—POWNALL.—At the home of the bride's parents, in Christiana, Lancaster county, Pa., on Fourth-day, Sixth month 10th, 1903, under the care of Sadsbury Monthly Meeting, Albert Louis Buffington, of Rising Sun, Maryland, and Susanna Edna Pownall.

FELL—COX.—On Sixth month 16th, 1903, at the home of the bride's parents, by Friends' ceremony, Clarence Pennington Fell, of Avondale, Pa., son of Albert and the late Edith C. Fell, and Elizabeth Hopewood Cox, daughter of George and Isabella M. Cox, of Pocopsin township, Chester county, Pa.

THATCHER—WARNER.—At the home of the groom, Sixth month 18th, 1903, under the care of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of Friends, Paxson Blakey Thatcher, son of Jesse W. and Elizabeth Blakey Thatcher, all of Philadelphia, and Blanche Warner, daughter of George Blake and Antonia Warner, of New York City.

DEATHS.

FOULKE.—Near Quakertown, Pa., Fourth month 4th, 1903, at the home of his brother, Stephen Foulke, John Foulke, aged 72 years, 5 months and 21 days.

HALDEMAN.—In Newtown, Bucks county, Pa., on First-day, Sixth month 28th, 1903, of apoplexy, Moses Haldeman, formerly of Plumstead, aged 76 years, 3 months and 1 day. Interment at Buckingham Friends' grounds on Seventh month 1st.

SAGER.—On Sixth-day, Seventh month 3d, 1903, at the home of his parents, 3700 Hamilton street, West Philadelphia, John Laurence, son of John P. and Katherine H. Sager, aged 10 months.

WILLITS.—At Venice, Italy, on Third-day, Sixth month 30th, 1903, Elizabeth Eames, daughter of Frederick E. and Anna W. Willits, of Glen Cove, N. Y.

The Countess of Carlisle, who has succeeded Lady Henry Somerset in the Presidency of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Great Britain, is intensely radical in her ideas. She would like to abolish all titles of nobility, and if her husband and relatives did not protest she would discard her title, which is very honorable and ancient. She is intensely enthusiastic in her championship of the total abstinence cause.

SOCIETY NOTES.

At the annual meeting of the "Friends' Christian Endeavor Society" in England there were reported 53 societies as "said to exist," 39 of which are affiliated with the Union. The active members were 894, 492 are Friends, 35 having joined during the year. 369 teach in First-day schools, 286 are workers in Adult Schools.

Four societies are supporting Indian orphans, two support "native evangelists," three members are training as missionaries, and four have gone out. A number of the societies are engaged in charitable work such as providing Christmas dinner to the poor, distributing parcels, eggs, tea, fruit, etc., to the sick poor. Some also are responsible wholly or in part for gospel mission meetings, for cottage and open air meetings, for children's "Sunday services," and for Bands of Hope.

Marshall N. Fox speaking of the way in which Christian Endeavor Societies could help the meetings said, as reported in the Friend (London), "Nothing would help our meetings so much as the presence week by week of a company of young people who know the basis of our spiritual worship. There were probably some present who entered the C. E. as he did, with a certain amount of prejudice, feeling the pledge to be the barrier. There was that promise to 'take part in every meeting,' and it was a real difficulty. But after two years as an active member, he believed there was no reason for the prejudice, because of the ample safeguard in the provision—'unless hindered by some conscientious reason.' The experience gained on the committee work he felt, would be of invaluable assistance to our business meetings."

Charles Replogle, a missionary of American Orthodox Friends among the Alaskan Indians was present and took an enthusiastic part in the meeting. He said, among other things, "The Christian Endeavor Society is the tie that has bound the Christian world together. It is the essence of the doctrine of Friends."

At the recent annual meeting of the "Home Mission Committee of London Yearly Meeting some things were said and discussed that are of especial interest to us in America, for that committee is nothing more nor less than a committee for the advancement of Friends' principles. "The existence of the Home Mission Committee," said the chairman in opening the meeting, "is the result of a conviction through the Society that Quakerism is too good a thing to be allowed to die out in a district simply because the strength of local Friends is too small to keep the meetings alive." A full report of the meeting is given in the Friend (London) for Sixth month 19th.

The Committee is, at present, giving help in ten out of the eighteen quarterly meetings in England and Scotland and occasional help at special meetings and in other ways, is given in most of the other quarterly meetings. "The object we have at heart," said the chairman, "is to help meetings to help themselves, and as is well known, there are a number of cases of meetings which were once helped and are now able to stand alone. . . . There are now every year twice as many admissions by conviction as those coming in by birth. It is quite clear that the Society is gradually becoming a Society of convinced Friends and not merely of birthright members."

The first meeting for worship this session in Asbury Park, N. J., was held on the afternoon of the 5th instant with about thirty persons in attendance. Among those present were Alfred H. Love, of Philadelphia and Eli M. Lamb and wife, of Baltimore. Words of encouragement were spoken by the former, and the desire was expressed by John H. Showell that all might more carefully observe the new commandment given by the Master. These meetings are held in Whittier Hall, situated on the corner of Second Avenue and Emory Street, every First-day afternoon during the summer at four o'clock, the use of the hall being generously given by its owner, James H. Bradley, founder of Asbury Park. All in sympathy with Friends, whether members or not are welcome. S. R. R.

The meeting for worship in the sitting-room of Buck Hill Falls Inn last First-day morning was probably the largest ever held in that building and was felt by those assembled to be impressive and helpful. Allen Flitcraft offered vocal prayer and there were short sermons, with intervals of silence between, by Sarah B. Flitcraft, Margaretta Walton, Allen Flitcraft, Samuel Griscom, Sarah Ormsby, Elizabeth Lloyd, and a Presbyterian minister who had been in attendance at the First-day School Assembly.

On the 7th of last month a new meeting-house was opened for public worship in Aberdeen, Scotland. At the usual morning meeting there were about thirty-three present. The new meeting-house is built in very simple style, costing about £800, which will probably be covered by the sale of the old premises.

Notices have been sent out by the Secretary of the Central Committee of Friends' General Conference that a meeting of the committee will be held at Salem, Ohio, Eighth month 28th and 29th. Ohio Yearly Meeting is held at Salem this year, beginning Eighth month 31st.

The "Socialist Quaker Society" held a meeting during the week of London Yearly Meeting at which a paper was read on "Modern Movements and Young Quakerism" by Samuel G. Hobson.

HISTORY OF DUNNING'S CREEK MONTHLY MEETING.

Prepared for the Celebration of the Centennial Anniversary of Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting of Friends, held at Fishertown, Bedford county, Pa., Fourth month 13th, 1905.

THE facts of history are interesting to us largely according to the style of language in which they are told; and upon the interest that we take in its study, does the moral and educational value of history depend. Therefore from the feeble efforts of an untrained mind and unskilled hand in historical work, we should not expect to get the full measure of either interest or instruction, which the true history of the past hundred years of this meeting contains.

It seems eminently fitting, however, that, as members of Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting of Friends, grateful to the memory of our forefathers for what they have done in the past, and friendly to one another in the work in which we are engaged, we should come together on this centennial anniversary day, and learn what we can of our history as a people, and of the causes and circumstances which have brought about our present conditions; this for the purpose not only of affording entertainment for the present hour, but that the light of experience through all these years may be focused upon our future pathway and, by its inspiration and directing power, contribute to our everlasting welfare.

From the very limited time for the preparation of this sketch, the author was unable to obtain information as to the first emigration of Friends into this community, either as to the time of their coming, where they came from, or what induced them to locate here. Suffice to say, that, at the time of the establishment of the monthly meeting, a goodly number had settled in the neighborhood, as is indicated by the variety of family names in the lists of witnesses to the early recorded certificates of marriage, as well as by the various names appearing on the early minutes of the meeting. And we also find upon investigation, that but very few, if any, other religious organizations were represented in this neighborhood at that time, so that whatever their number may have been, the Friends were very decidedly in the lead.

We have been unable also to find any record or description of the first meeting-house at Dunning's Creek, except that it was a small log building, located about one mile northeast of our present building, near the residence of Charles W. Wolf. It was heated from a stone and log chimney, and was probably provided with an earthen floor. Before the establishment of the monthly meeting, however, a tract of six acres was purchased for a meeting-house and graveyard purposes, near the "Big Spring," now called Spring Meadow.

This was part of a tract of 233 acres and 92 perches, patented Eleventh month 10th, 1789, to Richard Neave the elder and Richard Neave the younger, of Philadelphia, which in 1791, they conveyed to Anthony Blackburn, and by Anthony and Mary his wife, in 1792, was further conveyed to William Webb, of Frederick county, Maryland, who by deed, dated Tenth month 17th, 1795, conveyed the said six acres and allowance, to William Kenworthy, Jonathan Bowen and Anthony Blackburn, in trust for the Society of Friends, for the price of twelve dollars.

The bond of agreement preparatory to this last conveyance, is a neatly executed instrument of writing, which is still in the possession of the Society, and reads as follows:

"Know all men by these presents, that I, William Webb, of Frederick county, have granted, bargained and sold, and hereby for me, my Heirs, Executors and Administrators, freely of my own voluntary pleasure, divers good causes and considerations thereunto moving, do grant, bargain and sell the Lot of ground, the limits, extent and quantity whereof are inserted and endorsed on the back of this Obligation unto the Members of the society of People called Quakers, who now are and hereafter shall be living on or near Dunning's Creek and its branches, in Bedford county, and State of Pennsylvania, for them from and after the day of the date of these presents, to clear, improve, erect a Meeting-house on, and forever thenceforward as Occasion shall require to possess, enjoy and use the same as and for a Meeting place and Grave Yard and other necessary purposes therefrom resulting, together with all the Timber, privileges and advantages whatsoever unto the same belonging, or in anywise appertaining, upon this proviso, that the aforesaid members of the society above mentioned, shall agree and consent to pay unto me, my Heirs or Assigns for the same, the just sum of fifteen shillings for every acre included, of current Money of the State of Maryland, in which I now reside; and I do hereby covenant, promise, grant and agree, for myself, my Heirs, Executors and Administrators under the penal Sum of one hundred pounds like Money, that upon the payment of the first above mentioned Sum, and a requisition or request made, a good, sure, perfect and indefeasible Deed of Conveyance in Fee Simple shall be made and legally executed for the said land and appurtenances, and every part and parcel thereof unto such person or persons and their successors as the aforesaid members of the above named society shall agree and nominate to receive the same.

"In Testimony whereof I have hereunto set my Hand and affixed my Seal this thirtieth day of the Eighth month, seventeen hundred and ninety-four.

"WILLIAM WEBB (Seal).

"In presence of Wm. Kenworthy."

The description referred to on the back of the obligation, reads as follows:

"The within mentioned Lot of Ground is hereby agreed not to exceed six acres, and to be bounded by part of the third and part of the fourth line of a tract of land conveyed by Anthony and Mary Blackburn to William Webb, and a line of Division which shall cut off the Part to be conveyed, in Acute Corner of said land lying near the big Spring, extending such a length with the one hundred perches Course calling for a Pine as will best answer to include the highest and most suitable ground to set the Meeting-house on, but at the same time the plan is to be so formed as to take as near an equal distance on each of the aforesaid two lines as will answer, and as much less than six acres as the situation of the land and the Occasion will admit of.

"Given under my hand and Seal the day and date within written.

WILLIAM WEBB (Seal).

"WM. KENWORTHY."

Soon after the purchase of this lot of ground, a log meeting-house was erected on the northern end thereof being the most elevated and desirable location on the lot. A little grave yard was opened near by, but was abandoned soon thereafter by reason of the interference of surface rock and grave digging; only a few partially marked graves are still to be found and probably only two containing any legible inscription, one of which is "I. M. B. 1796," the other "J. S. 1795."

The building erected served its useful purpose until the separation of the Society which occurred here in 1831, when this building was torn down and rebuilt on the southern end of the lot, immediately across the road from the large grave yard, and was thenceforth occupied by the Hicksite branch while the Orthodox rebuilt upon and occupied the former site; no other changes occurred until 1867 when the Hicksites built, a few rods distant, a weatherboarded frame house which they used until 1887, when the two-story brick meeting-house and school building which they now occupy was erected at Fishertown, the Orthodox having four years previously erected and moved into a neat frame building in the northern end of the same village.

The two buildings thus abandoned at Spring Meadow remain standing, the one, (the Hicksites') occasionally occupied by another religious society, the other by reason of age and unoccupancy, fast going to decay. They are still, to many of us, interesting monuments of the dear associations of the past, and the memories which cluster around them shall continue a source of profound pleasure, so long as memory remains or life lasts.

Passing from the meeting-house subject to that of the Society, we are brought to consider the event which the occasion of this day is intended to commemorate, namely the centennial anniversary of our monthly meeting. One hundred years ago to-day, perhaps this very hour, Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting of Friends, was established. From the records of Menallen Monthly Meeting and Warrington Quarterly Meeting, to which this meeting, at one time, belonged, we glean the following facts with relation to the preparatory steps to the establishment of this new monthly meeting.

In Sixth month 9th, 1794, the Friends of Bedford requested the privilege of holding a meeting for worship on the fourth-day preceding Menallen preparative meeting in each month, which was granted until further ordered. On Twelfth month 15th, 1794, Friends of Bedford requested to have a meeting for worship and a preparative meeting settled there and Jonathan Wright, Joseph John, Finley McGrew, Benjamin Wright, Elias Pearson, John Griest and Isaac Pearson were appointed to visit them and endeavor to judge of the propriety of granting their request. On First month 12th, 1795, they reported that all except one sat with Bedford Friends at their meeting of conference and thought that their request might be granted, which Menallen Monthly Meeting united with, and the subject was forwarded to the quarterly meeting for its approbation, which was sanctioned by the quarterly meeting and they were to hold their first preparative meeting on Fourth-day preceding the first First-day in Fifth month. On Twelfth month 15th, 1794, Anthony Blackburn, on behalf of Friends of Bedford, requested that they be indulged with the liberty of holding meetings for worship on First-days, which being considered was thought best to leave under consideration until next month. The subject was then deferred until Third month 9th, 1799, when the minutes show the following:

"The request of the Friends of Bedford being resumed and considered in this meeting, it appears to be the sense thereof to appoint some Friends to visit them and judge of the situation and of the propriety of granting their request. Jonathan Wright, Benjamin Wright, Joseph Griest, William Wierman and Nathan Hendricks are appointed to that service."

On Fourth month 13th, 1799, which by interesting coincidence, is just one hundred and three years ago, the said committee reported "that three of them, in company with women Friends, have attended to the service, and had a solid opportunity with them, and do not see any thing on their minds to discourage their request being granted; which being considered in this meeting, it is the sense thereof that liberty be granted of holding meetings for worship on First-days. William Weirman, Jonathan Wright, Joseph Elgar and Thomas Penrose are appointed to visit them at the opening of the first meeting on the third First-day in Sixth month."

The next recorded history of the meeting, which we have found, is the preamble to the minutes of Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting, which appears in a neat and artistic form and in the clear and expressive language which follows:

"A meeting for worship and a preparative meeting were settled at Dunnings Creek in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, and was then a branch of Menallen Monthly Meeting; but being situated about one hundred miles distant therefrom, wherefore the great difficulty of attending that meeting occasioned Dunnings Creek Preparative Meeting, in Second month 1802 to forward a request to Menallen Monthly Meeting, to have a monthly meeting settled here, which request after having been deliberately considered, and a committee appointed, which attended that Preparative Meeting, the proposition in the Eighth month following, was laid before Warrington Quarterly Meeting, and that meeting also appointed a committee which attended Dunnings Creek Preparative Meeting in order to judge of the propriety of granting the aforesaid request; which committee reporting in favor thereof, in the Second month following, it was granted by the quarterly meeting and a committee appointed to attend the opening of the first monthly meeting. It being also agreed to be held on the first Fourth-day after the second Second-day in each month and called Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting, and the Preparative Meeting on the Fourth-day in the week preceding; accordingly on the thirteenth day of the Fourth month 1803, Friends Assembled and opened said Monthly Meeting."

The minutes which follow, seem to be without break or interruption from that date to the present. Thomas Penrose, who it seems, was a very active and worthy member of the Society at that time, was appointed first clerk of the men's meeting and Abigail Penrose his wife, clerk of the women's meeting. The first matter of business claiming the attention of the monthly meeting was the announcement of John Bateman and Hannah Thomas of their intention of marriage; in pursuance of which, the marriage was solemnized in a public assembly of Friends in their meeting-house on the second-day of Fifth month following, and the certificate thereof is the first recorded marriage certificate of this meeting; and to it are the names of fifty-four subscribing witnesses, representing twenty-three family names. A communication from the Meeting of Sufferings held in Baltimore, relative to Indian affairs, was read and acted upon. Thomas Bowen and Thomas Penrose were appointed overseers, which completed the work of the first monthly meeting.

The first new member received was James Hancock who came in by certificate from Warrington Monthly Meeting, Sixth month 15th, 1803. The next was Thomas Smith, who came in by conviction First month 2, 1804. The first recorded certificate of removal was that of William Kenworthy and Rebecca his wife, addressed to Baltimore Monthly Meeting and dated Twelfth month 16th, 1807; other certificates seem, from the minutes, to have been previously issued, but do not appear recorded. Under date of Sixth month 15th, 1808, the following minute appears:

"The paragraph contained in the extracts from our yearly meeting, on the destructive article of spirituous liquors, was twice read and weightily considered, several of the committee from the quarterly meeting being present, it is recommended that Friends unite in discouraging the use of so destructive an article, and for the help of the cause and one another, this meeting appoint John Thomas, William Kenworthy, Jonathan Bowen, and Thomas Penrose to have the matter under their care and to extend help where it appears necessary and report their case to this meeting in Eighth month next."

This together with numerous similar minutes, shows that our early Friends at Dunning's Creek were more actively engaged in the cause of temperance than we have been in later years. This fact is partly due, no doubt, to the greater necessity then than now for active efforts in such direction, and partly due also to the greater diligence and earnestness on the part of our predecessors than we are willing to contribute to such philanthropic measures.

Neither time, patience nor prudence will permit of our going into details, or giving even an outline of the work done by this meeting, during the one hundred years of its existence, even so far as such work is recorded in books; and much less should we attempt to describe the influence for good it has exercised in this community, either in the broad field of philanthropy or in the lofty realm of religious thought. But it is a matter of intense interest and gratification to learn, that particularly during the first half of this period, Friends were all the while actively engaged in combating with wrong and defending right in whatever guise or form either appeared. They were fearless in the discharge of duty as they saw their duty, and uncompromising on questions of speech or conduct that were not in accord with the well-established principles of rectitude. In dealing with offenders the dignity of law and order was generally regarded as paramount to the welfare of the individual, and, from our distant point of view, it would seem that, in consequence of adherence to this policy, our Society has suffered a loss never to be regained. Yet we cannot question the motive of these well-meaning people, and we firmly believe that they meant to do well.

In this connection it is interesting, and almost amusing, to note the character of the offenses committed against the peace and dignity of the Society, in those early days, and to note also how differently the gravity of certain offenses was regarded then from what it is at this day; drinking spirituous liquors to excess, dancing, fighting, unchastity, telling untruths, attending the muster and attending shooting matches, were among the offenses most frequently dealt with, and which mostly resulted in absolute disownment.

But more frequently than any of these and what seems to have been, as they thought, the most serious offense to which human frailty was given, was that of marrying out of meeting, by the assistance of a magistrate or a hireling minister; or even attending a marriage that was not conducted after the manner of Friends! The rigorous discipline maintained in dealing with such offenders, year after year, resulted in tremendous loss in membership with no compensating gain. It is perhaps best for the present and future welfare of our Society, that we do not dwell upon this phase of our history, lest we lose sight of that which is more elevating and beneficial.

Another subject equally unpleasant to introduce and the most unprofitable subject possible for discussion to-day, claims a passing observation here, and only because it is part of our history and cannot be avoided. In the early part of last century, differences—either real or imaginary—on the question of discipline and religious belief, arose amongst Friends, and after violent agitation, through a feeling much more personal than spiritual, the climax was reached in 1828, when a separation was decreed in Baltimore Yearly Meeting, the same edict going forth, about the same time, in other yearly meetings. The separation did not take place at Dunning's Creek, however, until Third month 16th, 1831; but the spirit of disunion was not lessened in its intensity by the three years' delay.

Soon after the establishment of separate meetings, each society seemed to realize the wrong that had been committed against the cause of Christianity and one another, and allowed a more humane and friendly feeling to possess them, which better feeling has increased and prevailed among us until the present hour, with a most wholesome effect upon the social and domestic lives of both, and without leaving a trace of unpleasant memories to interfere with the religious worship of either. And it is most pleasant to us all that, under such feeling, we can meet and mingle to-day, in exercises in which we should so properly have a common interest.

One other event concerning the Hicksite branch of our meeting's history, might be of interest on this occasion, namely, the severance of our connection with Warrington and being added to Centre Quarterly Meeting, and again we quote from the minutes :

"Sixth month 11th, 1834. The subject of forwarding a request to have a Quarterly meeting established, composed of this, Centre and West Branch Monthly Meetings, coming under the consideration of this meeting, it is the conclusion thereof to appoint Nathan Hammond, John A. Blackburn, and Amos Penrose to confer with committees of the two afore-mentioned monthly meetings, on that subject; and, if way should open, unite with them on behalf of this meeting, in forwarding a request accordingly and report to next meeting.

"Seventh month 16th, 1834. Part of the committee appointed on the subject of a Quarterly Meeting, report that they have had a conference with the committees of Centre and West Branch Monthly Meetings, and united with them in forwarding a request to the Yearly Meeting for a Quarter to be established and composed of the three afore-mentioned meetings, and to be held on the third Second-day in the Second, Fifth, Eighth and Eleventh months, viz. : in Second and Eighth months at Centre, in the Fifth at Dunning's Creek and in the Eleventh month at West Branch, and to be called Centre Quarterly Meeting."

The next appearance of the subject was under date of Fourth month 15th, 1835, thus :

"The following extract was received at this meeting, from the Clerk of Warrington Quarterly Meeting. 'To Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting, Dear Friends : The extracts from the minutes of our late Yearly Meeting inform that they have granted the request of Dunning's Creek, Centre and West Branch Monthly Meetings to establish a Quarterly Meeting to be opened at Dunning's Creek on the second Second-day in Fifth month, and a committee was appointed in conjunction with women Friends, to attend the opening of the same. The select meeting to be held on the Seventh-day previously, Third month 2d, 1835. ABEL RUSSELL, Clerk.'"

Besides these more important events to which we have alluded, our records contain many others, equally interesting in recital, but of minor importance as a matter of history; and we cannot, therefore, indulge the pleasure which it would afford to review the same. The century during which our monthly meeting has been in existence, has been a most remarkable period in the affairs of the world, as to progress and enlightenment. Discovery, invention, commerce, science, government and religion, have all attained stages of advancement not dreamed of one hundred years ago. We can scarcely realize that some of the Friends named in the first part of this article never knew of such things as railroads, steamships, coal oil, lucifer matches, photographs, steel pens, the telegraph, electric light or telephone, all of which have exercised a tremendous influence upon the social and political well being of mankind, since that time.

It is not our purpose to leave our subject for a historical sketch of our great country nor the world at large; but as a most important step toward our greatness as a commercial nation was taken, about the time of the establishment of our monthly meeting, it might be well for the sake of memory to associate these events; I refer to the purchase of Louisiana, the treaty for which was consummated on the thirtieth day of the same month.

And now in conclusion, what is to be gained by this labor of research and review of the conduct and experience of our little meeting during all these years? A brief article like this can only be suggestive and not exhaustive on so large a subject; and if the thoughts suggested are entertaining only, they come far short of the higher purpose of their laborious preparation.

It is our privilege, our business, yea, more, it is our solemn duty, to study the lives and conduct of those who have gone before us in this peculiar and particular direction, with a view to the betterment of our own condition, both individually and as a Society, thereby avoiding those paths that led them into error or regret, availing ourselves of our superior advantages for usefulness, and emulating in our own lives the sterling qualities of noble manhood and pure womanhood which have enabled them to hand down to us this rich legacy of the social and religious fabric of our Society; and it will then be our pleasure to enjoy its protective influences and associations while we live, and to so let it pass into the hands of posterity with the impress of our lives upon it, as to increase its possibilities for usefulness, and elicit only feelings of gratitude and appreciation in the hearts of our children and our children's children forever. E. H. B.

COMMUNICATION.

WORDS OF ENCOURAGEMENT.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER:

I wish to express my appreciation and gratification with the contents and management of the INTELLIGENCER during the present year. The memoirs of John Jackson are greatly valued by those of us who are old enough to remember him personally, and to recall his fervent, impressive and reaching ministry. We are fast passing from the stage of action and this interesting series of papers is introducing him to our young friends, many of whom are becoming interested in that exemplary and useful life. I know several such young friends, to whom these memoirs are as a fresh revelation. The last two numbers containing the account of part of their travels in the West Indies with the view in Tortola of Friends' ancient burying-ground and site of the old meeting-house, by George Truman, which I had never before seen, are of great interest to me.

I will just mention a few of the essays in the last two numbers of the paper, the perusal of which should be a help upward to every one of us. "What Does College Park Association of Friends Stand For?" "The Things That are More Excellent," "The Voice of the People," "Having a Good Time," "The Belief of Friends," by C. B. M., and "Perfect Peace," by J. B. L. I wish the circulation of the paper could be speedily doubled. DAVID FERRIS.

FOR the first time in the history of our Government the imports have exceeded $1,000,000,000 in a year. The exports are about $1,400,000,000.

THE first foreigners to join the "passive resistance" movement against the English Education act are two American taxpayers living at Wimbledon, R. W. Farquhar, formerly a pastor of Portland, Oregon, and E. P. Gaston, who at one time lived in Chicago. They refused to pay the education tax, and their household goods will be seized and sold at auction.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

YORK, PA.—On First-day the 21st of Sixth month, Dr. O. Edward Janney of Baltimore, attended our regular morning meeting at 10 o'clock.

The room was comfortably filled and all listened with great earnestness to the message he had for us. He spoke of the dead and the living silence. A dead silence existing when the mind is allowed to wander at careless ease and thoughts of worldly things creep in. A living silence manifests itself when the mind invites the spiritual thoughts, the desire to reach after all good, and usually such a silence finds means of expression. He turned our thoughts to the life of the Great Master, who is continually seeking after the welfare of all, who points the way to eternal life and teaches that all are children of the one Great Father. He stated that it would be impossible for us to-day to live exactly as Jesus lived, as almost twenty centuries of time have passed since the days of this Great Example. Manners and customs have changed, more temptations exist and life is more complicated; but it is possible to live in his spirit, practicing his obedience and humility. He cited several instances where Jesus spoke directly to individuals and taught them the value of repentance, forgiveness, self-sacrifice and love.

It was a very impressive occasion and the deep influence of this earnest appeal that all might devote more time to the work of the Master, can not be measured. Dr. Janney lectured in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, in the afternoon on the subject, "George Fox and his Message to Men." This was quite a favored opportunity, as it was the last Y. M. C. A. meeting of the season and more people were present. Dr. Jeffers, Principal of the York Collegiate Institute presided and introduced Dr. Janney. The lecture was a very interesting one, dealing as it did with the great and vital principles of a people who will ever send forth a ringing message to the world.

Since these two meetings several have been heard expressing their wish to attend our First-day school and meeting. We indeed feel encouraged. B. K. C.

BYBERRY, PA.—The Friends' Association held its last meeting at Byberry Meeting-house on First-day afternoon, the 5th instant, with average attendance. The Scripture reading was given by Nathaniel Richardson, following which the Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting. The concern was introduced by Wm. P. Bonner that young Friends should feel the responsibility of welcoming strangers to the meeting and suggested the appointment of a committee for this purpose. After some discussion three young men and three young women were named, but the feeling was expressed that this in no way relieved others from the duty which should rest upon all. R. Barclay Spicer spoke from the standpoint of the stranger and said the cordiality which greeted him when the week before he came almost a total stranger led him to believe this action was really not necessary.

To Edward Comly had been given the question, "What has Byberry Association done toward increasing the Friendly feeling of the community?" In his absence his reply was read by his daughter Hanna W. Comly. His feeling was that a very much more friendly feeling existed now than formerly inasmuch as those not members of the Society were one with us in making this Association a success; he also cited instances where Friendly environment of younger days actuated later life. "Are young Friends plainer in tastes than those of other denominations?" was answered very clearly and decisively by Mary S. Wood in the negative. She believed all were cast in the same mould, and only early teaching of parents and caretakers instilled plainer tastes into Friends' children; and that plain and distinctive dress and address does not obtain so much now as formerly is due to lax parental teaching, and partly to the mingling with other denominations and imbibing different ideas. She rather deplored the drifting of Friends from ancient moorings, for plain language, plain dress and "Quaker simplicity" are all the needs of the world to-day. In discussing this Wm. P. Bonner felt environment had much to do with plainness. He felt the country boy transplanted to the city loses much of his plainness.

Nathaniel Richardson felt dress meant little, if heart be good and true—that is the main thing after all. Mary Tomlinson read "A Beautiful Letter" being one written by Daniel Webster to a friend. This gave rise to remarks by Nathaniel Richardson on Daniel Webster and his remarkable life, marred, however, by moral unsoundness in his character. Anna Palmer then read an original paper on "'Tis not all of life to live," in this she put stress on moral strength of character. "Do right for the sake of right rather than for especial end. We have not sufficient regard for others; instead of criticising them, let us devote the time to helping them instead. What can I give? Comfort, charity, truth, faith in man, in all things good and true, and above all in Divine. Give love also; example is powerful. Lead lives governed by high ideals."

Edith Shoemaker recited "A Golden Milestone." Remarks of appreciation were made by Nathaniel Richardson and Arabella Carter, and after the reading of the program for next meeting and a short silence, the session adjourned until Eighth month 2d. A. C.

LANCASTER, PA.—The last meeting before the summer vacation was held at the home of Clarkson Whitson with a fair but not full attendance. After the usual Bible reading by the president, a paper delivered at the Swarthmore Conference by Elizabeth Powell Bond "Spiritual Religion and Its Application to Everyday Duties" was read by Lucy H. Arnold. Edith Cooper gave a recitation, "The Little Quaker Sinner." Esther K. Houston answered the question "How shall we spend the Sabbath; shall we attend resorts and places of amusement?" She gave as her opinion that we should attend some place for Divine worship once a day; that the rest of the day may be spent in rest or recreation providing always that such recreation be of a quiet, orderly nature; that a habit of attending worship may be so fixed in youth as to become second nature; that employers should allow domestics as great a degree of such privileges as possible by encouraging the family to live quietly and plainly upon that day.

A most interesting discussion followed, but all agreed with the first speaker.

Most members present then gave sentiments or texts, after which the meeting was adjourned until the last First-day in Ninth month. LUCY H. ARNOLD, Cor. Sec.

HORSHAM, PA.—The last meeting of the Horsham Friends' Association for the season was held on First-day afternoon, Fifth month 7th. It was a large and interesting meeting. Henrietta Kinsey opened the meeting by Bible reading. Jervis Smith gave a beautiful recitation, followed by Helen G. Borton, of Woodstown, who gave Van Dyke's "Last Word."

A discussion upon the question, "How shall we obtain new members for our Society?" was taken up.

Sarah Jarrett presented a thoughtful paper. She did not think it necessary to go up and down the lands trying to proselyte, but advocated setting the example of right living and high-thinking. She thought we could not improve on the methods of our forefathers if they were faithfully carried out.

James Q. Atkinson continued the subject by saying that we cannot expect others to come to our meetings if the members do not attend faithfully themselves. Neither can we expect those who come to us once, to come again if we do not give them anything. He enjoys silent meeting himself, but until a person has learned to appreciate silence, in which all true worship must be performed, it is very necessary to have the spoken word, and he thought that the principle that only words sent by Divine inspiration, should be spoken, prevented our members from expressing the thoughts that came to their minds which, if uttered might be of value to others, and that we should feel free to express such thoughts.

The discussion was participated in by Ely J. Smith, Susan H. Jarrett, William Satterthwaite and Mercie J. Walton.

New officers were then appointed, who take their places at the meeting on Ninth month, 27th: Edward Morgan, president; Howard Comly, vice president; Emma Comly, secretary.—[Doylestown Intelligencer.]

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Friends of Woodstown and vicinity have been favored with the company of John J. and Eliza H. Cornell for a short time, and they have paid personal visits to many families that will long be remembered with gratitude and pleasure. On First-day, the 21st ultimo, they attended both First-day school and meeting, where a large gathering was assembled. He spoke most earnestly on "Religion," and in his clear, impressive manner, showed how rich and happy we might be with the true religion that comes from personal contact with the Higher Power, and how little and poor we are without it. On Fourth-day evening, the 24th, they had a parlor meeting at Isaac Ballinger's. The discourse at this time was on the "Beatitudes," and his friendly explanation of them was gratefully received by those present. On Fifth-day, the 25th, they attended Pilesgrove Preparative Meeting; also the funeral of William S. Pancoast, where he had loving words of comfort for the sorrowing. In the meeting his minute was read, and unity and pleasure expressed for the presence of himself and wife, and a feeling of thankfulness rests with all for their labors in this community. Joel and Mary E. Borton accompanied them in many of their visits. M.

At the close of Sadsbury Friends' Meeting on Sixth month 21st, a pleasant little incident occurred, when Anne Pownall, in a few well-chosen words, spoke of the meeting at Old Sadsbury and of the tender memories that cluster around the dear ones who had gathered there, referring to one whom we remember with affection. It was her pleasure to say on behalf of the children of Mary W. Slokom, that they present a Bible in memory of their mother. Anne said that the last time she visited her aunt, Mary W. Slokom, she was engaged in reading the Bible through, saying, "I read it through years ago, but now I am re-reading it and more carefully noting the passages that I most admire." She had finished the book of Isaiah and referred particularly to the 55th chapter, which by request of the meeting, Anne read. Mary W. Slokom, at the time referred to, was about eighty-six years old, and reading with her second sight. The book was accepted with thanks by the members, several of the Friends making fitting remarks. One Friend felt that the book had two values, first, its intrinsic worth; next, the greater value was in the thought that had prompted its bestowal. The gift was particularly acceptable as coming from the children of one who had been through life a consistent member of Sadsbury Monthly Meeting. It was gratifying and encouraging to know that they still remembered and were interested in their old meeting. Another Friend said, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth," and surely the spirit of Mary W. Slokom is with us to-day. The Bible is bound in black morocco, beautifully illustrated and marked on the back:

In Memoriam
Mary W. Slokom
From her children.

Truly, "The memory of the just is precious."

A FRIEND.

John Wilhelm Rowntree while in Chicago read a paper on "Modern Thought and the Gospel," to a company of Friends of both branches, at the home of Professor Hill, of the University of Chicago. He has now returned to England, his sight being greatly improved, though he was still suffering from the severe treatment that had been necessary.

THE Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board of Boston has undertaken the reforestation of several hundred acres of typical, wornout pasture and farm land in the drainage basin of the great Wachusett reservoir for commercial purposes and for the protection of the water supply of more than a million people.

LITERARY NOTES.

WHEN within a year of leaving college, in 1878, Charles G. D. Roberts inscribed a poetic epistle to his cousin Bliss Carman, who was just entering upon his "happy three-years' course." Looking back upon that early call to the imaginative life which the elder of the youthful poets addressed to the younger, it is a cheering thing to consider how both have given so amply to our finer contemporary literature. Each has a goodly list of volumes to his credit, and in all their verse these singers have held so true to the Celtic muse, with its glamour, its poignancy, and its fairy music, that they have become recognized influences in the best poetry of the day.

Roberts' "Book of the Rose" and Carman's "Green Book of the Bards" (L. C. Page & Co.), are the latest volumes from these Canadian poets. Of the sweet, grave musing of the former let this stanza be an example, portraying as it does the birth of altruism,—

"When Mary the Mother kissed the Child
And night on the wintry hills grew mild,
And the strange star swung from the courts of air
To serve at a manger with kings in prayer,
Then did the day of the simple kin
And the unregarded folk begin."

From the beautiful fancies with which Bliss Carman enriches his pages it is not easy to select; his melodies are sombre or airy as his vagrant mood directs. But let these lines represent him,—

"For who could ever tire
Of that wild legendry,
The folk-lore of the mountains,
The drama of the sea?"

"I pore for days together
Over some lost refrain,—
The epic of the thunder,
The lyric of the rain."

Timely discussions in the North American Review for Seventh month are a criticism of Chamberlain's "Protective Scheme"; "The Servian Tragedy," by Charles Johnson, giving a summary of the history of Servia; statistics showing the extraordinary place recently attained by "American Manufactures in the World's Markets"; "Jewish Massacre and the Revolutionary Movement in Russia," by Abraham Cahan; "The Panama Canal Question from a Colombian Standpoint." Professor Kittredge, of Harvard, under the head of "An American School," writes of Phillips Exeter Academy. The Haytian Minister tells "The Truth About Hayti." The anti-corruption Governor of Rhode Island advocates the adoption of "The Constitutional Initiative." In "The Curse of Eve," Margaret Bisland, apropos of the present discussion of the decline of the birth-rate among native Americans, asks whether the tree of knowledge does not still bear a cursed fruit for the daughters of Eve. The number has also some "Letters from Ruskin to a Young Lady."

The Review of Reviews commenting editorially in "The Progress of the World" on the Servian Tragedy sketches the history of Servia, and makes very clear the whole Balkan and Macedonian situation. The present status of the many elements making up the dual kingdom of Austria-Hungary is also fully discussed. Among other topics of special interest that are taken up in the editorials are the Russian massacre and Russia's treatment of Finland, and the English preferential tariff matter.

In special articles the plunderings and atrocities perpetrated in the Congo Free State are taken up by W. J. Stead and by an American missionary. "The American Invasion of Uganda," is an account of Yankee bridge-building in the heart of Africa. Special articles are devoted, also, to immigration, "The Erie Canal—Its Past and Present," the forest fires, the recent floods, recent Antarctic exploration, and to "Welfare-work in a great Industrial Plant."

Among the interesting things in St. Nicholas are "An Indian Village," by Julian Ralph; "Buenos Ayres, the Greatest City South of the Equator," "The Origin of Our Flag," the continuation of Howard Pyle's "Story of King Arthur and His Knights." "Nature and Science for Young Folks" includes "Rambles by the Brooks," "An Island on an Arch of Rocks," "A Solar Halo Like a Rainbow," "Caves Washed Out from Solid Rocks."

McClure's for Seventh month has its contribution to the study of municipal pathology in "Philadelphia: Corrupt and Contented," by Lincoln Steffens. The first part of Ida M. Tarbell's "History of the Standard Oil Company," is concluded, the announcement being made that the second part will begin in the autumn. Other articles are, "Mountaineering in Switzerland without Guides," and a description of the most interesting kinds of snakes with illustrations. The editorial is on "Patriotism."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE SHADOWS THAT LURK IN OUR MIND.

How oft the horizon seems hazy and grey,
With nothing attractive in sight!
The sun may be shining—all nature look gay,
While nothing but shadows are coming our way,
Though every one else gets the light!
And isn't it funny,—how often we find
Those shadows are only the ones in our mind?

We long for a letter, a fortune, a friend,
We wait long, and labor in vain;
All kinds of forebodings their dark presence lend,
To cloud our horizon, until in the end,
We exchange all our blessings for pain;
Since naught is so cruel, disastrous, unkind,
As the host of suspicions that flock in our mind.

Don't look for the letter or fortune, but try
To consider the blessings that come;
It is so much more charming to smile than to cry,
And feels so much better to laugh than to sigh,
We had better be cheerful than glum,
For half of the heartaches and tortures refined,
Are only from shadows that lurk in the mind!
Philadelphia, Pa. SARAH PALMER BYRNES.

CONSOLATION.

HAST thou forgotten God who gives the rain?
Plenteous and merciful the long showers pour
On parching fields where dust and drouth were sore;
Yet will thine eyes watch out the night again?
Peace on the shadowed hills and sky is deep;
Shall not thine heart be comforted with sleep
As earth is comforted and lulled of pain?
Before thy prayer the heavens are brazen still,
Nor yet to cool thy thirst the fountains fill.
Nevertheless His word shall not be vain.
What hope had earth, gasping at yesternoon?
What hope hast thou, whose comfort shall be soon?
Are ye not in His hands for bliss or bane?
To-morrow, where the upland fields lay black,
Thou shalt go forth and look on life come back;
Harvest shall follow seedtime yet again.
To-morrow, where thy heart lay withering,
Fountains of love before his feet shall spring;
Peace shall repay thee sevenfold for pain.
Hast thou forgotten God who gives the rain?

—Mabel Earle, in the Atlantic.

"THINK not the thistle-seed to cast;
And reap the rose full-blown;
For man must gather, first or last,
The harvest he has sown."

THEY who tread the path of labor,
Follow where my feet have trod;
They who work without complaining
Do the holy work of God. —H. van Dyke.

METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR SIXTH MONTH, 1903.

Mean barometer,	29.946
Highest barometer during the month, 5th,	30.343
Lowest barometer during the month, 14th,	29.600
Mean temperature,	66.2
Highest temperature during the month, 3d, 9th,	84
Lowest temperature during the month, 1st,	51
Mean of maximum temperatures,	73.2
Mean of minimum temperatures,	59.2
Greatest daily range of temperature, 3d,	29
Least daily range of temperature, 23d,	6
Mean daily range of temperature,	14
Mean temperature of the Dew Point,	57.5
Mean relative humidity, per cent.,	77
Total precipitation, rain, inches,	5.91
Greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours, 1.96 inches of rain, on the 10th and 11th.

Number of days on which .01 inch or more precipitation, 16.
Number of clear days 5, fair days 7, cloudy days 18.
Prevailing direction of the wind from southeast.
Thunder storms on 8th, 10th, 14th, 20th.

SENSIBLE TEMPERATURE DATA.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 71° on 9th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 51° on 1st.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 60.4°.
Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 73° on 9th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 48° on 2d.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 60.4°.
Mean of wet bulb thermometer for this month, 60.4°.

NOTE.—The means of the daily maximum and minimum temperatures, 73.2° and 59.2° respectively, give a monthly mean of 66.2°, which is 6.5° below the normal, and 5.2° below the corresponding month in 1902.

The total amount of precipitation for the month, 5.91 inches, is 2.65 inches more than the normal, and .61 of an inch less than fell during Sixth month, 1902.

JOHN COMLY, Observer.

Centennial Avenue, Philadelphia, Sixth month 30th.

BRINGING A COW TO COLLEGE.

From Berea Quarterly.

WHEN I was fourteen years old, I saw I couldn't learn any more at the free school, and I wasn't satisfied not to know more than I did. My older brother had tried a term at a small academy not far away, but it cost so much he had to come home. He said if it took that to get an education he would have to go without. I sent to all the colleges I had heard of for catalogues. After studying them all over I concluded that Berea College was the only one that gave a poor boy a chance, and I made up my mind that Berea was the place for me.

My mother was an Abolitionist and had heard Mr. Fee preach, and she was willing I should go, but my father had just the opposite beliefs and did not want me to go where colored people were admitted. But when I showed him the advantages I would have there and the chance to earn part of my expenses, he said he would study about it. Weeks passed and neither of us spoke about Berea. Finally one night when I was cutting the fire-wood, father came out and sat down for a talk. He said he had studied about it right smart, and if my brother and I wanted to go to Berea we could. Then we decided to take our sister along to cook for us. So all three of us came.

The first year my brother and I worked on the farm and at janitor work. Our sister went to school and got the meals, and it took even less money than we had expected. It seemed too good to be true that it was for us to have an education.

We went home the next summer and told the good news to the other brothers. I told one of my older brothers that I could afford to wait better than he could; that he could go to Berea and I would work a year at home. So the second year I was with my father on the farm.

At the close of the third year all of our family of eight, brothers and sisters, had been to Berea, except two, and last summer when I went home I studied how I could persuade another brother to come. I said to him: "You are not fit to be a farmer till you know more. You don't know what's in the dirt any more than the crows that fly over it. You need to go to Berea to learn how to be a good farmer." He laughed at me. He asked me if going to college had made our neighbors' boys better farmers. They had spent a lot of money going through college and when they came home they could spend more money than ever, but did not know how to make it off the farm. I told him that at Berea they show a fellow how to farm, and he would make more money after being there a year.

Before fall, I had persuaded him to take my advice, and he joined the three brothers and two sisters in planning for a year at Berea. This brother advised taking a cow with us to furnish milk. He found that it would cost eleven dollars and three cents to take her on the cars. He said: "The rest of you go on the cars and the cow and I will be in Berea on Saturday night, and we won't pay any car fare, either." He was as good as his word. They walked the whole distance of 130 miles in four days, with an outlay of only one dollar and a half.

My brother is so well satisfied with what he has got this year, that he plans to come two more years and finish the Farm Course.

My father is delighted with what Berea has done for us. He says if he had only known about Berea twenty years ago, he would have moved near Berea and given all his children a better chance.

A CONCORD NATURALIST.

ONE of the truest of disciples of Emerson and Thoreau was Alfred W. Hosmer, of Concord, who was laid to rest in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery last month, a lover of woods and fields, a naturalist of rare powers of observation, and a botanist of accurate and technical knowledge. The genuineness of his discipleship is most eloquently attested in the fact that, fitted as he thus was by nature and by accomplishments for association with Thoreau, he never thrust himself upon the elder and noted man, though living in the same town, devoted to the same avocations and exploring the same fields. His devotion took the form of a pious collecting of every scrap of print concerning the recluse of Walden Pond, whose retiring disposition the young Hosmer instinctively understood, sympathized with and respected. "E. H. B.," writing from Lexington of this typical and worthy citizen of Concord, of whom too little is known elsewhere, says:

"Sunday was his day for long walks, business cares keeping him within bounds the greater part of the week, and successive Sundays were set apart for walks to certain localities where some plant must be looked for in its specified habitat. If all was not as he had anticipated it was the flower which was behind time and not the observer, for the latter was as regular and punctual as was the calendar. Thoreau used to say that if he were awakened from a trance in Concord woods the time of year would be as plain to him from the plants as the time of day from the dial. Mr. Hosmer's case would have been similar, as he had the whole botanical calendar of the section adjusted to a nicety. With ability as an ornithologist second only to his attainments in botany, and well informed as to the Indian lore of the vicinity—a section rich in this particular—his walks were not only an essential part of his own life and habit but a great treat to those who, from time to time, were permitted to accompany him. Writing for publication was often urged upon him by his friends, but with a modesty which was his nature he believed himself incapable of performing this task creditably. Thereby literature has sustained a loss; but his attainments in even that direction have not been unavailing, for his complete collection of matter pertaining to Thoreau has been a storehouse of information from which others have drawn and for which he sometimes received no credit. Numerous books and magazine articles bear his imprint either in data or other information furnished or in illustration." —[Boston Transcript.]

The Passing of Bric-a-Brac.

WHEREVER it is arranged in the plan of the architect, somewhere in the usual country house there is sure to be a big square hall, so called. This is really the place of general gathering. There is a winding stairway, a big fireplace, plenty of windows—some of them opening on the veranda—and comfort is the key-note. Just stop for a moment to observe one thing in this summer of 1903. How few ornaments you see. The more we eliminate small things from our lives the better we are; the more we eliminate them from our parlors the better is every one who visits us, I believe. Thanks to our Japanese instructors, perhaps, or to our own evolution, the passing of bric-a-brac, tidies, and useless ornaments is about accomplished. What vases are seen hold flowers; the candlesticks are meant for candles that burn in them every evening; the clocks are to tell the time, the lamps to give light, the books to read. When we do discover a rare piece of work or glass or china, our eyes are not diverted from it by a dozen surrounding trifles that make confusion in our sight and chaos in our minds.

For this fashion let us return thanks, and then go on. The high wainscoting of the hall may be of natural wood polished and treated, or what is highly in vogue, wood stained a color to suit the taste.—[Harper's Bazar.]

Monks May Return to Iona.

It is understood that the Duke of Argyle has sold Iona Island, Hebrides, to the Carthusians, who were recently expelled from the Monastery of the Grande Chartreuse, in France. The terms of the sale provide for the preservation of the sacred and historical associations of the island.

The re-occupation of Iona as a seat of religious learning would be an event of unusual interest to antiquarians, for this little island in the Hebrides was in the Middle Ages one of the most famous and revered shrines of the Christian Church in the North. It lies west of the southwestern promontory of Mull, in the county of Argyle, and is three and one-half miles long and one and one-half wide, containing an area of about 2,000 acres, 610 of which are under cultivation. St. Columba landed there from Ireland in 563, and founded the famous abbey, which became for centuries the center of missionary effort and of learning. It was several times plundered by the Norsemen, and its inmates slaughtered.

The Western Isles having come into the possession of Scotland in 1072, the Monastery of Iona was rebuilt and endowed. A new monastery and a nunnery was founded there by the Benedictines in 1203, and this Order either expelled or absorbed the remnants of the Celtic community remaining there. The monastery was finally demolished in 1561. Iona was for centuries a great resort for pilgrims, many of whom went there to die, in order that their remains might be interred in its sacred soil; while the bodies of persons illustrious in rank or in piety were taken to it for burial from all parts of Northern Europe. A number of ruins of the mediæval buildings still remain on the island.—[Public Ledger.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

The National Educational Association began its annual convention in Boston on the 6th instant, it being estimated that 25,000 teachers from twenty-four States and from Canada were in attendance. During the week there has been really a congress of conventions, there being fifteen departments, besides the general sessions, which were held in the evening, and an executive convention known as the National Council. On the first evening Charles W. Eliot, President of Harvard University and of the Association, delivered an address on "The New Definition of the Cultivated Man." At the National Council Dr. Charles DeGarmo, Professor of Science and Art of Education at Cornell University, spoke on "The Voluntary Element in Education." Dr. Edward Everett Hale said before the Indian Association, "At the present time the Government is distinguishing itself by intelligent work among the Indians."

In contrast to the long struggle of the building trades of New York and the expensive and futile strike in Philadelphia is the decision of the employers and unions of these trades in Washington to submit their grievances to arbitration. It is agreed that there shall be no suspension of operations during the efforts of the Board of Arbitration to reach a satisfactory settlement. The Board is to be composed of eleven members, each party to the dispute selecting five. The eleventh member, who acts as umpire, will be chosen by the Board. A majority vote is to decide all questions.

The attempt to lynch a negro accused of killing a patrolman at Evansville, Indiana, led to a race riot at that place. After the mob had been driven from the jail by the police a crowd of negroes gathered and made threatening demands, who were in turn driven away by white men. The prisoner was removed to Vincennes and afterward to the State prison at Jeffersonville for safe keeping. As the rioting at Evansville continued and an attack was made upon the guards surrounding the county jail, in which sixteen negro prisoners were confined, Governor Durbin ordered out the militia, and seven men were killed and 24 injured before quiet was restored.

DR. EDWARD RHOADS, an instructor at Haverford College, was drowned on the 4th instant while attempting to run the Susquehanna rapids, near Columbia, Pa. The body was not recovered until two days later. Dr. Rhoads was a son of the late William Gibbons Rhoads, for nine years a manager of Haverford College, and Sarah Wistar Rhoads. Although only thirty years of age he had already distinguished himself as a physicist and was recently admitted as a member of the American Philosophical Society.

It has been announced that Baron Speck von Sternberg has been appointed Ambassador of Germany to the United States. Baron Sternberg first came to the United States as attaché to the German Legation about 1878. After several years' service at Washington he was sent to Japan, China and other countries, and returned to the United States in 1898 as First Secretary to the Embassy. In 1900 he was Commissioner of Germany in connection with the trouble in Samoa. The wife of the new Ambassador is an American.

NEWS NOTES.

THE surplus of the United States treasury for the past year was $53,000,000.

EMPEROR WILLIAM, on the 6th inst., sailed for Norway on the imperial yacht Hohenzollern.

EIGHT vacation schools and two schools for physical culture have been opened in Philadelphia for six weeks.

THE steamer Ventura sailed from Sydney, Australia, on the 6th, for San Francisco, carrying $1,500,000 in gold.

THE correspondent of the London Times, at Tangier, has been released by bandit tribes after three weeks of captivity.

FACTORY INSPECTOR DAVIS sent home from a Wilkes-Barre, Pa., silk mill twenty children under thirteen years of age.

AMERICAN orders for 50,000 tons of steel rails, ingots, billets, etc., have recently been placed in Westphalian establishments.

DURING the past year 33,229 patents were granted and 54,256 applications filed. The receipts of the Patent Office were $1,595,125.

THE transfer of the various bureaus under the act creating the Department of Commerce and Labor to the new department took place on the first of this month.

PRESIDENT LOUBET, of France, arrived in London on the 6th, and was met at the railroad station by King Edward. Vast crowds gave him an enthusiastic welcome.

DURING the fiscal year just closed 132,829 claims were allowed by the Pension Bureau and 113,720 rejected. The number of allowances exceeded those of last year to the extent of 1,115.

THE Georgia House of Representatives, by a large majority, defeated a resolution to apportion money for schools among whites and negroes according to the taxable property of the two races.

It has been announced in the English House of Commons that the existing subsidies for merchant ships which may be used in time of war will not be renewed. The decision will take effect Fourth month 1st, 1905.

THE Salvation Army Corps of Cleveland has planned a campaign in the feud-ridden counties of Kentucky. A series of meetings will be held at Jackson, Kentucky, where the stirring events of the recent trial were enacted.

At an Independence Day celebration in London, Ambassador Choate declaring that there should be more than talk of an Anglo-American alliance, advocated the erection of a statue of Washington in London and one of Queen Victoria in Washington.

MANY churches throughout the great Kansas wheat belt were closed on First-day, the 5th, and the men and women went into the fields to help save the hundred-million-bushels crop now overripe. In thirty counties 25,000 men worked in the harvest fields all day.

A RECENT report of the British Labor Department shows that the settlement of labor controversies by arbitration is growing in favor in the United Kingdom. During last year 541,000 disputes respecting wages were settled by conciliation boards and 176,000 by the parties themselves.

By the breaking of a dam at Oakford Park, near Jeanette, Pa., on the 6th, twenty persons were drowned and sixteen are missing. The property loss is estimated at $1,500,000. The park is owned by a trolley company and a cloud-burst caused the poorly constructed dam to give way.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

7TH MO. 11. — MANSFIELD YOUNG Friends' Association at the home of William P. Pray.

7TH MO. 12.—A CIRCULAR MEETING under the care of a Committee of Western Quarterly Meeting at Millcreek, Pa., at 3 o'clock p. m.

7TH MO. 12.—JOHN J. CORNELL WILL attend an appointed meeting at the old Cape May Meeting-house, at Ocean View Station, W. J. & S. R., at 11 a. m.

7TH MO. 13.—JOHN J. CORNELL WILL attend an appointed meeting at Ocean City in the evening.

7TH MO. 13.—FRIENDS' FLOWER and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmont Ave., at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

7TH MO. 16. — QUAKERTOWN YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Penrose Roberts.

7TH MO. 19.—A MEETING AT HAVERFORD, Pa., at 3 p. m., appointed by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit smaller branches.

7TH MO. 21. — WESTERN QUARTERLY Meeting, at London Grove, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 11 a. m.

7TH MO. 23.—CALN QUARTERLY MEETING, at East Caln, Pa., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day, at 10 a. m.

7TH MO. 25.—WESTBURY QUARTERLY Meeting, at Westbury, N. Y., at 10.30 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 3 p. m.

THE FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION acknowledges receipt of the following additional contributions to the Children's County Week Association:

Emily T. Longstreth, . . . $5.00
Previously reported, . . . 15.00

Amount, . . . $20.00

JOHN COMLY, Supt.

Seventh month 6th, 1903.

ARMSTRONG & McKELTY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BATMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN }
ATLANTIC }
BRADLEY }
BROOKLYN } New York.
JEWETT }
ULSTER }
UNION }
SOUTHERN } Chicago.
SHIPMAN }
COLLIER }
MISSOURI } St. Louis.
RED SEAL }
SOUTHERN }
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

YOU may have had occasion to use White Lead in one, two, three or five pound cans and found it unsatisfactory.

If so, it was because it was not Pure White Lead, but some Mixture of Zinc and Barytes (principally Barytes) labeled "White Lead." If you want Pure White Lead be sure the package bears one of the brands named in the list.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

How the world loves its children heroes, the little folks who have Spartan blood in their veins, and set examples of courage and patience that might well serve their elders.

There is little Seymour Smith, a New York 9-year-old, and the son of a doctor. Seymour was playing "tag" when he was knocked down by a truck which passed over his right leg, crushing it below the knee.

Of course, we older folks know that cries and groans do not lessen pain. They were waste effort and very annoying.

But what is it that made a baby of nine wink back his tears as he was laid in a blanket, and say: "It is all right, Mr. Policeman; please don't mind me. I won't cry."

At the hospital he would not take ether, and when he saw the tears rolling down his father's cheeks he said: "Tell them to go ahead, papa, and don't cry. I won't mind if I have to stay away from school."

The boy is going to get well. The doctors have done all they can and old Mother Nature is now taking care of the lad.

There are men who will go for months with aching teeth, because they are afraid of the pain the dentist will inflict. There are men who grunt and groan about a thousand ills that creep into their daily lives.

And it is left for a boy to wince back the tears and say: "Don't mind me, Mr. Policeman, I won't cry."

All of those who read this little comment will be glad that Seymour Smith is to be a whole boy, sound and strong, one of these days.

He is a benefactor in a way, for he has taught a lesson of courage.—[Baptist Commonwealth.]

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal.
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

PURE FOOD skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other flours. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

PLEASE MENTION FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Men's Jean Drawers

MORE than six hundred thousand pairs of the celebrated Pepperell B. V. D. Jean Drawers are sold every year at 50c a pair. They are the best jean drawers in the market; and the manufacturers continually strive to make them still better. We have already sold nearly twenty thousand pairs of this make this season; and our price for them is 39c a pair instead of 50c. We have a full line of sizes; with elastic web or faced ankle, and made to button or tie.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CITIZEN SHAWERS, Inc.) 536 1/2 Media St., Philadelphia

United Security

Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
Assistant Treasurer.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 49 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope), 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy a cent. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

 All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Cleansing of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.
"The reading of which is a spiritual feast."—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.11.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Doukchobers. By Joseph Ekinston. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated. $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ASSIGNOR, AND RECEIVER.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
E. B. MORRIS, President.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: July 24th, August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on July 24th, August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a.m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a.m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chapman will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

Stint, stint, stint! Save, save, save!

What for?

While you are answering this question, consider whether less saving, united with a policy of life insurance, will be more conducive to the happiness of your family and yourself. Consult the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,

921-35 Chestnut St.

Martha J. Warner

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETTI.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.

STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

G. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Up-town office, 308 and 309 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P.
FURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE

GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, SEVENTH MONTH 18, 1903.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 20-6 ($2.10 to $6.60) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

WALTON & FRENCH

Ocean view unexcelled. Bell Phone No. 26
Will remain OPEN throughout the year

GRACE VILLA

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Appointments first-class. Near ocean and bay.
MRS. CLARA L. FLITCRAFT,
408 Central Avenue.

The Bartram,

Accommodates
100 guests.

WILDWOOD, N. J.

Pleasantly situated within 200 feet of beach. Especial attention given to the menu.

J ALFRED BARTRAM, Owner and Manager.

The Marlborough.

Kept by Friends.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

Under entirely new management. One block from bathing grounds and hot sea baths. For particulars Address SAMUEL B. LIPPINCOTT,

17 Sea View Avenue.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particulars address

SARAH J. PAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst,

Second Beach
from Beach.

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water bath. Home comforts
K E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,

Atlantic City, N. J.

Steam bath, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.
809 Master Street, Philad'a., Pa.

WANTED.—WORKING HOUSEKEEPER IN family of two. Must be good cook and manager. Reply stating wages and reference to No. 5, this Office.

WANTED.—BY NINTH MONTH 187, RELIABLE woman for general housework for family of two. Quiet home and fair wages. Address Box 191, Risio Sun, Md.

WANTED.—YOUNG MAN OR YOUTH AS working companion poultry industry. Unexceptional character; excellent opportunity. Box 31, Watchung, N. J.

WANTED.—CARE OF SEMI INVALID, CAN give massage, or as housekeeper, care of linen room. Box 105, Charmian, Pa.

WANTED.—AT FRIENDS' ACADEMY, Locust Valley, L. I., a practical housekeeper. Address Amy Willets, Jericho, L. I., N. Y.

WANTED.—A TEACHER FOR A FRIENDS' primary school near Philadelphia. Apply to Louis E. Ambler, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—BOARD BY A GENTLEMAN BY Ninth month 1st. Central location. Where there are but few boarders. Friends' family preferred. Address No. 1, this Office.

WANTED.—POSITION AS HOUSEKEEPER or matron in institution, boarding-school, boarding-house or apartment-house. Address V. H. this Office.

WANTED.—BOARDERS FOR THE SUMMER in country. Friends' Family. Modern conveniences. Apply early. Box 125, Woodstown, N. J.

TUTORING.—SCIENCE, MATHEMATICS, English. B. T. Baldwin, A. M. (Harvard). Address West Chester, Pa.

BOARD WANTED.—EITHER FULL BOARD or furnished rooms, for family of four adults. Beginning Ninth month 1st. West Philadelphia and private family preferred. Write fully. Reference if desired. T. S. Burr, Plainfield, N. J.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st, N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

Established 1860 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

TO CALIFORNIA, 40 DAYS, $280.

Leave Reading Terminal Eighth month 18th, 8.30 a. m. First-class Pullman service. St. Louis, Grand Cañon of Arizona, Pasadena, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Del Monte, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, and home by Canadian Pacific R. R. Address

REBECCA B. NICHOLSON,
Box 444, Trenton, N. J.

It's Easier to get the First Order

than to keep a customer coming year in, year out. Does it mean anything to you that we have many customers who were with us when we started in business?

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

The past for thee contains no bitter fountain,—
Thou hast no onward mission to fulfill;
And I would learn from thee, O silent mountain,
All things enduring, to be tranquil still!
—Jane Taylor Worthington.

ONE of the pleasant features at Buck Hill is the children's classes in the morning, conducted by Annie Hillborn, a trained kindergarten. All the little folks of twelve or less are gathered together for drawing, painting, nature study, stories, etc., etc. There is more play than work in the gathering, but it gives the little folks something definite to look forward to and it affords them pleasure to feel they are doing something. Between tea time and bed time there is another meeting of the Sunshine Club, as the children call themselves, for a quiet story.

Professor George H. Nutt has organized several expeditions for the older boys and is with them walking, fishing, boating and swimming in Glenmere.

It is our aim to make Buck Hill a quiet, happy, safe place for children and young people. All it needs is intelligent direction and plenty of outlets for youthful activity and vigor.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pocono Pines Assembly

AND

Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing, 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager,

Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

The Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS

Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philad'a

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
Friends' Intelligencer Association,
 (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each tea subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.

No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
 N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
 *• TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-35.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXIX.	449
POETRY: A PRAYER.	449
FIRST-DAY SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT BUCK HILL FALLS.	449
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson.—Continued (Illustration).	451
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
Antioch.	453
EDITORIAL:
Humility or Self-adjustment.	454
Free Tuition in Friends' Schools.	454
Notes.	455
DEATHS.	456
SOCIETY NOTES.	457
THREE DAYS AT BUCK HILL FALLS.	457
BEREA COLLEGE.	458
FIRST-DAY SCHOOL ASSEMBLY EVENING ENTERTAINMENTS.	460
EDUCATIONAL.	460
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	461
LITERARY NOTES.	461
POETRY: An Eighth Birthday; The Happiest Heart; Buck Hill in Retrospect.	461, 462
THE RACE PROBLEM.	462
RURAL DELIVERY.	463
MISCELLANY: A Vacation for Mother; Talking it Over.	463
CURRENT EVENTS.	463
NEWS NOTES.	464
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	464

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
 (Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
 ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
 CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
 619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
 ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
 929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
 Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
 Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 OFFICES: 1663 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
 Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
 325 SWANSON STREET, NONAKISTOWN, PENNA.
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
 Practising in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shourds, 2222 Wallace Street.
 Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds. Jobbing attended to.
 CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
 1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
 Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

EDWARD T. BLACK
 (S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
 The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
 616 Sansom Street. Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis. LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
 REAL ESTATE.
 Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
 Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
 Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
 Girard Building and
 216 W. Coulter St.
 Telephones.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
 New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
 19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $3.50.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Y. F. A. Building,
 140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
 FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
 Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
 Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
 $2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk,
 'Phone 1-33-55.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
 PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
 ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }
 Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
 JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
 George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to GEORGE E. M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
 Or, Jenkintown, Pa.
 CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y., Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City. For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
 Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address
 A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
 Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

(Formerly SWARTHMORE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.)

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars, address
 ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
 Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambller, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
 and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 99-38 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, SEVENTH MONTH 18, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 29.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXIX.

No voice, however feeble, lifted up for truth, ever dies amidst the confused noises of time.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

From the Scottish Reformers.

A PRAYER.

O MASTER, let me walk with thee
In lowly paths of service free;
Tell me thy secret; help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care.

Help me the slow of heart to move
By some clear, winning word of love;
Teach me the wayward feet to stay,
And guide them in the homeward way.

Teach me thy patience; still with thee
In closer, dearer company,
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong,
In trust that triumphs over wrong.

—Washington Gladden.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT BUCK HILL FALLS.

(Concluded from last week.)

The Assembly opened Second-day morning, Sixth month 29th, with a Bible reading by John Carver.

Joseph Walton introduced the subject of

THE USE OF THE BIBLE.

He advised that teachers acquaint themselves with the writings of early Friends,—George Fox, William Penn, Robert Barclay and others, that they may be aided in reaching a wise understanding of the spiritual truths contained in the Scriptures. He quoted from these writings to show the esteem in which they held these writings as valuable aids leading to Christ. The whole thought of this lesson was to establish the doctrine of immediate revelation.

Jesse H. Holmes called the attention of teachers to the fact that the hardest part of First-day school teaching is dealing with

THE PERIOD OF ADOLESCENCE.

This he called the "storm and stress period," when to the youth nothing seems fixed, all is doubt and uncertainty, and he feels himself drifting and alone. It is a critical and awful period. The teacher must then be a co worker with the Creator to aid in bringing cosmos out of chaos and in developing moral and spiritual insight. It is a time of mighty wrestling in the soul, the period when physical changes are transpiring of the most difficult and dangerous character. It is a period in which the tenderest sympathy, the profoundest wisdom and the greatest patience are required of the teacher. The avoidance of all emotional states in the nature of sudden conversions was most earnestly recommended, as such are likely to prove only a temporary excitement.

The right kind of subject matter for

ADULT CLASSES

was also considered and the speaker advised that questions of practical duty, as bearing upon citizenship, be freely discussed as an important part of our religious life.

Cora Haviland Carver recommended

THE JUDICIOUS USE OF MYTHS.

The Norse myths are to be preferred to the Greek or Roman. They reproduce in the mind of the child something of the experience of the race. Tell the boys stories, not of the great heroes in war, but rather of the men who have done noble deeds for humanity. As a text-book she recommended Baldwin's "Fifty Famous Stories Retold."

On Third-day morning Maud Rice read from the Scripture.

Annie Hillborn continued her work in a paper on GOOD THE SPIRIT.

She said our first conception of God is anthropomorphic. It matters little whether or not we think of him as a man. We must teach him through his works. A child can understand that some of the most precious things we have we cannot see with our eyes. She thought Santa Claus illusions should not be too long continued. Much valuable discussion followed involving the subject of teaching children to pray.

Jesse H. Holmes spoke on

BIBLE TEACHING.

He used the Assembly much as a school, and employed the method of interrogation. The use of the Bible for teaching in the First-day school was very thoroughly discussed. The speaker thought the Bible is more effective than any other book for teaching religious truth, and illustrated by the story of Abraham. All the story shows the pressure towards right. He also used the story of Jephthah. These stories show that we are the servants of the "Inner Must." The most evil thing of all is thwarting the "Inner Must."

EARLY FRIENDS AND THE SCRIPTURES.

Joseph S. Walton took up the subject of the Bible which he dropped yesterday. He defined some points as understood by George Fox and Robert Barclay, calling upon members of the Assembly to read passages. It was not what early Friends enunciated that caused persecution, but what they denied. The same may be said of the division in our own body. George Fox valued the Scriptures but held that above all writings was the Divine Illumination, which is the maker of the "Scriptures of Truth."

This was a fundamental doctrine of William Penn, Robert Barclay, and other early Friends.

On Fourth-day morning Arthur Jackson read the opening chapter.

Cora Haviland Carver spoke of BIBLE STORIES IN THE FIRST-DAY SCHOOL.

Belief is largely the offspring of tradition and environment. It is a difficult thing to teach the Scriptures. We must first understand them ourselves, then tell the story and let the child make the application. These stories must be wisely selected, as many of them are beyond the child's grasp. The lesson, to be effective, must come within the range of the child's experience. Give him stories in accord with that which is highest and best in him. If you show pictures let the pictures be true. Keep your sub-facts in harmony with your central thought. Be a little child yourself for the time. She illustrated by reading the story of Job,—a beautiful story illustrating the conquering of difficulties.

EXPRESSIONS OF EARLY FRIENDS.

Joseph S. Walton said that the fathers of our Society were young men and very zealous, and inclined to condemn sin; hence they used the word Light rather than Love,—Light as revealing sin. A century later Friends spoke more of Divine Love as the Christ spirit. The speaker defined many words as used by Fox, Penn and Barclay; such words as atonement, ransom, blood of Christ, etc.

Jesse H. Holmes took up the subject of

THE PROPHETS.

and called upon members of the Assembly to read certain passages of the Bible to illustrate their moral courage. They were men who spake not of themselves, but delivered the messages of God. Their authority was above the king because it had the sanction of righteousness. It is worth while to teach our children to be familiar with the character and acts of these truly heroic men. The speaker pronounced it a mistake to have for children and for the adult classes, and very strongly objected to the use by Friends of the "International Lessons," as they inculcate doctrines which to us are not true.

UNIFORM LESSONS

On Fifth-day morning Anna Janney Lippincott gave the Scripture reading.

Alfred Barr, a Presbyterian minister, of Detroit, Mich., gave a very interesting account of his

MISSION WORK AMONG BOYS

of the very worst environment in his city. He emphasized the importance of the teacher's intimate acquaintance with the boy to do effective work. He recommended for the use of teachers and parents a little book called "The Boy Problem," by Dr. Forback. He urged keeping a spiritual aim in view, especially during the period of adolescence. The gang spirit is very strong among the boys, and we should utilize it by encouraging what may be called the self-developing club, in which the boys are the chief managers. He would make a point of giving them a little manual training, keeping them busy. The effect of the work on the homes of the boys is wonderful for good.

Joseph S. Walton thought the hearty co-operation of workers in this field among the different religious organizations would be very beneficial.

DOCTRINE OF EARLY FRIENDS.

He then continued his historical researches, explaining in particular the doctrines of our society as held by William Penn and other early Friends, particularly their conception of the atonement and of the Divinity of Jesus.

Jesse H. Holmes talked of

"THE LAW"

as give in the ten commandments. He showed by Bible references that when later prophets came upon the stage of action they modified and adapted the law to the newer revealings of Truth. He thought we must work towards a law each to himself.

CLASSIFICATION FOR FIRST-DAY SCHOOLS.

Mary Whitson was called on for a report of a Committee of Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting to propose a system classification for the First-day schools and the character of the lessons best adapted to the several classes. This report was read and referred to a small committee to consider and report to the Assembly at its next session.

Elizabeth Lloyd read the opening chapter on Sixth-day morning.

Jesse H. Holmes talked of the best way of teaching

THE BIBLE IN THE FIRST-DAY SCHOOL.

The Bible is not so arranged as to be best taught by going straight through it. He recommended a guide, or guides, and mentioned the following as very good: Moulton's "Introductory Study of the Bible," Gladden's "Who Wrote the Bible?" Kent's "Historical Series," especially Rhees' "Life of Jesus," and "Riggs on the New Testament." Essential qualities of the teacher are moral and mental courage.

There is no such thing as a dangerous question if one wants the truth. The proper manner of presenting truth is of importance. As to the life and character of Jesus our generation has changed from the old position. Humanity involves divinity. The theory that the birth of Jesus was miraculous is untenable and must be abandoned. Righteousness, honesty, straight-forwardness is above all other things. Teachers of the First-day school, as a company of apostles, must teach the truth. William P. Bancroft spoke earnestly on the duty of speaking the truth and quoted this passage that once greatly impressed him "Give your unqualified assent to no proposition, the truth of which is not so evident that it cannot be doubted." George H. Nutt, of the George School, spoke of the exaggerated importance given to the study of Greek and Roman history, literature and art, while the Hebrew, from which our own moral and religious life is derived, is almost entirely neglected. He urged that instead of occasionally reading a chapter we make an intelligent and persevering study of the Bible. Take away all the superstitious reverence from it and study it from Abraham to Christ. We will thus awaken a new interest in it. Bring out in the classes the idea of growth. Knowledge will help us to reconcile many seeming inconsistencies in the Bible.

The Committee on

GRADES AND LESSONS

made its report, which was approved and directed to be forwarded to the meeting of the Central Committee at Salem, Ohio.

Joseph S. Walton closed his labors in teaching historically the views of early Friends, especially of Fox, Penn and Barclay. After many heart-felt expressions of gratitude for the privileges of deep and, we trust, lasting instruction, which during the sessions of the Assembly we have enjoyed together in a sweet and prayerful spirit, the meeting closed.

H. S. K.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Continued from last week)

ALTHOUGH little has been said thus far concerning the theological opinions of John Jackson, it has been evident to those who read between the lines that his teachings were in advance of his times. The "higher criticism" was then unknown, and those who were not willing to accept the Bible in its entirety were considered by many of the weighty members of the meeting as being "unsound in word and doctrine." In 1846 he published a pamphlet entitled "Peace and War," which appears to be in entire accord with the views now advocated in the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER and Friends' lesson leaves, but at the time of its publication it was considered dangerous because it denied that God had commanded the Israelites to make war upon their fellow men. The chapter entitled "War Not Sanctioned by Divine Authority" concludes as follows:

"As every tree is known by its fruit, so are the attributes of Deity made manifest by the effects which proceed from them; and until we know that benevolence produces malignity and hostility toward our race, that love begets hatred, anger, malice and revenge, that cruelty is the offspring of mercy, we have no evidence that the practice of war ever was, or ever can be consistent with the Divine will."

In a conversation with Alice Pearson, of Darby, she said to him, "Can thee give a reason for the faith that is in thee?" In reply to this question he wrote her a long letter covering perhaps ten pages of foolscap. The views therein contained are similar to those found in his published sermons and writings, but are of especial interest because they were written to a sympathizing friend. The letter is too long to reproduce in full, but some passages will be quoted exactly and of others the substance will be given.

"When I view my fellow-creatures as the offspring of one common Father, created for the same common purpose and bound for the same eternity, I consider that inasmuch as the way of life and salvation which the Universal Father hath Himself ordained, is a plain and simple way and adequate to the end it proposes to effect, it must be in consequence of a deviation from that way that all these unhappy differences of opinion on the subject of religion have their origin."

The letter then states that God's laws are unchangeable and belief in God essential; that man was created perfect in his nature, with a material body, a natural or animal spirit and an immortal soul. The soul, the immediate gift of the Creator, is alone capable of approaching the Divine communion. Man's present state is a state of probation. The power or light of Christ in the soul is the "word of God that was in the beginning with God"; if followed and obeyed it preserves from sin and becomes a saviour. Sin is a wall between man and his Maker.

"It was this [word of God] that spoke to Adam in the garden, that enabled Enoch to walk with God, and sealed the promise unto Abraham. It was the rock that followed Israel, the voice of the Lord that instructed Samuel in Shiloh, the still small voice that spoke to Elijah, and the word of the Lord that came unto the prophet of old. . . . It lost nothing of its power by being revealed in the apostles; neither can its character be altered by being manifest in our flesh for the gracious purpose of blessing us by turning every one of us from our iniquities."

Religion, the letter says, consists of inward and spiritual operations, not words and theories, and is known by its fruits. God uses spiritual weapons to annihilate our vices, and a changed condition is evidence of redemption. Jesus died unto sin,—that is, he wholly resisted any presentation of evil; and we are made alive through Christ by becoming partakers of his nature.

"I do conscientiously dissent from the doctrine which ascribes the salvation of man to the outward crucifixion and death of Jesus of Nazareth. I could as readily subscribe to the doctrines of the Koran as to believe that the unparalleled wickedness of the Jews in rejecting the promised Messiah ever washed away a single sin or became the procuring cause of man's redemption."

After stating his belief that Jesus was a perfect teacher of the way of salvation, he adds: "If it be true that the outward death upon the cross were necessary to reconcile us to God, we must conclude that if the Jews had received the Messiah and embraced his doctrine, as Moses had commanded them, mankind would have been deprived of all the benefits resulting from his crucifixion." . . .

"Patience under suffering, reliance upon God in the hour of danger, forgiveness of injuries, love for his enemies, mark the character of the Prince of Peace, and furnish to all his followers a pattern ever worthy to be imitated. Truly it may be said of him, 'He has left us an example that we should follow in his steps.'"

In one of John Jackson's books on astronomy, Mary A. Pancoast found a paper marked on the back, "Theology, Letter 10," which appears to have been part of a correspondence. There is nothing to show to whom it was addressed, but this does not detract from the value of its contents, some passages of which are here appended:

"It may not be openly avowed that 'reason is of unlawful use in religion,' but the belief is tacitly acted on, and, while that is the case, there is no possible test to which to subject the Bible and its doctrines. It is a remarkable fact that the authenticity of the Bible is sustained by human testimony only—the Word of God depending upon the word of man for its genuineness.

“The belief that the Bible is the Word of God involves this absurdity, that the Creator has not, or does not, use a language in which to convey His sentiments which is understood alike by all. Words, sonuds, require a material medium, spiritual communications do not; hence the Word of God can neither be written nor spoken, for God is a spirit. The word of God must be immaterial—an impression—a trans- fusion of the mind. . . . So long as the Bible is believed to contain the whole counsel of God, and that there is no other medium of communication, there can be no accession of religious knowledge, and religion must remain stationary or become retro- grade. . . .

DR. GEORGE TRUMAN AND GEORGE S. TRUMAN.
Dr. George Truman accompanied John Jackson to the West Indies. His nephew, George S. Truman, had the care of the Sharon farm.

“The clergy ought not to be denounced generally; many of them are honest and sincere, but they act on a vitiated system. ‘The future, alike unknown to the peasant and the prelate,’ makes ‘cowards of us all,’ and gives force to the counsels of those who assume to have authority to direct the sojourners here to the mansions of future rest. . . .

“The commandments, the Magna Charta of the Jews, were engraved on a material substance, and required an array of priests and sacrifices to keep them in remembrance. Whereas Christ impressed his doctrines on the spirit, and as priests and expounders were unnecessary he appointed none. To quote from myself on another occasion, ‘The institutes of Moses were calculated to make men barbarians, but the doctrines of Christ have for their object to make angels of men.’”

A letter recently received from a former Sharon pupil tells of a little incident that occurred at the time John Jackson's preaching was agitating the conservative element of our Society. The writer says:

“He had been seeking the truth and finding it as it had been revealed to him, he was found willing and faithful in proclaiming it. It was the spirit and not the letter of the Bible he was preaching, the essentials not the non-essentials he was upholding. The voice of God teaching his children himself was his most earnest message. It was more important for us to emulate the life and teachings of Jesus than to believe in any miracle attending his birth.

“The agitation in the Society caused by his fear- lessly outspoken word was great. Dimmed by prejudice, this beautiful character, outside of his home life, was dimly understood, whilst to his pupils he seemed almost a saint. It was at about this time (somewhere in the '50s) that as John Jackson was going out of a store on Market Street, a shower was approaching, and the rain was beginning to fall. John stood hesitating. It so happened that a plain Friend who was passing by, and who was so fortunate as to have an umbrella, noticing the dilemma of another Friend, or, possibly, only of a brother man, invited John to take shelter under his umbrella, and he gladly accepted the invitation.

“They were strangers to each other, and, as they walked several squares together, the conversation drifted to the preaching of John Jackson. The Friend with the umbrella had never heard him; all that he knew of his sermons had come through others, yet he was very bitter in his denunciations of his preaching. The Friend whom he was sheltering expressed the warmest sympathy with said sermons. At parting John Jackson thanked the Friend most cordially for his sheltered hospitality, told him who he was, and gave him a hearty invitation to visit him at his home at Sharon, where he would be happy to continue the conversation. The relator of this incident was not able to say whether or not the conversation was ever renewed.”

A member of Darby Monthly Meeting has written: “I am thankful I lived in the same age, that I was permitted to sit under his ministry and enjoy his society. I am indebted to him for much I received in my boyhood days. His example is often before me; the remembrance of his loving spirit seems to uphold me. He was one who could see justice and purity as realities. He would believe in virtue and truth if all mankind beside himself disbelieved it; he would be faithful to right living though all others did wrong. He was far in advance of many of the members of Society at that time in his advocacy of the truth, either in his preaching or his writings, which are appreciated in this age, particularly by the younger members of the Society of Friends.

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

(To be continued.)

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 26.

ANTIOCH.

GOLDEN TEXT.—But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him forth out of the prison.—Acts, xii., 17.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xi., 19-27; Acts, xiii., 1-12.

MANY points in the chronology of the early Church cannot be minutely determined. Paul's conversion probably took place between 31 and 33 A.D. Three years later he returned to Tarsus, where he remained for seven to ten years. The dispersion of the disciples and the founding of churches in Phœnicia, Cyprus, Antioch, etc., took place soon after the death of Stephen, which occurred only a short time prior to Paul's conversion.

Our interest turns now to the church at Antioch. Antioch was the residence of a Roman governor. Its population, aside from officials, was mainly Greeks and Orientals. It was a luxurious, frivolous city, given over to amusement, partisan strife and superstition. Its ethical standards were of the lowest—probably no population was ever more abandoned to vice.

While most of the disciples of the dispersion spoke the word "to none save Jews," at Antioch a more liberal policy prevailed. Some of the traveling evangelists, "men of Cyprus and Cyrene, when they came to Antioch, spake unto the Greeks also." "And the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number that believed turned unto the Lord" (Acts, xi., 20, 21). On hearing of the prosperous growth of the Christian group at Antioch the mother church at Jerusalem sent Barnabas to look into this growth and report. We have only a few glimpses of Barnabas; but these show him always a kindly, unselfish, forbearing man. He was liberal of his goods (Acts, iv., 36, 37); he received and trusted Paul when the others of Jerusalem doubted him (Acts, ix., 27); going up to Antioch from Jerusalem to meet the rather questionable converts of the new church he had ready for them at once the right hand of cordial fellowship. When dissension finally arose between him and Paul (Acts, xv., 39), it was because he wished to forgive a weaker brother while Paul would not. Altogether he seems a kind of royal man: "a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith." Barnabas saw at once the greatness of the field at Antioch, and, feeling the need for more laborers, he sent to Tarsus for Paul.

We can hardly doubt that Paul had been busy with mission work at and about Tarsus; yet it is curious that no fruit of these years of labor is known to us. It is possible that, discouraged by his reception at Jerusalem, he had been checked in his zeal of evangelism; but this does not seem to be in keeping with his strong, independent nature. In Galatians he says (i., 21), "Then came I into the regions of Syria and Cilicia." We may perhaps assume that he was occupied here in preaching his gospel. Yet it may be that he had not yet reached a clear view of its vastness and felt himself bound to conform to Jewish law and Jewish prejudice. If he sought to make Christianity a sect of Judaism, we need not be surprised at lack of appreciable results. However this may be, at Antioch he found himself in an atmosphere of life and freedom. His early friendship with Barnabas made his way easy. The conditions and opportunities stimulated all that was best in his powers. "It came to pass, that even for a whole year they were gathered together with the church, and taught much people." This was the year 43 A.D. A prophecy of famine is here recorded (Acts, xi., 27-30), and its fulfillment perhaps three years later. The name "Christian" originated in Antioch. At first it was a scoffing nickname applied to the followers of Jesus by outsiders, just as was the word "Quaker" in our early history. But, as also in our case, the word gradually grew into use by the Church itself, until a generation or so later it came to be in wholly good standing.

Herod Agrippa, mentioned in the twelfth chapter of Acts, was king of Judah—and indeed of a broad extent of territory beyond it—from 41 to 44 A.D. He was a grandson of Herod the Great and his favorite wife, Mariamne, of the old line of the Maccabees. In addition to his descent from the royal Jewish line, he was a faithful servant of the law, and he held the favor of the Roman masters. His reign was therefore for the Jews "a golden day." Josephus says of him, "He loved to live continually in Jerusalem, and was careful in the observance of the laws." "He kept himself entirely pure; nor did any day pass over his head without its appointed sacrifice." (See Riggs's "Maccabean and Roman Periods.") It may be said of him that his care with regard to Jewish customs and prejudices was rather due to policy than to conviction, for outside of his own domains "he was a patron of Greek culture." "He erected in the city of Berytus a theater, an amphitheater, and thoroughly enjoyed Greek games whenever he felt that it was prudent to attend." (Riggs). He retained popularity with all Jewish parties except the extreme zealots. His persecution of the Christians was a part of his Jewish policy. James, the brother of John, was executed, and Peter was imprisoned. The story of Peter's release by miracle introduces us also to "John, whose surname was Mark," probably the author of the second Gospel (Acts, xii., 12). In 44 A.D., in the height of his success and glory, Herod was suddenly smitten with death. Judea became again a Roman province, to be once more plundered and persecuted by unfriendly and ignorant rulers into rebellion and final destruction.

It was perhaps not long after this that Paul and Barnabas went up to Jerusalem with the contributions for the Judean famine fund (Acts, xi., 27-30 and xii., 25). This is one of the matters concerning which there is much discussion. Was it once or twice that Paul took contributions to Jerusalem? The controversy needs not concern us here. Of some interest, however, is the fact as stated, that on their return from Jerusalem they were accompanied by "John, whose surname was Mark," and who was afterward to become a fellow traveler in mission work.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, SEVENTH MONTH 18, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

HUMILITY OR SELF-ADJUSTMENT

JOHN WESLEY put poverty of spirit at the very "foundation of all" in the Christian character and perhaps it is no mere chance that has placed "Blessed are the poor in spirit" the first among the sayings of Jesus brought together in the Fifth Chapter of Matthew as the "Sermon on the Mount." But how long it is taking us to get at the real meaning of this being "poor in spirit," and how far we are from working it into our lives and making it a real part of our national or our individual Christianity! It is very hard for us to get away from the feeling that, after all, he is blessed, more or less, who exalts himself or, in some way, gets exalted. In these latter days, for instance, we have had simplicity preached to us with such sincerity and power that we could not but become its devotees, and straightway we make "the simple life" a fad. We seek simplicity with ostentation. There is no bringing down this incorrigible generation.

Humility, the word, has been woefully abused. Men have debased themselves and called it being humble; they have put on a mask of humility over a life of arrogance and oppression. Just as the word "meekness" has been brought into some disrepute because it has too often been used as synonymous with inane, and, on the other hand, because many have passed for meek who had no other qualification than that they "possessed the earth"; so humility is so good a thing that it has inevitably been much imitated, and we may even have to use another word for the genuine article. But whatever happens to the word the thing itself is one of the very foundation stones of true character.

Wesley, again, says, "The humble are those who know themselves." Phillips Brooks, said, "The true way to be humble is, not to stoop until you are smaller than yourself, but to stand at your real height against some higher nature that shall show you what the real smallness of your greatest greatness is." Ernest Crosby in his last book of verse, "Swords and Plowshares," has some lines in Whitman style on "Feeling Big" which end with these words:

"There is only one satisfying way of feeling big.
Make yourself a face—a facet—of the universe and you will feel the only real Bigness."

So that humility is not so much that you should be "humble" as that you should be yourself; that you should fit into your place in the universe, in your neighborhood and in all the relations with those with whom you come in contact in daily life. Humility is sound self-adjustment. Undue regard for and assertion of self is sure to crop out at times, perhaps pretty often, but this is a sign of health rather than otherwise; only we must never let this stand between us and others. On reflection we must always be able to put self back into the niche in which he belongs.

FREE TUITION IN FRIENDS' SCHOOLS.

IN the Friends' School Conference at the time of London Yearly Meeting a concern was expressed by James E. Clark, H. Sefton-Jones and a number of others that Friends should "aim at making the whole of our own education as nearly as might be free." This concern was felt especially with those places in mind where Friends are scattered and where it is a "most pressing question as to how the children should be brought up as Friends." It is a concern that is felt also amongst us and to which earnest expression has been given recently in one of our yearly meetings, and frequently among and in behalf of those of our Friends who live at a distance from Friends' schools, all of which are within a narrow strip along the Atlantic sea-board. One could not attend the recent commencements at Swarthmore, the George School, and other of our schools, noting the equipment these schools are actually giving for earnest and effective work in making our testimonies tell in the world, without deep regret in thinking of many neighborhoods of Friends that are never represented among these graduates and students. We must acknowledge that our educational facilities are available only to those who are fairly well-to-do and to a limited number who are "helped." We must acknowledge this frankly and set ourselves to make it otherwise.

Some of our young people go to the free State universities and so get access to the very best educational facilities, but have not the opportunity of keeping in touch with Friends, and too often they cease altogether, or to a very great extent, to be interested in the work that Friends have to do in the world. A far larger proportion do not get a modern education at all. Of these, some attend schools of a cheap order, business "colleges," denominational colleges of meagre equipment and more or less stifling atmosphere theologically, or private normal "universities," and in this way get turned aside from any truly higher education, or at least waste a great deal of valuable time in floundering around before getting started on the right track.

The time has come when we must make it a point not only to have a first-class college and first-class schools, but also to interest every young person over whom we have influence in obtaining the very best education, and also provide the very best educational facilities, not merely for some but for all. We may feel we are doing all we can now, and that it is hard enough to raise the money for a professorship and for the endowment of Swarthmore, but we must remember that we shall not accomplish any more than we set out to accomplish. Besides, it is a fact that there are Friends who are deeply interested in education under Friendly influences and who would be ready to contribute toward making our educational facilities more generally available but are not now contributing.

THE President of Bowdoin College, William Dewitt Hyde, tells in The Outlook (New York) how he has been trying to solve the question of the beliefs of college men. He asked sixty students, mostly seniors, to write out each one his individual creed. After reducing these papers to one composite creed President Hyde discussed it with the men, and after some modifications and concessions the following articles of belief were unanimously adopted by this college class of 1903. It is a good and comprehensive statement, and we need not fear for the religion of the future in the keeping of educated men, if such a belief as is here outlined forms the basis of their faith:

"I believe in one God, present in nature as law, in science as truth, in art as beauty, in history as justice, in society as sympathy, in conscience as duty, and supremely in Christ as our highest ideal.

"I believe in the Bible as the expression of God's will through man; in prayer as the devotion of man's will to God; and in the church as the fellowship of those who try to do God's will in the world.

"I believe in worship as the highest inspiration to work; in sacrifice as the price we must pay to make right what is wrong; in salvation as growth out of selfishness into service; in eternal life as the survival of what loves and is lovable in each individual; and in judgment as the obvious fact that the condition of the gentle, the generous, the modest, the pure and the true is always and everywhere preferable to that of the cruel, the sensual, the mean, the proud and the false."

GOVERNOR DURBIN, of Indiana, deserves credit for his determination to uphold the law in his State. After the disgraceful race riot in Evansville a judge ordered that the negro accused of crime, who was in prison in Jeffersonville beyond the reach of the mob, should be immediately brought to Evansville for trial. Governor Durban refused to sanction this order, and thus undoubtedly prevented another outbreak of mob violence. The Governor gave as his reason for overruling the judge's order that no matter how heinous a man's crime or how seemingly clear his guilt, he is entitled to a fair hearing, and this the prisoner cannot have until he has sufficiently recovered from his wounds to offer a defense; he adds, "No grounds should be given for the suspicion that even a guilty man has been railroaded to the gallows to satisfy public sentiment or that the civil authorities have been influenced to the determination of their course by the demonstration of the lawless." He desires that the man shall be tried as soon as his condition will permit and promises that the State will suppress any further attempts at rioting.

We agree with the editor of the Baltimore American that "every governor or every commonwealth in this land should not only give his sincere approval to the course of Governor Durbin, but should hold himself in readiness to act in a similar way should a mob threaten the peace of the commonwealth of which he has been chosen the chief executive."

WE have received the catalogue of the Philadelphia School for Nurses whose "Short Course in Nursing," is completed in one term of ten weeks. The school is now in its eighth year, and a few weeks ago graduated a class of 114 young women. Some of the most earnest philanthropic workers of Philadelphia are deeply interested in and staunch supporters of the enterprise. Clara Barton was the guest of honor at the recent commencement and made an address cordially endorsing the work of the school. No attempt, of course, can be made to turn out a trained nurse in ten weeks and the school must not be thought of as a rival of, or in the same class with the hospital training schools for nurses. What the school does do is to teach as much as may be possible of the art of nursing—"the heart of the art," as the catalogue puts it. As for the training, which after all is of the most vital importance, and is the part that makes it necessary for the hospital course to be two or three years in length, the young women are sent to get their training by actual experience among the poor, and after they have been graduated. This work among those who so greatly need such service is a good thing, and it is a good thing, too, for any girl to devote even as much as ten weeks, if she has not the opportunity of devoting more, to the serious study of home and sick-room hygiene. It is hardly likely that any earnest girl will stop her studies after having had this bare beginning of so interesting and important an art. The managers of the school ought to take the greatest pains, as no doubt they do, that their graduates do not go away with the feeling that they are trained nurses who may venture to take charge of any case, and that their too brief opportunity has given them any training for a moment to be compared with that of the trained nurse who has had her two or three years' practice under competent guidance. This being borne in mind the work of the Philadelphia School for Nurses may be most cordially endorsed by all who are interested in the widest possible spread of a knowledge of hygiene and proper care of the sick.

VICEROY CHANG CHIH TUNG has been ordered to revise the constitution of Peking University and frame a uniform system of provincial universities so that the system may be extended and perfected throughout the country.

The past month in Philadelphia was the coldest June ever recorded by the Weather Bureau. Only three days were clear, twenty were without any sunshine, and during the other seven the sun appeared at intervals. The 10th was a remarkable day, when 38 per cent. of the rain recorded for the month fell, accompanied by violent thunder-storms and hail. Nearly two inches of rain fell in a single hour, during which the darkness was intense.—[Public Ledger.]

DEATHS.

BETTS.—In Philadelphia, Third month 28th, 1903, Lucy Corse Betts, in the 52d year of her age.

She was the daughter of the late William and Deborah Sinclair Corse, of Turley Hall, near Baltimore, Maryland. In 1871, when she became the wife of Dr. B. F. Betts, of Philadelphia, her membership with Friends was transferred from Baltimore Meeting to the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia. From a child she was a regular and interested attendant of meeting, and her life was consistent with her profession.

L. A. W.

CULLEN.—In Camden, Delaware, Fourth month 30th, 1903, Hezekiah Cullen, in his 66th year; a member of Camden Monthly Meeting of Friends.

He was a devoted husband and father and will be greatly missed in his family, as well as in the community in which he lived. His life was one of self-sacrifice for the pleasure and happiness of others, and he was ever ready to do a charitable act when opportunity offered.

FOULKE.—William Webster Foulke, son of Anthony and Eleanor Webster Foulke, was born in Maryland, Sixth month 17th, 1825, and died at his home in Spring Grove, Seventh month 2d, 1903, aged 78 years.

In childhood he emigrated with his parents to Richmond, Indiana, where he has resided ever since. Largely through his own effort he received the best educational advantages which the locality afforded. In early manhood he was occupied in teaching, but for the greater part of his life was engaged in mercantile pursuits. In the year 1854 he was married to Mary E. Newman, who, with their two daughters, Elizabeth and Harriet, survive him. In the year 1864, and again in 1866, he was elected and served two terms as a representative of Wayne county in the Legislature of Indiana.

He was a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and was for many years a recorded and active minister; and while he had the good of his own Society most deeply at heart, his liberality induced a kindly interest in all other religious denominations. He was a man of exceptional purity of character, and led a life of high aims and earnest Christian effort. He was always a consistent advocate of temperance, and in the vigor of manhood was an active worker in that cause. He was inherently social and his out-going sympathies extended to all classes.

A devoted husband and loving father, he was tender and unselfish in his domestic relations, preferring the comfort of others to his own. The trials of life he accepted with cheerful submission, and was an example of patience and fortitude, serene and trustful to the end.

HAINES.—At Haddonfield, N. J., Seventh month 3d, 1903, George Woolman Haines, son of the late Granville W. and Hannah W. Haines, grandson of the late Benjamin and Hannah Warrington, and great-nephew of John Woolman, the Journalist, formerly of Mount Holly, N. J.; an esteemed member and elder of Mount Holly Preparative and Mount Holly Monthly Meeting of Friends. Interment at Woodlane burial-ground, near Mount Holly, N. J.

This dear relative appreciated his many blessings, and his bereaved ones have the blessed assurance that his end was peace.

JENKINS.—In Wyoming, Delaware, Third month 11th, 1903, Ellwood Jenkins, in the 57th year of his age; a member of Camden Monthly Meeting of Friends.

He was a son of the late Ezekiel and Patience M. Jenkins, of Camden, Delaware. His long illness was borne with patience, calmness and fortitude, trusting always, as he expressed himself, in the Divine Helper.

MCDOWELL.—At his home in Cincinnati, Ohio, Seventh month 4th, 1903, William H. McDowell.

He was the son of George McDowell and Amanda Matthews, and was born Seventh month 18th, 1842, in Doylestown township, Buck county, Pa. His mother was a member of Buckingham Monthly Meeting, and while his father did not hold membership he attended meeting and thus the early influences that surrounded William and moulded his character, both in the home and the community, were those of the Society of Friends. While he did not hold membership in the Society at the time of his death, his interest in its principles and progress was always keen and lively. He was a leading and active member of the Friends' Association of Cincinnati, attending its meetings as long as he was physically able to do so. He was afflicted for over ten years with an incurable malady, and for several years past his sufferings have been intense and almost constant. During this long period of affliction he was attended with most loving care by his devoted and faithful wife. A man of a high order of ability and highest Christian character, of unflinching courtesy and gentleness, his loss is keenly felt, and truly is the world very much the better for his having lived.

TURNER.—Near Betterton, Kent county, Maryland, Seventh month 7th, 1903, at the home of her son, Richard T. Turner, Jr., Elizabeth B. Turner, widow of the late Richard T. Turner, in her 78th year.

She was a devoted wife and mother, and a faithful and consistent Friend. While her husband lived their home was widely known for its generous hospitality, and Friends who visited the meetings composing Southern Quarter remember with pleasure the cordial welcome that was extended, accompanied always by "the feast of reason and the flow of soul."

E. L.

REBECCA JANE COWPERTHWAIT.

Rebecca Jane Cowperthwait, an account of whose death has been recently published in the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, was a member of the monthly meeting of Medford, Burlington county, New Jersey, and also for many years an approved minister. In her death we feel that a sweet spirit has entered its rest; patient, self-sacrificing, tender, the loved of many hearts, the idol of the devoted sister, who finds her only solace in the wisdom which ordered that the beautiful dead should first lay her burdens down, while to herself was left the pain. She has passed on to the higher life, and we who knew her so well and loved her so tenderly will sadly miss her.

For many months she had been unable to attend her meeting, or mingle in the social circle, but she patiently and willingly submitted, murmuring not, and greeting all cordially and with a bright smile, being ever comforted with the words of the blessed Jesus, "Be not afraid, be of good cheer, it is I." As the rose that has faded leaves its fragrance, so will the sweet and humble spirit of our friend leave its influence. Her removal severs another link in the chain that connects the present with the past generation. Her daily life has been an exemplary and practically a beneficent one, guarding well her words and closing in her heart the avenues that lead to harsh judgment and unkind criticisms. With a subdued and cheerful spirit she highly-prized and enjoyed the privilege of religious and social communion with her friends. She maintained a reverence for the vital principles held by our religious Society, being careful to mind the pointings of truth. Her public offerings were attended with solemnity and sweet savor of the Divine requisition. In this, and in all respects, her example will be missed and her memory will be cherished by a large circle of friends.

K. R. W.

A "JUST man armed" can doubtless keep the peace, as President Roosevelt says, but he must be careful lest his confidence in his arms drives out his sense of justice.

THE big tent in which the Christian Endeavor Convention was being held in Denver, Colorado, was blown over on the 13th, when more than 8,000 people were within it. One cool-headed man sprang to a chair and called on the people to hold up the canvass and poles, and thus many were saved from suffocation. No one was seriously injured.

THE Jewish Chautauqua Society is holding its seventh Summer Assembly at Atlantic City this week. The principal theme is "The Jewish Teacher and the Religious School." Among those taking part are President Kohler, of Cincinnati; Rabbis Hirsch, of Chicago, Simon, of Omaha, Roseman, of Baltimore, and Phillipson, of Cincinnati, all being of the Reformed order of Jews.

SOCIETY NOTES.

"A new appointment, it is stated, has just been thrust on Dr. J. Rendel Harris, viz., that of Professor of Theology at the University of Leyden." Dr. Harris is now in Armenia.

Robert and Esther H. Barnes obtained a minute at the Monthly Meeting of Purchase, West Chester county, N. Y., held Seventh month 8th, 1903, to attend Western and Caln Quarterly Meetings, Pa., and to attend and appoint meetings within the limits of Philadelphia and New York Yearly Meetings.

NORWAY.

The "Annual Meeting of Friends in Norway" was held recently at Stavanger. The commodious meeting-house was full both morning and afternoon, the attendance being 174, more than half of these not being Friends. Joseph G. Alexander, who attended the meeting and writes of it in The Friend (London) says, "I have once attended the Yearly Meeting of Friends in Denmark, often the Half-Yearly Meeting of Friends in the South of France, and have been among the German Friends at Mindon; but none of these other groups under the care of our Continental Committee can at all compare with that in Norway."

There were a number of visitors from England and three American Orthodox Friends from Alaska, but these by no means monopolized the vocal service. Two or three Norwegians spoke with manifest weight and power. The business was not extensive. There was an epistle from London Yearly Meeting. An English Friend was present to "enquire how the school at Stavanger, which has been maintained for so many years, with the help of an annual grant from England and an endowment by the late Endre Dahl, can be raised to a standard more suited to the increased exigencies of modern education in Norway."

Reports from the different meetings, which were made verbally, "did not convey a very bright account. There appeared to be little or nothing of an aggressive character attempted." Friends in Norway have no recorded ministers or appointed elders, "having been deterred from their recognition or appointment by the difficulties felt in a small community where, as the clerk frankly put it, they 'know one another too well.'"

ENGLAND.

"A movement is now on foot for securing, if possible, a new meeting house for Canterbury in an excellent situation which seems available in one of the main streets; and thus to bring Friends and their principles into somewhat greater prominence than can possibly be the case in Canterbury Lane, where, if somewhat snug, their light is rather hid under a bushel."—The Friend (London).

A suggestion that was approved by the English Quarterly Meeting of Westmoreland was "that the social feeling throughout the quarterly meeting might be increased by frequent informal visits, brought about, not by the appointment of any committee, but by personal invitation to stay over the week-end, giving more especially to young Friends, not with the view of bringing those only who might be likely to speak in the meetings, but rather with the object of increasing mutual personal knowledge among Friends." This might apply to our quarterly meetings as well.

Stoke Newington Meeting, London, has "decided to advertise our meetings for worship in the list of Sunday services published every Saturday in the Daily News. In the first instance this is understood to be an experiment for six months."

The joint commission of the Methodist Episcopal churches, North and South, has completed its ritual revision labors in Ocean Grove. The new order of prayer is practically the same as now used in the church North. It provides for kneeling in silent worship on entering the church. There are extensive changes in the catechism.

THREE DAYS AT BUCK HILL FALLS.

LEAVING Wilkes-Barre, where I had been attending the Pennsylvania Educational Association, in the middle of the afternoon, I arrived at the Buck Hill Falls Inn just in time for supper, and was cordially welcomed by a number of friends who were about to enter the dining-room. After doing full justice to the home-like meal I was escorted to the two tents which I was to share with three especial friends and found my trunk waiting for me on the tent porch. All my life I had had a desire to try "roughing it" in a tent, but camp life has been so modified at Buck Hill that the rough part is entirely eliminated. With two wire-spring cots, each supplied with mattress, two blankets and a comfortable, a bureau with looking-glass, containing four long and two short drawers, a washstand, clothes-tree and two camp chairs, there are no inconveniences worth mentioning. Even the pitchers are filled twice a day if one only remembers to put them out.

The first evening was spent in the sitting room of the Inn, which was as full as it would hold, for an entertainment had been improvised in honor of Joseph Walton and Jesse H. Holmes. The audience was in an appreciative mood, all the selections were well rendered, and everybody was happy. Then came the pleasure of threading the way to the tent by the light of the lantern, and a sound night's sleep undisturbed by heat or noise, breathing air laden with the perfumes of the woods.

The next morning was the closing session of the First-day School Assembly. The addresses of Dr. Holmes, Prof. Nutt and Dr. Walton were all very helpful, and the farewell words of Jesse H. Holmes, who left for Maine at 11 o'clock, with his concluding prayer that all might be spiritually uplifted and strengthened, caused many hearts to thrill with noble impulse.

In the afternoon three carriage-loads of us drove to Levis Falls, a beautiful cascade with a larger volume of water than the Buck Hill stream, but much less accessible. Several of the party scrambled to the foot of the falls and crossed the stream where they could get a better view, and two of them paid for their temerity by falling into the shallow water, incurring no more serious danger than wet clothing.

The morning of the "glorious Fourth" dawned bright and clear. It was just the right kind of a day to walk through woodland paths to the lake and watch the children, who had been driven to their picnic ground, sailing boats and wading in the stream. A part of the day was spent in visiting some of the cottages hidden among the trees, and sharing the delight of the cottagers, each one of whom has a better view, or a broader porch, or a quaint fireplace and stairway than any of the others.

In the afternoon all assembled on the back porch of the Inn to attend an auction sale of antiques and various trifles for the benefit of the Greenleaf Library. With Dr. Speakman as auctioneer and Harry Paiste as bidder-in, to say nothing of several other important functionaries, iron pots, perforated lanterns, several pairs of bellows, pitchers of various shapes and sizes, fans, necklaces, etc., were disposed of amid much merriment, the net receipts being something over fifty dollars.

In the evening all except the aged, the feeble, and the very young, gathered around the shore of the lake, which is some distance below the falls, to enjoy a mysterious entertainment the particulars of which had only been hinted at vaguely. Some were in the summer-house, some in and around the boat-house and some on the cliff, each party being hidden from the others by the darkness. When all had gathered, the megaphone (which is very useful in spreading notice of various events) enjoined silence, and presently a boat shot out over the water to the strains of music, with a string of Japanese lanterns extending from stem to stern, the reflection of which in the water doubled their beauty. When all had enjoyed this sight Charles F. Jenkins told the following Indian story, which may be considered as a large allowance of fiction founded on a small modicum of fact, but the audience was in an entirely receptive mood:

"Many, many years ago Leather Stocking and Chingatchook were ascending the ravine in which the lake is situated, and one of them left his rifle leaning against a hemlock tree a short distance below, while on hands and knees the two climbed along the ledges of rock to the head of the falls. Then they perceived that they were surrounded by their enemies, the Iroquois, so instead of retracing their steps they kept on toward the north and escaped through the Hunter's Notch. In course of time the hemlock blew down and the rifle was buried beneath it, and there it lay for more than a century until last spring some men digging on the spot unearthed it. The stock had decayed, but the rusty barrel was intact and may now be seen over the mantel of the Greenleaf Library."

At the close of the story the narrator called upon the descendants of the Indians of by-gone days, if any still existed in that region, to come forth and show themselves to their friends. Just then a red fire illumined the cliff and a dozen Indian maidens were seen standing upon it. At the same time a boat shot out from the opposite shore containing an Indian chief, who rowed across the waters, while unseen voices sang "Nita, Juanita, be my own fair bride." When the rower reached the cliff Juanita stepped into the canoe and was carried away amid the applause of the spectators. This interesting tableau was followed by a general illumination of the lake.

The meeting on First-day morning was ideal. Although a number spoke, all were brief and their messages seemed to find a general response in the hearts of the listeners, while before and after every utterance there were intervals of living silence. Not less ideal, though of a different nature, was the walk down the stream from above the falls, with pauses to enjoy the beauty of the successive cascades and to worship the Power that fashioned them. The charm of the morning ramble, in company with other devout spirits, will not soon be forgotten.

In the afternoon a steady rain set in and prevented our seeing several cottages, each of which we were assured possessed charms superior to any we had already visited. The supreme felicity of a Buck Hill cottage, even though the ground on his lot is still unbroken and the cottage exists only in the air, is something that must be witnessed to be appreciated.

Evening was spent in the Inn, in genial conversation or listening to the singing of hymns. Another night of unbroken slumber came to an end all too soon, for the trunk must be ready by half-past six. The early breakfast was eaten and enjoyed, and then as each carriage load departed, those who had gathered to speed the parting guests, shouted at the top of their lungs the cheering words,

"Hooray! Hooray! Buck Hill Inn!
Hooray! Hooray! Come a-gin!"

Come again? Did any one ever leave that delightful spot without inwardly resolving to go back and stay longer at the very first opportunity? Verily, we had caught the "Buck Hill fever," and found it a malady easy to be borne. E. L.

BEREA COLLEGE.

HAVING recently visited Berea College, Ky., and attended its commencement, I thought some account of it might interest your readers, as I presume most of them know something about this unique educational institution.

The founder of this school was John G. Fee. In the memorial of him I find this statement: "From his mother, Sarah Gregg, he inherited the Quaker's characteristics of piety, gentleness and love of fairness and freedom." He was born in Kentucky in 1816, and founded "the Church of Christ at Berea" in 1853. He had attended Lane Seminary, in Cincinnati, O., where he came under the influence of Lyman Beecher. He became an earnest advocate of reform, opposed to intemperance, slavery, etc. For this he was often persecuted and mobbed, but lived to see slavery abolished and the Union preserved. The history of this man, with the great difficulties he and his helpers encountered, is of intense interest. After the war he founded the school at Berea, which has grown into a college.

It now has hundreds of students, a few from the northern bordering State of Ohio, and a few colored students, but mostly students from the mountain districts.

My brother in Chicago, being a trustee, invited me to visit the school with him. It is situated about 130 miles south of Cincinnati. The Kentucky Central Railroad passes through continuous hills, some of large proportions, and through several tunnels of considerable length. The "blue grass" region lies farther west, and is more level.

The town of Berea is near the foothills of the Cumberland range, and is "beautiful for situation." It is composed largely of those interested in the college work. There are several large buildings. Lincoln Hall, in which are the library, class rooms, etc.; Ladies' Hall, a dormitory for the girls, and a manual training building, not yet completed, are the chief, all made from brick manufactured by the students and their instructors. But these buildings are entirely inadequate. Many of the students combine and live in rooms, with poor facilities for housekeeping. Some live in families and work for their board. Others do whatever they can to earn a little money for their personal expenses, the tuition being free.

It was an interesting sight on commencement day to see the people coming in from the hills and mountains in wagons and on horseback, often riding double. The campus is fine naturally, having rolling ground, with great trees of oak, maple, gum and other varieties. The morning was sunny, and though there had been weeks of drouth, a few days of rain had restored the face of nature, and all looked happy. It was a reunion of parents and children, brothers and sisters, friends and neighbors. They were a very quiet people, voices low and demeanor reserved. The type of face interested me greatly. It seemed a pure Anglo-Saxon type, mostly with small, refined features. I thought I never had seen so many pretty noses and mouths in so large a gathering, the men, women and children being so very different from the crowd of faces we meet in our city of Chicago, where there is a majority of foreigners, largely of the Northern nationalities, with large features and broad faces. The mountain students seemed to me of medium size or less, none very large, as I observed. There were many young parents, with many little children. Some of them had been students at Berea. The mountaineers believe in young marriages. Many of the women wore home-made sun bonnets.

It was my privilege to stay in the home of one of our own Friends, Hetty Wright Graham, niece of our friend Phebe Wright, of New Jersey. She lives in a little log cabin named "Clover Bottom Cabin," which is made very artistic by her skillful arrangement. She has a charming view of the foothills. She has charge of the "Fireside Industries." The mountain women spin and weave beautiful fabrics of cotton, linen and wool and bring them in once a year for exhibition and sale. This they do chiefly to make money to help send their children to Berea to school.

One room in Lincoln Hall was well filled with their work. This was called "The Homespun Fair." They make the old-fashioned coverlids or counterpanes, which they call "kivers" (covers). Those which are not sold at the end of the day are left with Hettie W. Graham to sell. She has exhibited some of their work in the North and has received many orders for it. If in single widths they make good, warm portieres, and are very convenient for throwing over couches. These women weave wonderful patterns, some of which have very singular names, as "Lee's surrender," "chariot wheels," "cat track and snail trail," etc., the significance of which is not always evident. They weave "linsey woolsey," linen for table cloths and towelings, etc.

The wife of one of the professors had on a very pretty shirt-waist suit of brown linen, rather sheer, which looked comfortable for a summer costume. President William G. Frost wore a suit of brown "linsey woolsey," which looked as if it would wear till it went out of fashion, if men's suits ever do go out of fashion. Domestic science is taught here, and there was a good exhibition of bread and cakes and other eatables. One young girl said she could hardly wait until she got home to try some of the new recipes. Fresh meat is scarce in the mountains—that is, beef and mutton. Poultry and game is their stand-by. But with eggs and milk and garden stuff they can make plenty of palatable and wholesome dishes. They have got into a rut which is not uncommon in the country, where people are not tempted, as in cities, to try new things. There was also an exhibit of sewing—aprons, dresses, shirt-waists, etc.

The exercises in the tabernacle on commencement day were extremely interesting. The subjects of graduating essays always interest me, as from year to year the new topics indicate the character of the individual and the trend of thought. Some of the subjects were these: "What Education Will Do for the Mountains," "The Artistic in Everyday Life," "Laying the Foundation," "Plant a Tree," and "Truth Conquers All."

President Frost is certainly the man for the place. His earnestness and interest are contagious, and his insight into the character of these people and their needs amounts to an inspiration. His wife is equally fitted for her position, and calmly and quietly presides over the home, where the many visitors are hospitably entertained. She also takes an interested part in the work of the school. There is an interesting group of teachers, many of whom we met socially. Among the guests were Dr. I. A. R. Rogers and his wife. He was one of the early and devoted pioneers in this work, who, with his young wife, suffered various persecutions. She was formerly Elizabeth Embree, a Friend, of Philadelphia, well known, perhaps, to some of your readers. They were on a visit here after twenty-five years' absence.

Mrs. Frost said she thought it would be pleasant to get all the Friends together at her table. There were seven of us, and it was quite a "Quaker meeting," she said, as we all naturally fell into the plain language. We had one young man, Professor Charles Lewis. He said he could hardly claim to be much of a Friend, as he "had never felt much drawn to a Society which disowned his father for marrying his mother." If all who married out had brought their companions and children into the Society, instead of being disowned, what a body ours might be by this time. Should we not have been more inclusive and less exclusive?

I wish I could give a better idea of this College, of its place in this country. These mountain people are belated in development, having lived so cut off from the world and the march of events. President Frost thinks they are descendants of the soldiers of Washington's army, who settled in the mountains after they disbanded. In an old book containing the names of the pension list, after the close of the American Revolution, he finds the same names as among the present inhabitants, and believes them to be their descendants, of nearly pure Anglo-Saxon origin. They never held slaves in the mountains, and the colored people are not found there. There were some good, strong faces among the colored students.

One young man who gave an excellent address, expects to enter Harvard soon. He waited on the president's table with carefulness and dignity. The white and colored students mingle in their classes and on the campus, and are friendly, but their social life is separate. There had never been any trouble between them, I was told.

This seems to give a very faint idea of the excellent and enthusiastic work of this institution. Its influence goes out into the lonely recesses of the mountains. Wherever a student has returned from Berea he creates a desire in the people to come into touch with the outside world and to have their children receive greater advantages than the parents have ever known. The students go home and teach school in their own neighborhoods, thus extending the work of education.

Many people with the missionary spirit are now trying to do settlement work in the mountains, though the conditions differ so greatly from city work that it hardly seems the same. These mountain people are American citizens, self-respecting and even proud. They are often shy and reserved, and do not like to be exploited. One needs to have the right feeling to be of real service to them.

I wish more people who have money to spare would take an interest in this school, and "lend a hand." There are so many needs, the first being a good water supply, which may be brought from springs on their own property up in the hills. But it will take a goodly sum to build a reservoir and pipe the water to the town and the college buildings. If any wish further information, it can be obtained by writing to President W. G. Frost, Berea, Ky., who is well known in educational circles.

After returning to Cincinnati, we went up the little Miami River to Morrow, about thirty miles, to visit the old home places and relatives. We were born and raised among the beautiful Miami hills. I had not visited here for thirty years. We went into the old Hopewell Meeting House, now unused, where once was a full, flourishing meeting. I remember as a child many visiting Friends from the East, who came to minister to us, when traveling was not so easy as it is now. The fathers and mothers have been gone "this many a year," and their then lively children are now the aged ones. But the influence of the fathers and mothers has been evident in their children, and their memories are still lovingly cherished.

We felt as if we were on a pilgrimage truly, one which we are not likely to repeat. It was a sad pleasure, but we returned to present cares and duties, "thankful for all the good the past has had," and hoping for blessings to come, if we continue faithful in our places.

"Hail to the coming singers!
Hail to the brave light-bringers!
Forward I reach and share
All that they sing and dare."

Glencoe, Ill., Sixth mo. 27, 1903.

H. A. P.

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL ASSEMBLY EVENING ENTERTAINMENTS.

During the sessions of the Buck Hill Falls First-day School Assembly ten lectures and entertainments were given to the members and their friends.

Professor J. Russell Hayes of Swarthmore College, delighted his audience with a lecture on "Irish Poetry." The humor and pathos of his selections were interlarded with a delicate and subtle humor of his own, which charmed all who were privileged to hear him.

Professor Paul Pearson, also of Swarthmore, gave two entertainments, (1) an appreciation of Riley with numerous selections, (2) an evening with Joel Chandler Harris and Southern dialect.

Alfred C. Garrett, received a sincere welcome from all who heard his lecture on "The Need of Quakerism in the Twentieth Century." It was such a discourse as every young man and woman with a membership in the Society of Friends should hear.

Mary Mann Miller, who has charge of the bird classes at Buck Hill Falls gave a lecture on her feathered friends, utilizing a number of prepared specimens, and localizing their habits, in a manner that caused many inquiring glances into shaded nooks the following week.

Joseph S. Walton gave a lecture on "The Indian Policy of William Penn," with some account of the Walking Purchase. It was also shown how the Friends of Philadelphia, uniting with the Moravians, drew off the French Allies and thus crippled the vitality of the Seven Years' War.

Jesse H. Holmes, gave an illustrated lecture on the land of Judea, showing the quaint customs and superstitious rites of those who inhabit that interesting country.

Helen Borton recited "The Lost Word" from Van Dyke, in a pleasing manner.

The young people of the Assembly, furnished one evening's entertainment with recitations, readings, music and original poetry.

The closing lecture was given by Elizabeth Lloyd, on "Emerson." The happy selection of incidents from this remarkable man's life, both instructed and entertained.

EDUCATIONAL.

THE NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

The meeting of the National Educational Association in Boston last week was the largest gathering of that body ever assembled, the registration exceeding 30,000. The great meetings which were held, on some days ten at one time, taxed the capacity of Boston's largest auditoriums.

President Eliot, in his inaugural address, described "the cultivated man" to be "a man of quick perceptions, broad sympathies and wide affinities, responsive but independent, self-reliant but deferential, loving truth and candor but also moderation and proportion, courageous but gentle, not finished but perfecting."

President Hyde, of Bowdoin, in "A Year's Retrospect," first of all paid tribute to the worth of Alice Freeman Palmer, who had left the working force to join "the choir invisible."

Dr. Francis Burke Brandt, professor of pedagogy, Central High School, Philadelphia, read a paper on "The City Normal School of the Future," in which he said that it ought to be a teacher's college, sending forth "teachers more thoroughly imbued with the notion of the inspirational as against the informational function of the elementary school, equipped to teach a single subject with enthusiasm, clearness and proportion, and men and women touched with the spirit of liberal culture."

W. T. Harris, United States Commissioner of Education, read a paper in which he contended that religious teaching should be confined to the Church. With this conclusion not a few of his auditors took issue and for nearly two hours there was a debate which in interest dwarfed the formal papers which had been read.

If any evidence were needed that the visiting teachers were not subordinating the serious business of the convention to the pleasures of sight-seeing it was furnished by the kindergarten department. This section, of which Pauline Agassiz Shaw, of Boston, was president, found the South Congregational Church too small for its meetings and was obliged to adjourn to Mechanics Hall.

At one of the sessions of the National Council tributes were paid to the memories of Dr. J. L. M. Curry, former President W. M. Beardshear and Dr. E. E. White. Dr. White will be remembered by Friends for his able addresses at the Asbury Park Conference.

John W. Cook, of Illinois, was elected President of the Association for next year.

MEDIA FRIENDS' SCHOOL.

The committee in charge of the Friends' Select School at Washington and Gayley streets, Media, has just appointed the teachers for the school year 1903-04. Anna B. Smedley of West Chester, has been appointed principal, with Mary Gray Leiper of Wallingford as her assistant. The former has had charge of the Primary Department in the Friends' Select School at West Chester for the last three years, where she has been successful in her work; she is a Normal School graduate, and before going to the West Chester school taught five years in the Moorestown, N. J., High School. She has been particularly successful in dealing with the primary grades.

Mary G. Leiper was graduated from Swarthmore College in 1899 with high honors, taking the Joshua Lippincott Fellowship, which is given to an honor graduate of the College to enable her to pursue advanced study under the direction or with the approval of the Faculty. Afterwards she took a year of advanced study at Swarthmore College, and in 1901-1902 she spent a year in Berlin studying at the University and under private teachers. She will teach the languages and some of the other branches.

Katherine Devereux Blake, writing in Harper's Weekly on the "Ideals of the School Teacher," maintains that our present school systems are too large. "The huge institutions that are like enormous educational mills should give place," she says, "to smaller and more home-like school communities, where principal and children can know and love each other." She believes that the home spirit should prevail more than it now does in our educational system, and that only a woman can carry this home spirit with her.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

THERE was a reunion of the Furnas family at Waynesville, Ohio, Sixth month 3d, it being just one hundred years since Robert and Hannah Furnas came to that place from North Carolina and built, three miles east of Waynesville, a log house which is still standing. The gathering included their grandchildren, great-grandchildren and other relatives. A letter was read from Hannah Mills (mother of J. J. Mills, ex-president of Earlham College), now in her 87th year, who is the only survivor of the eleven children of Robert and Hannah Furnas. Tables were arranged in the old barn of the host, Seth Furnas, Jr., put in order for the occasion, and a feast "fit for a king" was partaken of by 150 guests. An interesting paper read by Davis Furnas, describing the journey of his grandparents and their early life in Ohio will be published in full in the INTELLIGENCER.

In a letter to one of the editors John William Graham alludes to the "interesting idyllic picture of John Jackson and Sharon" and adds, "It would be hard to find anything which is more full of information about the Friends of that period than the story of the Sharon Academy and its wonderful staff."

He says further, "I am looking forward very eagerly to Elizabeth P. Bond's arrival. I am busy myself with lectures for the summer school she will attend. I note frequently with much gladness the movements of the Committee for the Propagation of Friends' Principles."

It is estimated that the world's population is increasing about 500,000,000 a century.

LITERARY NOTES.

"Friends Ancient and Modern" is a series of brief, pamphlet biographies issued by the London Friends' Tract Association and published by Headley Brothers, 14 Bishopsgate Street Without, E. C. at one penny each. Three of the series have now appeared—No. 1, "George Fox, the First Quaker," by Georgina King Lewis, with a reproduction of the Sir Peter Lely portrait of George Fox, now in the custody of Swarthmore College, and a reproduction of an old print of "A Room in Swarthmore Hall," where meetings were held; No. 2, "Samuel Bowly, the Apostle of Teetotalism," by Frederick Sessions; No. 3, "Elizabeth Fry," by Georgina King Lewis. These pamphlets contain from thirty to forty pages, are written in attractive style and would be excellent for every Friend who is alert in the "advancement of Friends' principles" to keep on hand to give out to those who might be interested in the founders of our Society; they are especially good for young people of our own Society also. They may be had conveniently through the Friends' Ecck Association for something like five cents apiece.

Ferris and Leach, Philadelphia, will issue this month a study in recognition and foreign policy entitled "The Independence of the South American Republics," by Frederic L. Paxson, Fellow in History in the University of Pennsylvania. The study throws new light upon the rivalry between Henry Clay and John Quincy Adams in the United States, and upon the commercial expansion of Great Britain. In view of the great interest in South American matters the work is particularly timely with its new material upon the Monroe Doctrine and the origin of the republics.

The edition will be limited to five hundred copies, and the price will be $2.00, postpaid.

AN EIGHTH BIRTHDAY.

I LOOK for the baby I used to know
(It is not so many long years ago).
I find him not: can any one tell, oh,
Where he has gone, this dear little fellow?

I look for the small kindergarten child,
That sweet kilt-clad darling, with face so mild.
And he has gone also—gone quite away.
Oh, where is he now? Oh, where does he stay?

I surely shall find the glad trousered boy,
To whom his first pair was a world of joy!
What! He has gone also? Oh, what shall I do?
Can all this sad story be possibly true?

Well, where are my eyes, and where are my ears?
I wonder what power that big football uprears?
I wonder whose shouts are so rending the air?
I wonder whose wheel spins like lightning out there?

Aha! I have found him! I know by his eyes,
And his mouth, and his hair; but I don't know his size!
This baby—this child—from my life disappears,
And here stands this big boy, just counting eight years.
—"Grandmamma," in Christian Register.

THE HAPPIEST HEART.

Who drives the horses of the sun
Shall lord it but a day;
Better the lowly deed were done,
And kept the humble way.

The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Ay, none shall nail so high his name
Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,
And left to Heaven the rest.

—From "Out of the Silence," by John Vance Cheney.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

BUCK HILL, IN RETROSPECT.

I close my eyes and call at will
Rare visions of another hour,
The verdant beauty of Buck Hill
Returns, with an alluring power.

I tread again the quiet wood,
A brooding stillness in the air,
I feel and know that all is good,
A sense of Presence everywhere.

I watch the sunbeams as they fall
In tiny flecks of golden light,
I listen to the bird's fond call
To some dear wanderer in his flight.

With eager feet I hasten on,
For distant roar of waters greet
My ravished ear with tuneful song,
And make this nature world complete.

Down, down into the very heart
Of rugged rocks, of deepening shade,
Until I feel I am a part,
And for this hour I, too, am made.

A sense of awe,—O wondrous sight!
A flood of waters swift and strong,
In prismatic gleaming bright,
In foaming whiteness teams along.

Oh vision, stay! And make this hour
One hymn of glad, exultant praise!
Thou emblem of Eternal Power,
Of great Jehovah's mighty ways!

Upon the bosom of the lake,
With pulses stilled, in calm abide,
I watch the quiet ripples make
A line of light with flowing tide.

I live again at close of day
Within the hush of even-time,
And o'er my spirit falls the sway,
The radiance of faints sublime.

Upon my brow I feel the air
From mountain-top and distant wood,
A sense of Presence everywhere—
I feel and know that Thou art good.

And so these visions come and go,
At touch of memory and of will,
And bathe my heart in roseate glow
With all the glory of Buck Hill.

A MEMBER OF THE F. D. S. A.

Seventh month 8th, 1903.

THE RACE PROBLEM—HOW SHALL WE APPROACH IT?

THE race problem is one that is continually coming to the front. Almost every day there is something in the newspapers bearing upon it, and prominent statesmen and thinkers continually refer to it in their speeches and writings. The question is argued from its social, its political and industrial aspects. All degrees of opinion are represented, from those who desire in all respects absolute equality, to those who wish that the African and all his descendants should never rise above being hewers of wood and drawers of water in the most literal sense. Even Booker Washington, who for a long time was supported in his efforts for the industrial education of the Negro by the best sentiment both South and North, has, since Andrew Carnegie's gift to Tuskegee, come in for his share of objection. The problem is one of extreme difficulty, especially as the contestants on each side and of all degrees of opinion are apt to be so absolutely sure that they know the whole story and can learn nothing more. This attitude of mind is of course, so long as it lasts, absolutely fatal to any real solution. We have no intention in this short paragraph of suggesting a solution. We would simply point out that when we have considered the industrial, the political and the social aspects of the problem, we have still not so much as mentioned the most important aspect of all, which should overshadow or rather pervade all the rest, that is the Christian aspect. Difficult as the problem is, there is a solution to it and that solution is to be found in Jesus Christ. The steps leading to it will be found by those who will with patience walk in the steps of their Master. In this way point by point will be gained, and at last not through ignoring any fact, not by conventions nor through party spirit, but through the gradual enlightenment of the best representatives of both races, the true solution will be reached, at the price of much careful thought and perhaps of much suffering. To doubt this is to doubt God. The two races are here. Neither could it if it would drive the other out of the country. That race that has had the greatest advantages, that which claims to have the higher type of religion and morality and the highest intelligence, must contribute the greater amount toward the solution. Every time a white man who professes to be a follower of Jesus Christ emphasizes his own superiority and the inferiority of the black man, he acknowledges his responsibility to help and uplift his less favored brother. How can this be otherwise if he be a follower of Him who though He were rich yet for our sakes made Himself poor, that we through His poverty might be rich? This race question, which is one of the most pressing of the times, is not to be shelved by a catch word or by platitudes on either side; it can only be solved by a frank and kindly consideration of others' views and even prejudices, and a patient pursuance in a really meek spirit of the line of conduct and influence which appears to each one to be most in accordance with the spirit of Jesus Christ. Owing to differences in education and temperament, two men, each walking according to this rule, may for the time reach diametrically opposite conclusions, but if both be really in this spirit they will be more effective in bringing about the ultimate solution than they could be if they had both hit upon what will finally prove to be the right conclusion and urged it in an unchristian spirit.—[R. H. T., in Interchange.]

GUAM, America's new possession in the Pacific, is not the only place in the world where the theories of Henry George are being applied. On the east coast of Vancouver Island, in British Columbia, the flourishing town of Nanaimo, with its 6,000 inhabitants, has no tax for municipal purposes save one on land values, levied alike on occupied and unoccupied land, according to the orthodox interpretation of the single tax theory. The town is a miners' town, where the doctrine of "three acres and a cow" is almost universally realized as well as that of "every man his own house owner." For this happy result the easy terms of the London syndicate which owns the coal and land in the neighborhood are largely responsible.—[The London Chronicle.]

A Vacation for Mother.

THE work of any ordinary house, performed year in and year out, without help of any kind will age and eventually wear out any woman. Every other toiler gets one or two weeks' rest out of the fifty-two, but it is not considered necessary for the wife and mother. She is not supposed to need change or to feel monotonous.

Poor, tired mother! Suppose that some of the grown-up daughters of this land were to rise up in this month of July, Anno Domini, 1903, and say, "We're going to give mother a vacation!"

Supposing they just turned her out of the kitchen, and gave her the money carefully saved for that purpose and told her to pack up for Asbury or the mountains? Failing that, supposing they just handed her a new novel, and made her comfortable on the porch to enjoy it? Supposing they took her on trolley rides, as if she were "company," or encouraged her to make calls, or coaxed her to take refreshing afternoon naps?

How she would enjoy the wonderful leisure! How she would relish the food which some one else cooked! What a relief it would be not to think of a meal until she sat down to it! What happy tears she would shed over the thought of her daughters' loving care for her!

For those daughters it would mean perhaps early rising, much planning, economy of minutes, hard work; but how sweet their reward not only now, but in the remembrance of after years! They will talk with moist eyes of "mother's vacation," when mother herself has long passed on.— [Women's Interests, in Public Ledger.]

Talking It Over.

A SHOEMAKER in a little New England Valley displays a sign on the top of his shop bearing the following inviting language: "Walk In and Talk It Over." It is an announcement that has more of timeliness and general application than may have originally occurred to the displayer of the sign. The "get-together" and "talk-it-over" method is having a remarkable vogue nowadays. It was conspicuously present in the World's Congress of Religions at the Chicago Columbian Exposition. It is used by those interested in social progress. It is at the basis of the various schemes for conciliation between capital and labor. It is the backbone of the international arbitration movement, Mr. Carnegie's proposed Palace of Peace at The Hague being merely a commodious and agreeable place where the nations of the world may "walk in and talk it over" in the most convenient and dignified manner—in this case a highly civilized and truly Christian substitute for the old-fashioned, romantic, corpse-decorated battle-field, where the nations, instead, walked in and fought it over.

The "talk-it-over" in place of the "fight-it-over" method, implies a higher state, not merely of manners and morals, but also of human intelligence, as illustrated by the story told the other day in the South of a colored servant who, referring to the Civil War, remarked that, as the white folks hadn't intelligence enough to settle the question peaceably, they had to go and fight it out.

One of the most interesting modern examples of the talking-over method is the series of annual Conferences on Education in the South, with which the name of Mr. Robert C. Ogden is prominent. The sixth was held recently in Richmond, the capital of Virginia and the former capital of the Southern Confederacy. The valuable and instructive "talking over" on this occasion, between representatives of various parts of the North and of the South, was not only upon the public platform but in social intercourse.— [The Century.]

THE oldest living graduate of Harvard College, of the class of 1828, Joseph Warren Cross, was 95 years old on the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill. He was an active abolitionist and was mobbed while making a speech in the town hall of Harvard, in 1842.

CURRENT EVENTS.

FOUR of the great bodies of young people have been in annual session last week and this. On the 6th the Christian Endeavorers met in Denver, the Baptist Young Peoples' Union in Atlanta, the Young Peoples' Christian Union of the Universalist Church in Akron, O. On the 16th the Epworth League began its session in Detroit. The Endeavor convention opened with an address by "Father" Clark, the founder of the organization, on "A Definite Increase Campaign to Double the Number and Efficiency of Endeavor Societies in a Single Decade." The report of the general secretary showed that the organization had grown from one society, in 1881, to 64,020, in 1903; from one denomination to more than 80, from one city to every country, and from 50 members to 3,822,300, and a million and a half more in societies bearing strictly sectarian names, but patterned after Christian Endeavor and gaining their inspiration from it. During the past year 175,000 have come from the ranks of Christian Endeavor into the membership of the churches.

THERE is continued opposition to the ratification of the Panama Canal treaty in the Colombian Legislature. One reason assigned is that the charter of the French Panama Canal Company will soon expire and all its rights revert to the Colombian Government, in which case that country would ask for the $40,000,000 that our Government has agreed to give for its privileges. Another and higher ground of opposition is that the canal would be a commercial disadvantage to Colombia, as it would put an end to the unloading and reloading of freight and passengers on Colombian soil; and that instead of a cash payment of $10,000,000, which would benefit merely the party in power, there should be a partnership between the United States and Colombia, securing to the latter a reasonable income in perpetuity.

THE first sentence for Negro peonage to be actually executed was begun at Atlanta on the 2d. The convicts are George D. Cosby and Barancas Cosby, two white men who had pleaded guilty before the Federal court at Montgomery, Alabama, of holding in involuntary servitude, negroes who were induced to sign contracts to work, and were worked under guard, locked up at night and beaten unmercifully at times. The courts are sustained by public sentiment throughout the South in sentencing the Cosbys to terms of imprisonment which proclaim in no uncertain way that the oppression of ignorant negroes by making helots of them is beyond the pale of Southern law and civilization.

UNITED STATES SENATOR FOSTER, of Louisiana, on the 12th saved from the hands of a mob bent on lynching him a negro who had attempted an assault upon the wife of a planter. When Senator Foster, who lived in the same parish, learned that the negro had been imprisoned he went to the jail and waited the inevitable demand for the prisoner. It was just midnight when the mob reached the jail. Senator Foster addressed its members. He told them that the negro would be tried at once, and pleaded with them not to soil the history of the State by a lynching, which was not to be excused.

An incident of the National Educational Association in Boston was a triumph of democracy over centralization. According to the old by-laws the delegation from each State appointed a member of the nominating committee, and sometimes the appointment was made by a very few of the delegates. Presidents Butler, of Columbia, and Eliot, of Harvard (the latter being the President of the Association), favored an amendment so that the nominating committee would be appointed by the chair. This was opposed by Margaret A. Haley, of Chicago, as taking away all power from the State delegations and putting it in the hands of one man. After a spirited debate the amendment was lost.

"AMERICA loves justice," was offered by Robert Treat Paine at Lake Mohonk as a motto worthy of our nation and suited to advance the cause of arbitration.— [Christian Register.]

NEWS NOTES.

NEARLY all the ports of Chili are infected with the "plague."

CARDINAL GIBBONS has sailed for Rome, expecting to arrive there by the 18th.

THUS far 19 victims of tetanus have been reported, as the result of using toy pistols to celebrate Independence Day.

ON account of the conflict in Hayti between President Nord and the Chambers, a state of siege has been proclaimed and the National Guard called out.

MAYOR JOHNSON, of Cleveland, has gained some concessions from the street car systems. They now sell six tickets for 25 cents and give universal transfers.

WILLIAM ERNEST HENLEY, the English poet and collaborator in several plays with Robert Louis Stevenson, died in London on the 12th, aged fifty-four years.

ROBERT SHAW OLIVER, of Albany is to be made Assistant Secretary of War, in place of William Cary Sanger, who has resigned on account of his wife's ill-health.

ABOUT 50,000 skilled men of the building trades of New York City have voted to accept the "Arbitration Plan," and will go to work at once. Over 20,000 began work on the 13th.

The annual meeting of the Southern Negro Congress convened in Memphis, Tennessee, on the 8th. About 200 delegates representing nearly every Southern State were present.

The American Philological Association met in New Haven, Connecticut, last week. It will meet next year at Ithaca, N. Y. Professor George Hempl, of the University of Michigan, is the new president.

The annual conference of the National Editorial Association met at Omaha, Nebraska, beginning the 8th. Among the topics discussed were "The Ethics of the Profession," and "The Newspaper and the Community."

DELEGATES representing 65,000 mine workers of the Lackawanna and Wyoming districts have been in convention this week at Plymouth, Pa. President Nichols demanded better ventilation as a preventive of miners' asthma.

A THREE weeks' "School of Emerson" was opened at Concord, Mass., on the 13th, under the auspices of the Free Religious Association of America, at the organization of which Lucretia Mott was present, and of which Edwin D. Mead is now president.

AN appeal to Congress is to be made on behalf of the board of trade of Newark for an appropriation for a survey to determine the feasibility and probable cost of a ship canal 35 feet deep between Newark and New York Bay. It is estimated that the cost will be $7,000,000.

HARRIET LANE JOHNSTON, who presided at the White House during the administration of her uncle, President Buchanan, died at Narragansett Pier, R. I., on the 3d instant. In her will she left $90,000 to the Johns Hopkins University, for the endowment of three free scholarships.

THE regents of the American Society of Religious Education have decided to call an interdenominational congress, in the interest of religious education, to be held in Washington next spring. The call declares the basis of the congress to be "the common teachings of evangelical churches."

THE conference of the graduates and the undergraduates of the colonial universities, called to discuss the co-ordination of university education throughout the British Empire opened in London on the 9th under the presidency of James Bryce, M. P. Practically all the home and colonial universities were represented.

THE Greek Cabinet resigned on the 8th, the announcement being received with joy throughout the country. The people are demanding that the government grant a current monopoly, currants being one of the chief crops of Greece. Agitation is daily growing more serious in the Peloponesus, the peasants being practically in revolt.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

7TH Mo. 19.—MEETING OF FRIENDS at Asbury Park, in Whittier Hall, corner Second Avenue and Emory Street, every First-day during the summer, at 4 p. m.

7TH Mo. 19.—A CONFERENCE UNDER the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor, in the meeting-house at Providence (Media), at 2.30 p. m. R. Barclay Spicer will read a paper on "The Meeting and the Neighborhood."

7TH Mo. 19.—THE VISITING COMMITTEE of Salem Quarterly Meeting will attend the meeting at Mickleton, N. J., at 10 a. m.

7TH Mo. 19.—A MEETING AT HAVERFORD, Pa., at 3 p. m., appointed by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit smaller branches.

7TH Mo. 20.—FRIENDS' FLOWER and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Ave., at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

7TH Mo. 21.—WESTERN QUARTERLY Meeting, at London Grove, Pa., at 10

a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 11 a. m.

7TH Mo. 22.—PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY Meeting, at 15th and Race Streets, at 7.30 p. m.

7TH Mo. 23.—GREEN STREET MONTHLY Meeting, Fourth and Green Streets, Philadelphia, at 3 p. m.

7TH Mo. 23.—CALN QUARTERLY MEETING, at East Caln, Pa., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day, at 10 a. m.

7TH Mo. 25.—WESTBURY QUARTERLY Meeting, at Westbury, N. Y., at 10.30 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 3 p. m. At 2.30 p. m., a meeting under the care of the yearly meeting's committee for the "Advancement of Friends' Principles," has been arranged. Henry M. Haviland will present a paper on "Friends as Emancipators."

7TH Mo. 28.—CONCORD QUARTERLY Meeting, at Concord, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

7TH Mo. 29.—PURCHASE QUARTERLY Meeting, at Purchase, N. Y. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2.30 p. m.

7TH Mo. 26.—A CONFERENCE UNDER the care of the Philanthropic Committees of the Yearly and Quarterly Meetings will be held in the meeting-house at Plumstead, Pa., at 3 p. m. Subject, "Temperance." Elizabeth Lloyd will address the meeting.

THE REPORTS OF ASBURY PARK Conference have been sent to the Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race Streets,—a package for each monthly meeting belonging to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Correspondents are requested to call for them or to give directions concerning their shipment.

WILD larkspur and poison camass, two plants found on the prairies of Western America, are responsible for the poisoning of at least 100,000 cattle yearly.—[Public Ledger.]

REDUCED RATES TO ASHEVILLE.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL DENTAL ASSOCIATION.

For the benefit of those desiring to attend the meeting of the National Dental Association, at Asheville, N. C., July 24th to 31st, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell round-trip tickets to Asheville and return, good going July 21st and 22d, and good returning to reach original starting point not later than August 2d, inclusive, from all stations on its lines, at reduced rates. For rates and conditions of tickets consult Ticket Agents.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOCKEN DAIRIES. Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars. O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 50, N. Delaware Avenue Uptown offices, 808 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a. J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Tearing of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.12. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.12.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Doughboys. By Joseph Elkington. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $2.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
3 PHONES.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO THE PACIFIC COAST.

VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY, JULY 31ST TO AUGUST 13TH, INCLUSIVE, 1903.

On July 31st to August 13th, special excursion tickets will be sold from Philadelphia to Los Angeles and San Francisco, Cal., and return at rate of $66.35, via Southern Railway, final limit October 15th, 1903, proportionate low rates from other points. In addition to the Standard Pullman Drawing-room Sleeping Cars, operated daily, the Southern Railway operates on fast trains, tri-weekly, high-class personally-conducted vestibuled excursion sleeping cars between Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco, Cal., without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans, San Antonio and El Paso, in which the double berth rate is only $7.

The excursion sleeping cars leave Washington at 9 p. m., on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

SELECT EXCURSIONS TO TOLCHES-TER BEACH, CHESAPEAKE BAY.

On Wednesdays, July 22d, August 5th and 19th, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company (Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company) will run special low-rate excursions to Maryland's most popular watering place, Tolchester Beach. This place is held in high favor by all who have visited it. It has all the attributes of a first-class resort, and especially appeals to families. No liquors are allowed on train, boat or grounds. Every possible kind of amusement is to be found. The location, on the prettiest part of the beautiful Chesapeake Bay, speaks for itself.

A special train will be run on the following schedule, and round-trip tickets will be sold at the rates quoted.

Leave	Time a. m.	Rate.
Philadelphia, Pa.,	7.00	$1.50
West Philadelphia,	7.03	1.50
Sharon Hill,	7.15	1.50
Moore,	7.20	1.35
Ridley Park,	7.23	1.35
Chester,	7.29	1.25
Thurlow,	7.33	1.25
Linwood,	7.37	1.20
Wilmington, Del.,	8.03	1.00
Newport,	8.11	.90
Newark,	8.26	.75
Iron Hill, Md.,	8.31	.75
Elkton,	8.37	.75
North-East,	8.47	.50
Charlestown,	8.51	.50

Returning steamer will leave Tolchester Beach at 4.00 p. m.

Children between five and twelve years of age, half the above rates.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. * * * Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. * * * A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

* * * All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CHRIS GAMBESIA, Jr.) 524 1/2 Locust St., Philadelphia

Ice Chests, Water Coolers, etc.

This hot weather makes a strong demand for Water Coolers and Ice Chests—a demand that can be satisfactorily met here:

Ice Chests

The well-known Farson make; hardwood; lined with zinc; nicely finished; regularly $5—now $3.75; regularly $6—now $4.75.

Stone Water Coolers

Keg shape; nickel-plated faucet—2-gallon, $1.50; 3-gallon, $1.75; 4-gallon, $2; 5-gallon, $2.25.

Water Coolers

Nicely decorated and galvanized-lined; nickel-plated faucet; 2-gallon size $1.35.

Savin Ice Pads

Will greatly assist in keeping down the ice bill—this has been fully proved. Several sizes, at 75c, 90c, $1.15 and $1.50. Demonstration every day.

Nursery Refrigerators

Packed with mineral wool, with cooler attachment; lined oak finish—$2.50 to $6.50.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General
Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

- WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
Assistant Treasurer.

Merchants' Trust Company, 611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
SURPLUS, 30,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 49,949.99

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveying same. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $5 and upwards, per annum

- JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice President.
HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
CHARLES F. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

- | | |
|--|---|
| NICHOLAS ERICE,
S. DAVIS PAGE,
JOSEPH R. RHOADS,
JOHN F. LEWIS,
THOMAS R. GILL,
HAS. S. HINCHMAN,
EDWARD S. SAYRES,
JOHN H. CRAVEN. | J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
ALFRED J. PHILLIPS,
GEORGE M. WAGNER,
FRANK W. PAUL,
EDGAR DURELEY FAIRIES,
HORACE B. PEARSON. |
|--|---|

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES, ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITARY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders. $ 4,457,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account. 6,317,764.17
Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

- Samuel R. Shipley, President
T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
David G. Alsop, Actuary
J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
Samuel H. French, Treasurer
C. Walter Bortin, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

- Samuel R. Shipley, James V. Watson,
T. Wistar Brown, William Longstreth,
Henry Haices, Edward H. Ogden,
Richard Wood, Thomas Scattergood,
Charles Harshbome, J. Preston Thomas,
Asa S. Wing, Robert M. Jenney,
Philip C. Garrett, Mariott C. Morris,
Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: July 24th, August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on July 24th, August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a.m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a.m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh

1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLLETT.

He was 57; he looked about 40, despite daily business cares and responsibilities innumerable, about which he refused to worry.

Why?

The future of his family was made secure, his own old age provided for by a policy in the

MARATHA J. WARNER MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, EIGHTH MONTH 1, 1903.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2.6 to 4.6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 3-6 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $6.10) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

Illinois-On-The-Strand

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

WALTON & FRENCH

Ocean view unequalled Bell 'Phone No. 26
Will remain OPEN throughout the year

The Rose Valley Guest House.

MOYLAN, DEL. CO., PA.

BETWEEN MEDIA AND SWARTHMORE.

A quiet and beautiful retreat. Vernon Run and Ridley Creek wind through the valley. Boating and swimming. Pure water. Our own garden. Good train service and trolley. Address

NATHAN KITE, Moylan, Pa.

The Albertson,

New, First-class Family Hotel.

SITUATED AT MANTOLOKING, N. J.

Three miles this side of Bay Head, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, one and one-half hours from Broad Street Station or Market Street Wharf. Fine bathing, Fishing, Yachting and golfing. Send for booklet.

J. R. ALBERTSON,

Formerly of Penns Manor, Pa.

THE PENINGTON,

Permanent and Transient Boarding for Friends.

215 E. 15th Street, New York City.

The Bartram,

Accommodates 100 guests.

WILDWOOD, N. J.

Pleasantly situated within 200 feet of beach. Especial attention given to the menu.

J ALFRED BARTRAM, Owner and Manager.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particulars address

SARAH J. PAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst,

Second House from Beach.

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts

K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.

M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

WANTED.—REFINED WOMAN OR SMALL family to take main part of furnished house with the boards now in it. All conveniences. Terms liberal. Address A. J. 328 West Front Street, Media, Pa.

WANTED.—HOUSEKEEPER AND COMPANION, family of two. Chester county. Call on or address F. S. W., 3134 Clifford Street, Philadelphia.

WANTED.—BY NINTH MONTH 1st, RELIABLE woman for general house-work for family of two. Quiet home and fair wages. Address Box 191, Rising Sun, Md.

WANTED.—AT FRIENDS' ACADEMY, Locust Valley, L. I., a practical housekeeper. Address Amy Willets, Jericho, L. I., N. Y.

WANTED.—BOARD BY A GENTLEMAN by Ninth month 1st, Central location. Where there are few boarders. Friends' family preferred. Address No. 1, this Office.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1871 St. N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH and Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

Pocono Pines Assembly AND Summer Schools

AND

Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing. 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 12th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager, Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

Friends' School,

FOURTH AND WEST STREETS, WILMINGTON, DEL.

A day school for both sexes, fitting for either college or business. Scientific, Latin-Scientific, and Classical Courses. Fourteen teachers. Excellent equipment. Thorough instruction. Graduates entered on certificate in leading colleges. Fall term begins Ninth month (September) 1st. For illustrated catalogue address

HERSCHEL A. NORRIS, A. M., Principal.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY, Olympia, Washington.

It's Easier to get the First Order

than to keep a customer coming year in, year out. Does it mean anything to you that we have many customers who were with us when we started in business?

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc., MAKERS OF THE BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

No lofly grandeur piled supreme,
But like a sweet, prophetic dream,
The landscape stretched, unfolding still,
In gently sloping vale and hill.

—Charles Sangster.

The following is a list of the lot owners at Buck Hill Falls up to Seventh month 25th, 1903.

Adelaide F. Anderson	Lan. bertville, N. J.
Sarah J. Ash	Swarthmore, Pa.
Anna A. Atkinson	Trace 1 1/2 mi., Pa.
I. Ogbora Atkinson	Doylestown, Pa.
Emmonde H. Austin	Philadelphia, Pa.
William H. Burdall	Philadelphia, Pa.
Elizabeth M. Bunting	Korristown, N. J.
Morgan Bunting	Darby, Pa.
S. Robinson Louie	Riverton, N. J.
Mary A. Craft	Ambler, Pa.
Charles P. Early	Merchauville N. J.
Matilda Garrigue	Philadelphia, Pa.
William H. Gaskill	Philadelphia, Pa.
Henry Gawthroy	Philadelphia, Pa.
Anna M. Grubame	Germanstown, Pa.
Susana C. Grubame	Germanstown, Pa.
Dr. Elizabeth W. Griscom	Swarthmore, Pa.
Alice P. Hadley	Swarthmore, Pa.
Caroline E. Hall	Swarthmore, Pa.
John C. Hancock	Philadelphia, Pa.
Frank P. Harner	Merchantville, N. J.
Miriam S. Hendrickson	Mt. Holly, N. J.
Annie and Helen K. Hillborn	Swarthmore, Pa.
Elia H. Hood	Atlantic City, N. J.
William G. Huey	Philadelphia, Pa.
Robert M. Janney	Philadelphia, Pa.
Charles F. Jenkins	Germanstown, Pa.
Edward A. Jenkins	Chicago, Ill.
Florence Jenkins	Gwynedd, Pa.
Marce C. Jenkins	Germanstown, Pa.
Mary Anna Jenkins	Gwynedd, Pa.
Mary Schofield Ash Jenkins	Swarthmore, Pa.
Thomas A. Jenkins	Chicago, Ill.
Rachel R. Jones	Onschohocken, Pa.
Hilda Justice and Louise Antz	Germanstown, Pa.
Ezra Lippincott	Rivertown, N. J.
Dr. Frank C. MacIntire	Cynsyd, Pa.
Dr. Edward W. Mercer	Philadelphia, Pa.
Albert A. Merritt	New York, N. Y.
William N. Moland	Philadelphia, Pa.
Edwin Bunting Moore	Morrisstown, N. J.
Elmerwood Burdall Moore	Morrisstown, N. J.
Jennie R. B. Moore	Morrisstown, N. J.
William B. Off	Philadelphia, Pa.
Franklin Packer	George School, Pa.
Henry T. Falste	Philadelphia, Pa.
Albert W. Preston	Lambertville, N. J.
Charles W. Preston	Philadelphia, Pa.
Mary W. Plummer	Brooklyn, N. Y.
Elizabeth H. Ritchie	Moorestown, N. J.
E. H. and F. M. Robinson	Swarthmore, Pa.
Albert H. Saver	Germanstown, Pa.
Rachel Sheppard	Camden, N. J.
Martha Schofield	Aiken, S. C.
Clerg A. Shirley	Lansdowne, Pa.
Joha M. Shirley	Lansdowne, Pa.
Mary Isabel Smith	Lambertville, N. J.
Anne Travilla Speakman	West Chester, Pa.
Dr. William W. Speakman	Swarthmore, Pa.
George W. Stratton	Allington, Pa.
E. L. and Sue H. Thomas	Fallsboro, Pa.
Isabel Thorn	West Chester, Pa.
Mary Anna Thorn	Fallsington, Pa.
Dr. James Tyson	Philadelphia, Pa.
Willis W. Vail	Georgetown, Pa.
Rachel P. Way	Atlantic City, N. J.
Harriette S. Webb	Sharon Hill, Pa.
Emma Speakman Webster	Philadelphia, Pa.
Caroline D. Weeks	Brooklyn, N. Y.
George F. White	Lansdowne, Pa.
Joseph Williams	Trenton, N. J.
Mary Willis	Sea Girl, N. J.
Cornelia Needles Wright	Philadelphia, Pa.
Phebe C. Wright	Sea Girl, N. J.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
*8 TELEPHONE NO. 133-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXXI.	481
POETRY: LOVE.	481
JOSEPH W. PEASE.	481
WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III. John Jackson.—Concluded.	482
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON: The Gentiles.	484
DOMESTIC ELOCUTION.	485
WHY WILL YE DIE?	485
EDITORIAL: "The Root of the Matter."	486
Notes.	486
BIRTHS, DEATHS.	487
SOCIETY NOTES.	488
MEETING OF THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.	488
ADVANCEMENT OF FRIENDS' PRINCIPLES.	488
ADVANCING FRIENDS' PRINCIPLES IN 1770.	489
EMIGRATION OF ROBERT AND HANNAH FURNAS.	490
UPPER GREENWICH MEETING (Illustration).	491
EDUCATIONAL.	492
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	493
LITERARY NOTES.	493
POETRY: The Prime of Life; Oneness; The Tyrant's Song.	493-494
THE CAUSE OF THE RACE RIOTS.	494
CURRENT EVENTS.	495
NEWS NOTES.	495
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	496

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Cleansing of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.
"The reading of which is a spiritual feast."
—FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 45 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.11.

The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.

The Dockhobors. By Joseph Elkinton. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated, $0.00.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: {63 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
375 SWEDS STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street,
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Floga-
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sanson Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.),
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

Young Friends' Review
Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, Editor,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.
Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.
Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:
One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.
Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk,
*phone 1-93-55.

Swarthmore College
SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School,
FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.
EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.
Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for college.
For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.
Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.
Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, N. S., Principal,
Jenkintown, Pa.
Or,
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,
A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.
For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.
For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a. m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT
Undertaker
and Embalmer
1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia
TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873.

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 1, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 31.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XXXI.

As we can only expect the highest results where there is the concentrated pursuit of any subject—whether scientific or otherwise—so in things spiritual, no development can be experienced without conscious effort and daily striving after all which can promote the higher life.

ELLEN ROBINSON.

In Lancashire and Cheshire Quarterly Meeting.

LOVE.

Ah! there are mighty things under the sun:
Great deeds have been acted, great words have been said;

Not just uplifting some fortunate one,
But lifting up all men the more by a head.

Aye, the more by the head and the shoulders, too!
Ten thousand may sin, and a thousand may fall,
And it may have been me, and it yet may be you;
But the angel in one proves the angel in all.

And whatever is mighty, whatever is high,
Lifting men, lifting women, their natures above,
And close to the kinship they hold in the sky,—
Why, this I affirm, that its essence is Love!

—Alice Cary.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

JOSEPH W. PEASE.

SIR JOSEPH WHITWELL PEASE, M. P., died on the 23d of last month. His father, Joseph Pease, who was the first member of the Society of Friends to sit in Parliament, consistently avoided in his speeches, the use of all titles, and retained, throughout the eight years he was at Westminster, the dress peculiar to Friends. His grandfather, Edward Pease, was the first to realize the possibilities of George Stephenson's model engine, adopted it for the "tram-road" he was projecting from Stockton to Darlington, financed the inventor, and laid the foundation of the English railway system of to-day.

Sir Joseph Pease was perhaps the first Friend to receive the title of Baronet. He attended the Friends' School at York, and later, from the age of twelve and a half to seventeen, received an excellent training at the hands of two of the ablest tutors of the time. At seventeen he had the choice of going to college or entering business. He chose the latter, partly on account of the delicate state of his father's health at the time. He entered Parliament in 1865, early in life for a business man, for the same constituency his father had represented. In the House of Commons he was "never considered an orator of the first order. He was always practical, sensible, and identified with liberty and progress. He was chiefly known for his untiring efforts on behalf of Peace, or at all events of international arbitration, for his stern denunciation of the Chinese opium traffic, and for his labors in the cause of temperance."

He was a Liberal and a follower of Gladstone, "but he opposed the Berber-Suakim railway scheme, and as a Quaker and president of the Peace and Anti-Opium Societies, he took an independent line on many questions." As a member of Parliament he was a hard worker. For many years he sat on the Committee having charge of the London Water Bills. He was on the Committees on Railway Rates, and the Hours of Railway Servants.

An old Durham miner says of him, "when the Durham Miners' Association was in its infant stages in 1867-69, and the leaders (dubbed agitators) were being sent to prison on all sides, and employers flatly refused to discuss labor questions with their men, Joseph Whitwell Pease, as he then was, had the leaders called together (I was one of them), and he frankly recognized the rights of labor to discuss as a body their terms of hiring. Then, again, we were holding all meetings in public-houses and as conducted at that time many of them were neither sanitary nor of the best conducted kind. Joseph W. Pease at once placed the rooms of the Pease schools at the disposal of his employees both in West Durham and Cleveland, in which to hold their trade union meetings. The result of all this was that whereas the rest of Durham was seething with agitation and outrages of many kinds, pits idle at a moment's notice, non-unionists insulted and ill-used, Pease's pits were seldom idle a day." That these relations with his men were maintained to the last is shown in the fact that a short time ago he was re-elected president of the Northumberland and Durham Miners' Relief Fund.

For many years and to the time of his death Sir Joseph Pease served as President of the Peace Society. He was also a leader against the opium iniquity, and the last debate in the House of Commons on the subject was introduced by him.

In 1854 he married Mary, daughter of Alfred Fox of Falmouth. He leaves six daughters, and two sons who are both members of Parliament.

He died on his seventy-fifth birthday at his Cornish residence in Falmouth. Though living in the world, he retained to the last a simple faith in God and man. His voice was not unfrequently heard in ministry in Friends' meetings.

"Your work in the world (Christ says through example) is not to do great things, but to do small things greatly. And then, he washes the feet of his disciples, thus showing them anew the sacrament of service—even the humblest service."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

WORTHY FRIENDS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—III.

JOHN JACKSON.

(Concluded from last week.)

THE views of John Jackson on the Christian ministry were written after his health had become seriously impaired, and some of his pupils have expressed the belief that his life was prolonged in order that he might finish it. Doubtless his desire to complete this important testimony caused him to exert his power of will, and thus to draw on his reserve force of strength, for after it was completed he grew worse rapidly and died in a few weeks.

He states in the preface of this last work that its purpose was "to show the character of the Christian ministry as exemplified by Jesus and the apostles, and to point out some of the corruptions which Christianity has sustained by a perversion of its original objects." Especially did he wish to call attention to the historical fact, "that a maintenance of the clergy was a departure from Christian doctrine and practice, made after the time of the apostles."

The book treats of the ministry of Jesus and his apostles, the Christian ministry from the time of the apostles to the Reformation, the Christian ministry since the Reformation, the justification of woman's preaching by the practices of the early Christians, the objections to a theological education for the ministry, the evils arising from even voluntary payment of ministers, the relation of the Bible to ministry, and the smothering of individual life and expression by the dogmas of the Church. Space will allow but a few quotations, but the book is still in print, and those who desire a larger acquaintance with it may obtain it from the Friends' Book Association.

"The minister is tempted to please his hearers by the prospect of gain, and the influence of this temptation is to impair his sincerity as well as his independence. He is thereby induced to gratify his hearers, and even sometimes to uphold them in their evil conduct and practices. . . . There is no way to avoid the evils and temptations which result from the principle of remuneration, but by adopting the practice of Jesus, and making the ministry absolutely independent of any expectation or prospect of pecuniary reward. That there are honorable exceptions to the class of ministers we have above alluded to, we freely admit, but these exceptions never can prevent the evils of the system—they are inseparable from the system itself."

"We see no reason why the Christian minister should not engage, as Paul did, in some ordinary business, and provide a maintenance for himself by his own labor. There is nothing in the employment of the farmer, the mechanic, or the merchant, if honestly followed, that would conflict in the least with the duties required of the minister of the gospel. On the other hand, by engaging in some such occupation, he would have a better opportunity of exhibiting to the world the practical application of the doctrines of the gospel, by bringing them into closer connection with the every-day affairs of life. It is in man's every-day intercourse with the world that Christian example is wanted; it is here that religion can exercise its mightiest influence for good, by establishing honesty and integrity upon substantial foundations, and checking the inordinate gratification of a worldly spirit. The Christian minister ought, therefore, by example as well as by precept, to teach others how to live in the world, and overcome it. As this is accomplished, the necessity for pulpit preaching will be proportionably lessened."

John Jackson kept a diary until a short time before his death. The closing pages speak of the foolishness of theological controversy. He refers to two Friends who came under the condemnation of the meeting, one because his views were too heterodox and the other because he was too orthodox, and then wrote the following words, which were the last that fell from his pen:

"These two individuals, who were denounced by their sectarian judges, men whose genuine Christianity no one pretends to dispute, so far as they are to be judged by their fruits, are brought forward here, not as isolated cases, by any means, but as a striking illustration of the consummate folly of Christians condemning one another for differences of religious opinion."

In the course of his labors in the ministry John Jackson once paid a visit of two weeks to the Indians in New York State. Here, as elsewhere, the man behind the preaching seems to have made the usual impression. Griffith Cooper, in a letter written to John Jackson after he himself had paid a visit to these same Indians, writes:

"He told me he remembered Quaker Jackson, the man who preached to them at Buffalo, and that he remembered what he said:—that God was here (pointing to his bosom) and if they attended to the teaching of the Good Spirit there, it would be well with them; this he believed, as he had always found it to be so. Since that time, he said, the missionary told him he must join the church, otherwise he would go to hell, but added, 'I did not believe him, for I know that what the Quaker said was true, and that is the church for me to attend—the Good Spirit in the heart.'"

A neighbor long since deceased left in writing the following anecdotes, showing the silent influence exerted by John Jackson upon the people with whom he came in contact:

"When John Jackson was enlarging his house at Sharon to accommodate his prospective school, he had many mechanics employed, one of whom was a hard drinker. One day this man came into my store, and, knowing that he had been employed by John Jackson, I asked him how they were getting along at Sharon. He replied, 'I don't work there; I left two weeks ago.' Then he added, 'I took an oath that I would never work there again—and I never will.'"

"I asked him what John had done that caused him to swear he would never work for him again, saying that he was my ideal of a Christian and an example to all men. He replied, 'That is the cause of the trouble; he did nothing, said nothing. I took my quart of whiskey with me every morning and concealed it in the wood opposite the house, where I could go frequently during the day and get a drink. One day while John was in the city I went too often and got so drunk I could not work. In the afternoon, as I sat idly on the scaffold, I heard a slight cough, and looking up, there came John Jackson. He spoke not a word, but silently passed by me. I never can forget the look he cast on me; his countenance bespoke love, pity and sorrow; it seemed to say to me, "Poor, weak, helpless creature! Go and try to sin no more." I got up, the tears streaming down my cheeks, and reeling from the scaffold, went home, forgetting my hammer and trowel in my excitement, told my wife I could work no more for John, and I was ashamed to face him to get my wages or tools; I have drank none since.'

"An instance of his power over the blasphemer I will give in the words of the blacksmith who told it to me. 'I was at work at the anvil and talking politics with three or four men. As usual, I was cursing terribly, for I was excited, when I looked around and there stood John Jackson within three feet of me, resting on his cane. How long he had been there I do not know, but he had heard my blaspheming. When I saw him all seemed to swim before my eyes, my hammer fell from my hand to the floor; I dropped the ploughshare I was working on, and went out of the back door and stood behind the shop more than five minutes, before I could compose my feelings sufficiently to meet him. When I came in he said, "Charles, if I send down my driving horses this afternoon will thee have time to shoe them?"'

"About two weeks after the death of John Jackson the same person who reported the testimony of the blacksmith to me met him again in the shop, and in the course of conversation he said, 'John Jackson was the greatest living example of a true Christian I ever knew; I would to God we were all Quakers I darby if John is a fair type of them.'"

The death of John Jackson occurred in Fourth month, 1855. The closing scene is described in a letter written to her sister, by Ann Whitson, who had been a teacher at Sharon for several years. After giving the details of his sickness for two weeks she describes his condition from Third-day evening to the Sixth-day on which he died.

"About eight o'clock he had a violent convulsion, which lasted some five or ten minutes, and after that he lay breathing with much difficulty until about four in the morning, when he seemed to recognize those around him, and soon after made a vain effort to articulate; but by seven in the morning he spoke distinctly and appeared perfectly conscious, and in a most affecting manner took leave of his family and friends. Nothing could have been more touching and solemn than to witness the love of his spirit going forth to all, none were forgotten, but all received his parting salutation of love. During the rest of that day and the next he was mostly unconscious, seeming to be talking to his family and friends about the things of which he had been accustomed to converse, the school, farming, etc., etc., neither voice nor pulse seeming to flag; but on Sixth-day both rapidly grew much weaker, and towards evening, though he could not be understood, from his gesticulations it seemed that he might be preaching, such expressions as, 'I am ready, I am ready,' 'I will soon be with my Heavenly Father,' were at times understood. At one time he said distinctly, 'I continue to praise my Creator and desire that his work may go on to perfection.' The last thing which he was understood to say was, 'This is no fiction but a blessed reality—waiting for a higher development.' His end was peaceful, and the expression left upon his countenance was sweet and much more youthful than he had worn for some time.

"Dear Aunt R. is as strong as one could expect, though the blow seemed as though it were sufficient to break her down; for she never gave him up, but hoped till the very last. I trust his spirit will surround her and enable her to bear her manifold burdens.

"The funeral was very large. Lucretia Mott sat by the corpse, with Catharine Truman, as it was taken down into the parlor, and spoke, but as I was upstairs I could not hear what she said. Eliza Newport spoke upstairs, and in her communication advanced the idea that we might still know his presence among us, and enjoy sweet spiritual union and communion. Ann Townsend followed: most of her discourse was eulogistic, and an exhortation for those who were left to a like faithfulness. At the graveyard George Truman spoke, and as he stood before the coffin he said: 'We have here what are termed the remains of John Jackson, but he left no remains, but was perfect and entire. It is true we have here his working garment, and let us lay it reverently and gently aside. It is not necessary for me to pronounce a eulogy on his life, for it is before you, filled with precepts of love and kindness, which were strengthened by a practice always in accordance with them. He had seemed to bathe in streams of universal love, and hence came forth pure, filled with kindness and goodwill to all mankind. Neither is it needful for me to direct you how to follow his example, for that you know as well as I can tell you; as he ever told you it was simply to act up to our highest convictions of right.'

"George and Uncle John were closely united in the bond of spiritual union and love, and for George to resign his own heart's brother, as he touchingly said, was no easy task; but he felt that his spirit had been taken up into those serene heights where he could feel that Uncle John was not lost, but only gone before."

Rachel Jackson and her assistants continued the school but a short time after her husband's death and then it passed into other hands. But the Sharon pupils, as well as others who knew him, became filled with the spirit that animated their beloved teacher and friend, and in the characters of their children and their children's children, John Jackson still lives.

ELIZABETH LLOYD.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 28.

THE GENTILES.

GOLDEN TEXT.—God, which knoweth the heart . . . made no distinction between us and them, cleansing their hearts by faith.—Acts, xv., 8. 9.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xv., 1-41.

It would have been too much to hope that all the converts to Christianity among the Jews would so rise above the narrowness of Judaism as to accept the open door policy among the Gentiles. Soon after Paul's return from his first mission journey, in Galatia, "certain men came down from Judea and taught the brethren"; and their teaching was to the effect that none could become Christians who did not first become Jews, by "the Jewish rite of circumcision." With this would come also the necessity of observing all the minutæ of the Jewish law, which had long served as a great barrier to those attracted by the high morality and monotheism of Judaism. The acceptance of this teaching would have involved the rejection of a great part of the work of Paul and Barnabas. It was just the freedom from external law, together with the high ideals represented by the personality of Jesus and his representatives, which had drawn many to the evangelists. Neither they nor the church at Antioch, composed, no doubt, in large measure of Gentile converts, were ready to accept the destructive mandate of the Judean Christians. Paul and Barnabas, with others, were, therefore, appointed to go to Jerusalem and present their view of the case. We are not to infer that the Church of Jerusalem was an authoritative council, whose word would be accepted as final. It is plain from Paul's attitude in a similar case, a little later, that he would have defied the Church at Jerusalem if he could not convince them. But with true Christian spirit he took first the course of friendliness. Both parties were represented in the meeting at Jerusalem. "Certain of the sect of the Pharisees"—who were, and are, to be found among Christians as among the Jews—insisted that all must be charged "to keep the law of Moses." But the spirit of Jesus was too strong for such narrowness. Peter remembered his own experience with Cornelius (Acts, x), and spoke strongly for the Gentile converts. Paul and Barnabas told of their successful labors, and James, "the brother of the Lord," recalling the promises of the prophets, rendered judgment that only avoidance of immorality and of certain kinds of food especially objectionable to Jews, should be required of Christians. This was agreed to, and a delegation was sent with Paul to Antioch to express the judgment of the mother church. There is difference of opinion and much learned discussion as to whether this visit of Paul to Jerusalem is the same as that told of in Galatians (ii., 1-10) or not. There are many points of similarity about the two occasions; but the question cannot be decided with certainty. Some identify as the same the three visits of Acts, xi., 30; xv., and Gal., ii., 1-10. It should be remarked here that passages in Paul's letters seem to indicate that the Pharisees in the little Christian church did not give up to the moderate decisions of the apostles, but carried their hostility abroad into the churches which Paul had founded. The simple people who had gladly accepted Paul's gospel were much confused at hearing him so condemned, and doubtless many, especially among the Jewish converts, were much influenced by these mischief-makers.

Paul's epistle to the Galatians deals at length with this matter. The law had been a schoolmaster to bring men to Christ; but now that the Christ had come it was no longer needed. Paul's authority was not derived from the Church at Jerusalem, but from the Lord himself. Christ has made them free. Yet "stand fast therefore, and be not again entangled in the yoke of bondage" (Gal., v.). We do not know many details of this struggle, but we know that in the end the policy of Paul prevailed. We will meet some other cases in which it appeared as these lessons proceeded.

On the return to Antioch Paul and Barnabas proposed to revisit the churches they had founded to strengthen them in the faith, and perhaps to forestall just those difficulties with "false brethren" to which we have been referring. Barnabas wished to take Mark with him, but Paul would have none of the man who had started on the previous journey and had returned in the face of difficulties. It is with regret that we observe a "sharp contention" between these two tried friends and fellow workers (Acts, xv., 39); and it seems to have continued to separate them for some time since Paul speaks slightly of his early companion in the epistle to the Galatians (ii., 13). They divided the work between them, Barnabas, with Mark, going to Cyprus, while Paul proceeded by land to Galatia. There he visited his churches at Derbe, Lystra and Iconium, finding a companion in one Timothy, son of a Jewish mother and a Greek father, "well reported by the brethren." Paul seems to have been slightly inconsistent here, as he thought best that Timothy should be circumcised before he joined in the missionary labor; but this was probably a mere concession to prejudice in the interest of his work, the yielding a point of no importance to gain an advantageous hearing. We must notice that his message was the message of freedom—"they delivered them the decrees for to keep, which had been ordained of the apostles and elders" (Acts, xvi., 4). In presenting these decrees Paul seems to recognize the authority of the apostles and elders; but we must remember that he was as ready to stand against them if their dictum did not seem to him just (Gal., ii., 11-21). From the Galatian churches the apostle, with his companion, moved on to the Ægean Sea at Troas; whence, directed by a vision, they went over from Asia to Europe, landing in Macedonia.

FRANKLIN said that a man could increase his income or decrease his wants, and reach the same end. A man's needs and his wants are always in conflict. Hence considering needs only daily, and wants at rare intervals makes for thrift. To nurse every little want in the arms of glowing desire soon makes that want grow to a craving need, and leads to poverty, discontent and unhappiness.—[Selected.]

DOMESTIC ELOCUTION.

From the Friend (Philadelphia).

We wish that could be said to every professing Christian which was said to a Galilean disciple of Christ, "Thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee." That is, that the spirit of all the tones, modulations, and accents of their voice truly marked them as having the spirit and nature of Christ in their hearts. For we believe there is a gospel note running through the voice and conversation of the true Christian, which does indeed affect the spirit of hearers with a secret influence or savor, though they be not able to identify it distinctly to their intelligence. That secret dialect of utterance of man to man which is born of the Spirit is spirit, and to be pointed out must be spiritually discerned; while that which is born of the flesh is the carnal voice, expressive of the breathing of animal but of no spiritual life, or echo of Christ within, the hope of glory.

We need no schools or vocal training to cultivate this note of the Divine harmony, except the school of Christ whose spontaneous production these vocal reflections of the spirit of Christ are. Given the genuine Christian experience of the love and converting power of God in Christ, and the pronunciations of grace are among the signs following. They will tend to modify the accents of a whole family, wherein is stationed even one whose conversation is "as becometh the gospel of Christ."

No matter how much we have been trained in the elocution of the schools, the happiness of a family needs in its members the elocution of Christ, tempering its "habits, manners and ways of speaking and of answering when spoken to and of helping and smoothing things down and brightening things up; an education in tones of voice and in managing the facial nerves and in governing the temper." Many need that domestic elocution of Christ's spirit as a post graduate education, which should have been taken in with the very breath of a kindergarten training.

The expression of the voice is from the heart before it is from the mouth, for there its spiritual and moral quality begins to be formed; and so the door of the mouth is the heart, where the watch is commanded to be set. As "what comes from the heart goes to the heart," so the same person is variously affected by the same words, according to the spirit of the person uttering them. One may ask a question, and by it provoke peace; another give forth the very same question and provoke resentment. "What is the matter?" asks the latter. "Did not Hannah ask the very same question this morning and it was received graciously?" "Yes; the same,—but not the same. The words were the same but not their savor. Grace was poured into her lips, and my response vibrated to the same note."

The peacemakers are among the blessed; and we do well to study the modulations of voice which make for peace, or for comfort, or for courage, or for purity or for incitement to higher life. They come unstudied from hearts and lips imbued with the gospel spirit; but they have a reflex action even on the imitator who aspires to their virtue. The very concern and effort to produce them is a part of that service by which we receive more grace, and become of that nature whose tone we would imitate in quest of so holy an endowment.

The Psalmist's aspiration contains the progressive rule of the school of Christ wherein all gospel elocution, including the domestic; is taught: "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer." The four steps of this Christian voicing are experienced in the reverse of the order thus expressed. First He is faithfully believed in as "My Redeemer." Thereupon a sense of this power is received and ascribed to Him as "my strength." Thence is inspired that meditation of the heart which is acceptable in his sight, and out of the abundance of a heart thus exercised come forth acceptable words in the acceptable spirit.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

WHY WILL YE DIE ?

I CANNOT fly from my thoughts, my solicitude for this highly professing society is often with me. Although I am not free from infirmities, I cannot but feel that the weal or woe of what is known as Quakerism, depends upon the self-wills of its membership: if these be cultivated we come to naught, if brought down, we will rise again. Therefore, let us not underestimate the value of a simply good life,—just to be good, to keep life pure, to make it constantly helpful in little ways to those who are taught by it; to keep one's spirit always sweet, and avoid all manner of petty anger and irritability, is an ideal as noble as it is difficult.

"If our people met together in the city of God, their treatment of each other in their business lives would be different"; they would realize—that "we are all our brothers' keepers." And would we turn our attention more earnestly to religious exercises, and wait for Divine instruction, we would feel that Providence is honoring us, in committing to us the charge of our immortal souls. May we also remember that the secret of character-building is in educating our wills, and the will can be educated only by the Gospel of Christ.

Is it not plain that, the more guarded the education, the less crime will there be in the world, and the more real homes the wider will Christianity spread?

JOSEPH POWELL.

THE true homage to conscious nature is, in the language of religion, the glad worship of the present God. It is worship which I can render in the still night on the deck of the ship, as God's stars point my way for me, or I can render it far under ground in the shaft of a coal mine, as my poor candle shows me how a million years ago God knew my needs, and arranged for them. And never is such worship more simple and natural than when with all my heart I thank him for the color of the forget-me-not, for the grace of the clematis, or the sweetness of my mignonette.—[Edward Everett Hale.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPIKER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 1, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

"THE ROOT OF THE MATTER."

In another column we publish a letter of Bradley Gilman, a minister of Springfield, Massachusetts, well known as an earnest student of religious and social problems, on the "Cause of the Race Riots," which Professor William James has pronounced "the first comment on the lynching epidemic which goes to the root of the matter." The matter is one of deep concern to Professor James who himself has a long letter on it in the Springfield Republican. He takes a very pessimistic view of the danger ahead and of the likelihood of our getting in earnest and taking hold of the matter with understanding and vigor in time to avert worse things than we have yet seen, and for which the way is steadily and surely being prepared; but his diagnosis of the case makes very clear what the remedy must be. He points out that this negro lynching is no "transient contagion destined soon to exhaust its virulence. It is, on the contrary, a profound social disease, spreading now like forest fire, and certain to become permanently endemic in every corner of our country, North and South, unless heroic remedies are swiftly adopted to check it. . . . The North is already almost as fully inoculated as the South, and the young white American of the lower classes is being educated everywhere with appalling rapidity to understand that any negro accused of crime is public spoil, to be played with as long as the fun will last."

The psychology of the matter is that the average civilized man has deep down in his bosom the "aboriginal capacity for murderous excitement" of which he realizes absolutely nothing. Religion, custom, law and education have been brought to bear upon him for centuries to keep this down. With the slightest let up there is danger that the carnivora confined within us may get the better of us, and that "murder will again grow rampant." To quote further Professor James' own words: "It is where the impulse is collective, and the murder is regarded as a punitive or protective duty, that the peril to civilization is greatest. Then, as in the hereditary vendetta, in dueling, in religious massacre, history shows how difficult it is to exterminate a homicidal custom which is once established.

"Negro lynching is already a permitted exception in the midst of our civilization. . . . We find educated men and women making light of the baseness, as being, after all, only a rude sort of justice. . . . Negro lynching claims more and more the character of a public right. It appeals to the punitive instinct, to race antipathy and to the white man's pride, as well as to the homicidal frenzy. One shudders to think what roots a custom may strike when a fierce animal appetite like this and a perverted ideal emotion combine together to defend it.

"One or two real fanatics there may be in every lynching, actuated by a maniacal sense of punitive justice. They are a kind of "reversion," which civilization particularly requires to extirpate. The other accomplices are only average men, victims at the moment when the greatest atrocities are committed, of nothing but irresponsible mob contagion, but invited to become part of the mob and predisposed to the peculiar sort of contagion, by the diabolical education which the incessant examples of the custom and of its continued impunity are spreading with fearful rapidity throughout our population. . . . The hoodlums in our cities are being turned by the newspapers into as knowing critics of the lynching game as they long have been of the prize-fight and football. . . . And the supineness of our officials and the mealy-mouthed utterances of our journals seem to me to reveal an incredible misunderstanding of the real situation."

The American Friend (Orthodox) for Seventh month 23d contains the first of a series of articles on "Early Quakerism an Evangelical Movement," by Charles M. Woodman, which promises to be of special interest. The writer would divide the history of Quakerism into three periods—the first fifty years, marked by intense evangelical activity; the next one hundred and fifty, when the work of Friends lay along the line of philanthropy; the past fifty years (referring presumably only to what may be called the "evangelical" branch of the Orthodox body of Friends) "has acquired something of the activity of the first period, adapted, of course, to the particular temperament and demands of this age."

The writer defines "evangelical" as used in his title as "a term which has particular reference to a spiritual sphere, that sphere in which the gospel of Christ as revealed in the New Testament is proclaimed in its purity and power."

"The history of Quakerism," says the writer, "from the opening of the eighteenth century to within a period of fifty years was not an evangelical movement. . . . They seemed to have lost their power of propagation." In discussing the causes of this he thinks that the data at hand do not substantiate the position that it was due to a falling off of evangelical activity among the Friends; rather, "the religious lethargy throughout the country had its effect upon the Friends, and was instrumental in cooling off the intensity of their early zeal."

"The emphasis which the Friends have placed on one or both of these two doctrines (the Light Within and the Universality of the Light Within) has determined the divisions of their history. In the first period both positions were held, but the great emphasis was placed on the latter, and as a result the Friends went everywhere preaching to all men. In the second period the doctrine of the Universality of the Light Within slipped into the background as an active force, and the Friends turned from an earnest effort to spread the Gospel to the cultivation of their own inner life."

We note that in the record of Fox's early journeys a frequent phrase is "many were convinced," while in the story of his later life there is very seldom any mention of people being convinced. "The reason for this appears in the fact that the latter part of Fox's life was spent not in evangelizing the masses, but in forming and building up the churches which came into existence as a result of the evangelical work of his early years. . . . With him this was a perfectly natural thing. The troubles of various kinds which began to arise among his followers, necessitated just such a step. . . . That which began, however, through necessity continued, and its momentum, increased by the causes already mentioned, carried the Society from the distinct evangelical purpose of its origin, and the second period of its history became characteristically non-evangelical."

Friends who have access to the American Friend will await with interest the articles that are to follow in the series.

In the British Friend for Seventh month, which is now at hand, there is much that is of especial interest bearing on the relation of our Society to social conditions, and also on the ministry. Of the first-mentioned class are "The Leaven" by Mary Higgs, a sermon from the Parable of the Mustard Seed that deals with the present day social ferment in a most suggestive way; "The Spending of Money," a "paper read by Agnes A. Barrow introducing the discussion on Poverty at the recent Woman's Yearly Meeting;" "Social Service," an address to our younger members, by London and Middlesex Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Social Questions.

The subject of the ministry which was a matter of deep concern in the yearly meeting, and in view of the Conference on the Ministry that is to be held in the autumn, is receiving most earnest attention among English Friends. In this number of the British Friend Caroline E. Stephen of Cambridge has a communication on "The Recording of Ministers" and Charles Heath Clark has an article under the same title.

Other articles of especial interest are "Respect and Obedience" by Rachel Fairbrother (a part of which appears in this issue of the INTELLIGENCER); "Physical Training" by Arthur Rowntree, and a review of G. Holden Pike's "Wesley and his Preachers" by John William Graham.

In a communication to the British Friend, a writer not a Friend, but who has on many occasions availed himself "of opportunities of worshipping with the Friends," says, "It does not appear to me that the Ministry is used as freely as it might be. In a meeting where several Friends may be assembled who are well-known speakers on public platforms, it seems reasonable to conclude they have a message—a word even—which would be helpful to others, and yet remains unspoken. Do Friends really desire to be used of the Spirit for the edification of others? I think some do, but they are few, and those not always fully equal to the duty."

The same writer says further, "It is greatly to the credit of Friends generally that they dread proselytizing. At the same time there are occasional worshippers who are kept back from a sense that they may be intruders."

To those who are earnestly, prayerfully giving thought to the problem of making the meeting mean more in the neighborhood, such glimpses of ourselves as sympathetic outsiders see us may be "a word to the wise."

THE copy for the Friends' Almanac for 1904 has been placed in the hands of the type-setter. As it is very desirable that it should be free from errors, any changes in the times and places for holding meetings, etc., that have not already been reported should be sent at once to Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race streets, Philadelphia.

BIRTHS.

ENGLE.—At their home (Pleasantdale), near Moorestown, New Jersey, Seventh month 21st, 1903, to Aaron and Ida Lippincott Engle, a daughter, who is named Anna Lippincott Engle.

MILLER.—In Springfield, Ohio, Seventh month 2d, 1903, to F. B. and Emma Thomas Miller, a daughter, who is named Helen Rowenna Miller.

DEATHS.

BASSETT.—At Salem, N. J., Seventh month 27th, 1903, Hannah Ann Bassett, widow of Elisha Bassett, and an elder of Salem Monthly Meeting of Friends.

Funeral at 3.30 p. m. on 29th instant from her late residence in Salem.

CORSON.—In Plymouth township, Montgomery county, Pa., on Seventh month 21st, 1903, Elizabeth D. Corson, wife of George Corson, and daughter of Charles M. Cadwallader, of Warrington township, Bucks county, aged about 50 years; a member of Gwynedd Monthly Meeting of Friends.

"There is no death, what seems so is transition.

This life of mortal breath

Is but a suburb of the life elysian,

Whose portal men call death."

Through the portal that "men call death" another beautiful spirit has passed from earth into the higher life beyond. In the death of Elizabeth Cadwallader Corson her family, the Society of Friends, and the community in which she lived, have met a loss impossible to express in words. If our earthly life is given us for the development and perfection of character, it would be difficult to find one whose life was better spent than hers, so complete and finished did her character seem to her friends. In the home circle a true and loving daughter, wife and mother; in the church of Christ an active, earnest, loyal member; in the social circle always bent upon kindly service, ever desirous of seeing the best in those about her; in the community, an untiring worker for every good cause that had for its object the uplifting of humanity and the overthrow of wrong. Surely we may say of her that she has interpreted for us the loving ministry of a life of service, and now that she has passed from our midst to the higher, fuller life beyond, we realize that we have been in the presence of a pure and beautiful spirit, "redeemed of the Lord from all selfishness, and we feel grateful to our Heavenly Father that we have been privileged to know her, and for the ability to recognize and the disposition to love her." R.

MOORE.—At his home in Peoria, Illinois, Seventh month 4th, 1903, Charles Moore, in the 74th year of his age.

A BRANCH of the Catholic University of Notre Dame, Ind., is to be established at Foughkeepsie, N. Y., both institutions being conducted by the monastic Order of the Holy Cross.

SOCIETY NOTES.

ENGLAND.

FROM a religious census of the whole of the city of London taken by the Daily News, George Cadbury's paper, it appears that the average number of persons attending a place of worship on First-day is 850,000, this out of a population of some four million and a half. The Society of Friends showed a morning attendance of 990, evening (including missions) 1,281.

At the recent meeting of the Home Mission Committee "an earnest desire was expressed by many present that it should, if possible, be brought into fuller harmony with the ideal of a free ministry."

In reviewing the tract on Elizabeth Fry by Georgina King Lewis in the "Friends Ancient and Modern" Series, the British Friend says: "The authoress of this short life of Elizabeth Fry has special qualifications for her task; for a warm friendship existed between her father, the late John Stoughton D. D., and Mrs. Fry, of whom she thus heard a great deal from her early years."

Hercules D. Phillips is one of the workers under the care of London Yearly Meeting's Home Mission Committee, who "is partly employed in business as a reporter, and gives the rest of his time to the meetings at Llandrindod Wells and Llanyre." These meetings are in a new district for Friends, the meeting having been established seven years ago. It now has a membership of 64 of whom 17 are "preparative meeting members."

"The following passage" (from the Annual Report of the Summer School Continuation Committee, referring to the "Woodbrooke Scheme.") says the British Friend, "should help to remove some misapprehensions: 'The committee earnestly desire that the true objects of the Scheme should be fully understood. It is not intended to create a Theological College for the training of a class to the work of the public ministry; nor to give intellectual learning prominence over spiritual understanding and devotion. The belief of the promoters is that if our method of worship is to be maintained in the face of the changed conditions of modern life, it is essential that a better spiritual and intellectual equipment should be placed within the reach of all our members; and that effectual help toward this end can be given by offering a time of quiet study and preparation for service under competent direction, in an atmosphere of earnest Christian life, and in a district rich in religious and social work carried on in harmony with Quaker thought and methods.'"

MEETING OF CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

PROGRAM FOR SUMMER MEETING OF THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF FRIENDS' GENERAL CONFERENCE, EIGHTH MONTH 28TH TO 30TH, AT SALEM, OHIO.

Sixth-day, Eighth month 28th.

- 9.00 a. m. Meeting of Committee on First-day Schools. Herbert P. Worth, Chairman.
- 10.00 a. m. Meeting of Committee on Philanthropic Labor. John William Hutchinson, Chairman.
- 11.00 a. m. Meeting of Committee on Educational Interests. Wm. W. Birdsall, Chairman.
- 2.00 p. m. Meeting of the Central Committee. O. Edward Janney, Chairman.
- 7.30 p. m. Public Meeting. "The Faith of Friends," Joseph S. Walton, Principal of George School, Pa.; "The Call to Service," Professor J. Russell Hayes, of Swarthmore College.

Discussion.

Seventh-day, Eighth month 29th.

- 10.00 a. m. Meeting of Central Committee.
- 1.00 p. m. Meeting of Committee for the Advancement of Friends' Principles. Henry W. Wilbur, Chairman.

- 7.30 p. m. Public Meeting. "The Value of Athletics in the Development of Character," Lorin H. Baily, Ohio; "Religious Education in School," J. Eugene Baker, Principal of Friends' Central School, Philadelphia.

Discussion.

First-day, Eighth month 30th.

- 7.30 p. m. Public Meeting, under the auspices of the Young Friends' Association. "The Society of Friends and its Duty to Social Reforms," Edith M. Winder, Richmond, Indiana.

It is hoped that arrangements can be made so that a meeting on "Equal Rights" and one on "Purity" will be held on evenings during the Yearly Meeting.

Information in regard to railroad rates, time of trains, and boarding places for Friends in Salem will soon be published. It is to be an important gathering, and members of the Central Committee and other Friends should make a special effort to attend.

ADVANCEMENT OF FRIENDS' PRINCIPLES.

DURING the present year the Committee appointed at Asbury Park has carried on three lines of work; the selection and distribution of literature, the attending of regular meetings at certain points and the holding of special meetings at such places as could arrange for them.

The following are recommended for use and distribution:

1. "Meaning of Quakerism," John William Graham;
2. "Religious Views of the Society of Friends," Howard M. Jenkins;
3. "Christianity as Friends See It," Edward B. Rawson;
4. "A Quaker Message to the 20th Century," Henry M. Haviland;
5. "Summary of Christian Doctrine," Samuel M. Janney;
6. "Essay on War," Dymond;
7. "Report of the Peace Conference of Friends,"
8. "Quaker Ideals," Francis Firth;
9. "Quaker Strongholds," Caroline Stevens.

Nos. 3 and 4 can be obtained without cost on application at 226 E. 16th street, New York City; Nos. 2, 5 and 6 on application to Anna Cooper Lippincott, Riverton, N. J. Nos. 1 and 7 at 10 cents per copy of Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race streets, Philadelphia; Nos. 8 and 9 at the same address for a small price. If Associations, First Day Schools and Monthly Meetings would keep samples of these books on hand and give them away freely it would be a valuable service; a service which should be preceded by careful reading of the books on the part of the members.

Regular meetings have been attended monthly at York, Pa., by members of the committee or those co-operating with them. Several lectures have been given presenting the faith of Friends, either immediately after meeting or in the afternoon. One of these lectures was given as one of the regular lectures of the Young Men's Christian Association of the city. All have been well attended and the work there is felt to promise well. Two of the quarterly meetings, (one now a half-yearly meeting) of Ohio Yearly Meeting have been regularly attended by members of the committee during the past year. These meetings are isolated, the Friends few and somewhat discouraged, but we feel that there is life in them and capacity for excellent work. And as for isolation, what does it mean but opportunity?

The largest service of the committee has been in the way of special meetings or special visits to meetings. We may perhaps distinguish two lines of service here: the opening of the way for concerned Friends to follow out their concerns in the way of visits, and the arranging for lectures on appropriate subjects. Many of these meetings have been reported in the INTELLIGENCER. Included was a series of four evening meetings at Hancock's Bridge, N. J., a course of five lectures at Swarthmore College, and a score or more of single addresses under direction of Friends' Associations, or by assistance of individuals. In this matter again the committee wishes to earnestly ask the co-operation of Friends, either in organizations or in their private capacity. The committee will be glad to advise as to lectures and lecturers and to help with the expense or assume the whole of it, where this cannot be met in the community itself. The following lectures can be had during the coming year, either by correspondence with the speaker or with the secretary of the committee:

"The More Abundant Life," Frank Ball, Quakertown, Pa.; "George Fox and His Message," O. Edward Janney, 837 N. Eutaw street, Baltimore, Md.; "Present Day Applications of Quakerism," Edward C. Wilson, Park Avenue Friends' School, Baltimore, Md.; "The Philosophy of Quakerism," Benjamin F. Battin, Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa.; "Some Early Friends," Edward B. Rawson, 226 E. 16th street, New York City; "John Woolman," Joseph S. Walton, George School, Bucks county, Pa.; "A Quaker Revival," Henry W. Wilbur, 9 W. 14th street, New York City; "The Times of George Fox," and "The Development of the Quaker Ideal," J. Russell Smith, 3205 Baring street, Philadelphia; "Friends and the Philosophies," Henry Haviland, 19 Whitehall street, New York City; "The Prophets and their Message," and "The Quaker Faith for a Scientific Age," Jesse H. Holmes, Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa. Other lectures already promised will be reported later.

The work of the committee is limited only by the lack of workers and of money, especially the former. We feel that the Society of Friends has a real and vital message for this hesitating and doubtful time—a message at once consistent with its traditions and with those of essential Christianity, and with the rigidly scientific spirit of our age and people. We confidently call upon our young men and women to come to this service.

JESSE H. HOLMES, Secretary,
Swarthmore, Pa.

"THE end of all life is not enjoyment, but character."

☞
THERE are those in America who are willing to pay the full penny for anyone who will ably edit the smallest newspaper. America waits for a newspaper that will put its money in brains and not in blanket sheets of paper and floods of printer's ink. —[Unity.]

ADVANCING FRIENDS' PRINCIPLES IN 1770. COMMENTING editorially, The Friend (London) of Seventh month 3d says, "The picturesque account we insert today of the circular general meeting held at Bridgwater, in 1770, is suggestive of a wide field of gospel service respecting which we appear in later years to have been singularly negligent. . . . The Friends' Home Mission Committee¹ would naturally be the most likely organization to carry forward such work in correspondence with the various quarterly meetings. But there can be no reason why quarterly meetings should not imitate such gatherings themselves within their own area without waiting for suggestions from any central committee."

The account referred to, which is "an extract from a letter dated Bridgwater, April 20th, 1770," by one not a Friend, is as follows:

"This week our town has been filled with Quakers, who held their Circular Annual Meeting for the Western Counties. It was very large, being attended by many respectable persons of both sexes belonging to that Society from most parts of England. The number of Quakers amounted to about five hundred; most of them came in on Saturday and left on Wednesday. All the inns and many houses were filled, but they had no occasion to complain of their guests, for they spent their money generusly though not profusely, and behaved with a decorum consistent with the nature of their visit, for which they are justly distinguished and esteemed.

"They had previously erected a large booth to hold their meetings in, very commodiously seated, and containing about 2,500 people. Most of the principal inhabitants, divers clergymen, and a great many neighboring gentry attended, and appeared well satisfied. Notwithstanding the weather proved very wet, the booth was always filled with people who behaved with sobriety and attention that did them honor. Several principal speakers were there, amongst the rest Mr. Staples, of Hitchin, in Hertfordshire, Mr. Storer, of Nottingham, Mr. Thompson, of Compton, near Sherborn, Mr. Gurney, of Norwich, Mr. Rutter, of Bristol, &c.

"The Quakers made a very respectable appearance in general, and it was remarked that the number of young ladies; and the neatness and elegance of their dress exceeded anything of the kind we had ever seen. The Inns were all full, and many of the inhabitants very civilly offered their beds on the occasion, and a Member of Parliament who lives here, quitted his house, and genteelly offered it to the Quakers during their stay, and left the servants to attend them. They accepted it, and as many as could be accommodated went thither. I believe our townspeople will have no objection to another visit of this kind, as there could not be much less than £200 left in the town on this occasion.

"Not having been at a meeting of this sort before, I took some pains in gathering authentic information of the principal vein and design they had in their visit, and conversed with a very sensible Quaker thereon, who told me in brief as follows: That these Circular Meetings were held once a year in rotation in each of the seven counties that composed them, and with the concurrence of their Yearly Meeting in London; that their vein in it was twofold; first, to promote the great cause of religion and virtue by propagating such truths as relate to the happiness of mankind; and, secondly, to give the public in general an opportunity of being acquainted with their religious principles, by which means the prejudice for want of proper information imbibed might be removed, and the misrepresentations that some had made of their faith and doctrine might have no improper effect; that by thus affording opportunity to any who were dissatisfied with them to hear and examine the principles they hold, such might judge freely for themselves how far they were consistent with the Christian religion as established by Christ Himself and Apostles in the New Testament; that on this account they generally chose to hold their meetings in places where few or no Quakers reside, as being most likely to answer the prime end of their constitution.

¹Or with us in America, the Committee for the advancement of Friends' Principles.

"I further asked whether their ministers were not appointed, and paid for attending, as divers of them live near two hundred miles from this place; for although I knew they were not paid for preaching, yet I thought it would not be reasonable they should undertake such journeys at their own expense. He assured me they were not appointed to attend, nor paid anything for attending, that the meeting was free for all those ministers who were approved by their own meetings, that they all attended freely at their own expense in all places where none of their friends lived to entertain them; that as the promotion of morality and virtue was the prime end of their labor, the hope that this end might be in some degree answered, and the consciousness of having endeavored to the best of their ability to promote it, was a sufficient recompense for the trouble on the occasion.

"This account, which I have the strongest reason to credit, gave me a very favorable opinion of the disinterestedness of the Quaker principles and of their sincerity in maintaining them. It also excited me to attend their meetings, and justice obliges me to say that I had little to which I could object, but much to approve and commend, their discourses having a general tendency to discourage vice and immorality, and to promote those virtues and that religion which is universally obligatory on a rational being, and best conduces to their happiness. I will not attempt to account for principles which can make a people thus apply their time and money for the good of mankind from the most disinterested and benevolent motives, but must confess I think it a subject worthy the most sagacious philosopher to investigate, and perhaps on an impartial scrutiny it may appear from its nature, tendency, and effects, to be Divine in its origin."

It is of nature to communicate one's self; it is of culture to receive what is communicated as it is given. —[Goethe.]

EMIGRATION OF ROBERT AND HANNAH FURNAS.

Read at the Furnas Reunion, Waynesville, Ohio, Sixth month 3d, 1903, by Davis Furnas.

ONE hundred years ago this vicinity was an unbroken wilderness, through the dense forest of which roamed many Indians, also wild animals in abundance, consisting of elk, bear, deer almost innumerable, wolves, panthers and wildcats; wild turkeys also abounded in great numbers.

Amid these surroundings, our grandfather, the first of the Furnas family to leave Carolina and seek a home in Ohio, selected this spot, the ground on which we are now assembled, for a home, and here he resided for sixty years and then passed into the great Beyond, full of years and esteem.

To you, the descendants of Robert Furnas, I shall relate some of his experiences in emigrating from South Carolina and locating and building a home, and I shall speak of some incidents of his life as we are on this historic spot that he made the home for himself and family for so many years.

Looking back at his career it would seem to those of the present day more like fiction than reality. Having conscientious scruples against living in a slave State he resolved to seek a home in a free State where slavery did not exist, and to do so he gave up a good home and many comforts to emigrate to this wilderness. Imagine if you can what was necessary for this enterprise.

In 1802 he came on horseback to this country to see the possible chance for making a home in the unbroken forest. He returned to his home determined to make the attempt. With his description and encouragement he induced two of his brothers-in-law, Jehu and Christopher Wilson, to try their fortunes with him; so the next year, 1803, they prepared to make the journey. As railroads had not been thought of at that time, a more primitive way had to be taken. Each family packed what goods they thought necessary in a wagon, leaving room enough for the women and children. Each family had, I believe, four horses, two hitched to the wagon and two following after to be used in case of emergency; and each family had three or four milch cows which were a necessary appendage, furnishing milk on the way for the children.

Our grandparents had four little children. My father was but six weeks old when they started. As the three wagons started in procession, we can imagine the mothers and children taking a last look at the old home and bidding good-by to their many friends, while their thoughts turned involuntarily to the long rough journey to the wild new country over mountains and rivers, where they must build a home and have but few comforts for many years. Perhaps one man was in the first wagon to show the way, while the women drove the other teams and the other men drove the cows. When night came on and they found a suitable place they built a fire and cooked their meals and rested as best they could either in their wagons or on the ground. They soon came to the mountains, and on the rest of the journey through the wilderness some of the men would make excursions in the woods and kill game which furnished them with meat. This they would broil by their camp fire, and while it was broiling the odor would attract the wolves which were numerous, and they would howl around near the camp. Thus they traveled with such experiences for six weeks.

One thing I have never learned—how they got across the Ohio river. Later, in 1812, when grandfather drove his hogs to Baltimore, both hogs and horses had to swim the Ohio river at Wheeling. There were no bridges across the Ohio, and it is just possible they built a raft on which to cross.

When they reached Waynesville they found only a few log cabins. Between there and their destination only two large trees had been cut down and these had been felled by some of Wayne's army for bears. One was an immense poplar one-half mile this side of where Corvin now is, the other a large burr oak on this farm.

They came up the river, following an Indian trail until they reached their new possession. There they camped, and it took them a day to clear a way for their wagons to come from the river to this hill. They put up a tent and lived in that until they could erect the log cabin you can see there. Think of putting up a house without lumber and nails! There was not a saw-mill within miles; no plank for floor, so they hewed puncheons and fitted them in place; there being no nails, every piece was held in place by wooden pins, except the gables; they were enclosed by clapboards. Possibly they were held in place by nails that were made in the shop by our grandfather.

The nearest mill when they arrived here was some thirty miles away, so they used hominy largely in place of meal or flour. Salt was something they needed, but could not get here. A man who had just moved from Kentucky said he was acquainted with the Kanawha salt works, and if they would furnish a wagon and four horses he would go and bring a load for the neighborhood. Grandfather offered his wagon and the Wilson brothers two horses each, and the man started. When he did not return as soon as they expected, they made inquiry and found that he had taken his wife and children. They traced him into Kentucky where they lost track of him and never heard of him or their wagon and horses afterwards.

Now, imagine our grandparents occupying their new log house with their limited resources. One woman to clothe her four children, herself and husband, spinning, weaving and making everything they wore, besides cooking and doing numerous other things. There was no place to buy anything nearer than Cincinnati, and not much there. As the three families came through that place on their journey, they thought as they were approaching their destination, they would get some more cooking utensils, and in replenishing their stock they bought all the pots and kettles that were for sale in the city. There were no stoves then, no matches, none of the many conveniences we are all used to. All their wearing apparel came from their own labor on the farm.

There were no doctors in the neighborhood. Grandfather was one who was called on to perform the duties of surgeon to all the neighbors, setting broken bones, etc. He had a lancet, and the custom those days was to be bled every spring, and sometimes oftener, to let the bad blood out. He accommodated all who came to him in this way. He also wrote wills and contracts of different kinds, but never received anything for his services. Among all his various duties he did not forget those of religion. Very soon after his arrival here he helped to establish the first meeting in Waynesville, and was one of the first clerks of Miami Monthly Meeting of Friends. Through all his busy life he never failed to attend meeting twice a week when at home, and often took his hired help with him.

He and his devoted wife traveled life's journey together for more than sixty-seven years, reared eleven children, and saw them all married and comfortably settled in their own homes. He was greatly interested in all modern improvements; saw and rode on the cars running through his farm, and finally passed on to the great Beyond after a life of more than ninety years, loved and respected by all who knew him. About one year after his death the companion of his life, who had shared in the hardships of that remarkable career, passed on and their labors were ended.

Surely we, their descendants, looking back over their lives and seeing what a legacy they have left us, should be encouraged with the better facilities we have, to do our work of to-day as faithfully as they did theirs.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

UPPER GREENWICH MEETING.

THE accompanying engraving was made from a photograph taken by our friend John H. Bradway, and presents a picture of the meeting-house at Mickleton, Gloucester county, N. J., as it now is. The building is of brick, and as near as can be ascertained was built in the years 1798 and '99. It is situated on the northwest side of the main road leading from Cooper's Ferry, Camden, to Salem, then known as the king's highway, and marked with mile stones bearing the date, 1773, fourteen miles southwest of Camden. Mickleton railroad station is now one-fourth of a mile to the northwest of the meeting-house. In the summer of 1898 the portico in front was erected and the interior of the house remodeled, new cushioned-seats added, and the floor covered with carpet of neat design, presenting a quiet, plain and attractive appearance.

The First-day morning meetings are usually well attended, from sixty to one hundred or more being present, a larger part of these in the younger walks of life. The mid-week meetings are smaller, usually from twenty to thirty. Our beloved and worthy friends, Edward and Hannah R. Cooper, occupy what is termed the head of the meeting, and are with very few exceptions, always found in their places, when health permits. We have three recorded ministers, and others are sometimes heard, and it is but seldom, that the spoken word is not heard amongst us, refreshing the weary and strengthening those who are struggling to overcome the many hindering things that stand in the way of the higher life. A warm welcome is assured to any one who may feel drawn to meet with the worshipers who gather in this house.

JOSEPH B. LIVEZEY.

Mount Royal, N. J., Seventh month 13th, 1903.

From a paper read by Benjamin Heritage at the Gloucester County Historical Society, on "Upper Greenwich Friends' Meeting," we learn that on Twelfth month 13th, 1756, "divers Friends who lived near Raccoon Creek" requested to hold a meeting for worship in that neighborhood on First-days. Permission was granted them to hold such a meeting for six months at Solomon Lippincott's, and for a number of years, even after they had been allowed to build a meeting-house, permission was given them once in six months or once a year to continue these meetings, and in 1763 to hold meetings on Fifth-days also. It was not until 1773, sixteen years and three months after the first indulged meeting was held in Solomon Lippincott's dwelling-house, that permission was given these Friends to hold a preparative meeting.

Benjamin Heritage says: "A very encouraging feature now is the record, shown by the records, that more persons have been admitted into membership here on application during the last decade, than were thus admitted into the Society within the entire territory of Haddonfield Monthly Meeting during the whole of this meeting's probationary stage one and a quarter centuries ago."

In 1809 a proposal was made to erect a school-house 27 by 33 feet, for the education of youth and a committee of five men was appointed to have the house erected. On the completion of the house another committee of five men was appointed to have the care and oversight of the school.

The paper concludes as follows: "From that date until the present there has been a like committee appointed annually for a similar purpose, except that for many years a part of the committee has been composed of women."

"From the time this school-house was erected until 1874, there was no other public school in this vicinity, and all other children enjoyed equal rights with those of Friends. The people at large were perfectly satisfied with the management, and they were exempt from any expense incurred in keeping the school house and ample grounds in repair."

Good morning! Yes, all mornings are good if we make them so!—[R. R. Shippen.]

EDUCATIONAL.

RESPECT AND OBEDIENCE.

LIFE is at high pressure now, alas, in too many school-rooms; there is a crowded time-table of mapped-out work and prescribed play, a general rush, intellectually and physically, and there seems scarcely time to stop to think; and yet everything is "for the children." But there is a serious risk lest in this arduous life one important, vitally important point be forgotten. It is a much discussed question whether virtue can be taught, whether it can be instilled into a child, whether the child has not rather an inherent instinct of virtue which is liable to be destroyed for want of calling forth and exercise. If the latter view is right, there will be danger if parents and teachers fail to realize what they themselves represent to the children, and what a child's attitude ought to be towards them. The cultivation of an attitude of respect and obedience on the part of the young towards those in authority is an important factor in character-forming. Respect and obedience are enforced, to some extent, it is true, for the easier working of the school, or the carrying out of domestic routine; but reaction against the old-time sternness has set in to excess.

Parents are now the playfellows and comrades of their children to such an extent that the beautiful names of father and mother are cast aside, and silly and belittling terms of endearment have been substituted. Teachers, from the best of motives, share the games and recreations of their charges, and not infrequently from desire for affection, or a baser love of popularity, allow the children to treat them as equals; affectionateness, not love, is carried too far, and the children unconsciously grow to look on their elders as of quite secondary importance, and themselves as supreme, when they see so much done for them, while but little is exacted from them.

"Children are educated in the virtues not by theories, but by habits"; a typical example is cleanliness. Obedience and respect are the very foundation stones of a strong character, and, as says Dr. C. G. Lang: "If we deprive a child of the instinct of obedience, we are trying to build on the mere rubble of emotion." Instead of simply evolving a deferential character from the God-given instinct of the little one, we blunt it by over-indulgence, by allowing it to disregard the will of those over it, and the lesson is only learned later in life by suffering.

Such an attitude of the elders toward young people is often the outcome of real affection, great unselfishness, and much humility. Friends are slow to magnify an office, but the office of parent or teacher magnifies the holder. "Obedience is the religion of childhood." Up to a certain stage of development good parents are, and a good teacher may be, the child's God, and with all reverence are these words written. The name of God is well known, and His attributes are generally found in the parent and teacher. Let those who have been blessed with wise parents look back into their own childhood for witness to the truth of this. The title of Father has been hallowed for all time by its Divine association. We must see to it, therefore, that to us is rendered (in a weak and childish way, it may be, but sincerely) the unquestioning acquiescence, the cheerful obedience, the reverent love that we hope the children will yield in a fuller development and with fuller knowledge to their God. This training should begin in the nursery, and extend through all the years that the child spends under our guidance. It calls for greater effort from us and for even more self-denial than playing the part of good comrade, but it is worth while. Strong character is more than ever needed to-day. If we are short-sighted enough to dispense with the outward signs of deference, we are not only marring the beauty of the child's manners, but we are violating our trust. Children invariably learn to love obedience, and to value opportunities of service; they give their best and truest loyalty to those whom they have learned to respect and obey. It is both wonderful and humbling to know that they "may rise on stepping stones" of their weak selves "to higher things."—[Rachel Fairbrother, in British Friend.]

FRIENDS' MEETING-HOUSE, MICKLETON, N. J.

THE RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS.

The trustees of the will of Cecil Rhodes have prepared a memorandum for the information of college authorities and intending candidates for Rhodes scholarships in the United States. The first election of scholars in the United States under the bequest will be held between February and May, 1904, and the elected scholars will begin residence in October. A qualifying examination will be held in each state and territory or at centers which can be easily reached. This examination is not competitive, but is intended to give assurance that all candidates are fully qualified to enter on a course of study at Oxford University. It will therefore be based on the requirements for the first public examination exacted by the university from each candidate for a degree. The Rhodes scholars will be selected from candidates who have successfully passed this examination. One scholar will be chosen for each State and territory to which scholarships are assigned. The committees and the universities making appointments will be furnished with a statement of the qualifications which Mr. Rhodes desired in the holders of his scholarships, and they will be asked, in exercising their right of selection, to comply as nearly as circumstances will permit with the spirit of the testator's wishes. It has been decided that all scholars shall have reached at least the end of their sophomore or second year work at some recognized degree-granting university or college of the United States. Scholars must be unmarried, must be citizens of the United States, and must be between 19 and 25 years old. Candidates may elect whether they will apply for the scholarship of the State in which they have acquired educational qualifications, or for that of the State in which they have their ordinary private domicile, home or residence. They must be prepared to present themselves for examination in the State they select. No candidate may compete in more than one State.—[Springfield Republican.]

The Friends' School at Newtown Square, Pa., under the care of Newtown Preparative Meeting, which has been discontinued for a few years, will be re-opened in the fall. The term will begin on Ninth month 14th, and will continue thirty-six weeks. The work of the school will be conducted so as to grade with the Friends' School of Philadelphia, at Race and Fifteenth streets. Jessie Walter Jackson, of Christiana, Pa., has been appointed to take charge of the school. She has had three years' experience in public school work, and has recently taken a course of study at the University of Michigan.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met at the home of Penrose Roberts, Seventh month 16th. The attendance was small. Isaac W. Reeder called the meeting to order and read the first chapter of Hebrews. Hannah M. Penrose continued the reading of "The Life of Benjamin Halliwell." Lizzie M. Strawn read a poem from FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER entitled "The Old Farm." Annie B. Roberts read a chapter from "A Man of Plain Speech," describing the early life of the "Barlays of Ury." Sentiments were given, and the meeting adjourned to meet the 20th of Eighth month, at the home of Howard Kinsey.

A. E. R., Cor. Sec.

ACCOITINK, VA.—The Young Friends' Association met Seventh month 19th, at the home of C. Lukens. The president opened the meeting with a Bible reading, which was followed with a "Biography of Elizabeth Newport," read by Mary Lukens. The secretary read the fifth chapter of "Janney's History of Friends." Abbie Gillingham recited "Heartsease Blossoms," and Chandlee Pidgeon "Be True." Charles Pidgeon read an editorial from FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER entitled, "Line Upon Line, Precept Upon Precept." After roll call and silence, the Association adjourned to meet at the home of Anna S. Walton, Eighth month 2d, 1903.

F. LUKENS, Secretary.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE magazines for Eighth month are largely or entirely devoted to fiction. Among the miscellaneous articles in the Atlantic Monthly is "A Letter from the Philippines," by Arthur Stanley Riggs, which throws some new light upon the character of Aginaldo; and Agnes Repplier writes in her charming way of some bloodstained historic chateaux and castles which she has visited.

Two out-of-the-way articles in The Century are "New Light on Lhasa, the Forbidden City," with photographs taken by a Kalmuk pilgrim, and "An Artist in the Antarctic," by F. W. Stokes, whose pictures are the first attempt to portray the color glories of that unknown region. Andrew D. White's description of his first mission to Germany is accompanied by a portrait of the author.

Of the stories in Scribner's Magazine a very readable one is "The Princess and the Microbe," by Margaret Sherwood, which is a satire on modern education and science as applied to love.

In McClure's Magazine a romance of the Arizona desert entitled "The Girl at Duke's," is a clean, wholesome story; and "The Day of the Dog" is sufficiently amusing to make the reader forget the heat of the dog days.

Brander Matthews, in Harper's Magazine, criticizes some of the present characteristics of the English language, and makes a plea for the improvement of its barbarous orthography. "The Luxury of Children," by Edward S. Martin, will appeal to parents who love their boys and girls.

The single exception to fiction in Lippincott's Magazine is an interesting article, "Father Kneip and His Cure," in which Maud Howe describes the wonderful sanatorium at Woerishofen, where "in the early morning all the patients walk barefoot through the wet grass," and absorb in various other ways the combined virtues of water and exercise.

THE PRIME OF LIFE.

I READ the sweet sentence or heard it spoken—

A stalwart phrase and with meaning rife—
And I said: "Now I know by youth's sweet token,
That this is the time called 'the prime of life.'"

"For my hopes soar over the loftiest mountain,
And the future glows red, like a fair sunrise,
And my spirits gush forth like a spring-fed fountain,
And never a grief in the heart of me lies."

Yet, later on, when with blood and muscle
Equipped, I plunged in the world's hard strife,
When I loved its danger and laughed at the tussle,
"Why, this," I said, "is the prime of life."

And then, when the tide in my veins ran slower,
And youth's first follies had passed away,
When the fervent fires in my heart burned lower,
And over my body my brain had sway,

I said: "It is when, through the veiled ideal,
The vigorous reason thrusts a knife,
And rends the illusion, and shows us the real,
Oh, this is the time called the prime of life!"

But now, when the brain and body are troubled
 (For one is tired and one is ill,
 Yet my strength soars up with a strength redoubled
 And sits on the throne of my broken will),

Now, when on the ear of my listening spirit,
 That is turned away from the earth's hard strife,
 The river of death sounds murmuring near it—
 I know that this is the prime of life.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in the Home-maker.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

ONENESS.

O PRECIOUS gift from hand divine,
 Why dost thou thus to man incline?
 That of thy gifts to him are given,—
 The joys of earth, the wealth of heaven?
 Such condescension to his estate—
 No tongue can tell, nor pen relate!
 A flow of Love, to heart and soul—
 To every land from pole to pole.

DAVID NEWPORT.

THE TYRANT'S SONG.

'Tis not the man with match alike
 Behind the barricade,
 Nor he who stoops to dynamite
 That makes us feel afraid.
 For halter-end and prison-cell
 Soon quench these brief alarms;
 But where are found the means to quell
 The man with folded arms?

We dread the man who folds his arms
 And tells the simple truth,
 Whose strong, impetuous protest charms
 The virgin ear of youth,
 Who scorns the vengeance that we wreak,
 And smiles to meet his doom,
 Who on the scaffold still can speak,
 And preaches from the tomb.

We kill the man with dagger drawn—
 The man with loaded gun;
 They never see the morning dawn
 Nor hail the rising sun;
 But who shall slay the immortal man
 Whom nothing mortal harms,
 Who never fought and never ran—
 The man with folded arms?

—Ernest Crosby, in "Swords and Plowshares."

THE CAUSE OF "RACE RIOTS."

Bradley Gilman, in Springfield Republican.

Most observant and reflective people in our country are justly concerned and even alarmed at the recent increase in lynchings, and the unparalleled boldness and brutality of mobs. These acts of violence have usually found expression toward negroes, and have hastily been set down as manifestations of race enmity. But closer analysis will furnish evidence that such disgraceful acts of violence as that at Evansville do not arise mainly from any natural clashing between whites and blacks, but are simply expressions of that brutal love of bloodshed which lurks at the bottom of many hearts which are presumably civilized. The attack on blacks by whites, in such cases, is merely an excuse for the indulgence of homicidal instincts. The fact that a man has black pigments in his epidermis is not the cause, but simply the occasion, of his being attacked and butchered. His color offers an easy mark, and a plausible excuse for letting loose certain savage instincts in lawless hearts. A similar condition is to be seen in times of strikes; less and less do workmen, members of labor unions, resort to violence; but evil individuals—most of them outside the unions—seize the opportunity offered by the confusion and excitement of the strike and indulge in pillage and murder. The cause of such riots, therefore, as that one at Evansville, is not to be found in any racial antipathy, but in ferocious instincts that seize any means of expression which is offered. There are many classes in our heterogeneous country, and the whites and blacks, as classes, are not as sharply contrasted in character and life as are some other classes; but their contrast is marked by outward signs; the college professor, in nature and habits of life, is essentially farther removed from the dock laborer than is the average white man from the average black man; so is the architect or artist widely different from the sailor or the farmer; but members of all these classes are white, and are not so outwardly distinguishable, the one class from the other, as are the negro and the white man. When, therefore, the riotous, savage members of our American cities seek some class which they may make their victims, the color line easily offers an evil suggestion, and black men are shot down or tortured as if they were dogs.

Going deeper than this, and seeking the cause of this appalling increase in barbarities throughout our land, one may find evidence that it has arisen—at least in part—from the increasing emphasis given to "strenuous" living, during these past few years. Brute force has been exalted and physical prowess has been held up as an ideal, for individuals and nations, by men in high positions; and from this erring of the mind we are reaping the first fruits of a whirlwind harvest. If our leaders and our people had dared, with a lofty moral courage, five years ago, to choose the highway of peace and right, instead of retrograding to the barbaric ideals of a savage past, many evils would have been eliminated from our body politic, and many perils which now threaten would have been directly or indirectly crushed under the firm feet of righteous progress. It is well for us to face these facts, in order that we may deal wisely with needed remedies. The cause of so-called "race riots" and "race wars" is not racial, but lies deeper than color or outer conditions; it is rooted in the sanguinary instincts of the lower, brutal masses of our people, and the remedy is to be found only in the firm enforcement of existing laws, and in the sturdy, persistent, hopeful education of our people in moral principle and sentiments of justice and mercy, and in a love of country which shall make us resolve to be no longer a by-word among more civilized law-abiding nations, but real leaders in a real civilization, which embodies justice for all, and compassion and helpfulness toward the meek and oppressed.

STATEN ISLAND, once as notorious as New Jersey for the size and ferocity of its mosquitos, has been practically cleared of these pests by Health Officer Doty, who has kept a keen watch on all the breeding places, and, by means of oil, ditching, draining, etc., prevented the larvæ from developing.

CURRENT EVENTS.

CASSIUS M. CLAY died at Richmond, Ky., Seventh month 22d in his 93d year. He was an abolitionist, duelist, and radical in every phase of his life. He was the son of General Green Clay of the revolution, and a kinsman of Henry Clay. He studied at Centre College, Ky., at Transylvania University and at Yale. While at Yale he heard William Lloyd Garrison and became an abolitionist and so proclaimed himself on his return to Kentucky. His great wealth, his independent spirit, his burning eloquence and his untiring loyalty to every cause which he had at heart made him a prominent factor in the politics of his State and country. He was instrumental in introducing the public school system into his native State and did much to reform the jury system. His anti-slavery proclivities were so strong, however, that he was denounced by both the old parties, assailed by the press, platform and pulpit, and dogged by armed men, which only served to rouse him to more vigorous action. He was in constant danger, and his life was openly threatened. He was Minister to Russia from 1863 to 1869. In the early days of Cuba's struggle he was President of the Cuban Aid Society.

WILLIAM A. MILLER, was removed two months ago by the public printer from his position of assistant foreman in the Government Printing Office because he had been expelled from the local union of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders. He complained to the Civil Service Association, and on the recommendation of that body he was ordered reinstated because he had been discharged in violation of the Civil Service rules. The local Bookbinder's Union appealed to the President, stating that their constitution forbade them to work with a man who had been expelled from the ranks, and making complaints against Miller for overbearing conduct and obscene language. The President replied that no rules or resolutions of the Union could be permitted to override the laws of the United States, and that if charges were made against Miller through the proper channels they would be investigated. The bookbinders have decided to continue at work for the present.

The visit of King Edward to Ireland just as the Irish land bill passed third reading by a large majority, is a manifestation of his desire to right the wrongs of that unhappy country. On the 28th ult. the King and Queen held a splendid court in Dublin Castle at which they received a representative body of the Irish nobility and the Irish people. On the following day they visited a number of public institutions, and dwellings built for the working people by Lord Iveagh and others. One effect of this visit has been to establish more cordial relations among the different classes of the Irish people.

ALTHOUGH Prince Ching of China and Count Cassini, the Russian Minister, have denied that there has been any formal agreement in regard to ports in Manchuria, Secretary Hay has authorized the statement that definite and binding assurances have been given by China and assented to by Russia, that two ports shall be opened to the United States, and that nothing remains to be settled but the question of the date. It is understood that the ports will be Mukden, the principal inland port of Manchuria, and Ta Tung Kao, at the mouth of the Yalu river. The latter was selected because it is not closed by ice during the winter.

ARNOLD WHITE, writing to the Philadelphia Public Ledger from St. Petersburg, after conversing with ministers who are high in office, expresses the belief that Russia would consent to a conference with England and America, for the settlement of the Jewish problem on broad international lines. The Hebrew population of Russia, which is confined within fifteen provinces, has quadrupled since 1843, and the great mass of the Russian Jews are poor to the verge of starvation. The main features of the plan proposed are that Russia shall provide ample territory for her Jewish subjects, and that the other powers shall find capital for their establishment within this territory, this capital to be furnished by the Jewish Colonization Association, and by contributions from wealthy Jews and Christians.

The Legislature of Texas, recently adjourned, passed an excellent child labor law; it provides that no child under twelve years of age can be employed in any establishment where machinery is used; that children between twelve and fourteen cannot be employed unless they are able to read and write English, excepting children of widowed mothers or invalid parents; that no child under fourteen shall work between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m., and that no children under sixteen shall work in mines, breweries or distilleries.

NEWS NOTES.

A "SHAM battle" of the National Guard of Missouri at the encampment near St. Joseph ended in a real fight, a number being seriously injured.

GOLD medals have been conferred upon John S. Sargent and E. A. Abbey, American artists, by the German Emperor, in connection with the Berlin Art Exhibition.

The novelist, B. L. Farjeon, son-in-law of Joseph Jefferson, died at his home in Hampstead, England. In his younger days he was hailed as the worthy successor of Dickens.

LEADERS of the People's Party and other political reform leaders met in Denver on Seventh month 27th to confer in regard to the amalgamation of the various reform forces of the nation into one party.

THE Japanese Imperial Education Association has recommended to the Government to make compulsory in the schools the study of the Roman alphabet and the Romanization of Japanese writing.

THE successor to P. M. Arthur as chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is First Assistant A. F. Youngson, who however, is critically ill and has not yet been informed of the chief's death.

PROF. H. C. PARKER, of Columbia University, succeeded in climbing to the top of Mount Hungabee, one of the most difficult peaks of the Northern Rockies. He found the elevation of the summit to be 11,500 feet.

A DESPERATE battle was fought at Ciudad Bolivar between the revolutionary forces and the Venezuelan Government forces, some 1,500 being killed or wounded on both sides. The city was captured by the Government army.

SIX representatives of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde, who are fine examples of the German-American system of physical training, surprised the mother country by winning six of the field events at the great International Gymnastic meet at Nuremberg.

A CHARTER has been granted at New Haven, Conn., to complete the last gap, a distance of five miles, in the through trolley line from New York to Boston. The distance is 251 miles and the quickest possible time will be 20 hours, the cost $2.85, the fare by rail being $5.

THE president of Liberia College, Robert B. Richardson, of Monrovia, Liberia, who is also an associate justice of the supreme court there, has come to this country to study educational methods. He is visiting Washington, New York and Boston during his stay of five weeks.

JOHN W. BISHOP, deputy surveyor of the New York Custom House, who was sent abroad to study the examination of baggage at European ports, has returned, and on his recommendation, changes are to be made which will make the inspection of baggage much less irritating and troublesome.

THE International Hebrew conference, an interdenominational body, represented by delegates from several countries and speaking various languages, opened at Mountain Lake Park, Md., Seventh month 24th, fifty Hebrew and Christian ministers being in attendance. A union of Hebrews and Christians is contemplated.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

8TH MO. 2.—AT NEWTOWN, DELAWARE Co., Pa., a Circular Meeting under the care of a committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting, at 3 p. m.

8TH MO. 2.—THE FRIENDS OF WHITE Plains under the care of New York Monthly Meeting will meet at No. 42 Fisher Ave., at 11 a. m.

8TH MO. 2.—ACCOITINK, VA.. YOUNG Friends' Association, at the home of Anna S. Walton, 8TH MO. 2.—BYBERRY, PA., YOUNG Friends' Association, at the meeting-house, 3 p. m.

8TH MO. 3.—FRIENDS' FLOWER AND Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Ave., at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

8TH MO. 4.—PHILADELPHIA QUARTERLY Meeting, at Race Street, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.

8TH MO. 6.—ABINGTON QUARTERLY Meeting, at Gwynedd, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 11 a. m. Friends who leave the Reading Terminal, Philadelphia, at 9.02 a. m., will find a special trolley car at Ambler to take them directly to the meeting-house.

8TH MO. 8.—MIAMI QUARTERLY MEETING, at Green Plain (near Selma, O.) at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m. (All standard time).

8TH MO. 8.—SALEM QUARTERLY MEETING, at Salem, O., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day, at 10 a. m.

8TH MO. 8.—NEW YORK MONTHLY MEETING, at Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, at 2.30 p. m.

8TH MO. 15.—SHORT CREEK QUARTERLY Meeting, at Short Creek (one mile from Mt. Pleasant, Ohio), Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

8TH MO. 17.—FAIRFAX QUARTERLY Meeting at Goose Creek (Lincoln Va.), at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m.

8TH MO. 24.—INDIANA YEARLY MEETING, Richmond, Ind. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m. In order that comfortable homes may be provided for those that have a prospect of attending, they are requested to send their names to Esther S. Wallace, 230 S. 12th Street, Richmond, Ind.

THE JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE SEVERAL Yearly Meetings for Work among Isolated Members will meet between the sessions of Indiana Yearly Meeting.

THE REPORTS OF ASBURY PARK Conference have been sent to the Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race Streets,—a package for each monthly meeting belonging to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Correspondents are requested to call for them or to give directions concerning their shipment.

THE FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION acknowledges receipt of the following additional contributions to the Children's Country Week Association:

Sarah F. Corlies, . . . $ 5.00
An Abington Friend, . . . 10.00
Previously reported, . . . 20.00

Amount, $35.00

JOHN COMLY, Superintendent.
Seventh month 27th, 1903.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a. m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a. m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

UP THE HUDSON.

On August 19th, and September 3d, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run its usual midsummer excursions to the "Upper Hudson," under personal escort. Special train will leave Broad Street Station at 7.34 a. m., stopping at principal points between Philadelphia and Trenton.

A stop will be made at West Point, giving those who disembark an hour and a half at that point, and enabling them to view the United States Military Academy.

In order to insure an early return, no stop will be made at Newburgh, although the steamer will run to a point off that city and there turn.

Tickets will be sold at the following round-trip rates: From Philadelphia, Bristol, and intermediate stations, $2.50; Trenton, $2.00; Tulpehocken, Westmoreland, and intermediate stations, $2.50; Upsal, Carpenter, and Allen's Lane, $2.60; Wissahickon Heights, Highland, and Chestnut Hill, $2.70.

At Germantown Junction connection will be made with regular trains from Chestnut Hill Branch.

Tickets good only on special train and connections at above points.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada'

"The Best is the Cheapest"

Applies in a two-fold way to

"NICE"

Paints,
Stains,
Enamels,
Varnishes
Finishes.

They are the best quality possible, hence the most economical, and doubly so when you consider that they cost no more than inferior goods.

YOU CANNOT AFFORD, Mr. Property Owner, to ignore these facts when arranging for exterior painting and interior finishing.

Send for Literature.

EUGENE E. NICE

272-274 South Second Street
PHILADELPHIA

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN DAIRIES. Special attention given to serving families. Office 605 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

— JOSEPH L. JONES

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co. 809 Hanter Street, Philad'a, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal.

1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a. C. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

BREAD MACHINE

For Household Use. Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (OTRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52nd & Mifflin Sts., Philadelphia

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT, MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts. 5 PHONES.

SUMMER TOUR TO THE NORTH.

VACATION TRIP TO CANADA VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad personally-conducted tour to Northern New York and Canada, leaving August 12th, covers many prominent points of interest to the Summer tourist—Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Quebec, The Saguenay, Montreal, Au Sable Chasm, Lakes Champlain and George, and Saratoga. The tour covers a period of fifteen days; round-trip rate, $125.

The party will be in charge of one of the Company's tourist agents, assisted by an experienced lady as chaperon, whose especial charge will be the unescorted ladies.

The rate covers railway and boat fare for the entire round trip, parlor-car seats, meals en route, hotel entertainment, transfer charges, and carriage hire.

For detailed itinerary, tickets or any additional information, apply to Ticket Agents, Tourist Agent 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; or address George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

A NEWARK gentleman recently read Charles Wagner's book, "The Simple Life," and noticed that Wagner's birthday was set down as "January 3d, 1852, born on Sunday morning." Figuring out that "January 3d, 1852," did not come on "Sunday," but on "Saturday," he communicated with the publishers, and was by them referred to Grace King, who wrote the introduction. She forwarded his letter to Charles Wagner, and in the course of time he received a postal card in English reading:

PARIS 2 April, 1903.

"Answer to the question made to Miss Grace King in your letter from 17 April. "DEAR MR. VAIL: C. Wagner is born on a Sunday, the 4, and not the 3 January, 1852—morning at 10 o'clock.

"With kind regards,

"C. WAGNER."

This was addressed "Newark, N. J., New York (U. S. A.)," and the eminent Frenchman made an error in dating his letter, as he did not receive the note of inquiry until April 17th; yet dated his reply April 2d. So Mr. Vail has a literary curiosity which he justly prizes.

This is a story never before published concerning President Roosevelt, and written by a man who was on the train during the President's campaigning tour when he occupied the second place on the national ticket. A party from Denver met the special at Wyoming to escort it through Colorado on a four-days' trip. Colonel Roosevelt had just returned, full of vigor and life, from an exciting ride with his Rough Riders. As soon as he entered the car he leaped joyfully half a dozen times, touching the ceiling at every jump, and singing at the top of his voice:

"Oh, the Irish and the Dutch,
Why they don't amount to much,
But hooray
For the Scandahoovian!"

"Let me publish that, Colonel," requested a press representative.

"Don't you do it!" promptly commanded Colonel Roosevelt. "It's only a joke, and, besides, I'm Dutch myself." — [Henry Edward Warner, in Lippincott's.]

'Member, awful long ago—
'Most a million weeks or so—
How we tried to run away,
An' was gone for 'most a day?
Your Pa found us bafe - an' nen
Asked of we'd be bad again,—
An' we promised, by-um-by.
Do you 'member? So'd I.

'Member when I tried to crawl
Frough vat hole beneaf your wall,
An' I stuck, becuz my head
Was too big? Your Muvver said,
When she came to pull me frough,
S'prised you didn't try it too—
An' you did it, by-um-by.
'Member? Do yuh? So'd I.

'Memberwhen your Muvver said
'At she wisht I'd run an' do
All we mischief in my head
All at once, an' get it frough?
S'pose we did, why, maybe ven
We could do it all again!
Guess you could if we should try,
Will y', sometime? So 'll I.

—Burgess Johnson, in Harper's Magazine.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEORGE C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner. (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. Dr. Boardman, Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

 All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

United Security

Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
 JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
 ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
 Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
 CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
 Assistant Treasurer.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
 ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES, ASSIGNER, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
 FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
 INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
 Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, $ 4,487,613.08
 Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
 Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
 T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
 Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
 Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
 J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
 David G. Alsop, Actuary
 J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
 Samuel H. Truth, Treasurer
 C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

Samuel R. Shipley, James V. Watson,
 T. Wistar Brown, William Longstreth,
 Henry Haise, Edward H. Ogden,
 Richard Wood, Thomas Scattergood,
 Charles Hartsborne, J. Preston Thomas,
 Asa S. Wing, Robert M. Janney,
 Philip C. Garrett, Marriott C. Morris,
 Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

Merchants' Trust Company,

611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
 CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
 SURPLUS, 50,000.00
 UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 42,349.59

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveyancing done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum

JOSEPH R. RHODES, President.
 JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
 HORACE E. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
 CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.
 WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFERNY,
 S. DAVIS FACE, WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
 JOSEPH R. RHODES, EDWARD G. McCOLLIN,
 JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
 THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
 CHAS. S. HENCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
 EDWARD S. SAYERS, EDGAR DUDLEY FARIES,
 JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE E. PEARSON.

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

SELECT EXCURSIONS TO TOLCHES-TER BEACH, CHESAPEAKE BAY.

On Wednesdays, August 5th and 19th, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company (Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company) will run special low-rate excursions to Maryland's most popular watering place, Tolchester Beach. This place is held in high favor by all who have visited it. It has all the attributes of a first-class resort, and especially appeals to families. No liquors are allowed on train, boat or grounds. Every possible kind of amusement is to be found. The location, on the prettiest part of the beautiful Chesapeake Bay, speaks for itself.

A special train will be run on the following schedule, and round-trip tickets will be sold at the rates quoted.

Leave	Time a. m.	Rate.
Philadelphia, Pa.,	7.00	$1.50
West Philadelphia, "	7.03	1.50
Sharon Hill, "	7.15	1.50
Moore, "	7.20	1.35
Ridley Park, "	7.23	1.35
Chester, "	7.29	1.25
Thurlow, "	7.33	1.25
Linwood, "	7.37	1.20
Wilmington, Del.,	8.03	1.00
Newport, "	8.11	.90
Newark, "	8.26	.75
Iron Hill, Md.,	8.31	.75
Elkton, "	8.37	.75
North-East, "	8.47	.50
Charlestown, "	8.51	.50

Returning steamer will leave Tolchester Beach at 4.00 p. m.

Children between five and twelve years of age, half the above rates.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is Martha J. Warner and to the advertiser.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets (Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Death takes a hand in every partnership.

How much of the success of your firm depends upon your life or that of your partners?

Whatever it is you should provide an equivalent for it by securing insurance in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE, 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, EIGHTH MONTH 8, 1903.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)
Great Russell Street, LONDON
Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night
Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 8-5 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $2.60) per day.
Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.
Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

The Albertson, New, First-class Family Hotel.
SITUATED AT MANTOLOKING, N. J.
Three miles this side of Bay Head, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, one and one-half hours from Broad Street Station or Market Street Wharf. Fine bathing, Fishing, Yachting and golfing. Send for booklet.
J. R. ALBERTSON,
Formerly of Peasas Manor, Pa.

The Bartram, Accommodates 100 guests.
WILDWOOD, N. J.
Pleasantly situated within 300 feet of beach. Special attention given to the menu.
J. ALFRED BARTRAM, Owner and Manager.

THE DRIFTWOOD
OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Special Spring Rates. For particulars address
SARAH J. PAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst, Second House from Beach
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHU,
1185 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN DRIVE, TENNESSEE AVE., ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal.
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

New Books and Pamphlets.

The Meaning of Quakerism. An address by John William Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail $0.12.
FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER. "The reading of which is a spiritual feast."
Education and Religion. An address by John William Graham. 48 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.11.
The Lord's Supper. A historical study from the standpoint of the Society of Friends. By John W. Graham. 64 pages. $0.10. By mail, $0.12.
The Dookhobors. By Joseph Elkington. A historical review, with the author's personal experience among them last summer. Illustrated. $0.00.
FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
N. W. cor. 15th and Race Streets, Phila.

FOR RENT.—BUCK HILL FALLS COTTAGE, The Hemlocks, containing five bedrooms and fully furnished for housekeeping, can be rented for September or October. Address Dr. W. W. Speakman, 1307 Pennsylvania Bldg., 15th and Chestnut Sts., Phila.

FOR RENT.—OUR HOUSE BEING LARGER than we require, would rent to small refined adult family, desirable part of house for light-housekeeping. Nicely located in West Philadelphia near Park. Reasonable. References exchanged. Address No. 3, this Office.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

WANTED.—COPIES OF FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, issue of Seventh month 25th, 1903. Address this Office.

WANTED.—TWO YOUNG WOMEN TO TAKE entire charge of housekeeping in large family. City. Good wages. Address H, this Office.

WANTED.—AN ELDERLY FRIEND DESIRES position as matron or housekeeper in some Friends' institute. Prefer either in or near Philadelphia. Address Mrs. Eliza Davis, Bloomiegdale, Ind.

WANTED.—REFINED WOMAN OR SMALL family to take main part of furnished house, with the boarders now in it. All conveniences. Terms liberal. Address A., 288 West Front Street, Media, Pa.

WANTED.—HOUSEKEEPER AND COMPANION, family of two. Chester county. Call on or address F. S. W., 3134 Clifford Street, Philadelphia.

WE OFFER A PLEASANT HOME for a feeble-minded young lady, in a Friends' family. Address, for particulars, Y. Box 220, Langhorne, Pa.

WANTED.—A COMPETENT PERSON AS mother's helper and seamstress. A pleasant home, and consideration shown. Address S. S. Thornton, 556 W. 34th St., New York City.

WANTED.—A WORKING HOUSEKEEPER, at Linton's Model Coffee House, 27 S. 4th St., Phila.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

It's Easier to get the First Order than to keep a customer coming year in, year out. Does it mean anything to you that we have many customers who were with us when we started in business?

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,
MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PHONOS.
1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes
142 South 11th Street
I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.
Thompson Shouers, 2212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.

Richards & Shouers, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1225 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.
CONSHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North DARRIS.
Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES

BUCK HILL FALLS.

Let those who will strive on their barren roads, And prick themselves to haste with self-made goads, Unheeding as they struggle day by day; If flowers be sweet, or skies be blue or gray; For me, the loce, cool way by purling brooks The solemn quiet of the woodland pools, A song-bird somewhere trilling sadly gay, A pause to pick a flower beside the way.

—Paul Lawrence Dunbar.

PRESIDENT TRUESDALE, Vice-President Caldwell and General Passenger Agent Lee of the D. L. & W. Railroad reached Crestco a few days ago in their private car for a visit to Buck Hill Falls. They were impressed and delighted with what had been accomplished there in less than thirty months (Thirty months ago there was only a little ice house in the Estate). The fact that every cottage was supplied with running water and connected with the sewer system seemed to impress them particularly. They visited the Glen and declared they had no idea there was such a beautiful spot in the Pocono region. The varied architecture of the cottages, the log building of the Greenleaf Library, the new dining room and modern kitchen also pleased them. The Railroads are co-operating effectively this year to increase the importance of the Pocono region, General Passenger Agent Lee having been greatly impressed with its many advantages as a summer resort.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY, Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY, Olympia, Washington.

Pocono Pines Assembly AND Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing, 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.
New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager, Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS

IRON FENCING
FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.
809 Master Street, Philad'a, Pa.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME. WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* * * TELEPHONE No. 133-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXXII.	497
POETRY: FEAR NOT! O SOUL!	497
THE LEGACY OF WILLIAM PENN AND HIS PEOPLE TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES.	497
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
Paul in Europe.	499
A PLEA FOR HUMANITY.	500
RELIGION.	501
A REVIVAL OF PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY.	501
THE COUNTRY WEEK ASSOCIATION.	501
EDITORIAL:
The Decline of the Ministry.	502
Notes.	502
BIRTHS, DEATHS.	503
SOCIETY NOTES.	503
AMONG THE PENNSYLVANIA MOUNTAINS.	504
EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS FROM ISOLATED FRIENDS.	505
IN THE DAYS OF "PERPETUAL MOTION."	506
EDUCATIONAL.	507
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	507
LITERARY NOTES.	508
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	508
POETRY: The Heroic Age; Kind Words.	508
THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.	508
MISCELLANY: Chestnut Raising in Southern Europe; Primer versus Gun; Cost of Christianizing the World; Handicraft Revival.	510
CURRENT EVENTS.	511
NEWS NOTES.	511
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	512

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)

REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
6 1/2 Sanson Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia,
OFFICES: { Ambry, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWENE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, Editor,
19 West Fourth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

SPECIALS IN SEASONABLE SILKS

Midsummer Sale prices for some of the choicest of our Silks, and of the kinds now most in demand—it is not strange that our sales for the month just closed showed such a substantial increase. These are some of the very attractive values for this week:

Spot-proof Black Silks

Desirable for traveling gowns, coats and wraps, water does not spot it. Two widths—25-inch at 85c, and 27-inch at $1.00 a yard.

Natural-color Pongee Silk

One of our popular specialties, in the right weight and texture, for wraps and traveling gowns; 32 inches wide; $1.00 value at 75c.

45c Imported Corded Wash Silks at 25c.

A fresh lot for this week's selling, comprising a variety of dainty color effects. The best Wash Silk value Philadelphia has seen for years.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' School,

FOURTH AND WEST STREETS, WILMINGTON, DEL.
A day school for both sexes, fitting for either college or business. Scientific, Latin scientific, and Classical Courses. Fourteen teachers. Excellent equipment. Thorough instruction. Graduates entered on certificate in leading colleges. Fall term begins Ninth month (September) 1st. For illustrated catalogue address
HERSCHEL A. D'GRIS, A.M., Principal.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER,
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.
Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES. Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Jenkintown, Pa.
Or,
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogonitz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City. For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 8, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 3a.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XXXII.

In the desire after outward gain the mind is prevented from a perfect attention to the voice of Christ; yet, being weaned from all things, except as they may be enjoyed in the divine will, the pure light shines into the soul.

JOHN WOOLMAN.

From his Journal.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

FEAR NOT! O SOUL!

SWING out, O Soul! Fear thou no foe!
For tho' thou may not know the way to go,
Others will be there to go with thee
On thy journey o'er that trackless sea.

A palm divine will put its hand in thine,
Dear loved ones gone before will then entwine
Their arms with thine and tell thee all,
Then guide thy footsteps that they may not fall.

A Power unknown, unseen, divine
Will show thee where His footsteps shine,
So thou and I and all may know
'Tis safe for us and all to go.

DAVID H. WRIGHT.

THE LEGACY OF WILLIAM PENN AND HIS PEOPLE TO THE FEDERAL GOVERN- MENT OF THE UNITED STATES.¹

BY JOSEPH S. WALTON, PH.D.

THE Federal Government in the United States found the elements of its vitality in the colonial and State governments which existed previous to the formation of the Constitution in 1787; and these in turn found slumbering among the sectarian ideals in their midst much of the raw material which was so readily converted from the polity of the Church into the civic life of the people.

The advent of the Society of Friends, with its strong leaning toward individual liberty, found legislative expression in William Penn and his Holy Experiment. For nearly three-quarters of a century the Friends fused into Penn's conception of a State their own practical experience. The result was a body of legislation unique in itself, and comprehensive in its grasp of human liberty and wealth.

The colonial idea of representation was a modification of the English principle as it then existed. In the place of the three estates, the colonists demanded but one—the commons. Their influence was against representing either church property or entailed estates. They felt that the tax-making power should be close to the tax-paying power. Could these ideas have been obtained, the American Congress would have been modelled after the House of Commons, and members would have represented equal masses of property.

Other forces were, however, at work. William Penn and his people believed in district equality. He divided his province into four districts—three counties and a rural city—and gave them an equal representation in the Assembly.

This idea of district equality had been tried years before in New England, and pronounced impracticable. Plymouth, New Haven, and Hartford formed a union in 1643 for mutual protection. Each colony was entitled to two representatives, while the taxes paid and the soldiers furnished were in proportion to the wealth and population of the colonies. The failure of this union threw the idea of district equality into disfavor. Penn, however, was not in the least daunted by the adverse experience of others. After buying the three lower counties, now the State of Delaware, from the Duke of York, he gave each of these equal representation with the others.

Thus Pennsylvania was organized with six counties and a city. They were to be the units, little States with unrestrained local functions working under the over rule of a larger State. Here the idea of a United States with independent sovereignties equally represented in an upper house was struggling for expression.

When the first Continental Congress met in 1774 to draw up petitions to the English Parliament, and a bill of grievances, the question arose as to how the members should vote. The colonies were variously represented; some had seven, and some had two members. It was the general opinion that if the relative wealth of the colonies was known that should determine the amount of voting power granted. Since this information was not at hand, it was then suggested that the population of the colonies should determine their voting power; no census having been taken, this was also found impracticable. Then it was that they turned to Penn's unpopular idea of district equality. It was decided that each colony should have one vote. It would place them on an equal footing in the eyes of Parliament, said the members who favored conciliation. Thus from the seed of Penn's planting there grew on American soil that conception of State equality in representation which finds embodiment in the United States Senate, an upper house where legislation is sanctioned by a plurality of States, where neither property nor people, neither accumulations of wealth nor majority of population, shall legislate.

A supreme executive, legislative and judicial department has ever been the goal of democratic government. In the earlier attempts all these functions were comprised in the executive; he was law-maker and judge as necessity demanded. The development of free institutions seems to have been a differentiation of function in these departments, and at the same time a closer union of the three.

¹ From Friends' Quarterly Examiner (London).

Certain low forms of animal life have nerves, circulation, and digestion mingled indiscriminately in one pulpy mass. From that condition to man there has been a gradual separation and division of function, with a distinct centre of control for each—nervous system, circulatory system, and digestive system; and at the same time this differentiation has knit the three systems more intimately into one unique whole.

The struggle on the part of Parliament to disengage from the King all law-making power was imitated in the colonies. The Virginia Assembly was scarcely two years old when it asserted the right to convene and adjourn by statute. When the King heard of this he quickly realized that such an example would weaken his control of Parliament. Accordingly, at the first provocation, a writ of quo warranto was issued against the Virginia charter, and the colony ceased to be proprietary to the London Company, and became royal.

The colonial assemblies continued to adjourn at the governor's command. The people's representatives yearned for more legislative independence, but only in Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Pennsylvania was there any freedom in this direction. William Penn, against the advice of his friends and the best scholars in Europe, granted this power; and the Assembly of Pennsylvania rapidly worked out its legislative functions.

Andrew Hamilton, who served the province as Speaker of the Assembly for a number of years, declared, in his famous farewell address of 1739, that Pennsylvania's unparalleled prosperity, which had enabled her in fifty years to outgrow colonies of more than a century's standing, was due, not so much to the fertility of her soil, as to her beneficent laws and generous constitution; and among these the first was the power of the Assembly to convene and adjourn independently of the governor.

Thus the idea grew and men became accustomed to what seemed at the beginning a severance of executive and legislative. They learned that development of function and clear-cut division of duty meant a stronger tie of unity. It was the experience in Pennsylvania, and a somewhat similar experience in Rhode Island and Connecticut, that induced the framers of the Federal Constitution to organize a Congress that could collect and disperse by statute, granting to the President only the power of calling an extra session, and that under severe limitations.

It is generally supposed that the idea of the Referendum originated with Rousseau in his Contrat Social of 1761. Nearly a century before this William Penn, in his constitution for Pennsylvania, provided that all laws should be made by the governor and his council, and should be approved or vetoed by the Assembly; thus placing the veto power with the people's representatives. Penn's Frame further provided that the legislators should bring instructions from their constituents. All bills which passed the council were to be published thirty days before the election of the assemblymen.

It was Penn's idea that the people would carefully examine the laws made by the governor and the council, and instruct their representatives accordingly. The people were advised to keep a record of all instructions, and if any representative ventured to violate his trust, he should be forbidden from holding office in the future. Here is the spirit of the Referendum in disguise. The freemen were not able to see its value at that time, because they were determined to get the law-making power away from the governor and his council, and place it in the possession of the assemblymen. Yet at the same time Penn's foreshadowing of the Referendum, and his offer to the people, stirred public opinion, and ripened ideas which have firmly rooted themselves in the Far West, where the Referendum now flourishes in disguise.

The life of a State constitution beyond the Mississippi averages less than twelve years. These constitutions have grown in bulk until a volume now takes the place of a small pamphlet. Indeed, these State constitutions are compact bodies of law, strictly limiting the legislative privilege of their representatives, until their functions as law-makers are almost nothing. These State constitutions are made by a select body of men chosen for that express purpose, and the laws thus made are sent to the people to be ratified before they can become operative. The tendency over the entire United States, in making local constitutions, is to limit the powers of the representatives, showing a manifest growth toward the spirit of the Referendum, which had its beginning with William Penn.

The effort of the Bute and Grenville Ministry to fasten a system of taxation on the colonists by Act of Parliament, rather than by acts of colonial assemblies, engendered a deep-seated aversion to an executive. The royal governors became unpopular. Consequently, when the colonists produced their first crop of constitutions (1776 to 1786), the powers of the legislature were enlarged at the expense of executive duties. In Pennsylvania no provision was made for governor. A few of the indispensable functions of the executive were intrusted to a Supreme Executive Council, which was a sort of select assembly.

The bulwark of American stability is usually placed in the supreme judiciary. In England the passing of a measure makes it Parliamentary. In the United States it is possible for the individual to redress his grievance by testing the constitutionality of any law that seems to trespass upon his supposed natural rights. At the same time a check is placed upon hasty legislation sprung from the heat of factional strife. It has frequently been said that the judiciary of the United States was a new feature derived from the fertile mind of Alexander Hamilton. Nearly a century before the time of the young law-giver, William Penn granted the Quakers of Pennsylvania the Concessions of 1701. In these provision was made to insure the people against any legislation which should be out of accord with Penn's Frame or the Concessions.

A board of twelve landholders was created, who in connection with the proprietary were to constitute the "conservators of the charter." They were intrusted with the keeping of the Frame, and, if at any time a law or an ordinance should be declared by them to be contrary to the charter, it should immediately become null and void.

Here are the beginnings of the American judiciary. That such a feature was held in esteem was evident when Penn's heirs were paid for their claims, when a common debt and a commonwealth were created; then it was that the vigorous Scotch-Irish influence seized upon the government, establishing the revolutionary constitution of 1776. These people rescued from the crumbling ruins of a despised Quaker government the valued judiciary elements, and provided for a "council of censors" to serve one year in every seven. It was their duty to see that the constitution was preserved in every part, and to examine the laws, and repeal any which were not in accord therewith. The existence and operations of this council were well known when the Federal Government was framed in 1787.

Outside of the Constitution there is no more distinctly American institution than the system of nominating conventions. How to place a candidate's name before the people has ever been a serious problem in American politics. Previous to 1820 it was common for a congressional caucus to select the names, and send them out to county meetings of the party for approval.

The yearning for an unfettered freedom of choice in selecting candidates first sprang into form in Pennsylvania in 1788. The men who made the State constitution of 1776 saw in the new Federal Constitution a flat contradiction of many of their cherished dreams. They headed a bitter faction against the Constitution, and were known as Anti-Federalists. Borrowing from the church of their fathers the Presbyterian method of selecting delegates to a general synod, they immediately called a convention to meet at Harrisburg to inaugurate a movement to draw up another constitution, and thus thwart the ratification of the existing one. Failing in this, the body resolved itself into a nominating convention, the first in the nation's history. Candidates for Congress and electors to select the first president were named.

When the news of this convention spread abroad fierce opposition was at once aroused by those who were supporters of the Federal Constitution. Another nominating convention was immediately called to meet at Lancaster. County meetings were held over the State, where all freemen were invited. A nominating committee was then selected, representing the various townships. This committee withdrew to bring forward names to serve as congressmen and electors. Anyone in the audience was at liberty to shout out a name.

Thus the second nominating convention in the United States imitated the methods then common in Friends' meetings, and from these two conventions came the entire system of nominating conventions.

The method followed by Friends in representing constituent monthly meetings when securing a nominating committee, and in selecting servants of the meeting from the body at large, became a dominant factor in the development of the convention system in America.

When the Friends from personal convictions withdrew from provincial politics they had unconsciously sown seed which now lives in the constitution of the United States. And the Holy Experiment of William Penn was not all an experiment; it bore the pollen that has quickened the life of some of the most valued of American institutions.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 29.

PAUL IN EUROPE.

GOLDEN TEXT.—But ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing.—II. Thessalonians, iii., 13.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xviii., 1-17; I. Thessalonians, iv., 13-18; II. Thessalonians, iii., 10-15.

THE first European city in which Paul undertook to preach the gospel was Philippi, "which is a city of Macedonia, the first of the district, a Roman colony." Heretofore the cities visited had contained many Jews, and the first attempt at a hearing was made in the synagogue. In Macedonia, while there were Jews in many places they were a less important part of the population, and in the smaller cities there were no synagogues. At Philippi Paul and his companions, who included Silas, Timothy, and possibly Luke, went out to the river side on the Sabbath day. They had the good fortune to meet there a woman who already "worshipped God"—one who accepted the Jewish God without necessarily accepting the Jewish law—and were made at home in her household. It is likely that they continued for some days teaching by the river, largely to women; the peaceful quiet of the experience must have been as grateful as it was unusual. But it was soon broken in upon; storm and stress were not long withheld from the strenuous and intense nature of Paul. He happened to come in contact with a slave girl who had "a spirit of divination," a prophetess. She was probably somewhat of the nature of the modern trance medium, or clairvoyant, and, like many of them, she was a victim of nervous disorder. She may have heard Paul's teaching, or have been attracted by his appearance; at any rate, she took to following him, proclaiming the apostolic group "bondservants of the Most High God." Paul was "sore troubled" after this had gone on for a few days, and finally he turned upon her, speaking authoritative words of healing. His act was immediately effective upon the poor half-crazed creature, and she was healed. But her masters, who had made money out of her affliction, were angry and looked about for revenge. Paul and Silas were taken before a magistrate on a trumped-up charge, a mob was raised against them, they were scourged and cast into prison. But they bore themselves bravely throughout, and help came during the night. The jailer and family were converted and ministered to their needs. In the morning the magistrates proposed to release them, and on finding that they were Roman citizens became very apologetic and fearful, urging, however, that they should leave the city. This they did, though it is possible that Timothy and Luke were left behind for a time. Paul and Silas went on to Thessalonica, where they found a large synagogue in which they were allowed to present and argue their gospel for some weeks. Some of the Jews and many Greeks were persuaded, but the usual opposition soon appeared and they moved on to Berea. They were here well received for a time, and had good success, being finally attacked by a hostile delegation from Thessalonica. It seemed best for Paul to go on alone, leaving Silas and Timothy, who had overtaken them, to continue the work in Berea as long as possible. Paul went on to Athens, accompanied by some of his converts, by whom he sent back urgent messages to his friends to join him at once. His experiences, in the fickle and conceited Athenian crowd, all anxious to hear "any new thing," and all ready to pronounce immediate and final judgment on any teaching, are well-known, as is also his famous oration, calling them to a knowledge of that "unknown God," whom they ignorantly worshipped. His teaching had little effect at Athens; wherefore realizing the unfavorable conditions he went on to Corinth, where he was soon joined by Silas and Timothy. As the first person is not used again during this journey we may suppose that Luke remained behind or went elsewhere.

The apostles seem now to have felt that it was necessary to adopt some other plan than that of brief visits, with the establishment of small groups of unled and uninstructed believers here and there. They, therefore, settled down in Corinth for a long stay. Paul associated himself with a fellow-craftsman, Aquila, who, with his wife, Priscilla, had been exiled from Rome by the orders of the Emperor Claudius. These seem to have been converted to the Christian faith in Rome, a fact which shows how rapidly and how widely the new teaching had spread. It was less than ten years after this that Paul addressed a letter to the Christians at Rome, showing that they were a considerable body. Paul remained for a year and a half at Corinth, and in spite of the usual dissensions and contests he founded there a strong and permanent church. From here were written the two letters to the Thessalonians (52 and 53 A. D., or perhaps a few years earlier). The Thessalonian Church seems to have been one felt to be of considerable promise. Paul had spent a longer time than usual at this point, and had been on the whole more fairly received. Having now settled down for a time he writes back to them a friendly, even affectionate, letter. He reminds them of their experiences together, of his services and of their faith. Then he takes up a matter that seems to have given them some anxiety. Some of their members had died; but they had been given to believe that the Messianic kingdom was just about to be established—within their generation. Now how about those who had passed on—would they be excluded? Paul assures them that they had but "fallen asleep" (I. Thessalonians, iv., 15). When the Lord shall come the dead shall first be raised, and all shall be well. And the time is at hand—wherefore let them live pure, holy and happy lives—bearing, hoping and enduring all things. It would seem that this letter had an unexpected effect. As in the case of the Millerite craze in America early in the last century the people gave up their business, were careless of property, and went wild with excitement over the impending end of the present order of things. Hearing of this Paul writes his second letter to the Thessalonians to correct these abuses. He tells them that much must happen before the coming of "the kingdom," that its time cannot be known; and he again exhorts them to be quiet—"that they attend to their own business, that they go on with their industries, . . . living righteous, holy and godly lives" (Abbott).

For Friends' Intelligencer.

A PLEA FOR HUMANITY.

It is not so much the lawlessness as the Godlessness that causes all the trouble, some laws having no aspect whatever of God. Causes of crime can be traced to conditions which continue to exist, notwithstanding all the laws and enforcement thereof. Godlessness fosters these conditions, and mere preaching cannot reach the root of such evils; the opportunities of living must be opened, and the teaching how best to profit by these opportunities placed within easy access of all. Neglect at the source will keep undoing all the work being done at the other end, and pile up still more to be done by future generations.

No cost is too great, no effort is spared to keep under check disease of a physical danger to the community. Each case is reached without delay and everything possible done to prevent the contagion; and this is not all, precautions have been taken beforehand. Not so with that which endangers the moral nature, these cases are treated after the harm has been done; and the condition practically remains the same until some other atrocity awakens the community to further danger. Over and over again the same old story is told; neglected childhood, no chances of moral betterment, or some physical defect unnoticed until too late. These are the lessons of the police stations, the records of the prisons and "charities."

"Suffer little children to come unto me," implies an effort under difficulties, if the command is to be followed; little children particularly were not to be overlooked. Neglected children always add to the ranks of the men and woman who degrade the standard of moral living, even if all cases of crime cannot be blamed to a neglected childhood. Prison statistics show that the great majority of criminal lives were of an early beginning, and common sense teaches us the value of prevention, yet in this great danger the practical steps are still to be taken to bring about a united, concerted, conscientious effort to reach every child in conditions of neglect which mean moral degradation! Such quarantine must come through Godliness outside the Juvenile Courts.

MARY HESTER GRUBB.

Do we "believe that beauty and poetry are within some things, while others lack them; that some occupations are distinguished and agreeable, such as cultivating letters, playing the harp; and that others are menial and disagreeable, like blacking shoes, sweeping, and watching the pot boil? Childish error! Neither harp nor broom has anything to do with it; all depends on the hand in which it rests and the spirit that moves it. Poetry is not in things; it is in us."—[The Simple Life.]

RELIGION.

It is not an abstraction. It is not an ideality, living in the brain but leaving the heart untouched. It does not consist in particular frames of mind, in excitement of animal feeling, or the overflow of the sensibilities; in the kindling of the fancy, or the heating of the imagination. It lives not merely in visible manifestations of devotion, in the bowing of the knee or the lifting of the hands. All these may be without religion, and religion may exist without them. It is benevolent action, flowing forth from holy motive. It is that charity which "hoping all things, believing all things," contents not itself with a "be ye warmed and be ye clothed," but performs the good which it desires. It is that love which throws its embrace around all human kind. It is that benevolence which, like a river gushing from a pure fountain, flows freely forth to all, spreading beauty and fertility and blessedness around, causing the desolate places of the earth to rejoice, and making the wilderness to bud and blossom as the rose. It knows not the lust of power. It seeks not its own preferment. Its kingdom is not of this world—it is too high to envy the proudest, too meek to despise the humblest. It hath no fellowship with bigotry. Its creed is: Do justice, love mercy, and walk humbly before God. Its sect is the pure in heart. The temple of its worship is the universe. It is meek, compassionate, forgiving, without partiality and without hypocrisy. It is a transcript of Him who spent His life in doing good. It is the Spirit of God living in the human heart.—[Selected.]

"A REVIVAL OF PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY."

THERE is, we are persuaded, a great need of a new revival of the spirit of what might be called either Wesleyanism or primitive Christianity. The churches of to-day are too much mere worshipping assemblies. They devote too large a proportion of their energies and their income to promoting the enjoyment of the Christian life by those who already possess it, and too little to imparting that Christian life to those who do not possess it. The cathedral-like church, the well-organized choir, the well-paid orator, all minister to the spiritual luxury and, perhaps, to the spiritual development of the elect and cultivated few. They do little to carry the message of life as heralds to the non-elect and the uncultivated. The church needs to study afresh the methods and, still more, the life of the primitive missionaries, the Wesleyan itinerants, and the Puritan revivalists. We do not, indeed, urge the re-employment of their methods. It is not at all probable that street and field-preaching would accomplish in this century in America what it accomplished in the eighteenth century in England. But, though a renewal of their methods might not be desirable, a revival of their spirit is the greatest need of the church. It is to be hoped that the revival of interest in Wesley as a result of the bi-centennial celebration of his birth will be followed by a revival of his evangelistic spirit.—[Outlook.]

THE COUNTRY WEEK ASSOCIATION.

THE Children's Country Week Association is one of our most popular forms of philanthropic work. Comparatively few of those who help it along know that it was begun by Eliza Sproat Turner. The following tribute to her, in connection with this work, was written by M. Fannie Evans Weitzel for the New Century Journal:

She loved little children; she studied their lives and their needs; she saw them in their confined, cramped quarters in the alleys and courts of our great city as she went about seeking whom she might help; she contrasted these narrow breathing spaces during the heated days with the breadth and beauty and health-giving atmosphere of her Chester County country home, and her desire was to take these poor children out of their surroundings to a place where they might have the benefit and blessing of nature in its purity and perfection.

Her own heart was so large that she went into the hot, dirty city streets, and took these little ones, two or three at a time, to her own lovely country home, thrown wide open to receive them, and cared for them tenderly and lovingly for two weeks or more, returning them at that time to their homes, and taking with her others to enjoy the same pleasures. Her own sweet face and gentle winning manner, won the confidence of mothers and children, and made them eager for her hospitality.

This beautiful work of love was carried on in this quiet manner during the entire summer and fall for several years; then she induced some of her neighbors to help her in this work, and thus increase the number benefited.

The more widely she investigated the needs, the more she felt the importance of having more assistance in the city as well as the country, and thus originated our great Philadelphia summer charity—The Children's Country Week Association—started by our dear friend, Mrs. Turner, in 1875, with a dozen or more children entertained in her own home; organized into an Association in 1880, incorporated in 1882, extended and enlarged until, during the last few years, between five and six thousand children each year have had the joy of at least one week in the country, free from all care, surrounded by the best and most elevating environments, and with pure enjoyment of health-giving nature and good food. This great charity was planned by Mrs. Turner, aided and assisted by her for a long period, and always loved and followed by her.

It has not been confined to this city alone, but has been extended to nearly all the great cities of the United States, and even to some on the other side of the ocean.

It is beyond human power to estimate the number of lives reached or the amount of good wrought by the work and plan of this noble woman, who, like her Master, "went about doing good," and, forgetful of self, was constantly seeking all whom she could help.

"The smallest bark on life's tumultuous ocean
Will leave a track behind for evermore;
The slightest wave of influence set in motion
Extends and widens to the eternal shore."

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 8, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE DECLINE OF THE MINISTRY.

THE small number of recognized vocal ministers in the Society of Friends has been for some years a matter of concern to many interested members. A few preach the message of Quakerism in the spirit and the power, and now and then appears a new apostle of the spoken word, but the feeling is widespread that we lack vocal ministry.

Various reasons are assigned for this lack, and many suggestions are constantly made as to means whereby we may increase the number and efficiency of our gospel messengers.

It is felt by some that the field of active philanthropic endeavor opens avenues of usefulness to those eager to serve, which are easier to follow than to wait in silence for the power which may give the tongue utterance, and that through this means many find work which satisfies them and turns them from the more difficult call to vocal service.

Others feel that our increasing number of organizations, our conferences and papers and discussions tend to make us a less spiritual body of people, and therefore we are ill prepared to be the chosen messengers of the gospel.

Another view holds that about our ministry has grown up an idea of a special, mysterious sanctity, and that the call to serve therein must come with a terrible and finally irresistible wrestling of the spirit, which reduces to submission the will of him it has chosen as its servant.

Those who take issue with this view of the ministry are frequently active in advocating the antipodal proposition, that preaching requires no special calling and election—but that if each of us endowed with ordinary thinking power and measurable confidence in utterance, would contribute to the meetings in which we sit, such portions of our wandering thoughts and ideas as we think are really good, we would meet the difficulty of a diminished ministry without recourse to that other means sometimes applied by others branches of Friends—a salaried ministry. One of these views appears as inconsistent with our profession as the other. In one case we would sacrifice our testimony in favor of a free, and the other case of a gospel ministry.

As to the element of truth resident in each view of the situation, we cannot determine; but with our growth and extension into new and wider fields of Christian usefulness, our development into larger thought and broader view, we need to keep unshaken the foundations of our faith in the constant revelation of God to man, evidenced in a consistent profession concerning "a free gospel ministry resting on divine qualification alone."

As Friends we cannot pay our ministers; nor should we fail to distinguish between a gospel message and the utterance of relevant thoughts not thus inspired. We injure the cause we seek to promote, when we fail to recognize the special nature and meaning of gospel ministry, and encourage the utterance of things helpful in their proper place, but not bearing the impress of ministry, in place of the real thing we desire to possess in larger measure. Substitution is not our remedy. What is it then? No new specific; only the application of the abiding law of cause and effect. Our ministry is chosen from our membership, from the ones of us who receive so much of God's spirit that we must share it.

It is not a strange and mysterious law, but a real and natural one. Ministry is a gift earnestly to be coveted, prayerfully to be sought for, and not a service to be escaped if possible. Recruiting the thinned ranks, does not begin with encouraging this talented man and this earnest woman to speak for us, nor in deciding to do ourselves what others fail to do, but in seeking to receive so much of love and power that we desire to share it; in making clear to all oppressed with the weight and awfulness of vocal ministry that this is a natural, blessed form of human experience, serious and responsible in its import; but a gift to be sought for, not an imposition to be eluded by those who earnestly desire to serve. Does anyone within our ranks doubt that, if we as a body seek the power of ministry, unto a sufficient number it will be committed?

THE Young Friends' Review for Seventh month is at hand. "The Current Comment" on the lynching mania calls attention to "how easily men may be educated in lawlessness" and suggests the remedy; last year's consumption of liquor in the United States is discussed; there is comment on the Louisiana Senator's successful way of dealing with a mob of lynchers, and a word on trade unionism in connection with the New York building trades. The editorials take up universal salvation and the attitude of the sects toward it, Pope Leo and the spirit of modern progress, John Wesley's industry and that of George Fox. "Notes by the Way," tells of visits by the writer to Langhorne, Pa., Manasquan, N. J., Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. "The Use and Abuse of Humility," by Phoebe A. Hoag, is a Young Friends' Association paper read at Easton, N. Y., "Self-Knowledge," by A. M. Brown, was read during the week of New York Yearly Meeting. A column is devoted to selections from the Religious papers, and "Random Reading" has some excellent miscellaneous selections. The "Grumbler," whom we can seldom "approve" of, but from whom we can always get some helpful suggestions, takes as his text "What's the Use?" and turns the argument of the pessimists completely against themselves.

GREAT consternation now exists in a county of eastern Pennsylvania because of a failure of a national bank which has so held the general confidence for two-thirds of a century that its stock sold readily for more than four times its par value. This failure is believed to be owing to the acceptance of stocks that have since depreciated as security for money loaned. Commenting on this failure a Friend who holds a prominent position in a trust company said: "I am more fully convinced than ever of the importance of doing business, especially where the interests of others are involved, upon absolutely safe lines. It is better to be content with small dividends than to run any financial risks."

Notwithstanding the general haste to get rich there are many evidences that an enlightened public opinion demands men of prudence at the head of financial enterprises. The general public lost its confidence in Charles M. Schwab as soon as it was reported that he had been gambling at Monte Carlo; and when, added to this, there were other reports of personal indulgence and consequent ill health, the number of those who believed in him was steadily lessened. The newspaper reports may have greatly exaggerated both the gambling and the self-indulgence, but the moral lesson to be drawn from his career is that a public man who would retain the confidence of the people must "abstain from all appearance of evil."

BIRTHS.

HAINES.—At their home in West Chester, Pa., Fourth month 23d, 1903, to Harry G. and Laura Lynch Haines, a son, who is named George D. Haines.

PALMER.—At 2100 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Seventh month 22d, 1903, to A. Mitchell and Roberta Dixon Palmer, of Stroudsburg, Pa., a son, who is named Alexander Mitchell Palmer, Jr.

SPICER.—At the home of Simeon Spicer, Baltimore, Md., Eighth month 1st, 1903, to R. Barclay and Margaret Jones Spicer, a son, who is named William Jones.

DEATHS.

EDWARDS.—At her daughter's home in Pueblo, Colorado, Seventh month 13th, 1903, Rebecca P. Edwards, aged 81 years.

Rebecca P. Lamborn was born in Wilmington, Delaware, First month 18th, 1822. Removing to Pennsylvania, the greater part of her girlhood was spent in Chester county among the Friends, whose faith she embraced, remaining true to her belief until death. She was married to David Edwards, Second month 25th, 1841. Ten children were born to them, of whom three daughters and one son remain to mourn the loss of a patient, devoted mother. Rebecca Edwards removed to New Hampton, Iowa, with her husband in 1854; in 1873, they moved on a farm near Belle Plaine, Iowa, which place was her home until her husband's death sixteen years ago; since that time she has homed with her daughters who are all married. She was a woman of education and refinement. In her early years she was given to literary pursuits. The sweet quiet life of the Friend, was exemplified in her character and those who knew her loved her. Another patient toiler in the Master's vineyard has been called to her reward. Thus human life sinks away like the waves on the shore. May the children and relatives find consolation in the God of their glorified mother who could always say, "Thy will, not mine be done."

Thou who knowest all our grief

Help us bear thy holy will;

If thou canst not give relief

Make us calm serene and still.

Though the form we cannot see,

Though the voice we cannot hear,

Thy still live by faith in thee

And they are forever near.

HER GRANDDAUGHTER.

WARD.—Seventh-day, Seventh month 18th, 1903, at the home of her son, H. F. Ward, 37 South Franklin street, Washington, Pa., Maria Vickers Ward, aged 86 years.

Her early home was in Chester county, and her husband, Levi Bailey Ward, died in West Chester in 1877. Four or five years later she went to Washington, Pa., where her son had located in '75, and made her home with him. One other son, Thomas Elwood Ward, in the service of the Pullman Parlor Car company, at Philadelphia, survives her. She was a member of the Society of Friend, and was descended from the Kersey and Vickers families. Her grandfather was Jesse Kersey. As long as her hearing was such that she could enjoy the service, she attended the Second Presbyterian church. Her bright mind and cheery disposition made for her many friends, by whom she was greatly beloved. For several years she had been almost totally deaf.

SOCIETY NOTES.

ONE of the family at the Friends' Home, Newtown, Pa., writes that every First-day at 6.30 p. m. all the boarders who are able to come down stairs gather together for the reading of the Scriptures. One First-day evening recently, after the regular Bible reading, they read Isaac H. Hillborn's address on "Friends' Views and Testimonies," and found it very instructive and helpful. This address was directed to be printed by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, and copies of it may be obtained through the Representative Committee.

In Oregon Yearly Meeting (Orthodox) in response to an appeal for Pacific College $1,250 was subscribed on the spot.

The scope of the interests of these Western Yearly Meetings is indicated by the following from an account in the American Friend: "The usual time was given to the consideration of temperance, peace, literature, Christian Endeavor, Bible Schools [corresponding to our First-day schools], missions, and education."

Those expecting to attend the meetings of the Central Committee of the General Conference on Sixth-day, Seventh-day, and the evening of First-day, Eighth month 28th, 29th and 30th, and the sessions of Ohio Yearly Meeting immediately following for all or part of the time, should notify Leona M. Whinery, Star No. 1, Salem, Ohio. The local committee will arrange for boarding places.

At Purchase Quarterly Meeting held at Purchase, N. Y., Seventh month 29th, Dr. Edward H. Magill, Charles Robinson and Esther Barnes were among those who spoke at the morning meeting. In the afternoon there was a meeting of the Friend's Association at which Henry M. Haviland read a paper on "Friends and Philosophies." Jane Washburn read Whittier's "Questions on Life." Louise Haviland read an original poem on topics suggested by the old meeting-house. The discussion following the paper was participated in by Robert Barnes, Esther Barnes, Dr. Magill, Albert Lawton and two Methodist ministers of the neighborhood. Between meetings, it being a beautiful day, the lunch was served under the shade of the maple trees in the meeting-house yard.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

AMONG THE PENNSYLVANIA MOUNTAINS.

THE quiet days of Eighth month with their abundant sunshine had passed, and the early Ninth month of 1902 was upon us, when the writer and his brother took an excursion into the mountains. The morning we set out was clear. A gentle breeze just stirred the air, which had the crisp freshness peculiar to the season, giving tone and vigor to the pulses and exhilaration to the feelings. Our object was to visit a portion of the border surrounding the coal field which includes Shamokin and other towns. This border is interesting in many respects. It is remarkable in form and outline, and it shows on a gigantic scale Nature's record of her operations in the past. The different rock formations are so distinctly marked that almost any one who takes the pains, can with little difficulty distinguish them. Those who have given some attention to geology would here find a series of object lessons containing much related to the subject, and comprised within the compass of a few miles. But even persons careless in these matters would find enough to afford pleasure and entertainment in the variety of changing scenery and mountain prospect. Though these mountains do not astonish the mind by their vastness and grandeur, they possess many interesting and attractive features entirely their own, and are nowhere lacking in beauty.

Entering the mountains through the Lower Gap, leaving the Shamokin road at the Rock Cut, and going through the tunnel under the Reading Railway, we ascended a rocky declivity, where the road makes several turns before it attains the level of the valley. Passing on westward, we found ourselves traveling midway along a belt of land bordered by parallel mountains. Their sloping walls of greenness stretching away until they seem to unite in the distance, contrast beautifully with the cultivated strip between. This tract shows the effect of human agency in overcoming the obstacles opposed to successful agriculture. The surface of the land has been cleared of the stone as well as the trees and brush which encumbered it, leaving the soil in good condition for tillage. Though of poor quality, it has been helped by fertilization to such a degree that fair crops are raised. The comfortable homes, the growing corn, now and then an orchard and patches of green sward attract attention, while the varied scene makes up a combination extremely pleasing to the eye.

Finally a point is reached, where the rural scene of agriculture ends, and in the town of Trevorton appears to rise behind a slight undulation of surface. It has one principal street, a broad roadway, for the most part, with houses crowded thickly along it. Back of this and over the remaining width of the valley, the buildings are scattered here and there. Besides these is a row of houses off to themselves, half way up the mountain. They are conspicuous to the view, with their green yards and diminutive fields, amid the forest above and below. The great banks of culm west of the town, tell of the industry that employs the labor at this place. The North Franklin Colliery, the only operation here, is concealed from view in a recess of the mountain which is reached by a railroad track extending south through Zerbe gap, connecting with the railway from Shamokin to Herndon. Beyond Trevorton nature resumes possession, and spreads her wildness across the valley and over the bordering heights bristling with a forest growth, largely composed of chestnut, rock oak, hickory, maple, and hemlock in the lower places. Besides there is a sprinkling of several varieties of pine, of which the white pine is most abundant. Several miles of woodland was passed through, which, once dense, gloomy and solitary, was the resort of the hunter and might have been the dread of the traveler, but which is now sadly changed by the demand, so close at hand, for the forest product. Large tracts are cut over, leaving the surface unsightly with rock and boulder, among which tree tops, and heaps of brush show the ruin that is wrought. These afford material for raging fires to complete the destruction after which there remains nothing but dreary areas of blackened waste. Of late, commendable efforts are used to prevent or check these fires, but these efforts are not always successful. We saw what had been a year before a fine grove of hemlock. Its present wretched appearance is due to the action of the fiery element. The dense foliage, throwing down a deep shade, is gone. The trees are dead, and they stand as ghastly reminders of what they have been.

After going through a considerable stretch of woodland which had not been invaded by the axe, nor ravaged by fire, we were met by a surprising change of scene, disclosing a fine open space, several square miles in extent, mostly covered with farms, all wearing the evidences of comfort and thrift. This is a beautiful mountain-girt nook, the best part of the township of Little Mahanoy. The thickly wooded elevations shut off the distant view on all sides. These being sufficiently removed not to seem close appeared as a blue and beautiful border around the broad central space devoted to agriculture. All these features, including the curving heights, the bold knob, and the picturesque gap, greatly enhance the beauty of the prospect. Many of the peculiarities of this landscape, arise from the fact that the valley which we followed in a southwest course, turns sharply around to the southeast. It is widest in the curve opposite the terminal knob which extends as a ridge, eastward, a mile or more to the vast swelling mass of the mountain, rising to a lofty height. It is of interest to know that this eminence, looking like a great promontory, marks the termination of the Western Middle Anthracite Coal Field. From this point, diverging in an easterly direction, two lines of mountain elevation extend. These are nothing more than the raised edges of the northern and southern sides of this coal field, and they form the inside boundary of this valley, the floor of which shows conspicuously the Mauch Chunk Red Shale, No. xi. Between this and the coal measures, which are classed as No. xiii, lies the Pottsville Conglomerate, No. xii. Around the outside looms the mountain of Pocono Sandstone, No. x, familiarly known as the Little Mountain, which after rounding the curve, takes the name of Line Mountain, and extends to the Schuylkill County border. Then the variety of Red Shale denominated Catskill, No ix, forms a belt outside of all, curving in conformity to the bend of the mountain. Each of these, No ix, No x, No xi, No xii occupy a deep depression of the older rocks, and they seem as linings of this basin, being buried deep below the coal bearing strata which rest upon them. Their edges or outcroppings, on the sides and around the end of this trough, as they successively reach the surface, are abruptly discontinued, or in geological language, pass into the air. The surrounding formations are made up of rocks of an earlier period, which descend from those we have enumerated, in the series, to No 1. But the oldest rock to be found in Northumberland County, is the Medina Sandstone, No iv, which is exposed where the river cuts into the mountain ridge below Danville. From this it would appear that though rock-making was in progress in other localities for long ages succeeding this time, here it evidently ceased with the close of the Carboniferous Period. These rocks were afterward subjected to great upheavals and dislocations by the action of the mighty forces of nature, and the coal originally deposited was changed into anthracite.

At this point, in the bright sunshine surrounded by a landscape of a peculiar type, viewing the peak-like mass of rock and earth, we have under our eye several chapters of nature's own book. In them we can read something of the earth's past history, and trace an evidence of the beneficent design of Providence in storing these treasures for the use of man, and then placing them in a situation so accessible to him.

(To be continued.)

G. J.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS FROM ISOLATED FRIENDS.

A NUMBER of replies have been received to the annual epistle sent out by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting to its isolated members, expressing appreciation of the interest shown in their welfare and thanks for the enclosed copy of Howard M. Jenkins's "Religious Views of the Society of Friends." A Friend in Elmira, N. Y., writes: "Such letters have an influence for good; they give encouragement to hold more and more steadfastly to the truth of our religious faith." Another letter from Fontella, Va., signed by both husband and wife says: "We were pleased to receive the Yearly Meeting's greeting, and want to acknowledge it and our love and interest in the Society. We try to live up to the faith in our daily lives and hope to instill its principles in our son. We read the INTELLIGENCER with interest."

From a Friend in Detroit comes this cheering message concerning her children who live in Colorado: "My children are Friends in belief and at heart, although their destinies are away from the possibilities of attending a Friends' meeting, and in the atmosphere of those not in unison with us. I advise them to use their influence in behalf of our religious Society by living the Quaker in their daily lives. I think that one's ministration in this way is many times most helpful to those with whom we come in contact. This, and the distributing of Friends' books and pamphlets, has been the means of much spiritual comfort and enlightenment to those who want to know the better way."

The next extract is from a faithful Friend in East Pittsburg, Pa.: "I like the sentiment of the second paragraph, and believe the influence of our every-day lives, without words, is stronger and has more power than any verbal expression of our sentiments and beliefs. Are we not all judged, and more truly, by what we do or leave undone than by what we say, and are not our acts truer and more convincing than our expressions? Referring to the booklet, 'Religious Views of the Society of Friends,' I would be very glad to have several of them as I am quite often asked for the information it contains, and it will give a much better answer than I would be able to do, for my flow of language is very limited. We are always glad to get the remembrances from the Yearly Meeting, and I believe they have a tendency to draw closer in sympathy those Friends who have scattered far apart, many of whom seldom meet others of their faith. I have not been to Friends' meeting for forty years and have met but few of that persuasion in that time, but the memory of those long ago meetings, and the members occasionally met since, have always kept my love green."

A letter from Los Angeles gives some idea of the delights of California life: "This is a very pleasant city and is constantly increasing in population. At first many thought that the great number of permits asked for to put up houses would soon cease, but each year more and more come to this country, owing to the lovely climate, and after a few months' stay are so charmed that they soon decide that they want to make their homes here. I think the summers are even more pleasant than the winters; I mean near the coast—inland it grows very warm. But after a rainy winter like the past year grain, fruit and vegetables are always in abundance. This city has five or six beautiful parks which are much frequented. We have had the pleasure occasionally of entertaining eastern Friends; seven from Philadelphia Yearly Meeting have dined with us during the last six months."

The Friend in Utica, Kansas, who wrote last year that his entire crops had been destroyed by hail, writes that money was loaned him to buy seed wheat and that this year his crops are insured against damage by storm. He says, after expressing his continued interest in the Society of Friends and its principles: "In regard to my finances everything looks very promising. I have had steady work at the carpenter's trade when I could leave home, and our poultry, hogs and cows have clothed and fed us, as I did not realize one dollar from last year's crops. We had a very long, cold winter with many severe snow storms, and the spring months were wet and uncommonly cold for this country. In fact we have had but few warm days up to this time (Seventh month 3d). We have the finest crops of wheat, oats and barley I ever saw in any country. Owing to the cold, wet spring, harvest will not commence for ten days yet. Harvest hands are scarce and wages high; single hands $2.50 to $3.50 a day, and a man and team $3.50 to $5.00. All fruit was killed by the hard freeze and snowstorm on the 29th of Fourth month. Early potatoes are worth $1.50 a bushel. Banks are loaning their money to farmers at two per cent. a month to carry them over harvest.

"While we had plenty of rain for our crops the eastern part of the State was flooded, thousands of acres of crops destroyed, many towns along streams were partly swept away and many of the families lost their dwellings and all they contained. But there is a great demand for laborers to help clean up and repair damages done by the floods and every one can find employment and get very high wages. The relief societies are assisting and caring for all who need assistance, and give them clothing and furniture to go to housekeeping with. But a person would have to see this flooded district to realize the actual damage done and the condition of the land that was overflowed."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

IN THE DAYS OF "PERPETUAL MOTION."

"Know all men by these presents, that I, Ellis Chandlee, of East Nottingham, in the county of Cecil, in Maryland, Clock-maker, am held and firmly bound to John Churchman, of Susquehanna River, in the said county of Cecil, in Maryland, in the full sum of Twenty thousand pounds, in Spanish milled dollars, to be paid to said John Churchman, or his certain Attorney, his Executors, or Administrators, which payment well and truly to be made. I hereby bind myself, my Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, by these presents, sealed with my seal, dated this second-day of May in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-five.

"THE CONDITIONS of the above obligation, is such that if the said Ellis Chandlee, does always keep a profound secret and does not disclose the same directly or indirectly, information, demonstration or otherwise, the description of a machine intended by the said John Churchman, supposed to move perpetually on part by the principal of magnetism (the principals and construction of the machine the said Ellis Chandlee, acknowledges himself at present entirely a stranger to), then the above obligation to be void and of none effect, otherwise to be and remain in full force and virtue.

"Sealed and Delivered in the presence of us
ELLIS CHANDLEE, [Seal].

"GEORGE GARTRIL,
"ABNER WHITE."

I have this original bond, in my possession, with 230 other papers pertaining to the Churchman family, for three generations.

That the parties to this bond were not fanatics or cranks, on the theory of perpetual motion, but were learned and skilled men, the following attests: John Churchman was the son of George Churchman, a man of ability, who was the son of John Churchman, one of the most eminent ministers the Society of Friends has ever produced, the author of "John Churchman's Journal," and "Religious Travels," who was the son of John Churchman, the emigrant, and early settler at Nottingham.

The John Churchman mentioned in the bond was born at East Nottingham, Cecil county, Maryland, Fifth month 29th, 1755. He was a Land-Surveyor and Geometrician. About 1778 he executed a map of the Peninsula between the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays, including the State of Delaware, the Eastern shore of Maryland, and Virginia. About 1790 he constructed a Variation Chart, or Magnetic Atlas. He corresponded with scientific men of the Royal Society at London, and several learned societies and academies at Hamburg, Copenhagen, St. Petersburg, Lisbon, Cambridge, and Paris. Also with George Washington, and Thomas Jefferson, and other liberal-minded men, who were pleased to approve of his designs of improvements in magnetic observations.

In 1792 he embarked on a voyage to England and France in order to pursue his researches, where he received invitations from learned societies of Russia, visited Copenhagen and St. Petersburg, where he met with great attention, was elected a member of the Imperial Academy of Arts and Science, and received a gold medal with diplomatic honors.

Sitting up late one night at his accustomed pursuit, he was found fallen in a paralytic or apoplectic state. After a few months he so far recovered as to enable him to embark on ship for his home in America, but died on board of ship at sea Seventh month 17th, 1805.

Ellis Chandlee, who binds himself to profound secrecy, was the son of Benjamin Chandlee, the son of the emigrant Benjamin Chandlee; he was born at East Nottingham, Cecil county, Maryland. His occupation was making clocks and surveyors' compasses; he and his brother, Isaac Chandlee, continued the business of their father, Benjamin Chandlee, and grandfather, Abel Cotty, inheriting their mechanical skill and zeal in the pursuit of artistic science. Ellis was the most ingenious of this family; he constructed samples of machinery for various purposes, one of which was for spinning cotton. He deceased 1818, aged 65 years.

Churchman and Chandlee were both prominent members of Nottingham Monthly Meeting in the days when it was the largest body of Friends south of Pennsylvania.

KIRK BROWN.
Baltimore, Md., Seventh month 13th, 1903.

No preacher can live by the constant iteration of a spiritual experience, however great and decisive. If he tries to do so, he becomes monotonous and unimpressive even to himself. The dews are dried and no physical fervor will soften the aridity.—[Dr. Robertson Nicoll.]

36

THERE is a secret and inexpressible joy in possessing at the heart of one's being, an interior world known only to God, where, nevertheless, come impulses, enthusiasms, the daily renewal of courage, and the most powerful motives for activity among our fellow-men.—[The Simple Life.]

EDUCATIONAL.

WORK AT GEORGE SCHOOL.

From Doylestown Intelligencer.

WORK is being pushed on Drayton Hall, the new four-story building that is being erected at the east end of the main building. The structure is nearly under roof and the walls are almost entirely finished. Carpenters and plasterers are to rush the interior of the building as it must be completed and furnished by the middle of September. Drayton Hall is of the general style of all buildings at George School, aggressively for use rather than appearance, and is constructed in three sections. The doorways are small, with stone arches over them, and are all on the north side, while all of the other buildings on the campus face to the south, with broad porches in front. There is no provision made for any porch for Drayton Hall, however, the front of the building being entirely plain.

The cut of the structure, presented through the courtesy of the architects, Bunting & Shrigley, of Philadelphia, shows the rear view, as seen from the end of the Eyre line.

The alterations now under way to the interior of the main building include the construction of a new kitchen, the enlarging of the dining room, converting the small rooms on the first floors of the two wings into classrooms and the enlarging of the main assembly hall.

The new dining hall will accommodate fully three hundred persons with comparative ease. Nearly doubling the capacity of the old room. The space is not, however, more than twice as large as formerly, but the economy of arrangement is what is expected to make the seemingly great difference. The dining room as it is enlarged, includes part of the space formerly used as a kitchen, so that the latter has had to be rebuilt, as well as greatly enlarged. The old rear porches are included in the new kitchen, which is much larger and more convenient than was the old one, although when the school was first built it was considered one of the finest of its kind.

Various minor changes are necessitated in the main hall on the first floor because of the placing of the class rooms in the wings. The old division wall between the two stairways has been torn away and doors have been cut into the rooms on the sides of the hall, entrance being effected under the steps leading to the second floor.

The rooms on the first floor have all been converted into class rooms, four having been made in the east wing and three in the west, these taking the places of several classrooms and the biological laboratory on the third floor torn out to make room for the enlarged assembly hall. When the building was constructed it was intended that all of the first floor rooms should eventually be converted into classrooms, and the present changes, were, of course, very easily made. The rooms are light and well situated, and are much more accessible than were the other classrooms, so that a great deal of weary up-and-down-stairs traveling will hereafter be avoided.

One of the most noticeable changes, and one that will add vastly to the pleasure and comfort of the students, is being made on the second and third floors of the main building. The two classrooms which formerly were situated on each side of an entrance way into the assembly hall have been torn away, adding nearly a third to the floor space of the room. On the third floor all of the classrooms have been torn out and a gallery is being constructed to overhang the rear of the new room, very greatly increasing its seating accommodations. A narrow footway, four feet wide, runs along each side of the wall, connecting with a small room and the stairway at the rear. It is expected that over five hundred people can easily be seated in the enlarged room, with space for another hundred seats on special occasions.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

RISEING SUN, MD.—West Nottingham Young Friends' Association met in the town hall on the afternoon of Eighth month 2d, and was opened by the president reading "The Making of Manhood." After the reading and approval of minutes of last meeting an article was read by Elizabeth R. Lincoln on "The Coming Revival of Religion," found in the INTELLIGENCER.

Edwin Buffington then addressed the meeting on the subject of "Spiritual Consciousness." He said the growth of religious thought which we have been pursuing in its practical condition has helped us to realize more fully to how great an extent the world of thought in this great transition period is awakening to the possibilities of spiritual consciousness. The world, becoming tired of theological controversies, and seeing the necessity of individual effort on the part of each one, is ceasing to act on the authority of another's thought; revealing the great truth of spiritual discernment. Reason is God's gift to man. It is one of the means by which a man is led to the spiritual consciousness of this power that is within him. We are, however, only in the A. B. C. or primer of this spiritual realization, or consciousness. The experience of the Prodigal Son was quoted. He said, we are all more or less prodigals. We willingly stray away from that which we should do. The Prodigal Son, while he had anything to spend never came home to himself. But there came a time when things were scarce and hard. It was then that he remembered that in his Father's house there was bread enough and to spare. This was a forerunner of a realization of that spiritual consciousness which was in his possession but had been neglected, and so with us it is sometimes necessary for us to realize austere conditions, before we are brought home to ourselves.

"The Habit of Right-Thinking," was the subject of a paper by James Lynch. He impressed the necessity of striving to attain a beautiful character which draws us nearer to that higher life. The subject was afterwards discussed by others in attendance. It was said that the habit of right thinking is a wonderful thing for each individual to take hold of. Thoughts we all have, and whether expressed or unexpressed, they have a wonderful influence, reflecting unconsciously from the countenance.

A voluntary reading, "Feel, Think, Act," was read by Walter Buffington. "Thought is inwardly related to feeling and outwardly related to action. To feel, to become inspired from within, to touch the God-life, is the highest revelation in the life of man." It was also said that by centering our thought on the things we want to be, or do, we can accomplish what we will to accomplish if we exert our energy aright, as there is no faith which does not take form in works. An interesting discussion followed the reading, after which silence was observed, and the Association closed to meet in one month.

DRAYTON HALL, GEORGE SCHOOL.

JANETTE REYNOLDS, Cor. Sec.

HOPEWELL, VA.—On account of a storm, the regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was omitted Sixth month 28th. Seventh month 26th the Association met at Hopewell, 3 o'clock p. m. The President being absent, Edward L. Irish was asked to take his place. Carroll C. Clevenger read a short selection from the Friends' Discipline. David W. Branson, under the head of History, read an original paper, giving some account of a trying experience, in which he held a part, during the Civil War. It made us realize in a forcible manner, what heart-rending experiences some of our parents passed through during that anxious time. Under the head of literature Mary E. Pidgeon read an interesting article entitled, "A Fly in the Telescope." The next meeting will be held Eighth month 23d.

C. P., Cor. Sec.

LITERARY NOTES.

In reviewing W. L. Sheldon's "The Old Testament Bible Stories for the Young" (W. M. Welch & Co., Chicago, $1.00) in the Public, Chicago, J. H. Dillard says in part:

There is no question of the fact, which the author emphasizes in his introduction, that the Old Testament furnishes the finest material extant for bringing home the distinction between good and evil to the young mind. . . .

Few who have not looked specially into the subject have any idea how great a change has taken place in the character of the reading provided for schools. Compare a fourth reader of thirty years ago with a fourth reader of some modern series, and you will find that there is now no such ethical emphasis as formerly. The present selections may be more artistic and more given to nature-study, but there has been a clear reaction against teaching morals. . . . The compilers of the old readers evidently had almost, if not quite, foremost in mind the idea of character. The new books are of course far more attractive in very many ways, but there is no such emphasis upon attempting to reach the child's moral nature.

. . . The language of this book by Walter L. Sheldon is simple but not babyish. It brings into all the stories the famous sayings, like "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground," "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground," "The Lord seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart," and all the others, which have for centuries been interwoven into the thought and speech of the world, and are singularly unfamiliar to children of the present generation. There is enough of these quotations to give the flavor of the Bible style; and they are wrought into the story with effectiveness. The best feature of the book is the simple way in which the point and the moral are made to appear, and yet without any undue emphasis or savor of cant. Each chapter ends with an excellent hint to teachers with reference to bringing out more fully, if necessary, the ethical value of the stories.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

An inscription is being put around the edge of the sun dial on the south lawn of Westtown Friends' School, which reads, "I mind the light, dost thou!"

Five Westtown girls took the Bryn Mawr examinations this year and two of the Seniors are preparing for Wellesley. Sixteen boys are preparing for college. Twelve took the Haverford "exams," two are studying for Cornell, and three for other institutions.

George L. Maris and family, who have spent much of the time for the past two years in Florida, have returned to Newtown, Bucks county, Pa., where they expect to make their home.

THE HEROIC AGE.

HE speaks not well who doth his time deplora,
Naming it new and little and obscure,
Ignoble and unfit for lofty deeds.
All times were modern in the time of them,
And this no more than others. Do thy part
Here in the living day, as did the great,
Who made old days immortal. So shall men,
Gazing long back to this far-loomng hour,
Say: "Then the time when men were truly men:
Though wars grew less, their spirits met the test
Of new conditions; conquering civic wrong;
Saving the State anew by virtuous lives;
Guarding the country's honor as their own;
And their own as their country's and their sons':
Defying leaguéd fraud with single truth;
Not fearing loss; and daring to be pure.
When error through the land raged like a pest,
They calmed the madness caught from mind to mind
By wisdom drawn from old, and counsel sane;
And as the martyrs of the ancient world
Gave death for man, so nobly gave thy life;
Those the great days, and that the heroic age."

—Richard Watson Gilder.

KIND WORDS.

OH, keep not back kind words, I pray,
From those who journey day by day
With us along life's rugged way.
They come with help in time of need,
And every one's a precious seed
That grows into a helpful deed.
You may not see, I may not know,
The deeds to which our kind words grow,
But none are ever lost, I know.
Sometime and somewhere we shall find
All kind words gathered, as men bind
The wheat, and leave no sheaf behind.
And from that storehouse of good deeds
Grown from kind words, scattered seeds,
We each shall draw, to suit our needs,
They cost us little—grudge them not,
But scatter them in every spot
To brighten many a cheerless lot.

—Selected.

THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

In the New England Magazine for Sixth month George Willis Cook sketches the history of the Free Religious Association, which is of especial interest to Friends because of the connection with it and interest in its principles of Lucretia Mott and Aaron M. Powell and others. The Association is also of especial interest to every one because it "was the result of the teachings of Emerson, Parker, and those who agreed with them."

The Free Religious Association was started as a "protest against the conservatism of the majority of the Unitarian body, who complained of the persecution they had received from the orthodox Congregationalists, but in their turn were not liberal enough to refrain from the same cruel wrong. The causes that led to the organization of this association date back to the beginnings of the transcendental movement, to the criticism of Emerson for his Divinity School address, to the withdrawal of sympathy from Parker because of his South Boston Sermon, to the resolution and address of the American Unitarian Association that declared war against the teachings of the more radical persons connected with that body."

"It was at the close of the Civil War that the struggle between the two wings of the Unitarian body . . . came to a direct issue." At the convention in the spring of 1865 in New York "two antagonistic tendencies" showed themselves. "One of these looked to a broad and inclusive movement, that should gather to itself all the liberal churches and persons of the country, that should have no creed, but should undertake a great humanitarian work that would be thoroughly American in spirit."

"Opposed to this tendency was one that called for a distinctly Unitarian organization, that should affirm itself Christian, and that should have a creed if possible. The more conservative element won the day, the Unitarian name was adopted, the Lordship of Christ was affirmed; but it was not possible to secure a formal creed."

In 1866 at Syracuse the struggle was renewed between the conservatives and the radicals, the latter urging an "organization for practical Christian work, based rather on unity of spirit than on uniformity of belief." But "no reconciliation was possible, though the attempt was renewed for several years."

"When it was found that nothing could be accomplished in the way of making Unitarianism broad and inclusive . . . the younger and more radical men determined to organize a new association." These had in view, as stated by the first secretary of the Free Religious Association, "a union as broad as humanity itself, on the ground of common aspirations to know the truth and common efforts to live pure and beneficent lives."

"The new association did not necessitate nor contemplate a secession from Unitarianism nor any other churches, but provided for a fellowship of liberal minds of various sects for doing a work no one of them were doing." At a preliminary conference, "aside from Unitarians, there were representatives present of liberal Universalism, of progressive Quakerism, of Theodore Parker's society, as well as persons who could not be classified by any theological or denominational name."

"The call for a public meeting to assemble in Horticultural Hall, Boston, May 30, 1867, was signed by Ralph Waldo Emerson, John Weiss, Robert Dale Owen, William H. Furness, Lucretia Mott, Henry Blanchard, Thomas Wentworth Higginson, David A. Wasson, Isaac M. Wise, Oliver Johnson, Francis E. Abbott and Max Lilienthal."

"At the public meeting the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity." Among those who made addresses was Lucretia Mott, whose address may be read in the published proceedings of the meeting, it having been reported in full.

Emerson, who though "he was not active in birning about the new organization, as such efforts were not in the line of his genius, furnished to a large degree the motive and the ideal that brought it into existence"; in his address, which was the most notable event of the meetings, he said, in defining the purposes of the movement, "We are all very sensible,—it is forced on us every day,—of the feeling that the churches are outgrown; that the creeds are outgrown; that a technical theology no longer suits us. It is not the ill will of the people—no, indeed, but the incapacity for confining themselves there. . . .

"As soon as every man is apprised of the Divine Presence in his own mind,—is apprised that the perfect law of duty corresponds with the laws of chemistry, of vegetation, of astronomy, as face to face in a glass; that the basis of duty, the order of society, the power of character, the wealth of culture, the perfection of taste, all draw their essence from this moral sentiment, then we have a religion that exalts, that commands all the social and all the private action."

"At the second annual meeting of the Association Emerson again spoke . . . and gave a definite statement of his own religious position:

"I think we have disputed long enough. I think we may now relinquish our theological controversies to communities more idle and ignorant than we. I am glad . . . that we are likely one day to forget our obstinate polemics in the ambition to excel each other in good works. . . . I am ready to give, . . . the first simple foundation of my belief, that the Author of Nature has not left himself without a witness in any sane mind; that the moral sentiment speaks to every man the law after which the universe was made; that we find parity, identity of design, through Nature, and benefit to be the uniform aim; that there is a force always at work to make the best better and the worst good."

"I am glad to believe society contains a class of humble souls who enjoy the luxury of a religion that does not degrade; who think it the highest worship to expect of Heaven the most and the best; who do not wonder that there was a Christ, but that there were not a thousand; who have conceived an infinite hope for mankind; who believe that the history of Jesus, is the history of every man, written large."

"The Association never has had a large following, and it has not organized a definite movement. . . . Its chief influence has been exercised through the men and women connected with it, and who have spoken from time to time on its platform, or held a place among its officers. Such names as Emerson, Alcott, T. W. Higginson, Gerrit Smith, Lydia Maria Child, Lucretia Mott, George W. Curtis, James Parton, John Fiske, Edward L. Youmans, Aaron M. Powell, and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, indicate the intellectual quality of the Association and the nature of its influence. That it has deeply appealed to such persons indicates that it met a real need of the time."

The addresses of Lucretia Mott and of Aaron M. Powell at the many annual meetings they attended are to be found in the published proceedings of the Association.

THE realization of the Divine presence made men flock to the meetings of the early Friends. It was not to hear elaborate discourses so much as to experience and rejoice in the overshadowing presence and power of God.—[Dr. R. F. Horton, President of (English) Congregational Union.]

WISDOM is knowing what to do next. Virtue is doing it.—[David Starr Jordan.]

Chestnut Raising in Southern Europe.

J. Russell Smith, in American Agriculturist.

CHESTNUT culture has long been an established industry in France and Italy. These thickly-settled countries grow enough of this nutritious nut to supply their own population and have a surplus to export. The cultivated nut of Europe is much larger than our wild nut and resembles the ordinary horse-chestnut in appearance. The size results from centuries of careful selection and uniform quality is secured by grafting the trees. A successful French farmer thinks it is as important to graft chestnut trees as apple trees.

As Europe is a continent of intensive farming, arable land is too valuable for chestnut culture. For this crop land is used that can apparently be used for no other purpose, namely rough mountain sides. Wherever the traveler may go in the southern, eastern and western slopes of the Alps, he comes upon nooks filled with venerable chestnut trees.

The region of the greatest chestnut production in all Europe is in the Cevennes mountains of southern France. The single province of Ardeche has 170,000 acres, about one-sixth of its area in chestnuts.

One of the finest trees, surrounded by many granite boulders, has prospered for 200 years, and now regularly yields over 100 pounds of marketable nuts. Another, an old tree of undesirable variety was more than 100 years old, but despite its age, the owner cut it off about 8 feet up, and grafted three of the suckers with a better variety. In 8 years it was yielding 42 pounds. The trees were cut off at that height so that pasturing stock would not interfere with the young grafts.

Primer versus Gun.

"THE schoolmaster is abroad," said Lord Brougham in a speech delivered seventy-five years ago, "and I trust to him, armed with his primer, against the soldier in full military array." The schoolmaster is not abroad in the feud counties of Kentucky in the sense that education is general as well as free. In the mountainous eastern counties the schoolhouse is not much of a factor in the lives of the people and the percentage of illiteracy is very large. But the mountaineer with his avenging gun is common enough, and is more respected than the schoolmaster's primer. What is equally or more significant is the lack or scarcity of newspapers. None is published in twelve of the twenty-five easterly counties of Kentucky. Scattered through the State there are eight other counties without a newspaper. Andrew Carnegie would waste his money if he were to found a library in each of the twenty counties of Kentucky that have no printing press, for reading is an unacquired art in many families. But if he were to present a new repeating rifle to every boy of 14 the use of it would not have to be taught.

If the power of the press has no meaning in some parts of Kentucky, it is not so in the neighboring States. There is at least one newspaper in every county of West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri. Every county in Indiana has two or more newspapers. Virginia and Tennessee are not as familiar with the printing press, but they are not as badly off as Kentucky. The ills from which mountainous Kentucky is suffering can be removed only by the pedagogue. It needs schoolhouses more than jails, and the editor must follow the schoolmaster. A wealthy man who wanted to benefit his kind could do worse than endow academies in the feud districts of Kentucky and supply them with files of American newspapers.—[New York Sun.]

The Cost of Christianizing the World.

It takes $300,000,000 a year to "keep up the work of Christianizing our own land," says The Central Christian Advocate (Kansas City, Mo.), while "fully $1,000,000,000" is annually absorbed in the Christianization of the whole world. "The money is almost wholly voluntary." Of the sum required for the United States alone, the same paper says:

"The sum of $31,000,000 was laid on the altar by Catholics, $26,000,000 by Methodists, $20,000,000 by Presbyterians, $14,000,000 by Episcopalians, $12,000,000 by Baptists, $750,000 by the Salvation Army. In addition to these expenditures noted above, there were also paid out, under church supervision, funds estimated as follows: for new buildings, $27,000,000; for hospitals, $28,000,000; for education, $21,000,000; and for Sunday-schools, $7,000,000.

"The progress and wealth of church institutions in this country can be impressively illustrated by a single comparison. In 1800 there were 2,340 churches, valued at $1,500,000; to-day there are 178,481 valued at $724,971,372. These figures speak not of selfishness, but of the truest altruism, of philanthropy, and of the willingness to pay the price of enthroning Christ in the world."

Fifty years ago, we read further, the annual outlay for church purposes throughout the entire world was but half as much as it is to-day, or $500,000,000. The $1,000,000,000 of the present year, moreover, will be wholly inadequate in the years that are to follow, because "the resistless advance of Christianity is accompanied with an increasing cost," which can be met only by "the free-will offerings of men, women and children." "This cost is in a sense the measure of the increasing determination of good people that Christ shall be enthroned king."

"The philosophy of the ages is the Christianizing of the world. That is the key to the evolution going on everywhere. Christianity is making its steady and resistless advance, now here, now there, now everywhere, like the rising waters of a universal tide. It explains the past achievements of the best in the race and inspires our hope for the future of the race. What will be, ultimately, will be well, because it will be Christlike."—[Literary Digest.]

Handicraft Revival.

BANISHED for so long from the life of the poor by their poverty, and from the rich by their riches, there are indications that handicraft is coming back, partly by means of a reaction of taste on the part of those who own things and partly by the entrance into the field of handiwork of a new factor. The tendency, so long on the increase, to escape from handwork is being offset by an opposite tendency to escape from mere critical and theoretical contact with life, or from idleness, into the actual making of some tangible thing. There are two claims to be considered in determining the real and essential value of any piece of workmanship; the claims of the maker, that he shall be justified in expending his energy upon it not in vain; and the claims of the owner, that he too, shall be justified in the exchange of energy expended—his own or another's—for the article. The claim of the first is that he shall make something worth making; of the second that he shall own something worth owning.

With the passing away of the common practice of handicraft and the usurping of its place by machines, there passed away also a choice school of training in the moral qualities of patience, humility and self-restraint; patience in overcoming the usual difficulties of the material wrought in, humility in accepting subordination to the higher arts, and self-restraint in forbearing to attempt to produce effects and resemblances which belong to the higher arts of painting and sculpture, but are not possible to be achieved in metal, wood, jeweled surfaces, or tooling upon leather.—[The Interior.]

STEPS are being taken under the lead of Lord Rosebery to establish in London a perfectly-equipped school for theoretical and applied science, similar to the Berlin Royal Technical High School at Charlottenburg. Something like £500,000 has already been offered.

A BILL is planned for the next session of Congress which provides for the payment of $12 a month to all men or the widows of men who served 90 days or more in the civil war and were honorably discharged. Pensions of $8 a month are now paid to all survivors of the Mexican war and the war of 1812 or to their widows.

CURRENT EVENTS.

AN editor named Shen Chien, of Peking, was executed by being beaten to death, in accordance with special instructions issued by the Dowager Empress, who desired to make an example of the journalist, with which to terrify other reformers. The evidence at the trial was so weak that Chien would probably have been acquitted had he not boldly proclaimed his principles throughout and his willingness to die for them. Despite the precautions taken by the officials, the prisoner smuggled from his cell a farewell message in the form of a poem, in which he glorified reform, and exhorted his colleagues to continue the work. Chien was 30 years of age, and had many friends among the foreign residents of the city, who describe him as an educated, high minded gentleman. The affair has created intense feeling among the foreign residents and a strong sentiment against surrendering reformers in the treaty ports to Chinese jurisdiction, though some of the ministers hold that the treaty ports cannot be used to shelter native newspapers which attack the Government.

THE speculation in cotton, with the consequent high prices of the raw material, is causing industrial distress in both America and England. A dispatch from Boston prophesies that 2,000,000 spindles will be idle during this month throughout the North, and the report comes from England that because of the deficiency in raw cotton several hundred cotton factories in Lancashire are working on short time and 360,000 operatives are affected. The House of Commons has been considering the question of cotton growing in the British Empire, in order to create a supply outside the Southern States of America.

SOME excitement was caused by a report from Washington that, by way of retaliation for the Kisheneff petition, the Russian Government had reduced the number of ports at which Americans desiring to travel in Russia could have their passports viséd. The trouble arose from the ignorance of Secretary Hay's department in the premises. It now appears that no one has ever been permitted to visé passports of Americans for Russian travel except the Russian Ambassador at Washington, and the Consuls General at New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

At the Home Rule Convention held in Honolulu, Hawaii, Seventh month, ex-Delegate Wilcox urged that Congress be memorialized to grant Hawaii an independence. He also strongly favored the establishment of a government for the islands similar to that of Cuba. The proposition was felt to be premature, but a platform was adopted denouncing the administration of Governor Dole as oligarchical, the charge being made that the governor and a selected clique control the affairs of the territory in a selfish and wasteful manner. The native voters in the islands outnumber the whites, and surrounding these antagonistic racial elements in the electorate are the Chinese, and especially the Japanese, who by far outnumber the whites and natives combined.

SIR SAMUEL LEWIS, companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, who died in London on Seventh month 9th, was of pure Negro parentage, having been born in West Africa, in 1843. After passing through the local grammar school he was sent by his father to England to complete his education. He studied in University College, where he gained prizes and certificates in the English language and zoölogy, and in the London University, whose examinations are the "stiffest" of any in the United Kingdom. He studied law and passed the Bar of the Middle Temple in 1870. Returning to his native land in 1872, he began the practice of his profession, and earned the reputation of being an able and painstaking advocate. He served the local Government on several occasions in the capacity, either of judge, magistrate or crown advocate. He was much revered by his countrymen and respected by the European element in West Africa, as his endeavors were for the welfare, not only of his native colony, but of the whole of the British West African colonies.

AN attempt was made by a few unruly negroes to break up a meeting at which Booker T. Washington spoke in Boston. The number of disturbers was comparatively small, but so excitable is the temperament of the race that before the trouble was checked by the arrest of the ringleaders, it had assumed almost the proportions of a riot. The trouble was the result of a deliberate and organized scheme, planned, it is said, in the office of a negro journal opposed to Washington and his ideas. The Alabama State Colored Baptist Convention, which was in session at the time, passed a resolution severely condemning the attack, and pledging confidence and endorsement of Booker Washington as "a conservative, worthy and safe leader, deserving of the respect and confidence of all men."

ROBERT BAKER, a Democratic Congressman-elect of Brooklyn, has made public a letter, from which it is seen that it is a regular custom of a certain railroad to send passes to Congressmen in its territory. Probably very few of the 150 members of Congress who live within this territory refuse the passes, else the company would not continue to send them out or to have the "regulations" the letter mentions, about the matter. There is reason to believe that most of the passes are retained, that this is not the only road with similar "regulations," and that Congress is honeycombed with this corrupting railroad influence.

NEWS NOTES.

LACK of work in Roumania is causing a renewed exodus on a large scale of Jewish workmen to America.

THE William Smith College for Women will be founded and endowed at Geneva, N. Y., by William Smith, the millionaire nurseryman.

SIX thousand more aliens entered the United States through the port of New York during Seventh month than during the same month last year.

THOUSANDS of workmen in New York City, members of Unions that refused to sign the mutual plan of arbitration, have deserted their organizations and gone to work.

THE second attempt this summer to secure teachers for the Philippine service was a little more successful than the first but was not very encouraging. In Boston there were only two applicants.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB has resigned his position as President of the United States Steel Corporation. It is stated that W. E. Cory, who has for some time performed the active duties of the office, will be his successor.

THE American Federation of Catholic Societies in session at Atlantic City reports 266 county federations in 40 States. Four thousand Sioux Indians are represented at the convention by a chief, Ministavi Hanska of South Dakota.

THE visit of King Edward to the improved working people's houses in Dublin recalls the fact that as Prince of Wales he was for years chairman of a commission for improving the houses of the poor, and was assiduous in attendance on its meetings.

ROBERT LEE, the negro who shot Policeman Louis Massey at Evansville on Seventh month 3d, and started the riot that resulted in the death and injury of many citizens died in prison Seventh month 31st, from the effects of a wound in the lungs, caused by a bullet fired by Massey.

THE Doylestown, Pa., National Bank, which has been in existence since 1832, closed its doors Seventh month 30th, and passed into the hands of T. P. Kane, Deputy Comptroller of the Currency. It is stated that the bank's losses will absorb its entire surplus and capital stock.

THE new Pope, Pius X., elected on the 4th, who was Cardinal Sarto, Patriarch of Venice, is a man of simple habits, distinguished for his scholarship and piety, and a personal friend of members of the ruling house and government of Italy. His policy has been liberal and progressive.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

8TH Mo. 8 (SEVENTH-DAY).—MIAMI Quarterly Meeting, at Green Plain (near Selma, O.) at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m. (All standard time).

8TH Mo. 8 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SALEM Quarterly Meeting, at Salem, O., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day, at 10 a. m.

8TH Mo. 8 (SEVENTH-DAY).—NEW YORK Monthly Meeting, at Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, at 2.30 p. m.

8TH Mo. 9 (FIRST-DAY).—A CIRCULAR Meeting under the care of a committee of the Western Quarterly Meeting, at Marlborough, Pa., at 3 p. m.

8TH Mo. 9 (FIRST-DAY).—THE VISITING Committee of Salem Quarterly Meeting will attend the meeting at Mullica Hill, N. J., at 10 a. m.

8TH Mo. 10 (SECOND-DAY).—FRIENDS' Flower and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Avenue, at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

8TH Mo. 15 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SHORT Creek Quarterly Meeting, at Short Creek (one mile from Mt. Pleasant, Ohio). Ministers and Elders, day before, 2 p. m.

8TH Mo. 17 (SECOND-DAY).—FAIRFAX Quarterly Meeting, Goose Creek Meeting-house, (Lincoln, Va.), at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m. Friends and others wishing to attend will get tickets at Sixth Street Station, Washington, D. C., for Hamilton or Purcellville, where carriages will be in waiting to take Friends to homes. Trains leave at 8.30 a. m. and 4.30 p. m.

8TH Mo. 20 (FIFTH-DAY).—CONFERENCE under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the meeting-house at Newtown, Delaware county, Pa., with sessions in the morning and afternoon. Basket lunch.

8TH Mo. 22 (SEVENTH-DAY).—PELHAM Half-Yearly Meeting, at Yarmouth, Ontario. Ministers and Elders day before at 3 p. m.

8TH Mo. 22 (SEVENTH-DAY).—AN ANNUAL all-day meeting of the Philanthropic Conference of Western Quarterly Meeting at London Grove.

8TH Mo. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—DUANESBURG Quarterly Meeting at Quaker Street, N. Y., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders Seventh-day preceding at 3 p. m.

ARMSTRONG & MEKELY Pittsburgh
 BEYMER-BAUM Pittsburgh
 DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh
 FAHNSTOCK Pittsburgh
 ANCHOR Pittsburgh
 EKERTIN Cincinnati
 ATLANTIC
 BRADLEY
 BROOKLYN New York
 JEWETT
 ULSTER
 UNION
 SOUTHERN Chicago
 SHIPMAN
 COLLIER
 MISSOURI St. Louis
 RED SEAL
 SOUTHERN
 JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia
 MORLEY Cleveland
 SALEM Salem, Mass.
 CORNELL Buffalo
 KENTUCKY Louisville

CONSIDERING the cost of labor, of applying it, and its great covering capacity, Pure White Lead is not only the cheapest Paint in the first cost, but because of its extreme durability is by far the cheapest in the end.

Furthermore, no scraping or burning will be required when repainting becomes necessary.

If interested in paint or painting, address,

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

8TH Mo. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—INDIANA Yearly Meeting, Richmond, Indiana. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m. In order that comfortable homes may be provided for those that have a prospect of attending, they are requested to send their names to Esther S. Wallace, 230 South 12th Street, Richmond, Ind.

8TH Mo. 28 (SIXTH-DAY).—MEETING OF Central Committee of Friends' General Conference beginning at 9 a. m., and continuing through Seventh-day.

Friends expecting to attend are requested to communicate with Leona M. Whinery, Star No. 1, Salem, Ohio, stating whether they wish to be located near the meeting-house or car line and other particulars; the local committees will arrange for boarding places. It is hoped that those who attend can remain for the sessions of Ohio Yearly Meeting, and information as to this should be given in applying for accommodation.

8TH Mo. 31 (SECOND-DAY).—OHIO Yearly Meeting, at Salem, Ohio, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding.

THE JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE SEVERAL Yearly Meetings for Work among Isolated Members will meet between the sessions of Indiana Yearly Meeting.

THE REPORTS OF ASBURY PARK Conference have been sent to the Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race Streets,—a package for each monthly meeting belonging to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Correspondents are requested to call for them or to give directions concerning their shipment.

UP THE HUDSON.

On August 19th, and September 3d, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run its usual midsummer excursions to the "Upper Hudson," under personal escort. Special train will leave Broad Street Station at 7.34 a. m., stopping at principal points between Philadelphia and Trenton.

A stop will be made at West Point, giving those who disembark an hour and a half at that point, and enabling them to view the United States Military Academy.

In order to insure an early return, no stop will be made at Newburgh, although the steamer will run to a point off that city and there turn.

Tickets will be sold at the following round-trip rates: From Philadelphia, Bristol, and intermediate stations, $2.50; Trenton, $2.00; Tulpehocken, Westmoreland, and intermediate stations, $2.50; Upsal, Carpenter, and Allen's Lane, $2.60; Wissahickon Heights, Highland, and Chestnut Hill, $2.70.

At Germantown Junction connection will be made with regular trains from Chestnut Hill Branch.

Tickets good only on special train and connections at above points.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING AND SHRIGLEY

ARCHITECTS

Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. Linden Heckock Oscar M. Hokanson

HECKOCK & HOKANSON

ARCHITECTS

Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada

Established 1850 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

QEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing customers of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

 All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes to the of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CITRUS GRABERIS, Jr.) 52nd & Meier Sts., Philadelphia

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

NOT THE SAME.

GOIN' shoppin' pears to me,
Isn't what it used to be.
Used to drive up to the store.
Leave the team out by the door,
Trade our truck for calico,
Tea an' sech'; and off we'd go.
Nowadays ye're at a loss
To pick out the real boss.
They don't stop to tell you jokes.
Never saw sech dressed-up folks.
An' the goods that they display
Fairly takes your breath away.
Everything's trimmed up so grand—
Looks to me like fairyland.
An' the goods you kin procure—
Garden tools and literatur,
Furniture with spindle legs,
Turkish rugs an' fresh-laid eggs.
Everywhere you cast your eye
There is things you'd like to buy.
All tired out when night arrives,
Couldn't stop to save our lives.
With the mornin's earliest ray
All on hand for bargain day,
Goin' shoppin'! Gracious me!
'Tisn't what it used to be.
—[Washington Star.]

The two shortest names in the new Chicago directory are Re and Ex. Sugar, Milk and Coffee are among the edible names. There are several Victories, but no Defeats; Sunshine, but no Moonshine; several Moons and a constellation of Stars. Sums without an Adder to foot them up, Triplets, but no Twins. These are some of the oddities of the new volume.

I SAW something yesterday which showed that the tenderest heart may exist in spite of the roughest exterior. A little fox terrier had been left outside a Devonshire street store by its owner. Evidently the dog had not been long in the city, for it trembled with fright at being out of the protecting presence of its master. As it lay crouching in the doorway a huge laborer came along. Reaching down pityingly he stroked the wee animal, speaking a few soothing words at the same time. The result was that the fear in the dog's heart subsided. It wagged its tail knowingly and licked the kind-hearted man's hand. When it was left alone it sat up bravely, as though feeling assured that human beings would do it no harm.—[Boston Post.]

DICKY (spelling at the sign over a door): "W. C. T. U. Pa, what's 'W' for?" Father: "'W' stands for women my boy." Dickey: "Oh, yes! 'Women see t' you!' And they do, don't they, pa!"—[Gathered.]

A BOSTON youngster was asked what kind of a stocking he wished to hang up on Christmas Eve. "Well," said he, "I don't care about it's being all wool; but I would like to have it a yard wide."

TEDDIE was in a hurry for dinner and did not wash his face thoroughly. When asked if he called that washing his face he said, "Of course I do. I did wash my face, but I didn't think it necessary to go into details."

SUMMER TOUR TO THE NORTH.

VACATION TRIP TO CANADA VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad personally-conducted tour to Northern New York and Canada, leaving August 12th, covers many prominent points of interest to the Summer tourist—Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Quebec, The Saguenay, Montreal, Au Sable Chasm, Lakes Champlain and George, and Saratoga. The tour covers a period of fifteen days; round-trip rate, $125.

The party will be in charge of one of the Pennsylvania's tourist agents, assisted by an experienced lady as chaperon, whose especial charge will be the unescorted ladies.

The rate covers railway and boat fare for the entire round trip, parlor-car seats, meals en route, hotel entertainment, transfer charges, and carriage hire.

For detailed itinerary, tickets or any additional information, apply to Ticket Agents, Tourist Agent 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; or address George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: August 21st, September 4th and 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a.m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a.m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

8TH Mo. 8 (SEVENTH-DAY).—MIAMI Quarterly Meeting, at Green Plain (near Selma, O.) at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m. (All standard time).

8TH Mo. 8 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SALEM Quarterly Meeting, at Salem, O., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day, at 10 a. m.

8TH Mo. 8 (SEVENTH-DAY).—NEW YORK Monthly Meeting, at Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, at 2.30 p. m.

8TH Mo. 9 (FIRST-DAY).—A CIRCULAR Meeting under the care of a committee of the Western Quarterly Meeting, at Marlborough, Pa., at 3 p. m.

8TH Mo. 9 (FIRST-DAY).—THE VISITING Committee of Salem Quarterly Meeting will attend the meeting at Mullica Hill, N. J., at 10 a. m.

8TH Mo. 10 (SECOND-DAY).—FRIENDS' Flower and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Avenue, at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

8TH Mo. 15 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SHORT Creek Quarterly Meeting, at Short Creek (one mile from Mt. Pleasant, Ohio). Ministers and Elders, day before, 2 p. m.

8TH Mo. 17 (SECOND-DAY).—FAIRFAX Quarterly Meeting, Goose Creek Meeting-house, (Lincoln, Va.), at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m. Friends and others wishing to attend will get tickets at Sixth Street Station, Washington, D. C., for Hamilton or Purcellville, where carriages will be in waiting to take Friends to homes. Trains leave at 8.30 a. m. and 4.30 p. m.

8TH Mo. 20 (FIFTH-DAY).—CONFERENCE under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the meeting-house at Newtown, Delaware county, Pa., with sessions in the morning and afternoon. Basket lunch.

8TH Mo. 22 (SEVENTH-DAY).—PELHAM Half-Yearly Meeting, at Yarmouth, Ontario. Ministers and Elders day before at 3 p. m.

8TH Mo. 22 (SEVENTH-DAY).—AN ANNUAL all-day meeting of the Philanthropic Conference of Western Quarterly Meeting at London Grove.

8TH Mo. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—DUANESBURG Quarterly Meeting at Quaker Street, N. Y., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders Seventh-day preceding at 3 p. m.

ARMSTRONG & McKEELY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburg.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburg.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburg.
ANCHOR Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC New York.
BRADLEY New York.
BROOKLYN New York.
JEWETT New York.
ULSTER New York.
UNION New York.
SOUTHERN Chicago.
SHIPMAN Chicago.
COLLIER Chicago.
MISSOURI St. Louis.
RED SEAL St. Louis.
SOUTHERN St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Philadelphia.
SALEM Cleveland.
SALEM, MASS. Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

CONSIDERING the cost of labor, of applying it, and its great covering capacity, Pure White Lead is not only the cheapest Paint in the first cost, but because of its extreme durability is by far the cheapest in the end.

Furthermore, no scraping or burning will be required when repainting becomes necessary.

If interested in paint or painting, address,

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

8TH Mo. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—INDIANA Yearly Meeting, Richmond, Indiana. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m. In order that comfortable homes may be provided for those that have a prospect of attending, they are requested to send their names to Esther S. Wallace, 230 South 12th Street, Richmond, Ind.

8TH Mo. 28 (SIXTH-DAY).—MEETING OF Central Committee of Friends' General Conference beginning at 9 a. m., and continuing through Seventh-day.

Friends expecting to attend are requested to communicate with Leona M. Whinery, Star No. 1, Salem, Ohio, stating whether they wish to be located near the meeting-house or car line and other particulars; the local committees will arrange for boarding places. It is hoped that those who attend can remain for the sessions of Ohio Yearly Meeting, and information as to this should be given in applying for accommodation.

8TH Mo. 31 (SECOND-DAY).—OHIO Yearly Meeting, at Salem, Ohio, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding.

THE JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE SEVERAL Yearly Meetings for Work among Isolated Members will meet between the sessions of Indiana Yearly Meeting.

THE REPORTS OF ASBURY PARK Conference have been sent to the Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race Streets,—a package for each monthly meeting belonging to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Correspondents are requested to call for them or to give directions concerning their shipment.

UP THE HUDSON.

On August 19th, and September 3d, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run its usual midsummer excursions to the "Upper Hudson," under personal escort. Special train will leave Broad Street Station at 7.34 a. m., stopping at principal points between Philadelphia and Trenton.

A stop will be made at West Point, giving those who disembark an hour and a half at that point, and enabling them to view the United States Military Academy.

In order to insure an early return, no stop will be made at Newburgh, although the steamer will run to a point off that city and there turn.

Tickets will be sold at the following round-trip rates: From Philadelphia, Bristol, and intermediate stations, $2.50; Trenton, $2.00; Tulpehocken, Westmoreland, and intermediate stations, $2.50; Upsal, Carpenter, and Allen's Lane, $2.60; Wissahickon Heights, Highland, and Chestnut Hill, $2.70.

At Germantown Junction connection will be made with regular trains from Chestnut Hill Branch.

Tickets good only on special train and connections at above points.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING AND SHRIGLEY

ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
 ARCHITECTS

Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,
 27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CITRUS GRAMBERS, Jr.) 52nd & Media Sts., Philadelphia

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

NOT THE SAME.

GOIN' shoppin' pears to me,
Isn't what it used to be.
Used to drive up to the store.
Leave the team out by the door,
Trade our truck for calico,
Tea an' sech; and off we'd go.
Nowadays ye're at a loss
To pick out the real boss.
They don't stop to tell you jokes.
Never saw sech dressed-up folks.
An' the goods that they display
Fairly takes your breath away.
Everything's trimmed up so grand—
Looks to me like fairyland.
An' the goods you kin procure—
Garden tools and literator,
Furniture with spindle legs,
Turkish rugs an' fresh-laid eggs.
Everywhere you cast your eye
There is things you'd like to buy.
All tired out when night arrives,
Couldn't stop to save our lives.
With the mornin's earliest ray
All on hand for bargain day.
Goin' shoppin'! Gracious me!
'Tisn't what it used to be.
—[Washington Star.]

The two shortest names in the new Chicago directory are Re and Ex. Sugar, Milk and Coffee are among the edible names. There are several Victories, but no defeats; Sunshine, but no Moonshine; several Moons and a constellation of Stars. Sums without an Adder to foot them up, Triplets, but no Twins. These are some of the oddities of the new volume.

I SAW something yesterday which showed that the tenderest heart may exist in spite of the roughest exterior. A little fox terrier had been left outside a Devonshire street store by its owner. Evidently the dog had not been long in the city, for it trembled with fright at being out of the protecting presence of its master. As it lay crouching in the doorway a huge laborer came along. Reaching down pityingly he stroked the wee animal, speaking a few soothing words at the same time. The result was that the fear in the dog's heart subsided. It wagged its tail knowingly and licked the kind-hearted man's hand. When it was left alone it sat up bravely, as though feeling assured that human beings would do it no harm.—[Boston Post.]

DICKY (spelling at the sign over a door): "W. C. T. U. Pa, what's 'W' for?" Father: "'W' stands for women my boy." Dickey: "Oh, yes! 'Women see t' you!' And they do, don't they, pa!"—[Gathered.]

A BOSTON youngster was asked what kind of a stocking he wished to hang up on Christmas Eve. "Well," said he, "I don't care about it's being all wool; but I would like to have it a yard wide."

TEDDIE was in a hurry for dinner and did not wash his face thoroughly. When asked if he called that washing his face he said, "Of course I do. I did wash my face, but I didn't think it necessary to go into details."

SUMMER TOUR TO THE NORTH.

VACATION TRIP TO CANADA VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad personally-conducted tour to Northern New York and Canada, leaving August 12th, covers many prominent points of interest to the Summer tourist—Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Quebec, the Saguenay, Montreal, Au Sable Chasm, Lakes Champlain and George, and Saratoga. The tour covers a period of fifteen days; round-trip rate, $125.

The party will be in charge of one of the Company's tourist agents, assisted by an experienced lady as chaperon, whose especial charge will be the unescorted ladies.

The rate covers railway and boat fare for the entire round trip, parlor-car seats, meals en route, hotel entertainment, transfer charges, and carriage hire.

For detailed itinerary, tickets or any additional information, apply to Ticket Agents, Tourist Agent 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; or address George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: August 21st, September 4th and 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a.m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a.m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

United Security

Life Insurance
and Trust Company
OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General
Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
Assistant Treasurer.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
'Phone 1-33-55.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thus, Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.

Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

To-morrow is no time at all—
it never comes.

The time to insure is to-day.
You will be supplied with the kind of insurance adapted to your means and needs; your convenience will be consulted,
the way made easy if you apply
to the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE,
ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATE ACCOUNTS.
Safes to Rent to Burglar-proof Vaults.

E. B. MORRIS, President.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

G. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue
Uptown offices, 878 and 700 Chestnut Street, Philad'a
J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P.
TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

SELECT EXCURSIONS TO TOLCHES- TER BEACH, CHESAPEAKE BAY.

On Wednesday, August 10th, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company (Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company) will run special low-rate excursions to Maryland's most popular watering place, Tolchester Beach.
This place is held in high favor by all who have visited it. It has all the attributes of a first-class resort, and especially appeals to families. No liquors are allowed on train, boat or grounds.
Every possible kind of amusement is to be found. The location, on the prettiest part of the beautiful Chesapeake Bay, speaks for itself.

A special train will be run on the following schedule, and round-trip tickets will be sold at the rates quoted.

Leave	Time a. m. Rate.
Philadelphia, Pa.,	7.00 $1.50
West Philadelphia, . . . "	7.03 1.50
Sharon Hill, "	7.15 1.50
Moore, "	7.20 1.35
Ridley Park, "	7.23 1.35
Chester, "	7.29 1.25
Thurlow, "	7.33 1.25
Linwood, "	7.37 1.20
Wilmington, Del.,	8.03 1.00
Newport, "	8.11 .90
Newark, "	8.26 .75
Iron Hill, Md.,	8.31 .75
Elkton, "	8.37 .75
North-East, "	8.47 .50
Charlestown, "	8.51 .50

Returning steamer will leave Tolchester Beach at 4.00 p. m.
Children between five a Marjha J Warner of age, half the above rate.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER,
when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

AMONG other advantages which fall to the lot of most village preachers is enough land to make a hen-yard—sometimes more. Such is my lot, and a valuable lesson I recently learned about denominational economics and church comity.
Two hens wanted to sit on the same nest of eggs. I found that they were continually pushing each other, and with their beaks pulling the eggs back and forth. Seeing that no chickens would come forth from that, and deciding which hen was there first, I took the other one away, so she could lay eggs and sit for herself. Now, you put a Presbyterian and a Methodist down in a small community—or whatever denominations you like—and there will be a good deal of pushing and pulling, the result of which will be to addle the minds of the people. Let Mr. Superintendent or Mr. Moderator step in and take one away, and let him hunt up a congregation somewhere else—out west, for example.—["A Village Preacher," in Christian Guardian.]

The good men do is not always interred with their bones. It has recently been announced that the five-thousand-dollar anonymous contribution which headed the national subscription for the relief of the starving Cubans, before the Spanish War, was made by William McKinley.—
[Youth's Companion.]

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 99-38 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, EIGHTH MONTH 15, 1903.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $2.60) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

The Albertson,

New, First-class Family Hotel.

SITUATED AT MANTOLOKING, N. J.

Three miles this side of Bay Head, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, one and one-half hours from Broad Street Station or Market Street Wharf. Fine bathing, Fishing, Yachting and golfing. Send for booklet.

J. R. ALBERTSON,
Formerly of Penns Manor, Pa.

The Bartram,

Accommodates 100 guests.

WILDWOOD, N. J.

Pleasantly situated within 200 feet of beach. Especial attention given to the menu.

J ALFRED BARTRAM, Owner and Manager.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particulars address

SARAH J. PAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst,

Second House from Beach

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

176 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts. K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE AQUARILLE,

OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,

Atlantic City, N. J.

Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,

1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

STENOGRAPHER

GEO. B. COCK,

Telephones.

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

MONTGOMERY SPECIAL MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Specialty attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

JUST PUBLISHED

Views and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hillborn, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia, 32 pages, paper, 5c.; per dozen 50c.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION

Philadelphia, Pa.

FOR RENT.—BUCK HILL FALLS COTTAGE,

The Hemlocks, containing five bed-rooms and fully furnished for housekeeping, can be rented for September or October. Address Mr. W. W. Speakman, 1307 Pennsylvania Bldg., 15th and Chestnut Sts., Phila.

FOR RENT.—W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and a bath, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

FAMILY ABOUT TO SOJOURN ABROAD WILL rent their house in West Philadelphia for a year, or a little less. Moderate sized, corner house, very conveniently located, porch, in good order, and tastefully furnished. Address Box 103, West Chester, Pa.

WANTED.—COPIES OF FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, issue of Seventh month 25th, and Third month 14, 1903. Address this Office.

WANTED.—TWO YOUNG WOMEN TO TAKE entire charge of housekeeping in large family. City. Good wages. Address H. Bus Office.

WANTED.—AN ELDERLY FRIEND DESIRES position as matron or housekeeper in some Friends' institute. Prefer either in or near Philadelphia. Address Mrs. Eliza Davis, Bloomingdale, Ind.

WANTED.—REFINED WOMAN OR SMALL family to take main part of furnished house, with the boarders now in it. All conveniences. Terms liberal. Address A, 38 West Front Street, Media, Pa.

WE OFFER A PLEASANT HOME FOR A feeble-minded young lady, in a Friends' family. Address, for particulars, V. Box 229, Langhorne, Pa.

WANTED.—A WORKING HOUSEKEEPER, at Linton's Model Coffee House, 27 S. 4th St., Phila.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1829 1st St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

It's Easier to get the First Order

than to keep a customer coming year in, year out. Does it mean anything to you that we have many customers who were with us when we started in business?

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE

BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETTI.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hôte 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.

'Phone 1-33-55.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

"By woodland aisles and sylvan corridors,
Where moss and tangled fern clothe all thy banks
With softest green, and little fairy groves
Of dainty maidenhair sway in the breeze."
—John Russell Hayes.

THE Ninth month is a delightful time to visit Buck Hill, and last year we had more guests during that month than any other, except one, during the summer. The abundant rains have kept the country fresh and green. Already the golden-rod and asters are speaking of fall.

In the Ninth month the rush and bustle of the busy summer will be over, most of the children will be in school, and there is ample room in Inn and overflow cottages.

Several cottages are for rent for all or portions of the month at rates lower than for the mid-season. They are completely furnished, and fire wood is cheap. Particulars and terms on application.

Several friends are planning late visits, and one party has rented a cottage for the last two weeks in Tenth month. The leaves will be well off by that time and the chestnuts down.

Seventh-day, the 8th instant, was high water mark at the Inn, with 282 guests for dinner.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,

Olympia, Washington.

Pocono Pines Assembly

AND

Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing. 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc. New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager,

Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS

IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.

809 Thayer Street, Philad'a, Pa.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
Friends' Intelligencer Association,
 (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME. WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
 N. W. Corner Fifth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
 * * * TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXXIII., . . .	518
POETRY: THE MOSS,	513
FRIENDS AS EMANCIPATORS,	513
COLLECTIVE BARGAINING,	513
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON: Corinth and Ephesus,	517
EDITORIAL: Next Year's Conference,	518
Notes,	518
MARRIAGES, DEATHS,	519
SOCIETY NOTES,	519
AMONG THE PENNSYLVANIA MOUNTAINS (Concluded),	520
WOODBROOKE SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY,	521
EDUCATIONAL,	524
ABINGTON QUARTERLY MEETING,	525
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	526
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES,	526
LITERARY NOTES,	526
CURRENT EVENTS,	527
NEWS NOTES,	527
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS,	528

Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street,
 Charles W. Richards, 1202 Atlantic St., Toga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
 CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
 1225 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'n, Pa.
 Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

EDWARD T. BLACK
 (S. W. BLACK'S SON)

REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
 The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
 616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
 CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
 619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
 ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
 929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
 Also member Montgomery County Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 NO. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
 Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
 OFFICES: 623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
 (Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
 325 SWEDEN STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
 Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the North Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
 19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

WOMEN'S CLOTH WALKING SKIRTS

We mention three of our popular-priced Walking Skirts that are as fine examples of women's tailoring as are seen anywhere in Philadelphia:

Walking Skirts—of black mohair, and blue mohair with white snowflake dots. The blue skirts are reduced from $7.50. The black skirts are about the most popular we have shown this summer, and we shall have no more after this lot is gone. The sale price is $5.00.

Walking Skirts—of gray and black mixed material; seven-gore, with full-flare; flat stitched seams; half-inch strapings, designed very neatly at hips, giving a stylish yoke effect; same effect in strapping also at bottom of skirt—$6.50.

Walking Skirts—of blue sicilian; thirteen-gore, side plait effect, falling very gracefully around the bottom; finished with a 2½-inch hem; a natty and perfectly-shaped skirt—$7.50.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
 PHILADELPHIA.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ampler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMPLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.
 JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' School,
 FOURTH AND WEST STREETS, WILMINGTON, DEL.
 A day school for both sexes, fitting for either college or business. Scientific, Latin-scientific, and Classical Courses. Fourteen teachers. Excellent equipment. Thorough instruction. Graduates entered on certificate in leading colleges. Fall term begins Ninth month (September) 14th. For illustrated catalogue address
 HERSHEL A. MORRIS, A. M., Principal.

Friends' Central School,
 FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
 PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.
 J. EUGENE BAKER,
 ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.
 Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.
 Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
 For catalogue, apply to
 JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
 George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.
 Near Jenkintown, Penna., 20 miles from Philadelphia.
 Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
 GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
 Or,
 CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.
 The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.
 For circulars, address
 CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
 Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
 A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction fit for business or to enter college.
 Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
 For particulars address
 A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
 Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class environment.
 For circulars address
 ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
 Swarthmore, Pa.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 15, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 33.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXXIII.

MILLIONS have accepted Christ as their personal Saviour, but He still awaits acceptance as the Saviour of society.

GULIELMA CROSFIELD.

—
In Women's Yearly Meeting, London.

THE MOSS.

WHEN black despair beats down my wings,
And Heavenly visions fade away,
Lord, let me bend to common things—
The tasks of every day.

As when the Aurora is denied
And blinding blizzards round him beat,
The Savoyard stoops and takes for guide
The moss beneath his feet.

WILLIAM CANTON.

FRIENDS AS EMANCIPATORS.¹

TO SPEAK of Friends as emancipators brings at once to our minds a recollection of the work of John Woolman in influencing Friends against holding slaves, the testimony against human bondage subsequently borne by our Society, and the support given by Friends to the movement which led to the abolition of slavery. The work was noble, worthy of remembrance, and the earnest, concerned endeavor is worthy of our imitation. That work is finished, and "we thankfully rejoice that property in man is no longer recognized by the laws of our country."

But there is another direction in which Friends were emancipators, and in which they can be emancipators. It is a work no less worthy of earnest, concerned endeavor than that for the emancipation of the slave and for the amelioration of the condition of the free negro. This work is the liberation of thought, reason, conscience and spirit from whatever restrains them from attaining their best estate.

It is sometimes said that the Society of Friends has ceased to grow, that its work is done, and that it is only perpetuated by its inertia, by its push out of the seventeenth century which has lasted until now. I believe it would be good for Friends to believe that the work of Friends is done—in a sense. I have no confidence in that conception of Friendly work which consists in glorifying the past work of our Society, and in thinking former achievement is more important to us than what we are doing or can do now, or that the lives of the noble dead are of more moment to us than what we should be or can be now. The work of the early Friends is done; peace be to its memory. The work Friends have to do is as new as ever, and only just beginning. In certain lines of thought and activity we are, I believe, only just commencing to feel and understand what our tenets and testimonies really mean, and if we can only learn better to appreciate them, to teach them, and, if necessary, to preach them, we shall find work to do that is almost dismaying in its magnitude.

If "liberal" means to be free to think clearly, with the mind and spirit liberated from the chains of dead custom and the letter of tradition which killeth, then Friends certainly started on the road to be liberals, to be emancipated, to be emancipators. The early Friends did not desire to escape from religion. They were pious in a sense and to a degree rare to find in the present day. They expressed their thought in a religious, even theological, manner, which almost seems to require in us a special training to accept now; yet it held a meaning modern and useful for us. The founders of the Society were not ignorant of the freedom given by their faith. The words "Freedom" and "Liberty" were frequently on their tongues, and to obtain the highest liberty was their ardent desire. While the churches urged conformity to creed, custom and ceremony, Friends upheld the freedom of the conscience to follow what seemed good. William Penn, in a tract entitled, "A Brief Examination of Liberty Spiritual," refers to "Liberty, one of the most glorious words and things in this world, but little understood, and frequently abused by many."

"It has already been shown in relating the experience of George Fox," says Samuel M. Janney, "that the great fundamental principle of Friends is the immediate teaching of the Holy Spirit, the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus which makes free from the law of sin and death."

That is the theological statement of the main doctrine of Friends; it is intelligible to us because of our training, but the religious thought, the deep meaning, are there.

Friends have had the desire to get at the root of religion, and they have become radicals by treating with neglect the ceremonies and sacraments which do not save either from sin or its punishment, and by laying fast hold of the doctrine, symbolized under the form of a Universal Saving Light, of a spiritual condition, an inward character, which will save from sin itself rather than from punishment. This belief of ours has emancipated Friends from believing that God is a being who may be served by ceremonies or set forms, or that man is a being who may be saved from torment by dogmas or priests. Friends hold that the good impulses from within, the spirit in which one acts, are the important thing. George Fox said to a priest who offered to him a form for a prayer:

¹ Read at a meeting under the care of New York Yearly Meeting's Committee for the Advancement of Friends' Principles, held on the day of Quarterly Meeting, at Westbury, Long Island, Seventh month 25th.

"If thou wouldst have me pray for thee by a form of words, is not that to deny the apostles' doctrine and practice of praying by the spirit as it gave tongue and utterance." This was the theological reason, but what a liberation it was from a set formality, and what an encouragement it was to personal thought and feeling, to human development.

"Serving God," said William Penn, "people generally confine to the acts of public and private worship. But if we consider that God is an Infinite Spirit, and as such everywhere, and that he will be worshiped in spirit and in truth, we shall see the shortness of such a notion. For serving God concerns the frame of our spirits in the whole course of our lives; in every occasion we have, in which we show our love to his law."

As the belief in the sufficiency of the inward serving light liberated Friends from belief in the efficacy of sacraments, so the belief in the universality of that light freed them from intolerance of the sincere views of other conscientious Christian people. It prevented our considering ourselves as the only instrument for the promulgation of truth. It gives an enlarged view of other religions. It makes us religious "citizens of the world." It frees from narrow thought, it should even take us out of a narrow conception of the religion called Christian, and permit us to believe that the vital principle that leads men towards right living is not limited to Christian sects; that, if I may use the expression, God is the Father of all his children; that whatever privileges, powers and faculties are possessed by Christians are possessed by others, and that whether a man be Christian, Jew or pagan, if he does righteously he will receive his reward.

"For as hence it well follows," says Barclay, "that some of the old philosophers might have been saved, so also may some who, by providence cast into those remote parts of the world where knowledge of the history is wanting, be made partakers of the divine mystery, if they receive and resist not that grace and manifestation whereof is given to each man to profit withal."

There is another emancipation upheld by certain of our testimonies, and that emancipation makes for lowly living and high thinking. We know that lives of lowest thoughts and ideals are lives which lead to death, the death in life, the death of the spirit, the death of love, joy and peace of mind. We also know that the life occupied in the pursuit of pleasure for pleasure's sake does not get the most happiness out of life. We know and appreciate that that life is not of finest texture which is composed solely of butterfly fashion and frivolity, or occupied in seeking the merriment forced from desire to escape from ennui, from one's self, poor substitute for the natural joy of cheerful hearts.

We know and appreciate, and in some moments long to imitate those who have fled from society to solitude. We delight in the character of John Burroughs, in imagination live with Thoreau at Walden, go a-fishing with Isaac Walton, or learn the secrets of "Little Rivers" with Henry van Dyke. We realize the connection between love of nature and spiritual culture, that "The world is too much with us; late and soon Getting and spending we lay waste our powers," and we love to talk and dream about the simple life. Yet the rush of social engagements endangers our love of ferny woods and babbling brooks, of the song of birds, the hum of bees, and the longing to learn

"What oracle
Is in the pine-tree's organ swell,
What may the wind's low burden be,
The meaning of the moaning sea,
The hieroglyphics of the stars,
Or clouded sunset's crimson bars."

At other times we remember that work, honest, strengthening work, is necessary and better for spiritual growth than the life of idleness and wasted opportunities, and we strive to do our each day's best in our business, in our homes, in our charities and in our churches. We consider that that life is well lived which is spent in thinking high, living simply, doing nobly, all its days. Freedom and encouragement for such living is found in the testimony of Friends in favor of moderation, simplicity and plainness of speech, behavior and apparel, and a present example of it in the unadorned beauty of our meeting house.

The spirit of Quakerism is to tear off externals, and get at the substance of things, to get into living relationship with that which is good for man to know and be, with that which we may call religion. "Let us not Cozen ourselves with the Shells and Husks of things," said Penn. "Nor prefer Form to Power, nor Shadows to Substance. Pictures of Bread will not satisfy Hunger, nor those of Devotion please God."

In the church our Society has discarded ceremony, saying that the essence of religion is not in the outward form, but in the inward spirit. In its theology it has rejected the dogmas, and emancipated from the bonds of creeds; it is likewise released from controversies as to the Trinity or Unity of God, the divinity or humanity of Jesus, the proper manner of baptism, and the nature and efficacy of any outward forms or sacraments. It maintains the nearness of man to those powers and influences which we call God; it upholds the brotherhood, the dignity, the divinity of man, and leaves to each individual—no, more emphatic than that—it maintains the right and duty of each individual to seek his own best conceptions of that divinity and humanity, and of right, of duty, of motive and incentive, and that in so seeking he shall be untrammelled by priest or council, and be without fear of anathema, save that which he finds in his own soul. In daily life it protests against the chains of fashion, against the outward show, the pomp and parade and ceremony. Its teaching is for simple dress, for true thoughts and plain speech, for quiet homelike homes. It would, if it could, emancipate man from the thralldom of creeds, from the formality of ceremonialism, from the

For Friends' Intelligencer.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING.

SIDNEY AND BEATRICE WEBB, the English authorities on trade unionism, begin their work, "The History of Trade Unionism," with this definition: "A trade union . . . is a continuous association of wage-earners for the purpose of maintaining or improving the conditions of their employment."

Given this definition it may be assumed that there is more than one road which may be thought to lead to this Rome of unionism, the maintenance or improvement of the conditions of employment. In fact, this is true. The same authors, in their "Industrial Democracy," name three main roads along which trade unionism has traveled, the method of mutual insurance, that of legal enactment, and that of collective bargaining. It would appear, however, that from the very terms of their definition of a trade union, it follows that mutual insurance must be ruled out as not a primary function, but a secondary one, and looking to a by-end. Mutual insurance, in other words, has nothing to do with the maintenance or improvement of the conditions of employment. It accepts these conditions as they are, and adapting itself to them, seeks to better the condition of the workingman in certain respects, within the limits, so set, to insure him against sickness, accident or death in the given conditions of employment.

There remain two functions of the trade union—those of legal enactment and collective bargaining. As its name indicates, the first of these consists in a recourse on the part of organized labor directly to the law-making powers in order to bring about desired regulative legislation; for instance, as to hours of work, the sanitary condition of factories, the employment of child labor, etc. This is beyond question an important form of trade union activity, and legal enactment in the past has done much toward the betterment of the conditions under which men labor, but it is doubtful how far it can, or should be, relied upon. The sentiment of English-speaking peoples is generally against any considerable body of such regulative legislation as subversive of liberty. Underlying any such objection, however, is the fundamental one that all regulation by law of the conditions of employment and of the relations of employer and employed, is, in common with all law, only a surface thing, an imposition from without. The voluntary maintenance of right relations between man and man make regulative law useless. Therefore we must look deeper for the really vital processes of trade unionism, as it is to-day, and so looking, we find these processes to be those of collective bargaining.

The term, collective bargaining, is not yet in common use, but is rapidly gaining in favor. It probably originated with Beatrice Webb, and first appeared in a work of hers in 1891, being used over against the phrase, "individual bargaining," which had been used by a previous writer. "The Report of the Industrial Commission," Vol. XVII., defines collective bargaining as that process "by which the general bonds of dogmas, from the slavery of social pretenses, and lead man to see the real joy of life, the life that bears simplicity and truthfulness, that delights in the beauty and goodness about us, that loves unselfish work. Is the world ready to accept this right now? Is the work all done? Are we able now to fold our hands and say of the work, "It is finished?" Is it not, rather, true that the work is so great—and the laborers are few? Shall we say, on the other hand, the task is too great, for we are feeble folk, therefore we shall cease to work? Nay, verily. Each one who learns the better, kinder, happier way of life, to him it is gain, and happy are they who help to point the way, even to one, or two, or three.

If it be better to believe that human character and righteousness, instead of forms and creeds are the concern of religion, let us teach and preach the emancipation of those in captivity to ceremonialism.

If it be better to believe that the power that works in man for righteousness is a surer guide than creed or synod, let us teach and preach deliverance of the spirit from the influence of creed and synod.

If it be better to love quiet, homely joys rather than empty parade and shows, let us teach and preach freedom from show and pretense.

If it be better to think and speak no evil, let us teach and preach emancipation from unjust, unkind, unloving thoughts and acts.

Gentleness, kindness, love, not occasionally, but at all times to all people, liberty to seek the best, freedom from trammels to the Spirit; these things, I believe, are of the essence of Quaker Christianity. If these things are needed by the world then the world needs more Quakerism. If they are not yet fully accepted by the world then there is still work for Friends.

One, and he counted then for but one, once sat where men were taught. A book was handed to him, and he opened the book and read aloud at the place where it was written:

"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised; to preach the acceptable year of our Lord."

In that distant day when Friends have done all their share in bringing the world to knowledge of this gospel of the spirit, in the day when all the world is liberated from captivity to falsehood, shams and shows, when all the world follows after truth and righteousness, then and then only may Friends close the book and say as was said formerly:

"This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." And, perchance, may add: "Now, O Spirit of Truth, let thy servant depart in peace."

HENRY M. HAVILAND.

WHOEVER can administer what he possesses has enough.—[Goethe.]

terms of the labor contract itself, whether the contract be written or oral, are determined by negotiation directly between employers or employers' associations and organized workmen." It thus distinguishes collective bargaining from conciliation, which it finds to be "the settlement, by the parties directly, of minor disputes, as to interpretation of the terms of the labor contract." It would seem, however, that a better method is that which treats of both general and detail or interpretive negotiations under the one head of collective bargaining, thus making conciliation one phase of the larger whole.

It will thus be seen that collective bargaining is the great reason for being of trade unionism as it exists to-day; its aims, in fact, are identical with those of unionism. It is the basis of all relations between employer and employed, and thus of the whole vast fabric of modern industrialism.

Having suggested its importance, what is its method and what does it accomplish? Take an unorganized trade, for instance. Each individual workman at first makes a strictly individual bargain with the employer for the sale of his labor. But a change comes when a group of workmen forms and sends representatives to treat with the employer on behalf of the group as a whole. The single stick has suddenly become a bundle, and cannot easily, if at all, be broken. Thus, instead of the employer making a series of separate contracts, he makes only one, the representatives of the group acting for it and pledging its ratification of the agreement so entered upon. This is the simplest form of collective bargaining. It is a product of evolution, the machine, so to speak, applied to the production and distribution of labor.

The chief advantages will be seen at once. Suppose each man had been dealt with individually. It is likely that some would have felt driven to take the work at a very low price in order to live. Or, again, others of exceptional deftness or endurance in case the work was piecework, might feel themselves able to earn a good wage at a piecework rate on which the ordinary worker could not live. By the method of collective bargaining the employer is prevented from taking advantage in this way, and for his part is enabled to make one contract where he might otherwise have to make hundreds or thousands.

The same principle holds throughout, from the improvised "shop club" in England, through all the more or less formal stages of trade unionism, to the international union. In the instance we have given the ruinous competition between individual workmen in a single shop is eliminated. The shop is still subject to competition, to under-cutting, on the part of all other shops of the same sort in the same town. Here helps in the trade union of the town, a more differentiated machinery, making a higher stage. It seeks to eliminate ruinous competition in the buying and selling of labor, and the products of labor between shop and shop, employer and employer. The building trades are characteristic of this stage, in that with them competition is usually confined to one town.

The next stage above that of the local union is the national union, which in the same way seeks to eliminate all local conditions, to minimize all local gluts or contractions of the labor market. And, of course, the logical successor of this is the international union.

Both in this country and England a great deal of collective bargaining is still carried on in a more or less amateur and haphazard fashion, although the situation in this respect in England is much better than with us, owing to the more matured and compact character of trade unionism there. It is apparent from the very nature of things that for the highest development of this all-important function the first and imperative necessity is for a permanent, definite and differentiated machinery. The more formal and studied the methods of collective bargaining become on the part of labor, the more respect will they command in the eyes of employers. And it follows perfectly logically that this specialized machinery for collective bargaining should be employed by both sides. Employers, it is now being insisted upon by students of the subject, should, aside from their present forms of organization, unite with this end primarily in view. We find men like Herman Justi, who is commissioner of just such an organization of employers, the Illinois Coal Operators' Association, maintaining that the employers are far behind the men in this respect. He holds that the present organizations of capital are not adapted to treatment with organized labor, and that a new basis and equipment is necessary.

On the trade union side of collective bargaining machinery there is one fundamental distinction to be reckoned with, a distinction which follows the cleavage we have already noticed between collective bargaining proper and that phase of it which is usually known as conciliation. Collective bargaining in its narrow sense has to do only with the initial agreement as to the general terms of the labor contract. The exigencies of the case here seem to demand on the part of the workmen a committee of practical men large enough to be fully representative. But the situation is entirely different when questions of the interpretation of an existing agreement are to be considered. In the piecework trades, especially, there are almost endless adjustments necessary, questions as in the boot and shoe trade, for instance, respecting the classification of the ever-changing patterns, etc. Here the questions are those of bare fact, and the ascertainment and handling of facts should attain as nearly as possible to scientific accuracy. For this kind of work S. and B. Webb hold that a joint committee of employers and employees is cumbersome and inefficient, and they therefore advocate the employment of paid experts. This solution has proved very successful in the case of the Lancashire (England) cotton trade. The trade unions and the employers there not only respectively employ paid experts, but the former secure such experts by competitive examination. Indeed, the Webbs record that in Great Britain in 1897 the most powerful unions, comprising over a third of the whole trade union membership, did the bulk of their conciliatory and even other bargaining through salaried experts.

The "orthodox" method, however, both in this country and England is still that which has been advocated for thirty or thirty-five years, the joint committee of equal members of representative employers and employees, with or without an impartial chairman or umpire. As we have said, this seems on the whole the best means of bringing about a new general agreement, but although it has been tried very elaborately and imposingly in England it has uniformly collapsed when questions of detail adjustment have been brought into court. And one further qualification is necessary, even as to its efficiency in general bargaining. Majority rule should never be attempted in such a joint committee. Party lines are bound to be strictly maintained, and a deadlock ensue if each individual employer or workingman knows that a change of front on his part means a lost case for his fellows. The only way is to thresh out differences until there is complete or practical unanimity.

The great desideratum of trade unionism is to control the whole output of labor. So long as this is impossible collective bargaining can, of course, not reach its logical development. The great question is always one of the proper means to be used in gaining this end. The compulsion lurking in the so-called voluntary agreements governing a whole trade is pointed out. It is declared that frequently the union members constitute but a small minority, and that their assumption of right to bargain with an employer, and thus to fix the terms under which all must sell their labor is tyranny. It seems clear, however, that the labor union, whatever may be its present imperfections, is in the way of progress, and that the part of public spirit is with it. The champions of progress must for a time have the great mass against them. And if the unionists are in the majority it is impossible to make common arrangements for any considerable number of men without running counter to the desires of some. The wider the range of the common rule, and the more perfect the machinery for its application, the larger may be the minority which finds itself compelled to accept conditions in which it has refused to have a hand, or, having a hand, has been beaten by force of numbers. This is the common characteristic of democracy, and may be criticized as such, but not as peculiar to trade unions.

Finally, as to the future of collective bargaining, the Webbs hold that with its always impending possibility of deadlock and strikes it will be interfered with from time to time, and superseded by some form of compulsory arbitration—that is to say, by the fruits of that other method we have noticed, legal enactment. This, however, is by no means self-evident, and it seems easier, as we have said, to believe that collective bargaining is that trade union function which above all others has the future before it.

SAMUEL CHARLES SPAULDING.

Laconia, N. H.

OUR opportunities are the voice of God.—[Outlook.]

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 30.

CORINTH AND EPHEBUS.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.—ACTS, xx., 35.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xviii., 24-28; xix., 1-12; I. Corinthians, iii., 1-9.

CORINTH was a great and important city. It was a Roman colony, which gave it considerable freedom; it was situated on the narrow isthmus connecting the Peloponnesus with the mainland of Greece, and therefore in the direct route from Asia to Rome. It had, therefore, great advantages for trade and attracted merchants of every race—Greeks, Romans, Jews and other Orientals. It was a great intellectual center also; its schools of philosophy were celebrated and brilliant. But philosophy was of that degenerate type called sophism. "The average teacher of Corinth had that idea of the duty of a professor of instruction which is entertained and frankly avowed by some journalists of the present day respecting the profession of journalism. . . . They said, we give the people what the people want" (Abbott). The teaching had therefore no conviction, no sincerity. A deep-seated skepticism was the common attitude of mind. And this unfaith extended to morals as well as to the sphere of mind. Corinth was a grossly immoral city. Every form of vice flourished unrebuked. Popular religion had nothing to do with conduct. The highest reach of the religions which did command the faith of a few was Stoicism, whose disciples at least sought self-control and believed in the rule of law in the world. Stoicism was an elevated and noble protest against the laxity and unreason of the time. But it was cold and unsympathetic, and never took hold on the masses. Judaism was the only refuge for those who felt deeply the presence of God in the world and felt it a power that made for purity and truth; and Judaism as so often remarked was hedged about by the law. So it is no wonder that Paul's gospel found its way into the hearts of many. It even met Stoicism on its own ground, and surpassed it; for in the place of calm endurance of trial the Christian substituted an enthusiastic acceptance of it, and a triumphant rising above it. Paul says he determined here at Corinth to "know only Christ and him crucified." He would lay aside for the time the emphasis on the impending Messianic kingdom and keep to the front the personality of the suffering Saviour of men from their sins. All that is noble in man rises to greet a great soul bearing witness to great truth and faithful unto death; and in the midst of the sordid atmosphere, heavy with vice, of the Greek metropolis, the story of Jesus struck like an electric flash, burning out the evil and giving renewed life to those about to perish. In the year and a half of Paul's residence there his teaching took firm root, and he was able to leave it with a reasonable assurance of healthy growth. Other fields needed his strength also. With Priscilla and Aquila, his co-workers, he went over to Ephesus, and thence, leaving his companions, he returned to Antioch after a brief visit to Jerusalem.

(Continued on page 519.)

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 15, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

NEXT YEAR'S CONFERENCE.

ALREADY the thought of the Central Committee is earnestly turned toward the arrangements for the next biennial conference which has become so essential a part of the interests of Friends. The committee soon to meet must determine upon a place of meeting; whether to select a numerical or a geographical center of Quakerdom, and what weight to give to the probability of good material accommodation. They must decide whether the elimination of business matters, and the substitution of papers and discussions is a wise course to continue. They must also consider whether the section plan employed at Asbury Park serves the largest number of interests, and whether it is most helpful to employ trained specialists, outside our ranks, if need be, to instruct us, or to call to the aid of the program only our own members.

These leading questions and many minor matters must engage the attention of the committee soon to meet at Salem, Ohio. Not only the committee, but the rank and file of the membership should be interested in these matters, which may have an important bearing on our future.

Since enthusiasm is generated in masses, but transmuted into energy through individual effort, it would seem reasonable that the best interests of the Society would be served by fixing a location where the most widely-scattered individual membership would assemble.

Material comforts are not the highest aims to be sought, but minds work with clearer action and kindlier purpose, and spirits more easily maintain their highest levels, when the bodies in which they abide are well housed and fed, so the conference ought naturally to locate amidst comfortable surroundings.

It is a generally accepted view that the First-day School workers want instruction from those more skillful than themselves. Smaller gatherings afford them the requisite opportunities for conference.

It seems also that those who work in philanthropic fields need enlightenment as to needs and ways and means, if the scope of their actual service is to be widened. It is luxurious philanthropy to get together and talk things over and wait for the next conference to do it again. We need every possible stimulus toward intelligently directed effort. If we can get the best instruction in these departments within our own borders, by all means let us seek it there; if not, turn for it where it may be found. The ample time given to discussion of all subjects, and the selection of representative members to handle all distinctively religious subjects, together with the extended committee service demanded, affords our own membership so ample a field for active participation, that there need be no fear of not calling our own forces into action sufficiently.

THE address on "Views and Testimonies of Friends," delivered by Isaac H. Hillborn, "at a meeting of Friends and others, held in Girard Avenue Meeting House, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia," Twelfth month 3, 1902, has been published in a neat pamphlet by the Friends' Book Association of Philadelphia. It is four by five and one-half inches, and contains 24 pages of reading matter. It is full and clear in its statements and deserves a wide circulation. Philadelphia Yearly Meeting ordered 3,500 copies for free distribution; these may be obtained through any member of the Representative Committee. The pamphlet may also be had of the Friends' Book Association for five cents a copy.

"STRIKES," said William Pember Reeves, author of the New Zealand Arbitration Law, "have done a great deal of good, but strikes are war. War is a clumsy and barbarous way of settling differences between nationalities, and strikes are the most clumsy and barbarous way I know of settling industrial difficulties." He also said in another connection, "If strikes are put down there must grow up hand and hand with the suppression a system of dealing with the grievances, the misunderstandings, the restlessness that have caused them." Another South Sea statesman, Attorney-General B. R. Wise of New South Wales, said, "Trade unions have reached the limit of their usefulness; they should be more than a mere menace, they need to be turned into an instrument of construction."

A close observer of the signs of the times cannot but feel that this side of trade unionism is cropping out more and more, in spite of the crude and barbarous features of the movement. It is this phase of the subject that is treated in three articles which it is proposed to publish in the INTELLIGENCER. The first, on "Collective Bargaining," appears in this issue and will be followed by a sketch of the history and present status of industrial arbitration and conciliation, and that by an account of the provisions and workings of the Arbitration Laws in New Zealand and some of the Australian states.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has written a letter to Governor Durbin of Indiana, thanking him for having vindicated the majesty of the law by his recent action in reference to lynching. His straightforward utterances should strengthen the conviction of thoughtful citizens, that "mob violence is simply one form of anarchy, and anarchy is now, as it always has been, the handmaiden and forerunner of tyranny." Aside from the wrong done by depriving any citizen of the fundamental right to be heard in his own defense, the President points out the degradation to the community resulting from these lawless outbreaks. His letter concludes as follows:

"The nation, like the individual, cannot commit a crime with impunity. If we are guilty of lawlessness and brutal violence, whether our guilt consists in active participation therein or in mere connivance and encouragement, we shall assuredly suffer later on because of what we have done. The corner-stone of this Republic, as of all free governments, is respect for and obedience to the law. Where we permit the law to be defied or evaded, whether by rich man or by poor man, by black man or white, we are by just so much weakening the bonds of our civilization and increasing the chances of its overthrow, and the substitution therefor of a system in which there shall be violent alternations of anarchy and tyranny."

Governor Terrill, of Georgia, has written an endorsement of President Roosevelt's views. He says that the laws of Georgia have been so amended as to secure speedy trials for accused criminals and adds this pertinent comment: "It is interesting in this connection to note that the number of lynchings in the North and Northwest of late has brought forth such an expression from the President, while the number of them in the South has been so few within the same period as to attract little or no attention."

MARRIAGES.

TOWNSEND—PAXSON.—At Girard Avenue Meeting-house, Philadelphia, under the care of Middletown Monthly Meeting of Friends, Sixth month 30th, 1903, Arthur P. Townsend, son of Wilson H. and Clara T. Townsend, of Philadelphia, to Marion Emeline Paxson, daughter of Catharine P. and the late W. Rodman Paxson, of Langhorne, Pa.

DEATHS.

HAMPTON.—At his home in Quakertown, New Jersey, Eighth month 7th, 1903, Morris Hampton, in the 87th year of his age.

HOPKINS.—Very suddenly, at Los Angeles, California, on the evening of Eighth month 6th, 1903, Mary Brown Hopkins, daughter of Isaac Francis and Elizabeth A. Hopkins, in the 31st year of her age. She was formerly a member of Race Street Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia.

She possessed purity and sweetness of disposition in a marked degree, and as her young life advanced she deepened most beautifully in the things which make for eternal peace.

RAYMOND.—At Highland Mills, Orange county, N. Y., on Fourth-day, Eighth month 5th, 1903, Hannah Valentine, wife of John William Raymond, and daughter of the late Samuel T. and Anna K. Valentine, in her 38th year.

SPENCER.—At her daughter's home, near Cardington, Ohio, Seventh month 15th, 1903, Phebe Spencer, eldest daughter of Robert and Edith Mosher, aged 80 years. Her husband, William F. Spencer, preceded her fifteen years. They were both members of Green Plain Monthly Meeting.

SOCIETY NOTES.

FRIENDS will note in "Calendar of Events of Interest to Friends" the correction in regard to Duanesburg Half-Yearly Meeting. The change from Quarterly Meeting to half-yearly, and time of holding from the 24th to 17th had not yet been noted in Friends' almanac—hence our mistake. While the business session of the Half Yearly Meeting is on Second-day the 17th, the meetings really cover three days, beginning with the meeting of Ministers and Elders on Seventh-day the 15th and including the public meetings for worship on First-day the 16th.

A Friend writes of Westbury Quarterly Meeting held at Westbury, Long Island, Seventh month 25th, "We had a pleasant quarterly meeting out there, fine and sunbiny weather and a good company. Joel Borton was with us." In the afternoon the committee for the Advancement of Friends' Principles of New York Yearly Meeting attended an appointed public meeting at which Henry M. Haviland of New York read a paper on "Friends as Emancipators" which is published in full in this week's issue of the INTELLIGENCER.

Amesbury Meeting, Mass., has two time-honored Friends who are still punctual in their attendance of meeting—Gertrude W. Cartland, a minister, and cousin of John G. Whittier, aged 82, and Mary Alice Brown, aged 82, also an early associate of the poet.—[American Friend.]

A Friend in San Francisco writes that Alfred Cook, of England, visited California Yearly Meeting, held at Whittier in Sixth month, and spoke. He also attended several other meetings on the Pacific coast. R. Esther Smith has returned to the care of the Sunshine Work in San Francisco after a two months' absence. During her vacation she attended California Yearly Meeting and many individual meetings in Southern California, and also the State Convention of Christian Endeavor workers.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 30.

Continued from page 517.

Soon the mission field again claimed the tireless apostle. He revisited the Galatian churches, and went on to Ephesus, where, in pursuance of his Corinthian plan, he settled down for a long stay. This so-called "third journey" is marked throughout by the general collection taken up by Paul and his associates for the mother church in Jerusalem. Contributions seem to have been received in Galatia, the coast cities of Asia, Macedonia and Corinth. At Ephesus the church prospered. During Paul's absence there had appeared in the little congregation one Apollos, who showed considerable power in the ministry, though not fully instructed in the Christian faith. Priscilla and Aquila, as faithful elders, took him in hand and taught him more fully the message of the gospel, after which he went over to assist the church at Corinth. He won immediate popularity among some, and without his connivance there grew up among the Corinthians serious factional differences, some claiming to be Paul's followers, others to belong to the party of Apollos, and still others with affected superiority to be of the Christ party. Moreover, the lax moral tone of Corinth had invaded the church, and there were some gross cases of licentiousness within it. These facts came to Paul at Ephesus, where he was carrying on extensive mission work, both in the city and in accessible portions of Asia Minor. He was much distressed by the conditions of the Corinthian Church, and dispatched a letter (I. Cor.) as their spiritual father, giving earnest advice and admonition. In it he deals with six topics (Abbott):

(1) The spiritual basis of knowledge.
 (2) The factions in the church, which he exhorts to unity.

(3) The immoralities above referred to. He insists that the wrong-doers must be expelled from the church.

(4) Answers certain questions which have been addressed to him by the church.

(5) Discusses the question of spiritual gifts.

(6) Immortality and the resurrection.

Some of these subjects will be taken up in the next quarter in studying Paul's teaching. Let us note for the present that the letter probably resulted, at least temporarily, in intensifying the dissensions, and, finally, in all probability, in driving out the so-called "Judaizers" who had seized the opportunity to oppose Paul. It is likely that Paul followed up this letter by another and very severe one, for his references in II. Cor., i., 15 to ii., 11; vii., 8-13, to a severe and painful letter hardly apply to I. Corinthians. Meantime, he had aroused antagonisms in Ephesus which resulted in riots and fresh dangers.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

AMONG THE PENNSYLVANIA MOUNTAINS.

(Concluded from last week.)

IMPRESSED by the preceding reflections, we turn our attention to the beautiful gap that breaks the continuity of the Line Mountain, toward which the waters of the Mahanoy Creek, issuing from the southern part of the valley, are flowing. The charms of nature seem vainly bestowed on this creek. It winds through lowland and meadow, often between banks finely bordered with trees, then it is lost in the shadow of wooded heights, then out in the open space it reflects broad gleams of sunshine, but its appearance is black and stygian, being heavily charged with sediment from culm banks and water from the mines. These are derived from the coal operations neighboring Mahanoy City, Ashland and other towns, and find their way to this stream, as it passes the above-named places, before entering Northumberland County. Our next move was to cross the creek and follow its wandering course, skirting the Line Mountain to Dornside. This little hamlet, with its neat railroad station, is cooped up in a romantic situation. The mountain at its back, the gap close by, and westward high eminences, densely wooded and broken into irregularity, with hollows furrowing their sides; in front across the creek, openings through the trees reveal the lovely rolling plain of well-kept farm land, reaching clear cut to the forest line along the base of the mountain, northward. This elevation of earth and rock is seen extending with even crest and regular outline, robed in a garb of greenness, brightening in the sunlight as if enjoying the repose of nature. Without more ado, we made our exit through the gap to view the region beyond, which might be represented as a triangle having the Susquehanna River as a base, with the Line Mountain as one side, and a section of the southern boundary of the county as the other. It formed the original township of Mahanoy, but it has been sub-divided, and now constitutes the five southern townships of our county. The first object that catches the eye, south of the mountain, is a three-story brick flouring mill. Beyond this, a narrow tract of lowland, consisting for the most part of bright little meadows, borders the creek. Outside of this, there is rising ground on either hand, which confines the valley to the width of twenty or thirty rods. Having the choice of roads, we took the one to the left, up the ascent, leading to Pottsville, and soon found ourselves encompassed by deep woods. Traveling some two miles, with the forest apparently continuous, it was determined to go no further in this direction. But before abandoning this silvan way, we utilized a comfortable open spot in the shade, and made it serve the purpose of a wayside inn, refreshing ourselves and horse. Emerging from these wilds, we saw on the opposite side, westward, a swell of land variegated with fields and orchards. Naturally, we turned our course towards it. Then crossing the creek and passing up the slope ahead of us, we were enabled at length to reach the top, and a point of observation was attained, which was all that could be desired. There are times when nature puts on her best appearance, while the glorious sun drives all traces of cloudy obscurity from the sky, lights up the varied scene, inspires the beholder with gladness, and seems to give life a new coloring. This sunny afternoon was such an occasion. Vast tracts of landscape stood out in bold relief, rendering prominent all their picturesque features. Even distant objects presented themselves with unusual distinctness. To the north, not far away, was the Line Mountain, thickly covered with trees, whose abundant foliage showed no trace of October. This mountain is thrown somewhat out of symmetry as it approaches the curve fronting the river.

From our standpoint it appeared as though abruptly ending, a little west of us, with a steep descent from a dizzy height. Two or three miles off could be seen the Susquehanna on its way towards Harrisburg, having banks lined with trees, and a large island in the midst. A barrier of blue mountains, eight or nine miles from us, seemed to dispute the passage of the river. The break through which it enters them could be discerned, but the view was closed beyond. Over the river the eye took in broad reaches of Snyder County. South and east, the surface is broken, and a high wooded ridge terminates the prospect. Roads extend in all directions over this region, whose "High hills and all uneven ways draw out the miles."

We passed an old guide-post on the road leading south from the gap, which informs the wayfarer that the distance is sixty-three miles to Reading. This is a branch of the Tulpehocken road, a highway of some note in the annals of early road-making. It was laid out in 1768. The necessity of carrying supplies to Fort Augusta demanded a shorter and easier route than the one which had been pursued. It began at Reading, and keeping a general northwesterly course it passed Tulpehocken and Swatara, and on to the forks of the Mahantango Creek. At this point it entered the Mahanoy region, now comprised in Northumberland County. Thence, by way of Schwaben or Green Brier Creek, it reached a white oak on the bank of the Susquehanna, south of Line Mountain, nearly sixty-two miles from the place of beginning.

It had this terminus, because those in authority deemed it not advisable to extend the road over lands which the Indians had not yet relinquished. So they kept in the territory south of the Line, or Mahanoy Mountain, which was included in the purchase of 1749. No sooner was this highway opened than numbers of Germans taking advantage of it, came and took up land here. The increase of population was such that in 1775 a new township had to be set up, which was called Mahanoy. Three years later the Indian troubles broke out, but these people remained undisturbed, and quietly followed their peaceful avocations. While the Tulpehocken road furnished an outlet for these inhabitants to convey the produce of their farms to the nearest market at Reading, it was found entirely inadequate as a means of reaching Fort Augusta. It was inconvenient, for one thing, as it did not do away with the passage up the river, for ten or twelve miles. Then it was not direct from the upper settlements on the Schuylkill. The urgency of a subject which had long been agitated, led to the construction of the "Great Road" through the wilderness over the mountains from Ellis Hughes's saw mill (which was located on the Schuylkill River, half way between Schuylkill Haven and Pottsville), to Fort Augusta, now Sunbury. This highway was completed in 1771. A very full and interesting account of it is given by J. J. John, of Shamokin, in the "Story of the Great Road," in a series of articles published in one of the periodicals of that place.

To return to ourselves, we found the afternoon wearing away, and the declining sun advised us not to delay our going toward home. So, reluctantly, we turned from this beautiful spot, brightened and surrounded by nature's enchantments. Being sensible of their influence, we were able to say with Emerson that "these enchantments are medicinal—they sober and heal us. These are plain pleasures, kindly and native to us."

The flowering season being about over we failed to secure any botanical specimens, though without this added pleasure the excursion was greatly enjoyed, and we succeeded in getting back to our residence just as the last appearance of day was fading out.

G. J.

THE WOODBROOKE SETTLEMENT.

The Woodbrooke Settlement of Friends for religious study, near Birmingham, England, opened Seventh month 23d. The six weeks' study was begun with a course of lectures by Rufus M. Jones, Professor of Philosophy in Haverford College, and editor of the American Friend, on "Present-day Ideas of God and the Spiritual Life." The first lecture was on "The Search for God," forming an appropriate commencement.

The "Friend" (London), in its issue for Seventh month 31st, gives an account of the opening days from which we take the following:

"The attendance was very good, several more Settlers having arrived, Australia and America being well represented. Local Friends were also present, so that the large lecture hall was filled, and more chairs had to be brought in. Rufus Jones at once dived into his great theme, reminding us that in the present-day mad rush for wealth the life of those who had no god but mammon and their own selfish pleasure and enjoyment was not worth living. This selfish spirit weakens the spiritual fibre of the Church. Yet there is happily the counter factor that in no other age in human history have men searched so eagerly for or with such zest after a living God. Many men are found who are still true to the deep instinct that yearns for God and that seeks to return home. Many would listen on their knees if they could but hear someone who would make the vision of God real and plain to them. The quest of God is the great business of our age. We are not to have faith in the report of a past revelation only, great and good as is the revelation of God in the coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. We want a self-revealing God now. The nearer we get to the original record, and the more we are impressed with the truth of that great revelation of God in Christ, the more earnest will be our search for the spiritual revelation of God to-day.

"Cosmic science professes to link together every fact in the universe in One. The early Christians had their appointed work and place, and we have ours. Our thoughts cover a wider area. Science and astronomy have opened out to us new vistas of the work of God. The gift and inheritance of thought that former generations have to bestow upon us we cannot take over without bearing in mind these wider relationships of our own time. The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ is the One whom we now want to know in relation to the modern revelations of cosmic science. There is, we are assured, some great Unity where all the facts of the universe are in accord. Therefore our search for God to-day cannot stop till it has found a Being who is a great Unity, who must explain our surroundings and the problems of our time, and the ground of a victorious life, the Being who will enable us to discover ourselves, the Being in whom we live and love and suffer. Many have thought they could find him in syllogism, but syllogism is not enough. Here on earth is something; it must have been caused; there must have been a Maker. Casualty is not enough, or we should have no sufficient reason for saying "He" instead of "it." Logic next tries the argument of purpose and design. A watch implies a designer. This is good as far as it goes, but is insufficient. What we call design is the result of an infinite number of selections. The world shows there is a great Artist, but this in itself is insufficient. Augustine tried another line of argument which might seem to carry the matter further and higher. He argued, I find in my thought the idea of a perfect Being; therefore this perfect Being must have an existence. But we can never proceed from an idea in the mind to prove an objective. It must be settled in some other way, and on some other ground than logic. As for science, God cannot be a thing that can be described, therefore science fails to bring us the whole truth.

"There was a time when all this quest seemed meaningless, for the Church was supposed to tell men what to believe. We were to accept what the Church told us, and what the Church did for us, its ceremonies and its creeds, as His representative and agent. That easy path is gone, and gone forever. No High Church movement can ever bring it back. It may seem as a childhood faith in the childhood of the world, but it cannot now satisfy. The Church may and must help us, but we must know Him for ourselves. Some agnostics, like Herbert Spencer, in despair reply, God is 'unknowable.' The mistake has been that knowledge has been wrongly used and limited, as though science was the revealer of all things to us. Others turn to ethics. Ethics deal not with what we have, but what we ought to have. The revelations of God must be to persons and through persons. In every person there is something of the 'infinite.' Here is the one place where the Divine can be manifest. Every person is a mystery. Once there lived among men One who manifested light and truth and love. We thus pass on to the central Vine of all true life, where there is love, One who suffers with us in every sorrow."

Next followed an address by Dugald Macfadyen, on "Personality, and the Christian Consciousness in Relation to the Gospel," the first of a series on "Spiritual Instruction and the Gospel of Jesus Christ." He said, in part:

"An individual who is distressed at his own fault is already conscious of something higher. Thus a new and better consciousness may be created. There is thus in each of us something beyond and better than our present experience. A new consciousness may be created within us. Paul continually propounds this as he teaches the necessity of a new heart, the need of forgiveness and of cleansing. As we continue steadfast in prayer, the character changes, and we have the presence of a higher personality. In prayer there often comes to us what Teresa calls 'the speech that God uses to the soul,' and we find that when we have poured out our heart to God, God speaks to the soul, and in this dependent spirit of prayer the attentive soul may understand Him.

"Progress comes by the contact of another and a higher Spirit with our spirit. Man finds in himself a spiritual order, where at one time there was confusion. He finds in nature that which to a certain extent corresponds with his own spiritual conceptions. Much more does he find and learn when he comes in contact with the living Spirit of God. Thus, like Christian in Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress,' he ex-claims, 'I have a key of promise in my pocket that will open every door in Doubting Castle.'

The afternoon was spent in excursions in the "country scenes amid the brilliant sunshine of the Midlands." In the evening Philip H. Wicksteed lectured on "The Principles and Problems of Economic Science."

On Seventh-day morning there was a devotional meeting at 9 o'clock. Among those who spoke was George Cadbury, who said:

"We can never really enter into fellowship with men until we have entered into fellowship with God. When our hearts are right with Him, we begin to enter into fellowship with the joys and sorrows of others. This it is that brings us into fellowship with the sufferings of Christ. George Cadbury referred to the six Friends' meetings in the neighborhood of the Woodbrooke Settlement which have sprung up in recent years in a district where there was not a single Friend residing a few years ago. In these meetings and mission centers men had been taught to come for what they could give, not for what they could get. On this democratic basis alone can we expect prosperity or permanence. Alluding to Seebohm Rowntree's book on 'Poverty,' he said he had been greatly impressed by the tens of thousands in Birmingham to-day who are living in destitution. Many a time in the evenings at Woodbrooke he had seen in the quiet lake the light of Birmingham reflected from the sky in the still water. It is well for us in our comfortable surroundings to have a constant vision of the destitution of our city life, that we may seek to alleviate it."

On First-day the Friends distributed themselves among several of the mission centers, and visited adult schools, and some found their way to the Friends' meetings at George Road, Edgbaston, and to the historic Friendly center in Bull Street.

At the morning meeting in Bull Street Professor George Barton, of Bryn Mawr College, Pennsylvania, who has just returned from a year's residence in Jerusalem, spoke from the text, "The world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John ii., 17). "He is so well known as the author of works on Semitic Origins and kindred subjects that some summary of his remarks may be taken as an echo of the Summer School. He desired to enter into sympathy with such as were perplexed with doubt, especially those whose perplexity may be largely the result of experiences and disappointments in life that may have bewildered them so that they fail to discover any satisfactory solution of the ways of God towards them. Religious thought has never been apt to take pattern from the leading ideas of the days in which it originated. Thus ancient creeds were fashioned which fail to express the dominant thought of our own times. The thoughts regarding God in earlier days took form from the ideal of an Oriental monarch, and thus Christian doctrine centralized round ideas of divine sovereignty, supremacy and decree. Gradually was developed another thought, that God was a Father, with the authority of a patriarch. Round this central idea of fatherhood there grew up a comprehension of family life as representing the Church and the links that bind humanity together. In our own day there has been developed a further rendering of the ways of God that finds expression in the saying that 'Christ is the revelation of the human life of God.' We feel the need to approach such a thought with reverence. There are points in Christ's life that come very close home to ourselves, not only His hunger and thirst and physical exhaustion, but, for instance, His temptations; tempted to use His divine powers to turn stones into bread for His own sustenance, tempted presumptuously to cast Himself from the pinnacle of the temple under circumstances which might seem to compel God to interfere to succor Him, tempted again to win the kingdom by a sort of 'short cut' in the use of worldly or political machinery instead of waiting the patient evolution of the centuries. Is it not possible that God Himself may have had to come to decisions as to which of two courses He should adopt, and that instead of simply assuring ourselves that whatever God has done is right because He does it, like men of old who dare not question the prerogative of kings, we may reverently seek to enter into the thoughts and the reason why our Father did this or that? In this latter line of thought there is more close fellowship and friendship with God such as we are sure should exist between a father and his child, therefore a thought that more honors the Divine Fatherhood. We can at any rate see that the vocabulary of human language has been searched to give expression to the marvelous relations in which God stands toward us, in such similitudes as Father, Mother, Husband, Companion and Friend. Now, if such terms are figures that convey aspects of truth, may it not be that in the heart of God Himself there are times when He has had to face decisions, and in which He has deliberately chosen not the easiest path for Himself, but the most difficult, the path which for Himself involved the greatest self-sacrifice, because the path of sacrifice on His part would ultimately be the best for those He so greatly loves here on earth? If the human Christ is God manifest in the flesh, does it not follow that in the Master as He trod this earth we shall see revelations of God that at first we little suspected? This brings us to a passage in the Epistle to the Hebrews in which we are told concerning the path along which Christ was perfected: 'It became Him for whom are all things, and through whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory to make the author of their salvation perfect through sufferings.' Now, if it was necessary for Christ, whose life was so beautiful and without blemish, to be made perfect through sufferings, can we assert that the heart of God has not suffered? Consequently, if in our own lives there is suffering, if to us there have been sore bereavements, if there have been and yet are deprivations which we may even be tempted to think unjust, does not the human life of God as revealed to us in Christ satisfy us that all is in love, and that these things have happened unto us that we may be partakers with Him, that we may enter into closer fellowship with Him in suffering, whereof all are partakers? Thus in very deed, though the world pass away and the lust thereof, he that doeth the will of God shall abide for ever."

At Woodbrooke in the afternoon of First-day Rufus M. Jones spoke on the "Beatitudes." "Though the Sermon on the Mount has been called the Magna Charta of the Kingdom of Heaven, there is no similarity of historic situation. The Charter of England was wrested from the King by compulsion. Our charter of religious privilege is the free grant of a Father in heaven. To treat the Sermon on the Mount merely as the proclamation of a law is a mistake. It is the proclamation of a new way of life, a life based on inner principles. The Beatitudes describe a type of personality, not such as yet prevails in the world, but that which shall be. What is the type of life which Christ called the blessed life? It is not static. It never points to something yet realized, but moving on toward something far better.

"1. 'Blessed are the poor in spirit.' The poor who get the Master's blessing are exactly opposite to the Pharisees, the open-minded, the receptive, who recognize how little they have yet attained. The man who is poor in spirit is convinced there is an infinite wealth of life beyond him, hence his receptivity, hence he reaches out to that which as yet exceeds his grasp, and opens his windows to the light. Sooner or later the open mind, the receptive soul, conscious of need, enters the kingdom.

"2. 'Blessed are they that mourn.' Christ picks out those that seem the least likely. How many are living with some window blinded! Let us hear Christ talk. He never refused to recognize hard facts. He cried, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken Me?' The life of blessing can never be reached except by the same kind of process by which the diamond is made to shine. The brightness can only come by something that will cut the surface. If there are no difficulties and no life-burdens, then the life lacks fibre and power. Under the theory that prosperity is the chief good of life, most of us would refuse to acknowledge that life is good. It is so natural to all of us to seek the easy chances. But that does not make spiritual lives. Never miss this supreme comfort that if your soul is throbbing with love for God there is hope. Virtue is the fullest, completest battle.

"3. 'The meek shall inherit the earth.' One of the last qualities, the world might reckon, for ensuring success in life. Is not a struggle for existence the necessity for getting on? To push oneself ahead, to push someone else out of the way, is too often the maxim of life. To be meek does not mean to be weak and dispirited. It means the man effacing himself for a great cause. Christ does not say here that the reward of the meek is heaven. But he inherits the earth. He will get the best out of life. The victories of earth are not won by swagger.

"4. 'Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness.' Christ does not here say, 'Blessed are the righteous,' but blessed are those who have the aspiration. The nature 'of righteousness proves this. A righteousness that is attained like that of the Pharisee by keeping a ritual or a law is not aimed at. How many times shall I forgive my brother? It is not a question of 'times.' The obligation of the spiritual life always in advance. The more I advance the more I receive, and the greater becomes my obligation. Therefore the man who gets the blessing is not the man who has a bad case of arrested development, but the man who is moving on.

"5. 'Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy.' Sometimes the cross or the martyr's flame is the world's return for goodness. If it were true that mercy only obtained the equivalent of mercy, goodness would be a barter. Christ meant something far better. The merciful man becomes and grows more merciful. The more you give the more you have to give. A watch does not get better every time it ticks. But cultivate the spirit of kindness and large-heartedness, and your character forms itself, and becomes your own benediction.

"Rufus M. Jones proposes to conclude the Beatitudes next week. The feeling of Settlers is that of great thankfulness for his presence. He is giving us his very best."

Each morning at 9 o'clock there is a time of prayer.

POINTS FROM THE SCHOOL.

"The three courses of lectures appointed for each day abound with interest, and each course has its own points of special value. Time and space would fail to chronicle any of them fully or to do them justice. The first in the morning is by Rufus M. Jones. Of these we have already had 'The Search for God,' 'What is Personality?' and 'Self-realization.' These are most appropriately followed by Dugald Macfadyen, who packs his lectures with such an amount of thought that it seems impossible to imbibe so much in so brief a space. He magnifies Christ and His salvation, and enriches us with suggestions teeming with hope. Philip Wicksteed in the evenings turns our minds to the great social problems that confront every Christian worker. The discussions that have followed his addresses on Economics have been very lively, and the question of the application of Christianity to the great problems of the day has firm grip of the Settlers. The happy and cheerful intercourse that goes on among the Settlers themselves forms no small part of the attractiveness of this summer gathering. Representatives of many lines of thought meet together in harmony and goodwill. It is a pleasure to welcome Friends from across the seas. Elizabeth Powell Bond, the Dean of Swarthmore College, Pennsylvania; Emma Benson, from Sydney, and others afford interchange of thought. One very instructive feature is the sequence and development of the various Summer Schools that Friends have held. At the Manchester gathering we had a hearty welcome from that prince of English expositors, Dr. Maclaren, which will never be forgotten. It was a new venture on what was largely untried ground. It was then necessary to have some things shaken that many of us had traditionally honored, in order that the everlasting verities might be more clearly revealed. At Scarborough there was manifest intellectual progress, and we realized that we were finding firm foothold on the Rock of Ages. At Birmingham as we listen to the teaching of Rufus M. Jones and Dugald Macfadyen we are realizing a still greater advance. We are face to face with genuine constructive theology. Instead of pulling down, there is building up. The foundation standeth sure. The movement is justifying itself. God is leading His people forward."

EDUCATIONAL.

WHAT SHALL OUR GIRLS DO WHEN THEY LEAVE SCHOOL?

Address at the Westtown Old Scholars' Reunion, by Anna K. Cadbury, on behalf of the School Committee. Taken from the Seventh month issue of The Westonian.

In the early days of Westtown there is little doubt that would have been the answer to this question. A girl having mastered the modest curriculum of the school a century ago would return to her home and take lessons of her mother in what is now called "domestic science;" she would learn to wash, iron, sweep, dust, cook, sew and spin; and for recreation make patchwork quilts and knit bead purses. She would thus fit herself for a home of her own, which would, most likely become her portion before she was twenty-one, and in which she would find vent for her youthful energies, and become a strong and useful woman.

That some girls did not marry and did take up work outside their homes in those early days, we have only to read in "A Century of Westtown History" how reading and grammar were taught by Ann Thomas; arithmetic and grammar by Rebecca Budd; sewing and grammar by Martha Barker, each of whom received thirty pounds a year for her labors. And other young Friends had positions as tailors, baker, table layer, chambermaids, dish washers, etc. And later on we have the names of Sarah Baily, Martha Barton, Margaret Lightfoot and Martha Sankey filling positions of usefulness outside the home. But these were the exceptions, and there was a tendency to look down on the young woman who went out from her home to earn her living.

This is not the case now; in fact, the conditions are quite reversed. But without criticism of either the past or present, we will take up the consideration of the subject as we find it in the first years of the twentieth century.

To many a girl the close of school life means, without a shadow of doubt, that she take her part among those who provide the wherewithal to obtain the necessities of life, and it is for her to determine what work is best adapted to her needs and ability. And, let me say just here that if her choice should be that of teaching, further study will be necessary, and the "Association for Promoting College Education for Women" stands pledged to help her. But in whatever line her work is to be, she goes forth to her future with a definite purpose in life, and she is happy.

My question is not meant specially for her, but rather for you whose pecuniary support brings no burden to your parents. If the school has accomplished its duty, it has trained body, mind and heart, and you are bubbling over with energy and with a keen sense that there is much more to learn; in fact, you have only made a beginning. You want to be all round women and help to "make the world somewhat the better for your living." But where and how shall you begin?

If you live in or near the city your philanthropic older friends will ask you to belong to The Shelter, The House of Industry, The Temperance and Peace Associations, etc., etc. In your great desire to be useful and feeling that you will have a good deal of time, you accept several of these invitations, and your days are spent in a wild chase of committees. But you must not give up all study. The Drexel opens its generous doors and you take up dressmaking and millinery one year; another year you try cooking ; perhaps spend a year or two studying kindergarten or art. All these occupations are good in themselves, but what one deplors is the restlessness, the lack of steady purpose, the drifting.

Girls do not marry nearly so young now as they did one hundred years ago, and there will be plenty of time later on, probably, for the philanthropic work, also for the dressmaking and cooking. I should advise you to fill in these restless years from seventeen to twenty-one with good, solid work ; work that will be a blessing to you through the rest of your lives, and that will provide you with needful recreation when you have taken up the burdens of life. And I know of no better way to do this than to enter some good college.

It is true that not every girl needs a college course, not every girl can master it, not every girl will be benefited by it. Not every girl has the definite purpose, the firm determination, the will power necessary to secure advanced education and sound training, or to make a wise and efficient use of these after they have been secured. It is well to think of this, to be as sure of your ground as possible. But unless you have definite and conclusive assurance that it will be only a waste

I believe it will be the college girl who will best fulfill Solomon's ideal of a perfect wife where he says : "The heart of her husband trusteth in her. She doeth him good and not evil all the days of her life. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children arise up and call her blessed. Her husband also, and he praiseth her."

And now for those of us who are parents ; let us not be slow in grasping the present situation. Our parents gave us the best education that was to be had in our day. Let us do the same for our daughters. I say daughters, because we have accepted the situation for our sons, and the boy who wants to go to college generally has the way provided for him to do so.

We are somehow afraid that college will make a girl unwomanly. I think we are mistaken. But as L. M. C. says in The Westonian, "We want in the homes and social circles all around us women who observe, inquire and think." The college will be a great help to develop such women.

George Fox in his journal, says : "Then returning towards London by Waltham, I advised the setting up of a school there for boys, and also a girls' school at Shacklewell for FRIENDS' SCHOOL-HOUSE AT GWYNEDD, PA.

In this house and the tent in its rear lunch was served to those attending Abington Quarterly Meeting.

of time and effort to undertake a college course, I would advise you, if your parents are willing, to decide on a college and go.

In the college you will find clearer judgment, higher ideals of culture and of womanhood than you have ever known before. Do not understand me to say that the conditions at college are perfect ; but this much may be said without fear of contradiction ; that no sincere, earnest, faithful student, taking a well-chosen course at a well-chosen college, ever regretted such action, or thought her four years thrown away. No matter what the superstructure is to be, you will always be glad that you laid the foundation deep, and broad, and strong.

We hear it said that the girl who goes to college is thereby unfitted for the duties of home life. In my small acquaintance with college girls I have not found it so, but rather that in the home of her girlhood, or as a wife and mother her trained mind is better able to cope with the difficulties and duties of household life.

One girl who left college for a western home and there married a man who lived in a log cabin on a ranch was confronted with the remark of a relative that her college education would be of no use to her in such a life. Her reply was "I am better able to do my own work in a log cabin because I have been to college." Another young wife, who with her husband began their married life in very great simplicity, said : "We who have the higher ideals do not care for the superfluities of life."

instructing them in whatsoever things were civil and useful in creation." Could anything be broader than that ? I believe George Fox would have approved of a college education for girls.

Let us not handicap our daughters, but give them a training that will equip them for life as they will find it in the twentieth century ; and I have no fear but that they will be good exponents in their own lives of the practicability of the union of knowledge and the womanly virtues,

"Nor lose the childlike in the larger mind."

ABINGTON QUARTERLY MEETING.

ABINGTON QUARTERLY MEETING was held Eighth month 6th in Gwynedd Friends' Meeting-house. The attendance was unusually large, including a number of visiting Friends. The meeting for worship lasted two and one-half hours. The silence was broken by Robert Hatton, who spoke of the first meeting held in that house sixty-nine years ago, when it was not large enough to hold all who were in attendance, and regretted that the old religion of the heart had given place to the new religion of the head. Joseph Powell followed in a more hopeful strain, believing that the educational element in the new religion is very helpful. These were followed by an earnest and inspiring message delivered by Joseph B.

Livezey. Other speakers were Ellen C. Tomlinson, Samuel S. Ash and Nathaniel K. Richardson.

When the reports were read in the business meeting it was found that all the representatives from the monthly meetings were in attendance. The report of the Philanthropic Committee showed good work done during the past year in collecting money and supplies for colored schools at the South and in holding conferences on temperance, improper publications, equal rights for women, and the problem of the colored people in the North.

A report of the Friends' Home at Norristown showed it to be in a very flourishing condition. There are twelve permanent and three transient boarders. A gift of $25,000 has recently been bestowed by Anna T. Jeanes, a portion of which is to be used for the erection of an infirmary and other needed improvements, the remainder to be added to the endowment fund in the hands of the Norristown Trust company.

At the close of the meeting lunch was served in the new school building which adjoins the meeting-house, and in a tent which stood in the rear. The old school building was some distance from the meeting-house; the opportunity arose to sell it to good advantage and the money received went far toward defraying the expense of the new structure. One of the rooms has been fitted up to serve the double purpose of kitchen and class-room. As very many of the Friends came by the trolley line which runs directly by the grounds, it was a great convenience to have lunch served on the spot. There were four hundred who partook of this meal, and while some were eating others were enjoying social converse on the porches and under the trees. The plan of having lunch collectively was earnestly advocated by Howard M. Jenkins and was first tried one year ago. There are now very few Friends' families near enough to the meeting-house to entertain guests.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

BYBERRY, Pa.—The Friends' Association held its last session on eighth month 2d, with a larger attendance than usual, and an interesting program fully filled. The session opened by a Scripture reading by Hannah W. Comly. A selection by Mary C. Bonner, "The Every Day of Life," was full of good thoughts, among them being, "The every-days are the best test of life; every body can do well on great occasions, every one can be heroic once or twice in a life time, but the every-day test is a better index than is the public life. These holy 'every-days' leave the world better for their having lived." An original paper by Emily C. Tomlinson on "The Influence of Harmony," was a high ideal beautifully expressed. She dealt with harmony in the home and harmony in nature; in the first she spoke of our being too ready to look with critical eye on others' mistakes. We oftentimes think well but do not tell the thought to others. Of nature, what can be better than her quiet touch, her ready sympathy? Every season brings new beauties and can be compared to the development of our lives.

A paper on "Current Topics" was presented by Arabella Carter, in which she dealt with the subjects of the assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga of Serbia; lynching of White in Wilmington, and similar outbreaks in Evansville, Danville, etc.; Jewish massacre in Russia; President Roosevelt's Western tour; recent gifts of Andrew Carnegie to Tuskegee and for the Temple of Peace; death of Pope Leo, and the vacation schools now in session in Philadelphia and other cities. Following this Willis Edgerton recited "The Bird's Appeal," and Phebe Ann Carver, Edward Biddle and Edward Harland responded to the invitation for remarks from visitors, the two latter being with the committee sent from Philadelphia Association to visit smaller meetings; having performed that service in the morning a portion remained for the Association in the afternoon and their presence was gladly welcomed. A. C.

THERE is good reason for believing that much drinking of alcoholic liquors was at the bottom of both the Kishineff massacre and the Evansville race riot.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

EDWIN DINWIDDIE, Superintendent of the Legislative Department of the National Anti-Saloon League, which has its headquarters in Washington, has been on the Western coast, where he has spoken in all the larger cities of California and Oregon. On his way homeward he expects to address meetings in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE unprecedented wheat harvest in Kansas is the subject of an illustrated article in this month's Review of Reviews, by Philip Eastman. He describes the up-to-date machinery used by the Kansas farmer in harvesting and threshing his crop, and gives a glimpse of a social and industrial Arcadia, where college graduates toiled side by side with day laborers, and all had good pay and bountiful fare. Among the other readable articles are a character sketch of Leo XIII., by W. T. Stead, and "The Present Status of the American Labor Movement," by John R. Commons.

An article by Kate T. Woolsey, in the North American Review, will surprise most American readers, for the author contends that the position of woman in a republic is inferior to her position in a monarchy, from a political standpoint. The magazine contains three articles on Secretary Chamberlain's Imperial Tariff plan, one in opposition to it by the Rt. Hon. Sir J. E. Gorst, M. P.; one favoring it, by Archibald R. Colquhoun, and one discussing its probable effect on United States trade, by H. Loomis Nelson.

The Southern Workman for this month deals editorially with the National Educational Association, the Indian Teachers' Institute, and Negro Segregation. An interesting article by Jessie Ackerman describes "Australia's Native Race," and Arthur Judson Brown contributes an illustrated article on "Industrial Training in Asia," as given in certain missionary schools.

It is not often that a fine poet is lost to sight, but such was the fate of Dr. Thomas Campion, the poet-musician of Shakespeare's day. Campion was rescued from unmerited oblivion in 1889, by A. H. Bullen. A few of his choicer songs soon became familiar through inclusion in Palgrave's "Golden Treasury" and other anthologies, and to-day the charm and grace of his verse are recognized on all sides. "There is nothing antiquated about these old songs," writes his discoverer, "they are as fresh as if they had been written yesterday."

"The Man of Life Upright," is one of Campion's poems echoing his favorite Roman singers. The Horatian note is unmistakable here.

The man of life upright

Whose guiltless heart is free

From all dishonest deeds

Or thought of vanity;

The man whose silent days

In harmless joys are spent,

Whom hopes cannot delude

Nor sorrow discontent;

He only can behold

With unafrighted eyes

The horrors of the deep

And terrors of the skies.

Thus, scorning all the cares

That fate or fortune brings,

He makes the heaven his book,

His wisdom heavenly things;

Good thoughts his only friends,

His wealth a well-spent age,

The earth his sober inn

And quiet pilgrimage.

The poet's four "Bookes of Ayres," his masques, and his essay on "the Art of English Poesie," are now issued in a comely volume, edited by A. H. Bullen (New York: Chas. Scribner's Sons).

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE week of Eighth month 10th, which is the most important in the Chautauqua Assembly season, the attendance then reaching its maximum, was devoted to the consideration of "The Mob Spirit in America." President William G. Frost, of Berea College, Ky., discussed "Mountain Feuds"; John Temple Graves, "Lynching"; Dr. J. M. Buckley, "Mental and Moral Courage," and representatives of organized labor discussed "The Labor Union and Mobs." D. M. Parry, President of the National Manufacturers' Association, discussed "The Mob Spirit in Organized Labor," Chief Justice Charles B. Lore, of Delaware, "The Manifestations of the Mob Spirit" and Supreme Court Justice John Woodward, of New York, "The Law and the Mob Spirit."

SINCE the women inspectors at the port of New York were dropped after a few months' trial, the Government has received so many petitions from societies and individuals for the continuance of women in this service that Secretary Cortelyou has decided to select a limited number of women, from eligible lists furnished by the civil service commission, for appointment as "matrons" in the immigration service. It will be the duty of these matrons to look after friendless young women who come to this country as cabin passengers, those in the steerage being already well protected and cared for.

THE long-expected revolution in Macedonia has begun. A dispatch received in Constantinople on the 9th from Hilmi Pasha, Inspector-General of the Turkish reform movement, states that insurgents attacked a village in the Vilayet of Monastir, and massacred the inhabitants, including women and children. Another dispatch states that a band of 500 insurgents captured the town of Kinslava, killed the garrison of 52 soldiers and dynamited and burned the government buildings. The situation is made more complicated by the murder of M. Rostkooski, the Russian consul at Monastir, by a Turkish soldier. Rostkooski has been in Macedonia twenty years and was regarded as a firm friend of the Christians.

THE delegates of the Macedonian Committee in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, have addressed an appeal to the representatives of the Powers stating that the systematic persecution of the Christians in Macedonia and Adrianople has led to a general rising. They demand the appointment of a Christian Governor-General of Macedonia who has never held office under the Porte, and declare their intention of continuing the fight until the object of their uprising has been attained. Prince Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, professes to be trying to prevent his subjects from aiding the revolutionists, but he may yet be compelled by public sentiment to lead an army against the Turks. †

BARON D'ESTOURNELLES DE CONSTANT, who headed the French Parliamentary arbitration group on its recent visit to London, has written a letter to Foreign Minister Delcasse in which he expresses the hope that the visit will result in the conclusion of an arbitration treaty between France and Great Britain, in accordance with Clause 19 of The Hague International Arbitration Convention, a reduction in the overwhelming naval expenses, and a friendly settlement of difficulties that have been outstanding for twenty years.

THE Knights of Labor are beginning to be heard from again. They have taken a hand in the New York Building trades tie-up as champions of the new tendency in the labor movement. The larger half of the unions have so far rejected the arbitration agreement of the Employers' Association, and work must be resumed generally soon or the building season of 1903 will be lost. Knights of Labor say that they stand for arbitration, first, last and all the time. Ten years or more ago the Knights of Labor had the strongest body of workmen in the United States—between 600,000 and 1,000,000. Then, under the leadership of President Compers, the American Federation of Labor began to make headway and by slow degrees took the place of the Knights of Labor. The latter now claim a membership of between 125,000 and 150,000, while conservative estimates place the membership of the Federation at 1,000,000. John W. Hayes is the present General Master Workman.

THE labor situation in South Russia has become very serious. Strikes occurred simultaneously over a vast industrial area. It is estimated that during the past month there have been on strike 500,000 men, on whom depends the support of 3,000,000 souls. The amount of studied organization and well-concealed preparation was unprecedented in the annals of Russian labor. The strikers, on the whole, have preserved exemplary order. Wholesale arrests have been made and the Cossack soldiers, under the order of the Governor of Odessa, have made savage attacks on men assembled with the intention of holding meetings. The men continue firm in their demand for better pay and an eight-hour day, and the Government is confronted with a stronger industrial organization than ever before.

NEWS NOTES.

SERIOUS labor trouble and rioting are reported from l'Orient on the coast of Brittany.

THE Secretary of War has issued an order prohibiting docking, banging, or clipping of public horses.

GENERAL MILES, Commander of the United States Army, having reached the age of 65, has been retired from the service.

THE International Typographical Union began its annual session in Washington on the 10th. Its membership comprises 43,000 printers.

ANDREW CARNEGIE has given $2,500,000 to Dunfermline, Scotland, his birthplace, to be used for the moral and material advancement of the town.

REV. WILBERT J. BROWN, of Indiana, has succeeded James B. Unthank as President of the Orthodox Friends' College at Wilmington, O.

RUSSIA in her policy of "pacifying" Finland by getting rid of the disturbing elements, has been making a wholesale expulsion of prominent Finlanders.

TERMS of peace have been agreed upon between the builders and workmen of Pittsburg, and 12,000 men have gone back to work, pending arbitration.

THE strike of trolley men in Waterbury, Conn., which began thirty weeks ago, was settled on the 9th. The company agrees to treat with a committee from the men as to future grievances.

THE thirty-third national convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union has been in session at Pittsburg. The Union has 1,133 societies, with a membership of 89,992; of these 4,200 have been added during the past year.

THE Hungarian Cabinet, of which Count Hedewazy was the Premier, has resigned and Emperor Franz Joseph has gone to Budapest to form a new cabinet, which is a most difficult task in the present disturbed condition of Hungarian politics.

THE British minister at Pekin has been instructed not to agree to the Chinese Government's demand for the surrender at Shanghai of the editor and staff of the Chinese reform organ, Sinpo. They can be surrendered only by the unanimous consent of the foreign consuls at that port.

GENERAL JOHN B. GORDAN, Commander-in-Chief of the Confederate Veterans, refused to allow Secretary of State Heflin of Alabama, a prospective candidate for Governor, to speak at the reunion of Confederate Camps of Alabama, because the Secretary attacked United States Judge Jones on account of the latter's course in his peonage crusade.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

8TH Mo. 10 (SECOND-DAY).—FRIENDS' Flower and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Avenue, at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

8TH Mo. 15 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SHORT Creek Quarterly Meeting, at Short Creek (one mile from Mt. Pleasant, Ohio). Ministers and Elders, day before, 2 p. m.

8TH Mo. 17 (SECOND-DAY).—FAIRFAX Quarterly Meeting, Goose Creek Meeting-house, (Lincoln, Va.), at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m. Friends and others wishing to attend will get tickets at Sixth Street Station, Washington, D. C., for Hamilton or Purcellville, where carriages will be in waiting to take Friends to homes. Trains leave at 8.30 a. m. and 4.30 p. m.

8TH Mo. 17 (SECOND-DAY).—DUANESBURG Half-Yearly Meeting at Quaker Street, N. Y. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day before, at 3 p. m.

8TH Mo. 19 (FOURTH-DAY).—YOUNG Friends' Association, at Mullica Hill, New Jersey.

8TH Mo. 20 (FIFTH-DAY).—QUAKERTOWN, Pa., Young Friends' Association, at home of Howard Kinsey.

8TH Mo. 20 (FIFTH-DAY).—CONFERENCE under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor will be held in the meeting-house at Newtown, Delaware county, Pa., with sessions in the morning and afternoon. Basket lunch.

8TH Mo. 22 (SEVENTH-DAY).—PELHAM Half-Yearly Meeting, at Yarmouth, Ontario. Ministers and Elders day before at 3 p. m.

8TH Mo. 22 (SEVENTH-DAY).—AN ANNUAL all-day meeting of the Philanthropic Conference of Western Quarterly Meeting at London Grove.

8TH Mo. 23 (FIRST-DAY).—JOSEPH Powell, of Darby, will attend Ambler Friends' Meeting, at 10.30 a. m.

8TH Mo. 23 (FIRST-DAY).—HOPEWELL, Va., Young Friends' Association, at 3 p. m.

8TH Mo. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—WARRINGTON Quarterly Meeting, at Menallen, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m.

8TH Mo. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—INDIANA Yearly Meeting, Richmond, Indiana. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m. In order that comfortable homes may be provided for those that have a prospect of attending, they are requested to send their names to Esther S. Wallace, 230 South 12th Street, Richmond, Ind.

THE JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE SEVERAL Yearly Meetings for Work among Isolated Members will meet between the sessions of Indiana Yearly Meeting.

8TH Mo. 26 (FOURTH-DAY).—SOUTHERN Quarterly Meeting, at Third Haven (Easton, Md.), at 10 a. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders, same day, at 9.15 a. m.

8TH Mo. 26 (FOURTH-DAY).—THE 37TH Anniversary of the Universal Peace Union will begin in Peace Grove, Mystic, Conn., continuing four days. Among the speakers announced are Edward H. Magill, Benjamin F. Trueblood, Henry W. Wilbur, David Henry Wright and Baroness Von Suttner. The steamer for Stonington leaving New York on the evening of the 25th will arrive at the Grove in time for the opening.

8TH Mo. 27 (FIFTH-DAY).—BUCKS Quarterly Meeting, at Falls, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 11 a. m.

8TH Mo. 28 (SIXTH-DAY).—NOTTINGHAM Quarterly Meeting, at East Nottingham, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

8TH Mo. 28 (SIXTH-DAY).—MEETING OF Central Committee of Friends' General Conference beginning at 9 a. m., and continuing through Seventh-day.

Friends expecting to attend are requested to communicate with Leona M. Whinery, Star No. 1, Salem, Ohio, stating whether they wish to be located near the meeting-house or car line and other particulars; the local committees will arrange for boarding places. It is hoped that those who attend can remain for the sessions of Ohio Yearly Meeting, and information as to this should be given in applying for accommodation.

8TH Mo. 31 (SECOND-DAY).—OHIO Yearly Meeting, at Salem, Ohio, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding.

THE REPORTS OF ASBURY PARK Conference have been sent to the Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race Streets, —a package for each monthly meeting belonging to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Correspondents are requested to call for them or to give directions concerning their shipment.

THE FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION acknowledges receipt of the following additional contributions to the Children's Country Week Association:

E. W., $ 3.00
 "In memory of Bessie N. Comly," 10.00
 Caroline Faren Comly, 2.00
 Previously reported, 35.00

Amount, $50.00

JOHN COMLY, Supt.
 Eighth month 6th, 1903.

UP THE HUDSON.

On August 19th, and September 3d, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run its usual midsummer excursions to the "Upper Hudson," under personal escort. Special train will leave Broad Street Station at 7.34 a. m., stopping at principal points between Philadelphia and Trenton.

A stop will be made at West Point, giving those who disembark an hour and a half at that point, and enabling them to view the United States Military Academy.

In order to insure an early return, no stop will be made at Newburgh, although the steamer will run to a point off that city and there turn.

Tickets will be sold at the following round-trip rates: From Philadelphia, Bristol, and intermediate stations, $2.50; Trenton, $2.00; Tulpehocken, Westmoreland, and intermediate stations, $2.50; Upsal, Carpenter, and Allen's Lane, $2.60; Wissahickon Heights, Highland, and Chestnut Hill, $2.70.

At Germantown Junction connection will be made with regular trains from Chestnut Hill Branch.

Tickets good only on special train and connections at above points.

CHICAGO is to have an engine-house fitted up with all sorts of luxuries, bric-a-brac, rugs, etc., to teach the fire-fighters the value of such things and the advisability of taking them up gently, lifting them with care, in fires, instead of throwing them out of the window.—[Baltimore American.]

"You didn't run fast enough," said a bystander to an Irishman who came puffing into one end of a railway station as the train was pulling out of the other end. "Yes, I did run fast enough," said Pat, "but I did not start soon enough!"

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING AND SHRIGLEY
 ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
 ARCHITECTS
 Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada.

Established 1870 at 824 North Second Street.
WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade — established three generations ago — and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,
 27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet, 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents, 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents, 100 copies 30 cents, 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet, 12 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents, 50 copies 75 cents, 100 copies $1.00.

 All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address Friends' Intelligencer Association, N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

Friends' Intelligencer Association, N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

Friends' Intelligencer Association, N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes to 1 lb. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CROSS QUARRIES, Jr.) 624 1/2 Media St., Philadelphia

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

The New Friends School Providence, R. I.

Modern buildings heated by steam. Large and beautiful grounds for out door sports. For catalogue address

AUGUSTINE JONES, LL. B., Principal.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: August 21st, September 4th and 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a.m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a.m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chamberlain will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE 1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

SUMMER HYGIENE.

SUMMER is the season of health and recuperation for those who properly regulate their mode of living. For those who do not it is a season of discomfort.

Pure, healthful, light food that will not stimulate heat production while it properly nourishes and strengthens the body and brain is the great essential.

It is conceded that the best of all foods for summer diet are the quickly made flour-foods—hot biscuit, rolls, puddings, cakes, muffins, etc., such as are made with baking powder. A most excellent household bread is also made with baking powder instead of yeast. These properly made, are light, sweet, fine flavored, easily digested, nutritious and wholesome. Yeast bread should be avoided wherever possible in summer, as the yeast germ is almost certain in hot weather to ferment in the stomach and cause trouble. The Royal Baking Powder foods are unfermented, and may be eaten in their most delicious state, viz., fresh and hot without fear of unpleasant results.

Alum baking powders should be avoided at all times. They make the food less digestible. When the system is relaxed by summer heat their danger is heightened.

The flour-foods made with Royal Baking Powder are the acme of perfection for summer diet. No decomposition takes place in their dough, the nutritive qualities of the flour are preserved and digestion is aided, which is not the case with sour-yeast bread or cakes.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts. 5 PHONES.

PLEASE MENTION FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

Merchants' Trust Company,
611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed) $500,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in) 350,000.00
SURPLUS 50,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS 49,349.29

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveyancing done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas
CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. E. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON GRIMMANNY,
S. DAVIE PAGE, WARREN G. WIFFITH,
JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED J. PHILLIPS,
THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE W. WAGNER,
CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
EDWARD S. SAYRES, EDGAR DUDLEY FAIRIES,
JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

United Security
Life Insurance
and Trust Company
OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General
Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
Assistant Treasurer.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers
Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

He was 57; he looked about 40, despite daily business cares and responsibilities innumerable, about which he refused to worry. Why? The future of his family was made secure, his own old age provided for by a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY
N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. RECEIVERS AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders. $ 4,457,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
Asa S. Wieg, Vice-President
Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dep't
J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
David G. Akop, Secretary
J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

James V. Watson,
William Longstrech,
Edward H. Ogden,
Thomas Scattergood,
J. Preston Thomas,
Robert S. Janney,
Marriott C. Morris,
Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

SELECT EXCURSIONS TO TOLCHES-TER BEACH, CHESAPEAKE BAY.

On Wednesday, August 19th, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company (Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company) will run special low-rate excursions to Maryland's most popular watering place, Tolchester Beach. This place is held in high favor by all who have visited it. It has all the attributes of a first-class resort, and especially appeals to families. No liquors are allowed on train, boat or grounds. Every possible kind of amusement is to be found. The location, on the prettiest part of the beautiful Chesapeake Bay, speaks for itself.

A special train will be run on the following schedule, and round-trip tickets will be sold at the rates quoted.

Leave	Time a. m.	Rate.
Philadelphia, Pa.,	7.00	$1.50
West Philadelphia, "	7.03	1.50
Sharon Hill, "	7.15	1.50
Moore, "	7.20	1.35
Ridley Park, "	7.23	1.35
Chester, "	7.29	1.25
Thurlow, "	7.33	1.25
Linwood, "	7.37	1.20
Wilmington, Del.,	8.03	1.00
Newport, "	8.11	.90
Newark, "	8.26	.75
Iron Hill, Md.,	8.31	.75
Elkton, "	8.37	.75
North-East, "	8.47	.50
Charlestown, "	8.51	.50

Returning steamer will leave Beach at 4.00 p. m. Children between five and twelve years of age, half the above rates.

PROTECTION
FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture
80c per hundred for five years
R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
STEAMSHIP LINES
FROM
PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern ports. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 30, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown office, 828 and 1000 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
Wall Papers and Decorations.
Window Shades Made to Order.
902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles
Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address
L. Diamant & Co.,
1024 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT
Undertaker
and Embalmer
1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia
TELEPHONE, POPLAR 59-38 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, EIGHTH MONTH 22, 1903.

OPPOSITE THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THACKERAY HOTEL

(TEMPERANCE)

Great Russell Street, LONDON

Passenger Lift. Electric Light in all Rooms. Bath Rooms on every Floor. Spacious Dining, Drawing, Writing, Reading and Smoking Rooms. All Floors Fireproof. Night Porter. Telephone.

BEDROOMS from 2-6 to 4-6 per night

Inclusive charge for Bedroom, Attendance, Table d'Hôte Breakfast and Dinner from 8-6 to 10-6 ($2.10 to $2.50) per day.

Full Tariff and Testimonials on Application.

Telegrams: "THACKERAY, LONDON."

The Albertson,

New, First-class Family Hotel.

SITUATED AT MANTOLOKING, N. J.

Three miles this side of Bay Head, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, one and one-half hours from Grand Street Station or Market Street Wharf. Fine bathing, Fishing, Yachting and golfing. Send for booklet.

J. R. ALBERTSON,

Formerly of Penns Manor, Pa.

The Bartram,

Accommodates 100 guests.

WILDWOOD, N. J.

Pleasantly situated within 300 feet of beach. Special attention given to the menu.

J. ALFRED BARTMAN, Owner and Manager.

THE DRIFTWOOD

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Special Spring Rates. For particulars address

SARAH J. PAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst,

Second House from Beach.

MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. K. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,

1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR

OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,

Atlantic City, N. J.

Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet. M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

A Memorial of Robert S. Haviland

with portrait, published by the New York Yearly Meeting, is now ready for distribution. (The memorial is also printed, without the portrait, in the proceedings of the yearly meeting.) Copies of the memorial may be obtained at the New York and Brooklyn Meeting-houses. Friends residing out of the city and wishing copies will please address:

Franklin T. Carpenter, Chairman Printing Committee, 787 Park Ave., New York, N. Y.

It Depends upon the Printer's Standard.

"I'll give you a fine job" is a promise that may mean two different things with two different printers. The standards of one may be low, of the other high. Each will give the best he knows. And therein lies the moral. Know the standards of your printer—his work will show them clearly—and judge of what you may expect by what you see.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

WANTED.—A NURSERY GOVERNESS OR mother's helper for two little girls of six and seven years, in the country. Address Mrs. R. C. Gaskill, Hoothwynd, Del. co., Pa.

WANTED.—A TEACHER IN CHELTEN Hills School living near by, will take as members of her family two girls under fourteen. Reference, Dr. J. E. Walker, 677 Green Street, Philadelphia. Address No. 5, this Office.

WANTED.—YOUNG MARRIED COUPLE desire room with board in Friends' family. State terms; reasonable. Location near 22d and Spring Garden Streets. Address No. 4, this Office.

WANTED.—COPIES OF FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, issue of Third month 14, 1903. Address this Office.

WANTED.—REFINED WOMAN OR SMALL family to take main part of furnished house, with the boarders now in it. All conveniences. Terms liberal. Address A, 328 West Front Street, Media, Pa.

WE OFFER A PLEASANT HOME for a feeble-minded young lady, in a Friends' family. Address, for particulars, Y. Box 229, Langhorne, Pa.

WANTED.—A WORKING HOUSEKEEPER, at Liston's Model Coffee House, 27 S. 4th St., Phila.

BOARDING.—CHOICE WINTER ROOMS. Second floor front, communicating. Table board. Open September 1st. Address 1618 Green Street

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH K. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 Ist., N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR RENT FOR TENTH MONTH, KEEWAY din Cottage at Buck Hill Falls. Four double sleeping rooms, two baths, kitchen, dining room, large sitting room, two open fires. Furnished for housekeeping. CHARLES FAXSON, 234 Duck Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—BUCK HILL FALLS COTTAGE Chalet-Edelweiss, can be rented for September and October. A Swiss cottage, newly built and furnished. Consists of well-lighted living room, four bed chambers and bath with all modern conveniences. Wide porch, with mountainous scenery in full view. A short and nearly level walk to Inn for meals. Apply H. T. PAISTE, 3101 Ludlow Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—BUCK HILL FALLS COTTAGE. The Hemlocks, containing five bed-rooms and furnished for housekeeping, can be rented for September or October. Address Dr. W. Speakman, 1377 Pennsylvania Bldg., 15th and Chestnut Sts., Phila.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

FOR SALE—FARM—MAIN LINE.

TWIN MAPLES, containing thirty acres, situated one and one-quarter miles south of Green Tree Station and two miles southwest of Paoli. Land all lies to the south, can be cultivated; at the present time in grass. Improvements: two-story, eight-room frame dwelling, stone and frame bank barn, with stalls for four horses and three cows, also frame and stone out-building. Farm is bordered on three sides by roads, is in an improved and improving neighborhood, and a macadam road extends to within one-eighth of a mile of property. A small stream crosses south end of farm, also small quarry, containing suitable stone for building. Old shade and o. ard. Apply

Provident Life and Trust Co.,
409 Chestnut St., Phila.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

Ont in the woods of Autumn!—I have cast Aside the shackles of the town, that vex The letterless soul, and come to hide myself, . . . in thy venerable shades.

—William D. Gallagher.

THE following cottages are to rent at Buck Hill Falls for Ninth and Tenth months, or for less periods if desired. All cottages have open fire places, bath rooms with hot and cold water; water closets and sewer connections. Some are completely furnished with dishes, linen, etc., for housekeeping. All are convenient to Inn, where meals may be obtained for $7.00 per week, with substantial reduction for children under ten years of age. Berghelm, stone and frame cottage, four bed rooms, bath, two open fire places, fine view. Furnished for housekeeping. $60.00 for Ninth month.

Quay-tide—a Bungalow—rooms all on one floor. Four bed rooms. No housekeeping. $60.00 for Ninth month.

The Laurels, very near the Inn. Five bed rooms. No housekeeping. Last two weeks Ninth month only, $35.00.

Chalet-Edelweiss. Four bed rooms. Fine view. No housekeeping. $60.00 for Ninth month. A Swiss cottage.

The Hemlocks. Four bed rooms. Fine view. "Crow's nest" in trees. Furnished for housekeeping. $60.00 for Ninth month.

Inwood, quite near Inn. Five bed rooms, large sitting room. Particulars on application.

The Ninth month is a beautiful one in the mountains, almost rivaling the Tenth month.

Several families are planning to visit Buck Hill Falls after their summer outing at the seashore.

The Inn will remain open until some time in the Tenth month.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

Pocono Pines Assembly

AND

Summer Schools

NAOMI PINES, PA.

New Assembly Inn, opens June 1, 1903.

Overlooks lake three miles long, half mile wide. 400 acres of Old Pines. Rowing, sailing, bathing, 2000 feet Elevation. Open fire places and blankets a necessity. Always cool. Wide verandas. Shady walks. Bible conference July 14-26. Summer schools July 27th to August 15th, faculty of twelve, including President ISAAC SHARPLESS, JOSEPH WALTON, etc.

New Auditorium and Lecture Hall in the Pines.

Write L. H. BEDELL, Manager, Reasonable Terms. Naomi Pines, Pa.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $3.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $2.25 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXXIV.	529
POETRY: MINISTRY.	529
WOODROOKE SUMMER SETTLEMENT.	529
INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION AND CONCILIATION.	530
ESSENTIAL TRUTHS.	532
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON: The Factions.	532
"OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD."	533
EDITORIAL: An Atrophied Conscience.	534
Notes.	534
BIRTHS, DEATHS.	534
SOCIETY NOTES.	535
CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE AT SALEM.	536
WOODROOKE SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY.	536
A FRIEND AT NORTHFIELD STUDENT CONFERENCE.	537
THE IREDELLS AND EARLY FRIENDS.	539
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	540
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	540
POETRY: The Cardinal Flower; Blind; Dear Hands.	541
WOMEN WORKERS.	541
METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR SEVENTH MONTH.	542
MISCELLANY: Bridge-whist versus Books; Toast-drinking in Water; Miracles; The President's Name.	542
CURRENT EVENTS.	543
NEWS NOTES.	543
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	544

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 99-38 D.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 South Twelfth Street, Philadelphia
Conveyancing and Investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: { 623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{ Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
385 SWEDGE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
19 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $3.50; with Scattered Seeds $4.00; all three $1.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Washable Flannels and Waistings.

We quote interesting price-reductions on desirable fabrics for making house gowns, dressing sacques, waists and children's dresses. The autumn styles are coming in, and we must have additional space to display them—hence the following extra values:

Fancy Wool Waistings—Mostly in neat hair-line and Persian stripe effects; and about all the most wanted colors to choose from in these four grades:

25c grade, 18c 75c grade, 50c
50c grade, 37½c $1.00 grade, 85c

Ceylon Washable Flannels—All in the stripe effects that are so popular now; light, medium and dark colorings in considerable variety.

25c grade, 20c 75c grade, 50c
$1.00 grade now 85c a yard

Saxony Outing Cloths—A special lot, for the most part in blue-and-white and pink-and-white stripe effects; sold regularly at 8c a yard, but bought at a price that enables us to sell them at 6½c a yard.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 19th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' School,

FOURTH AND WEST STREETS, WILMINGTON, DEL.
A day school for both sexes, fitting for either college or business. Scientific, Latin-scientific, and Classical Courses. Fourteen teachers. Excellent equipment. Thorough instruction. Graduates entered on certificate in leading colleges. Fall term begins Ninth month (September) 14th. For illustrated catalogue address
HERSCHEL A. NORRIS, A. M., Principal.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, }
ANNAL W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.
Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES. Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or, JENKINTOWN, PA.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City. For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 22, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 34.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXXIV.

Love is heaven, and hate is torment, and we ourselves create both conditions, as we accept or reject the inshining of the sun of righteousness which is ever at our command.

ANNA M. STARR.

MINISTRY.

There's never a rose in all the world,
But makes some green spray sweeter;
There's never a wind in all the sky,
But makes some bird's wing fleetier;
There's never a star but brings to heaven
Some silver radiance tender;
And never a rosy cloud but helps
To crown the sunset splendour;
No robin but may thrill some heart,
His tuneful gladness voicing;
God gives us all some small, sweet way
To set the world rejoicing.

—A. E. Bennett.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

WOODBROOKE SUMMER SETTLEMENT.

The first fortnight of the Summer Settlement is closing to-day. It is the experience of all, I am sure, that it has been a season of most earnest thought and prayerful feeling. A shadow fell upon all hearts when we learned that Rufus M. Jones, of Haverford College, appointed to lecture upon "Present-Day Ideas of God and the Spiritual Life" had received word by cable, on arriving in England, that his only child had died suddenly, soon after the sailing of the parents. When he took his place before the Friends who had gathered for the first fortnight, to speak to them in his opening lecture on "The Search for God," he must have felt the unutterable sympathy that went out to him from all hearts. The message which he had prepared under sunny skies came to us day by day freshly tested by the anguish of personal bereavement. Those who have been privileged to listen to the noble presentation of thought, the results of deep research and ripe scholarship and life "in the spirit" have seen the power of his philosophy of religion to sustain and cheer. It has been an object-lesson that cannot be lost! This course was finished yesterday; and instead of remaining to repeat the lectures in the second fortnight as was planned, he and his wife sailed in the afternoon from Liverpool for home.

Another series of lectures that has taken a deep hold upon the "settlers" is that on "Principles and Problems of Economic Science," by Philip H. Wicksteed, M. A. The method of presentation has been unique, appealing to personal experience in large degree, and abounding in forcible illustration. Perhaps the purpose and tone of the course can be gathered from one of his closing sentences last evening. "The ideal of the simple life is to bring about such a state of things, that the very bottom man will be able to live a decent, human life; and his work will be amid such conditions that we ourselves need not shrink from sharing it." His last word was an appeal to Friends, whom he designated "a steadfast, quiet, persistent people with a remarkable instinct for business." He said, "When Friends, who are a practical people, feel as a society, a genuine 'concern' for the betterment of industrial conditions, the work will be pushed forward."

The settlement is only a mile away from Bournville, where the Cadbury Cocoa Works are located. This village shows what Friends are able to do for their working-people, men and women. About four thousand people are employed; and they are given every chance for the "decent, human life" that Mr. Wicksteed appeals for. Their cottages are built with regard to architectural effect, variety and beauty entering into their plans, instead of the long rows of monotonous tenements that characterize most manufacturing villages. Sanitary needs are provided for, with good water supply, and lighting. The garden spot for vegetables and flowers is secured to each householder; and the long summer twilights of England, available for work until toward ten o'clock make these of very practical value for the support of the families; and for the pleasure of the traveler, who enjoys the brightness of these little garden spots, along with the green of the hedges, and their festoons of "travelers' joy."

There is much earnest thought and study during the whole forenoon at the Settlement. The day begins with a devotional meeting at nine o'clock. A beautiful spirit pervades these meetings. They have thus far never been wholly silent meetings. There is the fullest opportunity for each one's expression, in prayer, and in messages of encouragement and exhortation. The younger members take their share of responsibility with great sweetness and simplicity. Three lectures follow this meeting. The afternoon is left quite free for recreation. Nearly every day there is some plan for pleasant excursions to the Cathedral towns that are of easy access, like Worcester and Lichfield; or the Art Museum of Birmingham; or Warwick and Kenilworth and Stratford-on-Avon. There are several tennis courts available, and a small boating-pool on the grounds of "Woodbrooke," the beautiful home of the Settlement provided by the generous interest of George and Elsie Cadbury. The story would be quite incomplete without reference to the kind hospitality of the Friends who live near "Woodbrooke," and are constantly inviting the "Settlers" to their own beautiful homes for "tea and tennis."

It is hoped that the Settlement may become a permanent school for such as wish to study the history of the development of religious thought. George Cadbury, who is deeply interested in the work of the Summer Settlement, and has made it possible, believes that there is a future for Friends. He believes that the pastoral system adopted by Friends in some parts of the United States is not in accordance with the principles of Friends. But he believes also, that so far as possible, it is our duty to bring our trained powers to the service of these principles; and to this end he is working.

It is a privilege indeed, to share in the lectures and conferences and social intercourse of this Summer Settlement.

ELIZABETH POWELL BOND.

*Sely Oak, near Birmingham, Eng.,
Eighth month 6th.*

For Friends' Intelligencer.

INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION AND CONCILIATION.

THE terms arbitration and conciliation are usually used together, but in reality apply to two different processes. Arbitration suggests a more or less formal meeting before an umpire, whose decision is binding on both parties, either by the process of law, or the moral feeling of the disputants. On the other hand, conciliation implies an informal meeting of those disputing, with no umpire and no power of giving an award which is binding; if any result is obtained it partakes of the nature of a mutual agreement.

Arbitration manifests itself in two different forms:

I. Legal arbitration, which may be voluntary in character; in this case the court has no power of initiating proceedings, but it is in existence and can be called on to decide disputed matters by the mutual agreement of the parties concerned; it has full legal powers to enforce its awards. Or again, the arbitration may be compulsory in character. In this case legal courts are formed under the statutes of the state, and upon the application of either party to a dispute the question must be submitted for the action of the court. Strictly, this is compulsory only on the one party. The court has not the power to initiate arbitration, but its decisions are of full legal force.

II. Arbitration again may be purely voluntary. Here the two parties to the dispute by mutual agreement appoint a board to discuss the questions and agree to abide by the decision of the board, or umpire. This decision thus takes on only moral obligation. This voluntary arbitration is, as yet, the form which is most employed.

The history of arbitration is comprised in a single century, and until recently the greater part of it in England. The real beginnings of the movement, however, were in France. In 1806, Napoleon I, at the request of the citizens of Lyons, established there the first of the so-called "Conseils des Prud'hommes," or "Councils of Experts." At first the real worker was not represented on these councils, but as constituted they tended to favor the interest of the working man more than did the guilds which had preceded them. They have been but slightly modified even to the present.

The object of these councils was to furnish conciliation between employer and employed in the many smaller differences which continually arise. Their authority extends to every question that can arise in a workshop. The only question which they cannot settle is the future rate of wages. They make proceedings compulsory on the application of either party. They have been of great benefit to the country in preventing losses by strikes and lockouts.

Similar councils have been established in Belgium, but they are not as successful as in France. Similar courts have also been established in Austria.

As was said before, most of the experience in this form of settling labor disputes is English, and most of this has been gained within the last forty years. Previous to 1860 there was little known of this subject. There had been labor legislation which was aimed to regulate disputes as early as the time of Queen Elizabeth. This legislation, however, merely codified the rules of the guilds and only applied to such trades as were then existing and mentioned in the law. As time went on new industries arose and the law was variously modified from time to time to cover them.

In 1824 all previous legislation was consolidated and embodied in an act which was modeled on the lines of the French Conseils des Prud'hommes and provided for the compulsory arbitration of disputes between the parties concerned, on the petition of either one; but this applied only to certain specified trades and certain specified subjects. It provides, however, that nothing in the act shall be construed as giving power to fix the rates of future wages except by mutual consent of both masters and workmen. The awards under this act are of legal force. This law is still in operation but is rarely used. It was useful in bringing about shortly after its passage a number of voluntary boards of arbitration in some of the industries. These fixed the rates of wages, providing for committees of conciliation to adjust differences, without any formality, by their mutual good offices, there being no formal hearing or award.

One of the first attempts to use conciliation was made in the carpet industry by William Henderson of Durham. There had been so many disputes in that trade previous to 1839 that a number of employers formed an association, which apparently produced good results; for, says William Henderson, "Every strike in the carpet trade of the United Kingdom has ceased on the appeal" of this Association. Similar boards of greater or less stability had become quite common by 1867.

In 1872 an act was passed to provide (1) the most simple machinery for binding submission to arbitration; (2) to extend the facilities of arbitration to questions of hours, wages, and other conditions of labor; (3) to provide for submission to arbitration of future disputes by anticipation without waiting until the dispute has actually arisen and the parties are too excited to agree upon arbitration.

These acts were of little practical value. In their best features they have followed the lines of voluntary arbitration. Compulsion was gradually weakened from the first act of 1824; and tendency being towards voluntary arbitration in its completeness.

In the United States all the legislation has been to authorize voluntary boards of arbitration which are able to offer decisions, but whose awards are in no way binding except by moral compulsion. The first legislation was in Pennsylvania in 1883 and was the outcome of the report of the Commissioner, Joseph D. Weeks, who had been sent abroad in 1879 to study the methods of European boards of conciliation. Fourth month 30th, 1883, the so-called "Wallace Act" became law. This provides for the creation of tribunals of arbitration in the iron, steel, glass, textile and coal trades. All questions are submitted to it purely voluntarily, and its awards have no legal or compulsory force.

In 1885 the Legislature of Ohio passed a bill providing for the creation and operation of tribunals of voluntary arbitration.

It was in the United States that the first provision was made by the State for a permanent board which should be ready at all times to offer its services. The first one formed was in New York in 1886, but the Legislature of Massachusetts also established such a board later in the same year. These two laws have become the foundation for similar laws in fourteen other States (California, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Louisiana, Montana, Minnesota, Ohio, Utah, Wisconsin, New Jersey, Michigan, and Connecticut). In many cases these laws have never become effective in the creation of the boards; or the boards have been of little value when created. Only in six States can they be said to have been important (Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, New York, and Massachusetts).

The State boards are formed along the lines of the two types of Massachusetts and New York. The Massachusetts board consists of three members, who are appointed by the governor. One must represent employers; one must represent working men; and the third must ordinarily be appointed upon the recommendation of the other two and must be neither an employer nor an employee. These boards of arbitration and mediation have very little real authority. None of them have the power to compel arbitration, nor have they means to enforce obedience to their awards, even when the parties have agreed to abide by the decision. The boards are required on the knowledge of any strike or lockout to offer their services as mediators to both parties, and attempt to conciliate or persuade both parties to arbitrate. They may take this action when a strike is threatened. If no settlement can be accomplished, the board is required to make an investigation and to publish a report, stating the cause, and assigning responsibility or blame. The decisions of the boards are reported to the parties and made public. They have no binding effect unless both parties are joined in the application.

Some States (Iowa, Kansas, Pennsylvania, Texas, Maryland, Missouri) authorize the establishment of local boards. The Pennsylvania law provides apparently for a compulsory submission on the part of the one party, on the initiative of the other, but there is no way provided for using the compulsion, hence the law is a dead letter. This is the case with most of the others, their decisions are nominally final, but there are no means of enforcing them. As a matter of fact in these six States these boards have never been called into use.

In 1898 an act was passed by the United States Congress which provides that in case of any dispute upon an interstate transportation line, intervention and mediation for conciliation shall be employed by the Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the United States Commissioner of Labor, at the request of either one of the parties in dispute. If conciliation fails they are to urge arbitration. These officers have no specific authority to intervene on their own motion. The decision of these arbitrators is binding and may be enforced by suits in equity in the United States courts. In the only case which has come up under this law one party absolutely refused to arbitrate, so that the law is as yet untried.

The reasons for the apparently small results actually accomplished by these boards are given as being ignorance on the part of both employers and employees of the existence of the boards and of their possible advantages. The boards are not conveniently near at hand; and besides there is the natural hesitancy of utilizing means which are established by law. Their chief value has been in promoting conferences between employer and workman which commonly arrive at a mutual agreement without formal action by the board. The Massachusetts board has been the most successful of all the State boards, the New York board coming next, and then, perhaps, that of Illinois.

So far, we have considered arbitration only in its legal aspects. The real history of the movement is concerned with the spread of the idea of arbitration among the people, for it is only when peoples become of a nature for arbitration, arbitrating peoples, that arbitration can accomplish anything. The remainder of this paper then, will endeavor to trace the growth of the idea of purely voluntary arbitration. While the legal process is becoming more and more important, the real development must always be in the line of education through the purely voluntary form.

In the line of voluntary arbitration by privately formed boards the greater part of the experience again is English. There had been frequent settlements of disputes by boards of conciliation called for special disputes previous to 1860. But up to that year there was no standing board of any permanency.

In the year 1860 there had been three serious strikes in the hosiery trade of England, one of them lasting for eleven weeks. Late in that year A. J. Mundella, a manufacturer of hosiery in Nottingham, succeeded in establishing the first permanent voluntary board of arbitration and conciliation. Let him tell the story; "Three of us met a dozen leaders of the Trades-Unions. We consulted with these men, and told them that the present plan (strikes) was a bad one, that they took every advantage of us when we had a demand, and we took every advantage of them when trade was bad, and it was a system mutually predatory. Well, the men were very suspicious at first: indeed, it is impossible to describe to you how suspiciously we looked at each other. Some of the manufacturers also deprecated our proceedings, and said that we were degrading them. However, we had some ideas of our own, and we went on with them, and we sketched out what we called a 'Board of Arbitration and Conciliation.' When we came to make our rules it was agreed that the chairman should be elected by the meeting, and should have a vote, and a casting vote when necessary. Twice that casting vote has got us into trouble, and for the last four years it has been resolved that we should not vote at all. Even when a working man was convinced, or a master was convinced, he did not like acting against his own order, and in some instances we had secessions in consequence of that: so we said, 'Do not let us vote again: let us try if we can agree.' And we did agree."

(To be continued.)

ESSENTIAL TRUTHS.

Joseph Powell sends these extracts from a letter in his possession written by John Jackson, Ninth month 30th, 1837.

AMONG the essential truths of religion, I recognize the necessity of a belief in the existence of a Supreme Being, the creation of man in his image, the object of his creation, the glory and enjoyment of his Maker. And as man's creation is the workmanship of God, he is created perfect in his nature, in the full possession of a material body, a natural or animal spirit, and an immortal soul; the two former are of the earth—the body composed of matter into which, as into its original elements, it must again become dissolved, and with that dissolution its natural or animal spirit ceases to exist, like the spirits of other animals.

The soul is the immediate gift of the Creator; it is made the companion of man's pilgrimage, and is the part in man that is alone accountable and capable of approaching to a divine communion.

Man's present state is a term of probation, and in order to make that probation subservient to the high purposes of his being, his merciful and bountiful Creator, whose benevolence may be traced in the arrangement and perfect adaptation of one part of the visible creation to another, so as to produce an harmonious whole, has furnished him with a measure or manifestation of his own spirit, to enable him to answer the end of his being. This we term the illuminating power or light of Christ in the soul, and it will be no deviation from scripture language to call it Christ himself—or "the word of God that was in the beginning with God," or the "true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." It is omnipotent, eternal, unchangeable, because it is divine. As this light is followed and obeyed it will preserve from sin, and thus it becomes a savior. If through disobedience to its manifestations man loses the divine image, and thus becomes involved in sin, that sin thus actually committed becomes a partition wall between him and his Maker.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 31.

THE FACTIONS.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And I will most gladly spend and be spent for your souls.—II. Corinthians, xii., 15.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xix., 23-41; xx., 1-6; II. Corinthians, i., 15-24; Galatians, ii., 11-16.

PAUL's labors in Ephesus were brought to a close by an outbreak of mob spirit brought on by the anger of tradesmen in idols working on religious intolerance. He had labored first in the synagogue and then in a vacant school house. He had done a great work, ministering meanwhile with his own hands to his necessities. He had won many from the practices of magic, so that they burned their books. Many more had been won from idolatry, so that the effects came to be felt among the silversmiths who made shrines and images for the worship of Diana—one of the chief cults of the city. The hostility of those who lived by the worship of Diana of the Ephesians raised a mob against Paul; and although the authorities deprecated violence and defended the apostles, it seemed best for them to retire from the city, at least for a time. He had been longing to go to Corinth from the time when news of the difficulties there had come to him. Apparently he had even decided to go, and perhaps had set out (II. Corinthians, i., 15-17), but had changed his plans at the last moment. When he left Ephesus we may suppose that his heart drew him toward the Achaian city, but he still felt that the time was not come. Until a better spirit found its way into the church his coming might merely make matters worse. He would have to be severe, and severity kills affection; wherefore for their sakes he would still remain away (II. Corinthians, i., 23). So he turned aside into Macedonia, there to revisit the churches of Philippi, Thessalonica and others, the scenes of his first European missions. Here he met Titus and others who were laboring in the cause of the collection for the poor of Jerusalem, referred to in the last lesson. In pursuance of this duty, after passing through Galatia and Asia they had gone on to Corinth, perhaps taking with them Paul's second letter, now lost; they were therefore able to bring late news from the church which rested so heavily upon Paul's heart and mind. This news was, on the whole, favorable. The church at Corinth had some respects bettered the instructions of the apostle. Instead of expelling they had reclaimed the immoral person who had brought disgrace upon them; he was now repentant and in full sympathy with the brethren (II. Corinthians, ii., 5-11). The condition of the church in other respects is also improved, though factionalism is still in evidence. Apparently the "Judaizers" were the worst feature of the situation, as Titus reported it; those who would force the infant church into the distorting conditions of the Jewish law (II. Corinthians, iii., 6-18). These seem to have made use of the dissensions to hold Paul up to ridicule as one large in word and small in deed, as unstable of purpose, perhaps even as one laboring for mercenary motives (II. Corinthians, x. and xi.). On the whole, the news is so good that much of Paul's burden is lifted; if the spirit of the church tends to forbearance and unity a few slanders against himself will be easily disposed of; and he must needs share his sense of relief with the objects of his late solicitude. His work in Macedonia still holds him for a time, but he now writes another letter (II. Corinthians) which he sends by Titus, who returns to carry on the work of the great collection.

Much of the contents of this letter has already been suggested in the present letter. The apostle shows himself eager in welcoming more than half-way every evidence of returning faith and well-doing. He tells much of his own experiences—the riot at Ephesus, his many trials and sufferings. He argues the accusations against himself, with earnestness, indeed, but without deep anxiety; for he had no small vanity and he had faith in his friends at Corinth. He commends their action concerning the offending brother, and sends his cordial forgiveness to unite with theirs. More than once he touches upon his own earlier severity toward them, striving to make it plain that its very severity was in truest affection. Much emphasis is laid upon the importance of the contributions for the mother church at Jerusalem.

Most of this, it will be seen, is personal and temporary, but out of it and out of his experiences there appear the beginnings of most of his characteristic doctrines as elaborated in the later epistles—the blessings that grow out of trials and afflictions (i., 3-5), the substitution of faith for law (iii., 12-18), the spiritual nature of "the kingdom" (v., 1-4), the divine nature of the Christ (v., 19-21).

A few months later Paul followed his envoy and his letter to Corinth. We would be glad to know something of his reception and experiences there, but the historian has not a word of it preserved for us, except that he remained "in Greece" three months, and that "a plot was laid against him by the Jews" which determined him to return to the East by way of Macedonia, instead of sailing direct for Syria, as he had intended (Acts, xx., 1-3). Yet the three months in Corinth were most fruitful and important. It was stated in an earlier lesson that the epistle to the Galatians was believed by many to be the earliest. Others, however, and perhaps with reason, assign it to this stay at Corinth. And the epistle to the Romans—the most important of all as a systematic statement of Paul's faith—was almost certainly written at this time and place. Whether Galatians was written at this time or a dozen years earlier we can best observe its contents in the wider horizon of this period. It deals with the Jew-Gentile controversy which appeared soon after the founding of the church at Antioch. It will be remembered that Paul and Barnabas presented the matter to the church at Jerusalem, and that by the influence of Peter and James a liberal policy was adopted. But some of the Jewish party evidently carried the matter further, going first to Antioch, where they even made Peter to act inconsistently (Galatians, ii., 11-13), and then, apparently on to the churches of Galatia, Asia and Greece. They attacked Paul's authority, and insisted on the necessity of the whole Mosaic law. In Galatians, written either at the beginning of the controversy or later, Paul argues at length the independent revelation from which he received his authority, and the inconsistency of Peter and Barnabas. He then passes to the subject of the law, attempting to show from the law itself that faith freed them from the law. This will be taken up in a later lesson. The letter closes with a few affectionate words "writ with mine own hand."

"OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD."

THE best way to fight against evil is not to meet it on its own ground, with its own weapons. There is a nobler method of warfare, a Divine plan of campaign given to us in the religion of Christ. Overcome evil with good. This is the secret of the battle of life.

Here are monstrous evils and vices in society. Let intemperance be the type of them all, because so many of the others are its children. Drunkenness ruins more homes and wrecks more lives than war. How shall we oppose it? I do not say that we shall not pass resolutions and make laws against it, but I do say that we can never really conquer the evil in this way.

The way to attack it is to make the sober life beautiful and happy and full of interest. Teach your boys how to work, how to read, how to play, you fathers, before you send them to college, if you want to guard them against the temptations of strong drink and the many shames and sorrows that go with it. Make the life of your community cheerful and pleasant and interesting, you reformers; provide men with recreations which will not harm them, if you want to take away the power of the gilded saloons and the grimy looking den. Parks and playgrounds, libraries and reading rooms, clean homes and cheerful churches, these are the efficient foes of intemperance. And the same thing is true of gambling and all the other vices which drag men down by the lower side of their nature, because the higher side has nothing to cling to to sustain it and hold it up.

The reason why many men fall is because they thrust the vice out and then forget to lay hold on the virtue. They evict the unclean spirit and leave a vacant house. To cease to do evil is important, but to learn to do good is far more important. Reformation never saved a man. Transformation is the only way. And to be transformed a man must welcome the spirit of good, the holy spirit, into his heart and work with him every day, doing the will of God.—[Henry van Dyke.]

RELIGION is no haggard or stern monitress waving you from enjoyment: she is a strong angel leading you to noble joy. The Bible is not a book of repressions and prohibitions: it is a book of kindling inspiration.—[Canon Farrar.]

OUTWARD comforts are but crutches, which when we lean too much upon, God suffers them many times to fall, that we may stay upon Himself. It is but just the cisterns should either be broken or dried when we forsake the Fountain to depend on them.—[Hubbard, 1679.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 22, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

AN ATROPHIED CONSCIENCE.

No organ of the body can attain its full development unless it is frequently used. Muscles that are not exercised become weak and flabby, lungs that are undeveloped by full, deep breathing easily become diseased; eyes that look only at near-by objects have scant power of vision; ears that are not attuned to delicate sounds miss the sweet strains of the far-away bird; fingers whose tips have become callous can distinguish little by the sense of touch; the person who breathes through the mouth instead of the nose never enjoys the richest perfumes of the flowers; and the nerves of taste that have been deadened by pepper and spices entirely lose the rarest flavors of dainty food.

It is true that a blind man is spared the annoyance caused by wanton disfigurement of the landscape; that a deaf man is not disturbed by trolley cars, factories and locomotives; and that one whose nerves are paralyzed does not suffer from heat or cold; but the joys of sight, hearing and feeling are so much greater than the ills caused by transient annoyances, that no one would willingly be either blind, deaf or paralytic.

If any moral faculty is undeveloped or allowed to fall into disuse, there is just as surely a personal loss as if one of the bodily senses is deficient. Here, for example, is a man who is dishonest in his dealings; he is careful not to evade the letter of the law and he may become so rich in worldly goods as to be envied by his fellows; his conscience does not appear to trouble him in the least and he has abundance of all the pleasures that money can buy; but what does he know of the proud delight in the breast of the village blacksmith who "looks the whole world in the face, for he owes not any man."

Here is another who has honorably amassed wealth for himself and his children, but he spends little either for his pleasure or theirs, and has nothing to spare for a poor man in need or a noble work of philanthropy. What does he know of the pure joy felt by the widow living in a cabin across the way, who goes without a new gown for another year so that she may give her mite to help lift up her fellowmen?

Even here in this life, where the unjust often seem to flourish, virtue is ever its own reward and vice is followed by sure punishment. The man who revels in sensual pleasures and foul talk generally suffers physically for his wrong doing, and is inevitably shut out from the blessing promised to the pure in heart; that he does not realize what he has lost is perhaps the saddest part of his punishment. We pity the person who chooses to go unwashed and wear clothing reeking with filth when water is abundant and clean linen is at his command; how much more should we pity one who prefers the moral atmosphere of a dark alley to the sunshine of God's presence!

There are no worldly pleasures that can compare for a moment with the joys of the kingdom of heaven. Whoever would enter into this kingdom now,—whatsoever things are honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report, let him "think on these things"; for as a man "thinketh in his heart, so he is."

THE thirty seventh anniversary of the Universal Peace Union and thirty-six of Connecticut Christian Peace Society will be commemorated in the Peace Temple, in Peace Grove, Mystic, Connecticut, on the 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th of this month. The meetings will be addressed by distinguished speakers. There are tents on the grounds and accommodations can be had very reasonably. Members of the Union and others interested in peace are earnestly requested to send donations to Charles P. Hastings, Treasurer, 1305 Arch street, Philadelphia.

BIRTHS.

BIDDLE.—At the home of the parents, 804 Aiken Ave., Pittsburg, Pa., Eighth month 14th, 1903, to Clement M. and Graceanna B. Biddle, a daughter, who is named Elizabeth Brosius Biddle.

BROWN.—At their home in Washington, D. C., Seventh month 13th, 1903, to T. Janney and Elsie Palmer Brown, a daughter, who is named Virginia Neill Brown.

HENDRICKSON.—Near Swedesboro, N. J., on Sixth month 13th, 1903, to T. Wilber and Hanna L. Hendrickson, a daughter, whose name is Doris Cornell.

KENDERDINE.—At Newtown, Bucks county, Pa., on First-day, Eighth month 9th, 1903, to Robert and Elizabeth Stapler Kenderdine, a son, who is named William Stapler.

DEATHS.

BENTLEY.—At "Cloverly," Sandy Spring, Maryland, on Eighth month 15th, 1903, Lilian Harding, eldest daughter of Richard L. and Anna VanBuskirk Bentley, of Baltimore City, in her tenth year.

PANCOAST.—On Seventh month 1st, 1903, at his late residence, Josiah D. Pancoast, in his 70th year; a member of Chester Monthly Meeting of Friends held at Moorestown, New Jersey.

ROGERS.—At Fellowship, N. J., Seventh month 21st, 1903, William Dunn Rogers, in the 74th year of his age; a member of Chester Monthly Meeting of Friends (Moorestown), and for a number of years a valued elder in that meeting.

SHARPLESS.—At her home in West Chester, Pa., Seventh month 11th, 1903, after a few weeks' illness, Elizabeth Cope Sharpless, in her 73d year.

She was the daughter of Lewis Sharpless, and wife of Alfred Sharpless, who was one of the firm of William P. and Alfred Sharpless, commission merchants in Philadelphia many years ago. She was a devoted mother, warm-hearted friend and model housewife; she leaves to survive her an aged husband, two sons and a daughter, all of the latter having families of their own. She was a birthright member of meeting, going out in marriage with her husband, who belonged to our branch of Friends, and she afterward attended with him.

SOCIETY NOTES.

THE following account of Joseph S. Elkinton's visits among the Indians we find in the Friend (Philadelphia):

Joseph S. Elkinton having in the progress of his religious visits to remnants of tribes in the Eastern States visited the six Indian reservations in Western New York in company with our friend Zebedee Haines (whose concern in the work ceased at Poplar Ridge neighborhood) was there joined by William Keckel as his companion in proceeding to eastern Massachusetts, stopping at North Dartmouth. Thence proceeding to West Falmouth, they were joined on First-day morning, the second instant, by Job S. Gidley, who came from his home in North Dartmouth. After having a solemnized service in the Friends' meeting, at West Falmouth, they (with the present editor), proceeded in the afternoon to the two districts of the Mashpee Indians, each about twelve miles east of Buzzard's Bay shore. Collecting at South Mashpee a considerable gathering, considering that the notice sent to that neighborhood had failed to be delivered, they found among them a tender people whose sympathy and interest were comforting to the visitors, and a baptizing season was witnessed. In the evening at North Mashpee (the stated minister being absent on a vacation), this coming was welcomed in a congregation of over sixty attenders, and the life and solemnity of the several ministrations were acknowledged. The decorum, dignity and attention of these people were marked.

Returning the next day to their places of sojourn, the visitors were contemplating a passage to Gay Head, on Martha's Vineyard Island, for last Third-day, to find what service might arise for them among the small remnants of Indians there.

Our friend Joseph S. Elkinton with his companions was joined by Job S. Gidley at Vineyard Haven on Third-day the 4th inst. en route through the island of Martha's Vineyard to visit the Gay Head Indians. The meeting that evening was made small by a storm, which prevented their return during the next day, in the evening of which a considerable number of the natives gathered in a religious meeting which, like the first, was a season of favor. Unable to yield to an invitation to continue with them for two meetings more, they bade those Indians farewell, having had interesting seasons in some of their families, where they found not only much brightness of mind, but also a welcoming of gospel truth.

Being enabled to return on Fifth-day to West Falmouth, on the next day they accompanied Friends to Sandwich Monthly Meeting held at South Yarmouth, the more readily so on the news coming that our esteemed friend Elizabeth C. Stetson, of that place, had died on the day preceding the Monthly Meeting. After the conclusion of its sitting a visit to the stricken family left a sense of duty to remain to attend her funeral, held the day following (Seventh-day). There seemed a liberty to proceed in the latter part of the day towards Boston and Lynn, and to look from there towards the Penobscot and Passamaquoddy Indians of Maine.

Short Creek Quarterly Meeting was held in Short Creek Meeting-house, near Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, Eighth month 14th and 15th. On the 14th nine Friends were in attendance at the meeting of Ministers and Elders. Elizabeth Lloyd, a minister of Buckingham Meeting, Pa., had a message of encouragement. She said that in order to spread the principles of Friends it was necessary not only to sow the seed, but to prepare the ground carefully for the reception of the seed, and then to see that weeds were not allowed to interfere with its growth.

At the meeting on Seventh-day about forty Friends were present, several of whom were young people. As the total resident membership of this meeting was reported to be but 58 this was a very full attendance. The only speaker in the first meeting was Elizabeth Lloyd. She dwelt at some length on the belief of Friends concerning God, the Bible, Christ, prayer, ministry, salvation, and religion manifested in the daily life. She said that while Friends had no creed except the three words of George Fox, "Mind the Light," they are generally united in believing that God reveals himself directly to every human soul, as he has done in all ages of the world, that the Bible is rich with inspired truth, that spiritually Jesus the Christ was the Son of God, that prayer is the effort to bring the human will into harmony with the Divine will, that the minister must wait in living silence until the message is given for the occasion, that only the Christ-spirit in the individual heart can save the soul from sin, and that the presence of Christ in the heart will make itself manifest in the words and actions of every-day life.

All present remained in their seats during the long meeting for discipline, in which all the queries were answered preparatory to the yearly meeting. Much life was manifested in the answering of the queries, care being taken that the summaries should faithfully portray the state of the Society in this quarterly meeting; quite a number of Friends either suggested changes or expressed unity with the answers. At the close of the meeting a fitting memorial was read of Ezekiel Roberts, a beloved minister of this meeting who died last spring in his ninetieth year. This was directed to be forwarded to the approaching yearly meeting to be held at Salem.

At Chicago Central Meeting on the 16th Hannah S. Plummer gave a few words for our encouragement, and on the 9th instant William Burgess, Joseph Foulke and daughter, and Oliver Wilson were very acceptably in attendance with us, William Burgess giving a lengthy and beautiful discourse.

ENGLAND.

The members and workers of the Yearly Meeting's Home Mission Committee held a conference at Leighton Park from the 5th to the 11th of this month. The mornings and evenings were devoted to lectures, Bible readings, and devotional meetings, the afternoons being left free for rest and recreation. Among those taking part are Harry R. Keates of New York Yearly Meeting (Orthodox), Edward Grubb, Joshua Rowntree, Frederick Sessions.

The result up to the end of Eighth month of Lord Roberts's appeal to holders of Boer family Bibles taken during the war has been the restoration of about eighty volumes. Some are weighty tomes, containing family records for over a century; others are small pocket Bibles, the gifts of wives to their husbands when they started on commands.—[The Friend, London.]

The address on Social Service issued by London and Middlesex Quarterly Meeting, which is "an appeal to our younger members to take up . . . some definite line of service for the uplifting of their fellows, and to use their opportunities to qualify themselves, in order that such work may be done well," has been published, and copies may be obtained from M. O'B. Harris, 37 Newington Green Road, Canonbury, N., or through the Friends' Book Store, Philadelphia.

DENMARK.

Joseph G. Alexander, the English Friend who has been visiting among Friends in the Scandinavian countries, writes in the Friend (London) of Seventh month 31st of visits in Denmark. He has visited "every adult member of our Society in Denmark" except five, the total number being only 33. The children are "registered and allowed to attend business meetings, but not considered as full members till they have made personal application." Only four meetings are regularly held. The Friends at four other places occasionally arrange for meetings. Except at Copenhagen, where the meeting consists of one family and a widow, the meetings being held at their houses alternately, the Society's organization is confined to the province of Jutland. "It is a very small body but it contains some very choice spirits." The "very few who have been led into the deeper and simpler faith of Quakerism . . . are closely united in love and faith, and form a foundation upon which we may yet see a great work built up." Among those who have done important work toward consolidating and building up the little church, the American Friends (Orthodox) Richard H. and Anna B. Thomas of Baltimore are mentioned as having left deep traces. "The way appears ready for a forward movement."

In the Friend for Eighth month 7th, an account of Denmark Yearly Meeting is given by Hannah Fennell White, which "was held this year as usual at Veile in Jutland." The First-day meeting was a "time when the power of the Lord was felt, and the ministry flowed freely." The one day of the yearly meeting, consisting of two long sittings, was a very busy one, it being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the meeting.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE AT SALEM.

It is desirable that the attention of Friends be drawn to the coming meeting of the Central Committee of Friends' General Conference, on the 28th and 29th of this month, just previous to Ohio Yearly Meeting held at Salem.

Although called a committee meeting, the sessions always assume the form of a "conference." All persons who wish to do so are invited to attend all the sessions of the committees and are always incorporated into the committee for the time, and it is proper for anyone to express an opinion on any topic that is under discussion.

By following this plan the committee has in the past been enabled to come to wise decisions and the gatherings have been made much more interesting and helpful.

It is hoped, therefore, that Friends of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Genesee Yearly Meetings will arrange to arrive in Salem on the evening of Fifth-day, the 27th, so as to be prepared to attend and take part in the committee meetings which begin at 9 a. m. on Sixth-day. Let it be understood that this year Ohio Yearly Meeting will commence on the morning of Sixth-day, the 28th.

Friends from the Eastern Yearly Meetings will also be very welcome whether members of the Central Committee or not. We hope that many will feel it a duty, as it will be a pleasure, to mingle with those of other sections, at Salem.

O. EDWARD JANNEY,
Chairman of Central Committee.

The aim for which we give our best strength is everything, the visible success is nothing. True faith may be the greatest, goodness and fidelity at the highest, when visible success is at the least.—[John Hamilton Thom.]

WOODBROOKE SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY.

THE Friend (London) for Eighth month 7th, continuing its account of the Settlement, says, "'This Summer School is like the meetings of the early Christians, without the persecutions,' was the apt remark among the Settlers. The cordial friendship that pervades the whole gathering, the merry laugh and buzz of conversation at meals, the tennis on the lawns, the boating on the lake, the bathing for ladies and gentlemen at well ordered hours, the chairs for repose under the spreading oaks on the lawn, the library for study, the lecture-rooms, and the accommodation provided for each student make Woodbrooke very pleasant for all concerned."

Speaking of the lectures of Rufus Jones and Philip Wicksteed, the Friend continues, "Both lecturers have cheerfully endured a large amount of questioning, and the old system of question and answer, in which Socrates and Plato rejoiced as a means of instruction, has become the order of the day here. In the evenings Philip Wicksteed has been freely handled in this regard, and has had an every-ready answer for every question put to him."

"Dugald Macfadyen concluded his series of five lectures by a masterly summary . . . of the course. His main points were somewhat as follows: Personality is a permanent possibility of entering into conscious relations with every kind of reality. God has given us in personality a microcosm of everything that is in the macrocosm. If we are to know God, and if we are to know the spiritual, we must have in us something of God and something of the spiritual. The whole of knowledge consists in adjusting the spiritual in ourselves to the spiritual of the cosmos. God has, so to speak, given us a house in which there are many rooms, cellars and sky-scrapers. God has given us the rooms at the top open to the heavens. It is possible for us to live at the house-top in direct intercourse with the skies." Our "spiritual instinct" or God-consciousness "has performed an immensely important part in human history; especially does it render valuable the Hebrew literature, because the Hebrew seems so often trying to awake to the spiritual relations between man and God. Not only in history, but in many personal biographies, we have the acknowledgment, which Horace Bushnell speaks of as the spiritual recognition, 'I have seen God.' In the third lecture were brought to the front the relation of . . . personality and the Christ-consciousness, come to the full in the history and person of Jesus Christ. He shows that our relationship (as His relationship) is to be as the son to the father. . . . In lecture four we had the relation of the Cross of Christ to the universal and spiritual Cosmos. . . . The sacrifice of self to the larger self, He worked out in His own life."

Rufus M. Jones, in his lecture on Personality, said, "Every person is organic with every other person. . . . The one sure path to the Divine self, we must find in a person. If we would reach the ocean, we explore along the river that runs to the ocean. When the invisible messenger calls on us and takes away one that is dear to us, we find that part of our own self is gone. There are no such things as the outer world and the inner world that we can entirely separate." He then went on to show how personality begins in self-consciousness and is constructed by various forces. . . . In his next lecture on Self-realization, he said that "personality is always an achievement. . . . Social influence can never confer personality. Yet only in society can personality become. . . . The recognition of a definite future state is one of the potentialities of advance. . . . Thus the ideal is dynamic and propels us. . . . Believing in the goal and its desirability, the soul seeks to move forward. The vision of the potential makes the present appear unsatisfactory. Ideals are as truly grounded in reality as the commonest things of life. The ideal is never an individual invention, it is born in society. . . . The great agencies of self-realization . . . are (a) the agencies of restraint, natural and social, . . . (b) of instruction, . . . (c) of love, . . . (d) of consecration. . . . In the spiritual life every experience helps us to gain another and a higher experience. . . . So there can be no terminal limit to personality. To be a person, there is always in everything gained, a prophecy of greater and better things to come. The falling away or shelling off of the body may be only as the bursting of the chrysalis. Nothing in the physical world can explain this law of growth in the spiritual. . . . A person is a unique expression of the eternal self set free. He may either be submerged in the lower world, or, as he uses his possibilities, he becomes wrapped up in the heart and life of God, the Father of Spirits, from whom we come and to whom we go. In our present radius we are determining our future."

The last lecture of the series was on Self-sacrifice, the thoughts expressed in which were in touching accord with the words of a Friend who said, at the close of one of the lectures when Friends were expressing their gratitude for the course, "Rufus Jones has not only given us an act of heroism in giving these lectures at this time, but we are glad he did it. The things he cared for in the sunshine, he cares for in the rain. We are not truly living until we have got hold of something, the value of which we realize in stress of sufferings as well as in fair weather."

In his concluding lecture Rufus M. Jones referred to the criterion of truth and knowledge. This criterion can not be "what every man thinks, for then there were no certainty. . . . Each one of us is a focus-point for truth and consciousness, but there is a larger self which must be related to reality. The criterion of knowledge is the larger self. There are not two worlds, outward and inward, material and spiritual, self and larger self, but there is one essential Unity. The total consciousness of the universe is in God. . . . He would not do without us, we cannot do without Him. A finite self is conscious of his own incompleteness. The search for a goal means that we partake, in our measure, of the Infinite. . . . The heart of the universe is groaning and longing for the development of the Sons of God. There is a progressive revelation, the procession of the Holy Ghost. In the Word made flesh, we have the assurance that God and man are forever connected in one great unity."

In the second week of the School Dr. W. F. Adeny (Congregational) gave a course of lectures on the development of the doctrine of Christians in regard to the person of Christ. He pointed out that "while the second century asked how He is to be understood in Himself, the third and fourth centuries dealt with the question of His relation to God, thus developing the doctrine of the Trinity, and the fifth and sixth centuries endeavored more particularly to fathom His relation to man." He pointed out that in the age immediately following the passing off the scene of the apostles the "writers wrote practically of practical things." As typical of their time he mentioned Ignatius "who fought the idea that Christ was not a real man, but a phantom appearance of God, and Hermas, a layman of Rome, whose 'Shepherd' is the 'Pilgrim's Progress' of the early Church." By some critics Hermas is thought to have been an Adoptionist, who "maintained that Christ was born simply a man, and in response to his life God met him, and poured more and more of divine life into him." The main body of the Church held to the views of Irenæus and others, and the "adoptionist" view was pronounced "heretical." It was finally decided that Christ "was both Divine and human, and yet one being only." In subsequent lectures Dr. Adeny dealt with Justin Martyr, with Clement of Alexandria, and with the development of the Greek Logos-doctrine into the doctrine of the Trinity as held by the Church to this day.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

A FRIEND AT THE NORTHFIELD STUDENT CONFERENCE.

In the latter part of the Sixth month, Northfield, Massachusetts, is the gathering place for about seven hundred and fifty college men, who come from most of the Eastern institutions of learning to attend the annual conference of the Intercollegiate Young Men's Christian Association. The buildings of the Northfield Seminary for Girls are placed at their disposal, through the kindness of Dwight L. Moody, while he lived, and, now, of his successors in charge of the school. This, with the addition of fifty or sixty tents, furnishes sufficient sleeping accommodations; the dining-rooms of the school are amply large; a level meadow can be fitted into an impromptu athletic field, and the auditorium will easily seat the whole conference and its visitors. The grounds are so situated on the slope of the Connecticut river valley that the view, from some of the dormitories, especially, is very pleasing; and there are several points within walking distance from which one can see quite a distance along the river in either direction.

In the morning the conference breaks up into sections for discussion over the work of the Associations in their colleges, and again into Bible or mission study classes, which aim either to train leaders for the Bible and mission study work of the Association; or to awaken an interest in the subject. The last session of the morning brings the entire conference together to listen to an address on a religious topic. Recreation is the order of the day during the afternoon, although the students find time then for interviews either with the leaders among themselves or with the teachers and speakers whom the conference brings together. The evening is occupied by the Round Top meetings, to which reference will be made later, and by another address in the auditorium. Those of us who were Friends (there were five from the University of Pennsylvania and several from Haverford, representing both branches of the Society), were much interested to hear Campbell Morgan say at the start of one of his addresses, that he had planned his talk for the evening very carefully, but as he came to the platform, he had felt a strong leading to speak along another line, and that he proposed to do so. The talk which he then gave was considered by many to be the strongest that they had heard.

The ten days that a college student spends at Northfield, in almost every case, stand out as an exceptionally bright spot in his life. They are a ten days to be remembered. One of the several things which help to give the conference this characteristic is the kind of young men with whom the student finds himself associated. During the winter in college, and especially in a large university, he meets a cosmopolitan crowd, those who love fun and hate their work, and those who live a strenuous life of both fun and work, and those who appear to hate fun and love work. He meets the religious man, the irreligious and the unreligious. But at Northfield he discovers that his companions are picked men. The reason is that each college tries to get as large a delegation as possible. Any one can go who desires, and the men who are attracted by the advertising are those who love fun and yet are deeply interested in the spiritual side of their lives. Thus one meets delightful companions. College jealousy and over-intense rivalry disappear in company with denominational lines in their religion, and the whole host of young men seem to be one large family of Christian brothers. Everything is cordiality and good feeling. Everywhere good fellowship is to be found, and between men of the same delegation it is most intimate. This is one notable feature of the conference, for it reveals many an old friend in a new light. You may have known him because you came together in athletics or in studying, but at Northfield one learns to love his friends the more because he sees, for the first time, perhaps, how deeply the love of God has penetrated into their hearts. A person's friendships are an essential part of his life, and hence Northfield is particularly valuable because it not only brings one in contact with men from other colleges whom he cannot but admire and pattern after, but it gives a new strength and vigor to his friendship with his own college-mates.

There is another feature of the conference which helps to make the time spent there stand out vividly in a student's life, and that is, the character of the pastime and recreation which he finds there. It is good, sound, healthy enjoyment. There is nothing artificial, nothing unnatural, nothing coarse or sensual. The afternoons are spent at such games as baseball, tennis or golf. Regular tournaments are played in each of these sports, and are marked by a spirit of fairness and good sportsmanship. There are, of course, some few fellows who will take an unfair advantage, but it is much more common to find someone running the risk of losing in order that his opponent might be justly treated. Many spend the afternoons in walking about the country enjoying the natural beauty of the roads and streams or the views from the top of the mountains. In the evenings after everything is done for the day, the various college delegations sit out under the trees or parade around, each singing its songs and giving its cheers for the other colleges. The good times which one has there are object lessons, nay, there are almost ideals, which each student can hold up before him in the future.

The third characteristic of the conference, and the one which counts the most in making those ten days notable is the soundness, the strength, the power of the religious spirit which pervades the whole conference. It makes a profound impression on every student. To some it is a revelation of what religion really is, and to others it gives depth and strength to an already growing spiritual life. Campbell Morgan, in the talk already mentioned, gave utterance to a sentence which aptly describes the condition of the average student at Northfield. Referring to the "rich young ruler" of the Gospels, he said that a man, possessed by nature of a fine temperament and preserved from sin by careful training, comes to a place in his development where he needs Life, and this is just the work which Northfield does. It stirs up life, spiritual life, or if that be already aroused, it fosters and cherishes the growing plant.

In this way it is a fitting climax to the work which the Christian Associations do in our colleges during the year, endeavoring to increase and build up the religious life and spirit of their institution, by means of their Bible classes and meetings. Their work, while bearing much good fruit, is never more than partially successful. It needs Northfield, it needs a clear common-sense presentation of what religion is and what it means, and it needs the ten days' companionship with men who are making every effort to live in close and ever closer fellowship with their Heavenly Father. This completes the year's work for what a student's friends have not been able to make plain to him, is shown clearly, either by these same friends or by some speaker or, as is more often the case, by direct revelation of God. Everyone who goes away from Northfield has a dearer, stronger and more abiding conception of religion and its place in life. The devotional side of our colleges to-day is no small thing when a man like John R. Mott, who has visited and studied religious conditions in all parts of the world, says that a larger percentage of college students are engaged in voluntary, systematic and devotional Bible study than is the case in any other walk of life. Of the influences exerted to make spiritual life in the colleges what it is, Northfield from what has been said is plainly one of the greatest.

The source of this power and influence is the close communion between so many souls and God. Much is due to the speakers, the Bible class teachers, or the managers, but the power of the place would be absent, were it not for the effort which every one makes to come into more intimate fellowship with God. It is this power, this healthy, enduring religious tone, which makes Northfield so dear to the hearts of many students.

A Friend at this conference finds himself on exactly the same footing as an other person and there is nothing but his own inward thoughts to remind him that he is a Friend. There were, however, certain talks which impressed the writer as being particularly applicable to the condition of the Society at the present time. They were not given in the platform addresses, which pertain rather to the personal side of religion, or in the Bible classes and conferences for they have to do with next year's work at college; but in the Life Work meeting, held every evening in the open air on Round Top, the knoll on which Moody is buried. Addresses were given which made plain the opportunities in the world of to-day for work by Christians, and which pointed out where it would count for the most. Putting aside the need for ministers and for Christian men in business and in the professions the greatest opportunities seemed to be along two kindred lines, work for the improvement, physically, intellectually, and spiritually of the "other half" in our great cities, and work for the improvement, sometimes spiritually only, and sometimes along all three lines, of the heathens in other lands. The problems of our cities alone are something immense. Holding as they do almost the balance of power in the country, with their great numbers of incoming foreigners, with their large classes of laboring men and women whom the church does not reach and with their peculiarly irresistible temptations, our cities must have time, attention, money and energy devoted to uplifting them, ere they become a danger and menace to the country's welfare. Much work is being done in this direction by societies and some by churches, but it is only fairly begun. The Friends in England have been engaged for some years in this very kind of work, and the good influence which they wield among the working classes is almost beyond estimate. The query which arose in the writer's mind as he listened to these talks is this: Why are Friends not engaged in this work much more extensively? Some few Friends by their own efforts, assisted only by a few, conduct a city mission on Beach Street in Philadelphia, but what else is being done in this work, which as some men say, holds the key to the labor problem, to the health problem, to the problem of the criminal? The work consists in giving the poor better opportunities for physical development, in giving them amusements and recreation of the higher type, in teaching and doctoring them, and finally of building up in them a vigorous religious life by starting them to uplift their brothers and sisters. Is not this exactly the kind of work which a religious organization ought to do?

If our religion is something more than an indulgence or a luxury, if it is sincere, faithful and a part of our very life, if, in a word, we love God, what can be more pleasant, more natural and more irresistible than doing the work which He desires us to do? "Feed my sheep" was Jesus' final injunction to Peter. "Pure religion and undefiled is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction." Surely a religious society ought to be most eager to do this very thing, and further, if it is sincere, it should desire not to feed a few sheep only but to feed as many as it possibly can. Its efforts and energy and resources should count for the most. Is there any work which is more philanthropic than that of uplifting the poor of our cities and thus helping to solve the drink problem, the labor problem and the rest of the dangers which confront us? And if this work is so eminently philanthropic, why does not our Yearly Meeting's Philanthropic Committee give it a large share of its attention? These and similar ones in connection with the work in other lands are the queries which arose in the writer's mind and reminded him that he was "A Friend at the Northfield Student Conference."

GEORGE A. WALTON.

THE IREDELLS AND EARLY FRIENDS.

A letter from J. W. Iredell, Jr., of Cincinnati, Ohio, to the Hathoro Spirit, published at Hathoro, Pa.

I HAVE received from my father, Robert Iredell, of Norristown, now in his 94th year, a copy of your publication of January 24th, containing a very interesting account of the early history of the settlement of Horsham by Edward Matthews. I desire to correct the statement that "Thomas Iredell came from Horsham, in Sussex, old England, etc.," which is a mistake contained in Mr. Buck's excellent history of Eastern Pennsylvania.

Thomas Iredell, son of Robert and Ellinore Jackson Iredell, was born and baptized at Rigg Bank, Cumberland, Twelfth month, 1676. He married Rebeckah Williams, Third month 9th, 1705, at the Friends' Meeting House, corner of Second and Market Streets, Philadelphia. He died First month, 1727, at Horsham. He was the only member of the English family who became a Friend. Another evidence that Thomas Iredell did not come from Sussex is the certificate he brought with him—a very unique piece of writing—which reads as follows:

"CERTIFICATE OF THOMAS IREDELL TO FRIENDS' MEETING AT PHILADELPHIA.

"From our monthly meeting upon Pardsay Cragg, in Cumberland, ye 27th of 6th month, 1700, to Friends in Pennsylvania or other parts of America. Dear friends and brethren—ye tender salutations of our dearest love of truth always continues and reaches forth to you. The account we give you is in behalf of a young man, ye bearer hereof, Thomas Iredell, who this day has laid before us transporting of himself into Pennsylvania requesting our certificate along with him.

"We therefore certify to all where he may come, that he has of late years come frequently amongst Friends, his carriage appears to be sober and truth-like, those who know him best give no other account but well. He comes with the consent of his mother, though not a Friend, and inquiry has been made as to his clearness in relation to marriage, but nothing appears to ye contrary. We need not further enlarge, but subscribe ourselves your friends and brethren, in behalf of the aforesaid meeting.

Thomas Tiffin	James Dickinson
John Wilson	Josias Ritson
John Burnyeat	Thomas Watson
William Dixon	William Bonch
John Nolson

"Copied from the records of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, Philadelphia, by Robert Iredell, July 12th, 1899, in his 90th year."

I have a copy of an account of "A Famous Loweswater Trial 300 years ago," published in the "Cumberland Times," Cockermonth, England, March 18th, 1899, from which I quote: "The oldest registers, like those of the adjoining parish of Lorton, are the earliest in Cumberland, and a perusal of the entries shows that it was no idle boast of George Iredell, one of the plaintiffs, who was 80 years of age at the date of the trial, 1597, when he said that he and his forefathers had held their places time out of mind." There were 38 plaintiffs (five Iredells) fighting for title to property they had occupied for more than 100 years, and they won their suit.

When in England last summer, I visited the old home of Red How, Loweswater, which is still owned and occupied by a member of the family. Above one of the windows I noticed that 1587, and above the fireplace in the dining-room (an addition to the original building), was cut "T. I., 1692." I presume that inscription suggested to Thomas Iredell the idea of drilling "T. I." on the iron knocker on the front door of his home in Horsham.

The country of Cumberland is beautiful and reminded me of Eastern Pennsylvania. I visited Pardshaw Cragg, now called Pardshaw Cragg. This locality was the principal meeting place of the Friends, and undoubtedly some most extraordinary addresses have been delivered at one time and another from the limestone rock on the Cragg which to the present day bears the name of "Fox's Pulpit." The Cragg is centrally situated for the parishes of Loweswater, Lorton, Embleton, etc., and it may have been due to this fact and to the point of advantage the Cragg offered for seeing who approached the meetings, that the place came to be regarded as the chief rendezvous of the Friends in the district. The erection of meeting houses at Eaglesfield in 1711, and at Pardshaw Hall in 1728, also goes to show that these places were the most convenient for those desirous of attending the meetings. When Fox first began preaching in Pardshaw district one of his earliest converts was a native of Loweswater, John Burnyeat (who signed Thomas Iredell's certificate), who became one of Fox's most zealous and faithful workers. He became a preacher and had some very exciting experiences. He came to America with George Fox in 1669, visiting in Maryland, New Jersey and New England.

June 17th, 1857, Pardshaw Cragg was the scene of one of the largest temperance gatherings ever held in the district. That was the occasion of a great demonstration of temperate bodies of various kinds. The celebrated orator, Neal Dow, was the principal speaker, and the chairman was Sir Wilfrid Lawson's father. Thousands of people of every grade of life, hailing from all parts of the country were there. The provisions provided were inadequate to meet the unexpected demand, with the result that hungry and thirsty visitors besieged the public houses, farm and cottages in vast numbers, and consumed everything they could find, and it is said that there were more persons under the influence of liquor—very much so—than was ever known in that part of England, showing that Dow's influence was only temporary.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

MANSFIELD, N. J.—The Mansfield Young Friends' Association met Eighth month 8th, at the home of Lewis Taylor, with thirty in attendance. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The evening program opened by the reading of the Discipline by Mary L. Boune on "Days and Times." Mary E. Harvey favored us with Current Topics. Franklin S. Zellely, in answer to the question: "How did the custom of Friends' not removing their hats in meeting and in the presence of ladies originate: And should we adhere to it?" said, when Friends' meetings were first established there were few houses, worship being mostly in the open air or any rude structure; therefore it was not necessary to remove the hat. Friends do not think it a duty to do as other societies. It is not wrong to adhere to the ways of the old friends, but we do not want to go back to the custom of keeping the hat on. In olden times the meeting-houses were poorly heated and this waiting on the Lord in a cold house was a sacrifice, and more pleasant with the hats on; now they are heated and the hat can be removed. Our grandfathers thought dress was religion and by their dress they were known. In court, Friends are not forced to remove their hats. Friends honor no man, only God. Thomas B. Harvey said he thought it best to obey the dictates of your conscience, take your hat off if you feel right in doing so, but not because your neighbors do.

A reading was given by Sara Biddle, entitled "In Prison and Palace." Amy H. Taylor read, "What have we done to-day?" Charlotte Deacon recited "An Able Financier."

Adjourned to meet at Franklin S. Zellely's on Ninth month 5th. MARY E. HARVEY, Sec'y.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

An old-fashioned "Quilting Bee" was held at Camp Sagasta Weekee, the summer home of Elizabeth M. Bunting and Jeannie R. B. Moore, Buck Hill Falls, Pa., Eighth month 4th 1903. The following friends assisted in making the quilt, which is to be auctioned off for the benefit of Martha Schofield's School, at Aiken, South Carolina: Martha Schofield, Priscilla T. Lippincott, Susan W. Lippincott, Thomas C. Lippincott, Anna T. Speakman, Anna Hillborn, Sarah S. Bunting, Susan Valentine, Anna T. Matthews, Henry Gathrop, Ellwood B. Moore, E. L. (Mabel) Brooks, Matilda E. Janney, Annie Cooper Lippincott, Annie F. M. Pitcher, Mary Travilla, Rachel Hillborn, Annie H. Bunting, Emily N. Valentine, Jane W. Carpenter, Jane P. Grahame, Franklin T. Carpenter, E. Bunting Moore, Ralph J. Herkimer, Robert S. Lebeaux.

A member of the committee in charge of Abington

Quarterly Meeting Friends' Home calls our attention to the fact that it is not quite correct, as stated in the report of Abington Quarterly Meeting in our last issue, that the endowment funds of the Home are in the hands of the Norristown Trust Company. The committee merely rents from the Trust Company a box in its vaults, the Trustees of the Home being themselves solely responsible for all the funds of the Home.

Friends expecting to attend the Central Committee Conference and Ohio Yearly Meeting, at Salem, Ohio, should buy single-trip tickets to Salem, paying the regular fare and getting a certificate from the agent. By presenting these certificates at Salem a one-third reduction can be obtained on the return fare.

JOHN WILLIAM HUTCHINSON.

Elizabeth Powell Bond, whose letter from the Woodbrooke Summer School appears in another column, is greatly enjoying her stay among the English Friends. She expects to sail for New York by the St. Louis on the 29th.

R. Grant Bennett, of the George School, has resigned his position there, having been appointed to a similar one in the New York City Commercial High School.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE CARDINAL FLOWER.

BESIDE the limpid, babbling stream,

Close sheltered in the wood,

'Mid mosses, ferns and loamy earth,

A near the birch the plant has birth,

In nature's solitude.

Sequestered, 'tis a summer dream
Of shade—enchanted spot; here grows,

Shut from the glaring light,

The kingliest flower of wood or fen,

In richer hue than brush or pen

Essays to touch aright.

The cardinal its grandeur shows

To those who seek for floral wealth

And to the passer-by.

A challenge is its gaudy hue,

As well its wondrous hiding, too,

To every seeing eye

And every hand that takes by stealth.

M. ALICE BROWN.

BLIND.

THIS much I know. Before the sky grew dark,

When died the sunlight like a candle blown,

And left my soul to strain and grope and hark,

A captive locked in some black tower alone;

Before the curtain fell that shut me out

From all I had been—all I hoped to be—

There was a glad green world, a joyous shout

Of strong winds blowing o'er a laughing sea;

And there were green-gold fields of heading wheat,

That ran and rippled in the passing breeze;

And there were frail pink roses, wild and sweet;

And there were mist-blue hills and tossing trees;

And over all, a brooding heaven blue,

Where martins circled in the sunset light,

And where the crying kildieers flashed and flew,

And great stars shot their glory through the night.

All this I know. And for the power divine

To dream such pictures on the midnight walls

Of this unwindowed prison tomb of mine,

I bless the Hand from which the blessing falls.

I am content, O God, content to know

The sky still shines above my sightless eyes;

That though my feet down darkened pathways go,

Unseen, the Brightness round about me lies.

—Marion Warner Wildman, in Harper's Magazine.

DEAR HANDS.

ROUGHENED and worn with ceaseless toil and care,

No perfumed grace, no dainty skill, had these;

They earned for whiter hands a jeweled ease,

And kept the scars unlovely for their share.

Patient and slow they had the will to bear

The whole world's burdens, but no power to seize

The flying joys of life, the gifts that please,

The gold and gems that others find so fair.

Dear hands, where bridal jewel never shone,

Whereon no lover's kiss was ever pressed,

Crossed in unwonted quiet on the breast,

I see, through tears, your glory newly won,

The golden circlet of life's work well done,

Set with the shining pearl of perfect rest.

—Susan Marr Spaulding, in Woman's Journal.

WOMEN WORKERS.

THE thirty-third annual report of the Massachusetts Bureau of the Statistics of Labor indulges in some discriminating observations on a large difference which distinguishes the male from the female worker. The idea is that the man works because he must. He is obliged to toil at some employment to secure means of subsistence for himself, and, in case of his being married, for his wife and children. If single, he often has parents or others who look to him for support, and, if he is unwilling to be a charge on the public, or a criminal, he works. On the other hand, there are two reasons why a woman works. Sometimes she is obliged to support herself, being entirely dependent upon her own efforts; some wives are working because an invalid husband cannot, or a worthless husband will not; others work to help out a livelihood for themselves and family; widows who are dependent and have a family of children to provide for also work because they must, and many young girls work because their small earnings are, needed to help take care of the old folks, or younger brothers and sisters. This class of females is obliged to work, but there is another class upon whom no such obligation rests.

They work not because of the need, but because they desire to add to their incomes and purchase such luxuries as the family purse will not allow. Persons of this class are often a hindrance in the matter of wages; they are willing to work for small pay, and on this account they prevent the financial improvement of the female wage-earning class, as a whole. No manufacturer who employs this class fears a strike, because, as a rule, its members do not belong to trades unions, and there are so many who are willing to accept small pay that the supply exceeds the demand.

This class, no doubt, has brought about the great increase in the employment of women. They represent an element upon which the employer can always draw for supply. They readily adapt themselves to conditions, and, if they cannot get $10 a week, will take $5. Probably many have entered into the employments previously filled by men from a laudable desire for mental development, financial gain and social progress, and it is undoubtedly true that the large majority has entered the ranks of industrial workers in order to make an honorable living.

Working in factories and offices gives women a large degree of independence which they do not enjoy in domestic service, which is shunned as much as possible. Commercial employment is particularly in harmony with the ideas that have grown up with the emancipation of women from restraints of the home and family, and there is no doubt that this idea is going to be immensely developed in the social and industrial system of the future.—[New Orleans Picayune.]

METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR SEVENTH MONTH, 1903.

Mean barometer,	29.920
Highest barometer during the month, 5th,	30.170
Lowest barometer during the month, 18th,	29.610
Mean temperature,	76.6
Highest temperature during the month, 10th,	97
Lowest temperature during the month, 28th,	55.8
Mean of maximum temperatures,	85.8
Mean of minimum temperatures,	67.4
Greatest daily range of temperature, 25th,	26
Least daily range of temperature, 13th, 18th,	7
Mean daily range of temperature,	18.3
Mean temperature of the Dew Point,	62.4
Mean relative humidity, per cent.,	68.2
Total precipitation, rain, inches,	5.52
Greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours, 2.76 inches of rain, on the 18th.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more precipitation, 15.
Number of clear days 16, fair days 10, cloudy days 5.
Prevailing direction of the wind from southwest.
Thunder storms on 3d, 11th, 12th, 18th, 22d, 26th, 29th, 30th.
Hail on the 22d.

SENSIBLE TEMPERATURE DATA.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 74.5° on 30th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 56° on 28th.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 66.1°.
Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 74° on 10th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 55° on 15th.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 66.7°.
Mean of wet bulb thermometer for this month, 66.4°.

NOTE.—The means of the daily maximum and minimum temperatures, 85.8° and 67.4° respectively, give a monthly mean of 76.6°, which is 0.2° below the normal, and 0.6° above the corresponding month in 1902.

The total amount of precipitation for the month, 5.52 inches, is 1.16 inches more than the normal, and 1.17 inches more than fell during Seventh month, 1902.

An unusually heavy fall of rain on the 18th, between 5 p. m. and 5.45 p. m. about 2 inches in depth fell.

During the thunderstorm on the 22d inst., there was a heavy fall of large hail for 5 minutes from 1.30 p. m. to 1.35 p. m. Many of the hail stones were as large as walnuts, most of them about the size and appearance of tar camphor balls; many resembled an eye, white outside with a dark center. Much damage was done to plants and breaking glass of greenhouses.

JOHN COMLY, Observer.

Centennial Avenue, Philadelphia, Seventh month 31st.

Bridge-whist versus Books.

In England the present depression in the book trade, according to "one of the most astute booksellers in London," is "directly and entirely caused by 'Bridge.'" Commenting on this, The Outlook (London), says:

"A stock of five hundred packs of playing-cards is more easily sold than two copies of any book. . . . The book-shops remain empty. The most ardent advertisements of publishers fail to incite interest in books among a card-playing and card-ridden public. . . . Some six years ago cycling was an equally formidable rival and produced a disastrous stagnation in book-selling. As a craze it ended within three years. Will bridge retain its hold for a longer period? Will it be followed by some new form of amusement also detrimental to reading? Serious issues of the effect on national life and character of the apparent abandonment of reading as a recreation could be raised and abundantly argued.

"Is it entirely a chimera to hope that in some form or other there may soon arise in the ever-changing taste of a restless public, thirsty for amusement, a craze for things literary—some more stimulating fashion than the suburban 'book teas'—something more informing than the gussing-gymkhanas or competitions? Just some little craze for finding out and learning to appreciate what is good in letters? Some even partial recognition of the brain and heart past and present-day writers have spent in the making of books? It might be only a quickly passing phase; but it would leave a more valuable result than the accomplishment of a nice distinction in the declaration of 'No trumps.'"—[Literary Digest.]

Toast-Drinking in Water.

SOME officers of the Imperial forces, who were consistent total abstainers, caused inquiry to be made of King Edward recently, as to whether his Majesty would regard the drinking of his health in pure water as equivalent to the drinking of it in wine. King Edward at once and emphatically let it be known that where persons preferred to drink his health in water, it would be reckoned precisely equivalent to the drinking of it in wine. That declaration of the King was an instance of his graceful and gracious tact, which will do not a little in an incidental way to give countenance and support to total abstinence principles in the army and navy, as well as to promote temperance practices in social functions. And, by the way, the King's son-in-law, the Duke of Fife, remarked, when making an address at a public gathering recently, that he was a total abstainer, and had been for four years past, not because he had been ordered to abstain, but because he believed it to be best for him.—[Christian Guardian, Toronto.]

Miracles.

It is one of the most general and one of the most stupid of human errors to confound the unusual and the wonderful. We are blind to marvels which we may see at any time; only unusual and infrequently visible things arouse our wonder. Yet, of course, as a matter of fact the most extraordinary marvels are those constantly before our eyes. The race is still superstitious; it wants prodigies, special providences, miracles—as if there were anything more prodigious, divine, miraculous, than the orderly course of nature. The highest order of mind finds no wonders to compare with those displayed in the continuous, tranquil operation of the perpetual providence. It is impressed not so much by the strange portent as by the familiar process; not by what is unusual, but by what is universal; not by the lawless meteor, but by the quiet stars. Probably most of us, before it has gone, will have gazed at the comet and have been more or less thrilled. What is it beside the composed and beneficent scene into which it has burst, or beside the suns arising on each day, the never failing flow of rivers to the sea, or the perennial miracle that brings the early and the later rain and gives the seedtime its harvest?—[Philadelphia Ledger.]

The President's Name.

ALTHOUGH President Roosevelt has been nearly two years in the White House his name is still pronounced by the people in a variety of ways, Robert B. Roosevelt, a relative of the President, gives the following plain directions for the correct pronunciation of their Dutch patronymic.

"In English, when we try to distinguish the long from the short 'o' we get into trouble. In Dutch they do not.

The double 'o' is simply a long 'o'. The word 'Roos' means rose, and is pronounced in identically the same way under all circumstances and in all combinations. So the first syllable of the President's name is 'Rose,' pure and simple. But the following 'e' like the short German 'e' or like the silent French 'e,' when read in poetry is slightly aspirated. An English analogy is the word 'the.' It is not pronounced at all as it is spelt, not like 'thee,' but with a sort of 'th' and a breath stopped by the tongue on the teeth. So the name is 'Rose-(uh)-velt.'

CURRENT EVENTS.

JOSEPH PULITZER, of the New York World, has provided $2,000,000 to establish a school of journalism in connection with Columbia University, and it is reported that Murat Halstead of Cincinnati is to be at the head of it. A building is to be erected on Morningside Heights, New York, at a cost of $500,000. It is hoped that the school may be opened in 1904. An advisory board nominated by the donor, includes the President of Columbia, Whitelaw Reid, John Hay, Andrew D. White, Victor F. Lawson, of Chicago; General Charles H. Taylor, Sr., of Boston; Charles W. Eliot, President of Harvard University. The course of study, as suggested by President Eliot, is to include thorough training in written English, in logic, in the elements of economics and of political science, in the history of the United States and the contemporary history of Europe, instruction in newspaper administration, newspaper manufacture, the law and the ethics of journalism, the history of the press and related subjects. Candidates will be admitted upon an examination as to good character and intelligence, but previous collegiate courses will not be required. If, at the end of three years, the school is in successful operation, Joseph Pulitzer will give an additional $1,000,000.

THE failure of the Conciliation Board of the Anthracite miners and operators to agree on any of the great grievances and the delay in the adjustment of many of the minor complaints caused great dissatisfaction among the mine workers, though no general discontent of a serious character. The officers of the United Mine Workers appealed to Judge Gray to have the Strike Commission re-assemble and were very much disappointed when they learned that this could not be done. Their only hope then was in the empire to be appointed by Judge Gray to adjudicate all questions which the Board of Conciliation had failed to agree upon. Judge Gray made an admirable appointment in Carroll D. Wright, whom the men feel to be a friend of labor and in whose fairness the operators have the fullest confidence. The work of the Board even with the assistance of Carroll D. Wright will not be easy, but every one has confidence that if any body can bring about a settlement he can.

RUSSIA has established a viceroyalty in the far East, comprising the Amur district and the Kwan-Tung Province. Vice-Admiral Alexieff has been appointed Viceroy with supreme authority in all the branches of the civil administration. This is considered to be a triumph of M. De Witte, the Russian Finance Minister, over General Kuropatkin, Minister of War, and that it is a significant step toward the settlement of the existing differences both with China and Japan. The appointment has caused satisfaction as marking the beginning of a new era of prosperity in the Amur Territory and Kwan-Tung Province.

THE United Protective League of Labor is a recently organized "political party" which is taking steps to establish state and municipal branches throughout the country. Among its objects are the concentration of the labor vote so that its power may be felt in national, State, municipal or county elections; the promoting of the interests of organized labor; the founding of libraries and reading rooms for workmen; the aiding of the destitute, and the elimination of class hatreds.

MEMBERS of the new board of representatives of the building trades of New York and vicinity, composed of delegates of those unions which have agreed on the joint plan of arbitration, were heartily recognized by the board of governors of the Building Trades Employers' Association at the Building Trades' Club on the evening of the 14th. The delegates, representing more than 50,000 workers, shook hands with the employers and all expressed the hope that arbitration had come to stay, and strikes and lockouts would be things of the past.

NEWS NOTES.

THE new president of the United States Steel Corporation is to receive a salary of $75,000 a year.

THE Grand Jury at Danville, Illinois, indicted 19 of the lynchers on the 13th, and they are under arrest.

"DOLLAR wheat" was seen on 'change in Minneapolis on the 14th for the first time since the Leiter "corner" in 1898.

WORD comes that there is great improvement in the treatment of Jews in Bessarabia and that it is ascribed to the agitation of the foreign press.

A HITHERTO obsolete law against selling the class of literature known as "dime novels" to minors is being rigorously enforced in Chicago.

PARLIAMENT was prorogued by the King on the 14th. The impression is very general that the present government is likely to be dissolved in the autumn.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made for holding the Olympic Games in 1904 at St. Louis, they having been held for the first time at Athens in 1896, and in 1900 at Paris.

VICE-ADMIRAL CERVERA, who surrendered to the American fleet off Santiago de Cuba, has resigned the post of Chief of Staff of the Navy, to which he was appointed in 1902.

TOLSTOI'S peace pamphlet, "Thou Shalt Not Kill," has been seized and suppressed by the German police on the ground that its references to the Emperor are high treason.

PRACTICALLY all the mines in the Cripple Creek, Col., district were closed in consequence of a strike on the 10th. 2,700 men struck for an eight-hour day and the union scale.

THE German Lutherans of Ohio having been offered Lima College, valued at $50,000, refused, because they do not believe it right for them to encourage the coeducation of the sexes.

THE statement is made that some 6,000,000 of the 10,000,000 cotton spindles in New England are idle on account of the "corner" in cotton and the high prices established.

THE entire Servian ministry has resigned, they having stood for the dismissal of all State officials who enjoyed the confidence of the late King Alexander. A new cabinet has been formed.

MOST of the troops have been withdrawn from Jackson, Kentucky, and it is reported that the county (Breathitt) which has been for some time greatly disturbed with feud troubles is now quiet.

THE National Shorthand Reporters' Association on the 22d unveil a memorial tablet over the grave of Thomas Lloyd, the "father of American shorthand reporting," at the Church of St. Augustine in Philadelphia.

MOST of the strikers of Odessa have returned to work, in some instances the wages having been increased, in others the working day having been shortened. The military have been withdrawn. Nearly 400 strikers are serving terms in prison.

THE second yearly convention of the United Orthodox Rabbis Association of America met in Philadelphia on the 16th. Questions considered were Religious Education, Divorce, Jewish Secular High Schools, Sabbath Observance, Religious Rites.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

8TH MO. 22 (SEVENTH-DAY).—PELHAM Half-Yearly Meeting, at Yarmouth, Ontario. Ministers and Elders day before at 3 p. m.

8TH MO. 22 (SEVENTH-DAY).—AN ANNUAL all-day meeting of the Philanthropic Conference of Western Quarterly Meeting at London Grove.

8TH MO. 23 (FIRST-DAY).—THE VISITING Committee of Salem Quarterly Meeting will attend the meeting at Woodstown, N. J., at 10.30 a. m.

8TH MO. 23 (FIRST-DAY).—THE FRIENDS of White Plains will hold their next meeting at 11 a. m., 35 Greenridge Avenue. All friends are welcome.

8TH MO. 23 (FIRST-DAY).—JOSEPH Powell, of Darby, will attend Ambler Friends' Meeting, at 10.30 a. m.

8TH MO. 23 (FIRST-DAY).—HOPEWELL, Va., Young Friends' Association, at 3 p. m.

8TH MO. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—FRIENDS' Flower and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Avenue, at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

8TH MO. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—WARRINGTON Quarterly Meeting, at Menallen, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m.

8TH MO. 24 (SECOND-DAY).—INDIANA Yearly Meeting, Richmond, Indiana. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 2 p. m. In order that comfortable homes may be provided for those that have a prospect of attending, they are requested to send their names to Esther S. Wallace, 230 South 12th Street, Richmond, Ind.

THE JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE SEVERAL Yearly Meetings for Work among Isolated Members will meet between the sessions of Indiana Yearly Meeting.

8TH MO. 26 (FOURTH-DAY).—SOUTHERN Quarterly Meeting, at Third Haven (Easton, Md.), at 10 a. m. Meeting of Ministers and Elders, same day, at 9.15 a. m.

8TH MO. 26 (FOURTH-DAY).—THE 37TH Anniversary of the Universal Peace Union will begin in Peace Grove, Mystic, Conn., continuing four days. Among the speakers announced are Edward H. Magill, Benjamin F. Trueblood, Henry W. Wilbur, David Henry Wright and Baroness Von Suttner. The steamer for Stonington leaving New York on the evening of the 25th will arrive at the Grove in time for the opening.

ARMSTRONG & McELVY
Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMANN
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-GRAMBERS
Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK
Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR
Cincinnati.
ECHESTEIN
ATLANTIC
BRADLEY
BROOKLYN
New York.
JEWETT
ULSTER
UNION
SOUTHERN Chicago.
SHIPMAN
COLLIER
MISSOURI
St. Louis.
RED SEAL
SOUTHERN
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO
Philadelphia.
MORLEY
Cleveland.
SALEM
Salem, Mass.
CORNELL
Buffalo.
KENTUCKY
Louisville.

USE Pure White Lead and Pure Linseed Oil and you will know exactly what you are getting—absolutely the best and most economical paint in existence. Employ a responsible, practical painter to apply it and the result will be satisfactory.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

8TH MO. 27 (FIFTH-DAY).—BUCKS Quarterly Meeting, at Falls, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 11 a. m.

8TH MO. 28 (SIXTH-DAY).—NOTTINGHAM Quarterly Meeting, at East Nottingham, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

8TH MO. 28 (SIXTH-DAY).—MEETING OF Central Committee of Friends' General Conference at Salem, O., beginning at 9 a. m., and continuing through Seventh-day.

Friends expecting to attend are requested to communicate with Leona M. Whinery, Star No. 1, Salem, Ohio, stating whether they wish to be located near the meeting-house or car line and other particulars; the local committees will arrange for boarding places. It is hoped that those who attend can remain for the sessions of Ohio Yearly Meeting, and information as to this should be given in applying for accommodation.

8TH MO. 31 (SECOND-DAY).—OHIO Yearly Meeting, at Salem, Ohio, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding.

THE REPORTS OF ASBURY PARK Conference have been sent to the Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race Streets, a package for each monthly meeting belonging to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Correspondents are requested to call for them or to give directions concerning their shipment.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS IRON FENCING FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co. 809 Master Street, Philad'a, Pa.

The Souls of Black Folk

By W. E. B. DuBois

A REMARKABLE BOOK that is provoking much discussion because of the wonderful eloquence with which the author pleads for right and justice to his people. In these days of increasing agitation over the "negro problem" this passionate human document can neither be overlooked nor ignored. Aside from its remarkable presentation of facts it holds the reader—prejudiced or not—by its fascination of style and overpowering pathos.

Some of the Chapter Headings follow:
OF OUR SPIRITUAL STRIVINGS.
OF THE DAWN OF FREEDOM.
OF MR. WASHINGTON AND OTHERS.
OF THE MEANING OF PROGRESS.
OF THE TRAINING OF BLACK MEN.
OF THE BLACK BELT.
OF THE SONS OF MASTER AND MAN.
OF THE FAITH OF THE FATHERS.
OF THE PASSING OF THE FIRST-BORN.
OF ALEXANDER CRUMMELL.
OF THE COMING OF JOHN.
OF THE SORROW SONGS.

3d Edition $1.20 net Published by
A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patronage give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. * Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. * A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

* All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

JUST PUBLISHED

Views and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hillborn, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia. 32 pages, paper. 5c. per dozen 50c

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
Philadelphia, Pa.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CYRUS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 524 1/2 Media St., Philadelphia

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)

REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER

The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,

1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEORGE C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: September 4th and 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a.m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a.m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chapter will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

REDUCED RATES TO GRANGERS' PICNIC AT WILLIAMS' GROVE, VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

For the Thirtieth Annual Inter-State Grange Picnic Exhibition, to be held at Williams' Grove, Pa., August 24th to 29th, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets from August 21st to 29th, inclusive, good to return until September 1st, inclusive, at reduced rates, from all stations on its lines in the State of Pennsylvania.

There will be an elaborate display of farm machinery in actual operation during the exhibition, and addresses will be delivered by well-known agricultural speakers.

For information in regard to train service and specific rates applications should be made to ticket agents.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

CART HORSE'S DIARY FOR A DAY.

THURSDAY, JULY 9.—Was hitched early this morning. That place where my hip bone has been threatening to puncture my skin was worse. It was hard for me to get down town at all over the cobbles. Made up my mind I'd balk earlier to-day, so as to get some pity all the sooner. At 10.30 my chance came. I was dragging a little cart load of coal along Maryland avenue close to the entrance to the Union Station covered walkway. We were on the street car tracks. A lot of women were on the car just behind us, and I stopped. Results, good driver began to jerk my mouth and beat me in the face, and a whole swarm of women got off of the car and came around me. The conductor and motorman of the car did likewise. I got the biggest dose of pity I ever had in my life, and my driver was scared into a promise to feed me right away, which he did. I got off the track, though. The street car conductor was such a good-natured fellow and handled me so firmly and so gently that before I knew it I had pulled the load from the track. Then my driver tried to whip me on, but I wouldn't budge till I had got a good feed out of a nose-bag. This afternoon I went as slowly as I knew how, and balked frequently, but always where the driver didn't dare beat me. It was a pretty bad day, but, on the whole, a little improvement over other hot days I have had of late.—[S. W. Gillilan, in Baltimore American.]

A FAMILY in Tiffin, O., had moved from the old home, but rented the house, furnished throughout, the new tenant being an elderly lady. For some reason the family dog was "let" with the furniture. Now the new occupant of the house liked to sit in a particularly comfortable chair in the parlor, but as the dog was also as fond of the chair she frequently found him in possession. Being rather afraid of the dog she did not dare to drive him out, and therefore used to go to the window and call: "Cats." The dog would then rush to the window and the lady would calmly take possession of the chair.—[Our Dumb Animals.]

THE man who is grumbling about the hot July is the same man who was growling about the cold June.—[Detroit Free Press.]

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,

Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.
Telephones.

MONTHOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKENY Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

JOSEPH L. JONES

Thompson Shoups, 2212 Wallace Street, Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tingo.

Richards & Shoups. Jobbing attended to. CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS. 1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa. Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.

Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents, Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected. Keystone and Bell Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General
Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
Assistant Treasurer.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

J. T. JACKSON & CO. Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Hamelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
Phone 133-55.

To-morrow is no time at all—
it never comes.

The time to insure is to-day.
You will be supplied with the kind of insurance adapted to your means and needs; your convenience will be consulted,
the way made easy if you apply
to the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE,
ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION
ACCOUNTS.
Safe to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

THE BEAUTIFUL SAPPHERE COUNTRY IS A DELIGHTFUL PLACE IN WHICH TO SPEND YOUR VACATION.

Along the southern slopes and tablelands of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Western North Carolina, at an average altitude of three thousand feet, with broad ridges pointing off from the main chains towards the lowlands of South Carolina and Georgia, is a country full of delightful surprises to the tourist, sportsman and health seeker, which has been appropriately named "The Sapphire Country." No other State or region contains so many grand waterfalls, such wide sweeping mountain views and such beautiful lakes.

The most interesting of the many attractive features to be found are the beautiful Toxaway, Fairfield and Sapphire Lakes. Nowhere else in the South at this altitude are such bodies of water. All who visit these lakes are impressed with the wonderful beauty and great varied character of scenery. There are towering cliffs rising abruptly for a thousand feet from their shores, and cascades of rare beauty falling directly into the lakes from the lofty tableland surrounding. Some of the mountains in this vicinity range in height from five to six thousand feet. Indeed, it is the general verdict of widely-traveled people that in this respect the remarkable combination and varied and attractive character of lake and mountain scenery of this section is unrivalled by any in the world. Certainly no other part of America has anything to equal it.

Some of the finest hotels in the South are in this beautiful mountain country, the latest being the handsome new "Toxaway Inn," which is open for the summer season, and will remain open the entire year.

Low rate summer excursion tickets are on sale up to and including September 30th, 1903, from all principal points, with final limit to return October 31st, 1903.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture
Martha J. Warner

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
STEAMSHIP LINES
FROM
PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 50, N. Delaware Avenue.
Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P.
TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT
MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP
CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE
AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS
SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, EIGHTH MONTH 29, 1903.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME. WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXXV.,	545
POETRY: IMMORTAL LOVE,	545
INDIANA YEARLY MEETING,	545
ELIZABETH HUSSEY WHITTIER (Illustration),	546
INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION AND CONCILIATION (Concluded),	547
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON: The Romans,	549
EDITORIAL: The Asbury Park Conference Report,	550
The True Meaning of Quakerism,	550
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS,	551
SOCIETY NOTES,	551
WOODBROOKE SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY,	551
FRIENDS IN MEETING AND HOME: Short Creek and West Grove,	552
SUMMER DAYS AT ASBURY PARK,	553
FAIRFAX QUARTERLY MEETING,	554
DUANESBURG HALF-YEARLY MEETING,	554
EDUCATIONAL: Why Friends Maintain Schools,	554
Swarthmore College,	555
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	555
POETRY: Let Something be Said; Alchemists; The Indigo Bird,	556
FIRST-DAY SCHOOL CURRICULUM,	556
HOW TO SOLVE THE DRINK PROBLEM,	557
MISCELLANY: An Anti-War Congressman; Women's Rights in Russia; Good News from Australia,	557-558
CURRENT EVENTS,	558
NEWS NOTES,	559
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS,	559

WANTED.—A WOMAN AS COMPANION to assist in housework in family of two. Home in country delightfully located. Address Box 14, Union Bridge, Carroll county, Md.

WANTED.—A NURSERY GOVERNESS OR mother's helper for two little girls of six and seven years, in the country. Address Mrs. R. C. Gaskill, Boothwyn, Del. co., Pa.

WANTED.—A TEACHER IN CHELTEN Hills School living near by, will take as members of her family two girls under fourteen. Reference, Dr. J. E. Walker, 1677 Green Street, Philadelphia. Address No. 5, this Office.

WANTED.—COPIES OF FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, issue of Third month 14, 1903. Address this Office.

WANTED.—REFINED WOMAN OR SMALL family to take main part of furnished house, with the boarders now in it. All conveniences. Terms liberal. Address A., 328 West Front Street, Media, Pa.

ROOMS WANTED.—ONE SINGLE, ONE double, Near 15th and Race Streets. Address No. 7, this Office.

BOARD FOR YOUNG WOMAN, SECOND story front, pleasant neighborhood, $4. Address H., this Office.

BOARDING.—CHOICE WINTER ROOMS. Second floor front, communicating. Table board. Opens September 1st. Address 1618 Green Street.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1829 I St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

TO RENT.—NICE HOMELIKE HOME, LANG- horse, Bucks county, Pa., from Tenth month 1st, 11-room house, on main street. Bath, water closet, new plumbing, heater. Langhorne spring and other excellent water; porches front and back; old shade, stable, carriage house, fruit trees, railroad. Apply soon. Dr. John Paxson, Newtown, Pa.

FOR RENT.—FURNISHED, TO A SMALL private family, for board of two adults, a modern three story porch house in Tioga. Apply No. 6, this Office.

FOR RENT.—DESIRABLE ROOMS IN Friends' family. Address 226 N. 21st St., Phila.

FOR RENT FOR TENTH MONTH, KEEWAY din Cottage at Buck Hill Falls. Four double sleeping rooms, two baths, kitchen, dining room, large sitting room, two open fire. Furnished for housekeeping. CHARLES PAXSON, 234 Dock Street, Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—BUCK HILL FALLS COTTAGE. The Hemlocks, containing five bed-rooms and fully furnished for housekeeping, can be rented for September or October. Address Dr. W. W. Speakman, 1307 Pennsylvania Bldg., 15th and Chestnut Sts., Phila.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

FOR SALE.—FARM—MAIN LINE. TWENTY MARLES, containing thirty acres, situated one and one-quarter miles south of Green Tree Station and two miles southwest of Paoli. Land all lies to the south, can be all cultivated; at present time in grass. Improvements; two-story, eight-room frame dwelling, stone and frame hank barn, with stalls for four horses and three cows, also frame and stone out-building. Farm is bordered on three sides by roads, is in an improved and improving neighborhood, and a macadam road extends to within one-eighth of a mile of property. A small stream flows south end of farm, also small quarry containing suitable stone for building. Old shade and c. c. w. d. Apply

Provident Life and Trust Co.,
409 Chestnut St., Phila.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars, direct to
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.
SEE PAGE 560.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' School,

FOURTH AND WEST STREETS, WILMINGTON, DEL.
A day school for both sexes, fitting for either college or business. Scientific, Latino-scientific, and Classical Courses. Fourteen teachers. Excellent equipment. Thorough instruction. Graduates entered on certificate in leading colleges. Fall term begins Ninth month (September) 14th. For illustrated catalogue address
HERSCHEL A. MORRIS, A. M., Principal.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.
J. EUGENE BAKER,
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.
Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES. Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or,
Jenkitown, Pa.

CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.
The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.
For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.
Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particular address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis M. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Institutions. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 240 N. 75th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE

SWARTHMORE, PA.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE WAS FOUNDED

and is maintained by the Society of Friends, but numbers in its student body members of all religious denominations. It has always offered its inmates a choice home atmosphere and the intimate contact of professor and student, both potent influences in character-building.

THE COURSE OF STUDY AT SWARTHMORE

is based on uniform requirements for admission. The work of the student is divided into three nearly equal parts: Prescribed, Elective and Major. The prescribed work is limited to certain subjects of general value; the elective work gives play to individual tastes; the adoption of a major permits the student's inclination to be given special training by persistent effort in one direction. Upon the completion of this undergraduate course of study the degree of B. A. is conferred.

THE CAMPUS AT SWARTHMORE

consists of two hundred acres of rolling and partly wooded land. The interest in out-of-door sports is very strong.

COLLEGE SPIRIT IS ALSO FOSTERED

by intercollegiate debates, contests in oratory, college journalism, and the enthusiasm of alumni.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE OFFERS ESPECIALLY,—

a strong course in engineering, convenient access to the libraries and lectures of Philadelphia, and a number of scholarships and fellow-ships.

THE COLLEGE HAS BEEN FORTUNATE in locating its graduates in desirable positions. The engineers of the class of 1903 all received appointments before commencement.

A NEW DORMITORY for the young men will be erected during the winter of 1903-1904.

SEND FOR A CATALOGUE.

PRESIDENT, JOSEPH SWAIN, Swarthmore, Pa.

FRIENDS' SCHOOL, Park Place and Laurens Street, BALTIMORE, MD.

KINDERGARTEN, PRIMARY, INTERMEDIATE AND HIGH SCHOOL DEPARTMENTS. EIGHTEEN TEACHERS.

PREPARATION FOR BUSINESS OR COLLEGE. BUILDING AND EQUIPMENT THOROUGHLY MODERN.

Special care taken to provide homes for pupils from a distance. Rates for this accommodation reasonable.

SCHOOL OPENS NINTH MONTH 14TH. KINDERGARTEN OPENS NINTH MONTH 28TH.

EDWARD C. WILSON, B. S., Principal.

ELI M. LAMB, Associate Principal.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 29, 1903.

Volume LX.
Number 35.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXXV.

For my part I cannot commit myself to the view that the average Cabinet Minister answering questions in the House of Commons is doing as much for the British Empire as the mother who is answering the inquiries of her growing children.

ARTHUR ROWNTREE.

In an address to the Mount and Bootham Schools.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

IMMORTAL LOVE.

THE joys of Heaven stand revealed
To every loving soul—
Attraction for each wandering orb,
Unto the central whole !
Transported by the hope of bliss
For all my human kind,
A Father's love I've seen revealed
To every conscious mind !
O Love, potential is thy power,
And omnipotent thy reign,
To banish error, hate, and crime,
And war, and fear, and pain.
A universal solvent thou,
On earth below, in heaven above.
*These seraphs note and anthems chime
That heavenly thought, Immortal Love.*

DAVID NEWPORT.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

INDIANA YEARLY MEETING.

HELD AT RICHMOND, INDIANA.

THE meeting of Ministers and Elders held its first session on Seventh-day afternoon, Eighth month 22d, with Samuel R. Battin as clerk, and Mary Ann Roberts, assistant clerk. All the representatives were present but two, for whose absence satisfactory reasons were given. Minutes were for Abel Mills, a minister of Clear Creek Monthly Meeting, Illinois; David W. Branson, a minister, and his wife, Anna M., an elder, of Hopewell Monthly Meeting, Virginia; Joel Borton, a minister of Pilesgrove Monthly Meeting, N. J., and Elizabeth Lloyd, a minister of Buckingham Monthly Meeting, Pa. Samuel P. Zavitz, a minister from Coldstream, Ontario, and George W. and Rebecca A. Brown, elders of Benjaminville Monthly Meeting, Illinois, were present without minutes.

The five queries pertaining to this meeting, with their answers, were read and considered. In connection with these, and in the impressive opening meeting, there were inspired words of counsel and encouragement. Attention was called to the responsibility resting upon ministers and elders, and the need of their seeking daily for strength and wisdom from a Higher Power. Friends were reminded that the only answer Jesus gave to Pilate's question, "What is truth?" was by bearing witness to the truth in his life; and that the result of all true ministry is spiritual growth among those who listen to it. Earnest prayers were offered giving thanks for blessings received, and asking for light and strength.

FIRST-DAY.

The weather was clear and warm, but not oppressive, and the morning meeting was said to be larger than it had been for many years, the house being about filled excepting some of the gallery seats. The silence that prevailed while the meeting was gathering was broken by Samuel P. Zavitz with the words, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." He assured all of the blessing that was awaiting them if they would but get into the condition to receive it, and urged them to seek for that strength from above which alone can satisfy the human soul.

Davis Furnas, of Waynesville, Ohio, began with the question, "If thou doest well shalt thou not be accepted?" and said that every one who does faithfully the duty which is made known to him by the Father will receive a sure reward.

Joel Borton said that there is a divine law coming from God which is higher than any outward law. Just as those who break human laws are punished in order to secure obedience, so every act of disobedience to the divine law, as it is revealed to the individual, is followed by suffering. The first two commandments include all the others, for any one who loves God supremely will be constrained by this love to follow the divine requirements. In order to make it easier for others to overcome their carnal nature we should do our part in restraining the things that bring unhappiness and putting better things in their stead. There is reason to believe that there will be a great religious revival in the next quarter of a century; it is coming because the world needs it; there will be more conversions from the outward to the inward, and greater conformity to the divine law as it is revealed to us. Jesus came into the world to do good and that should be the mission of every living minister.

Esther S. Wallace, of Richmond, Indiana, said that the essential thing is to prepare to live rightly. The spiritual ear should be trained to listen to the inward voice, and when the call comes the answer should be in the words of Samuel, "Here am I." There are not enough Elis to tell those who hear an unknown voice where the call comes from. Our meetings need a more dedicated eldership, a more living ministry, a more converted membership, and all these will come through obedience to the voice of God in the soul.

Elizabeth Lloyd expressed a desire that all should seek the better things that cannot be taken away. These better things come to us through two channels, growth and service. We may grow by our efforts to appreciate the beauties of nature, the noble thoughts in books, the best gifts of the people whom we meet, and most of all by keeping close to God. The object of growth is that we may be useful to others. In order to be saved from our selfishness we must cease to think of ourselves and concern ourselves with others' needs. As we daily grow and serve we shall enter more and more into the joys of the kingdom of heaven.

The meeting for worship in the afternoon was somewhat smaller than in the morning. The first speaker was Edward Coale of Benjaminville Monthly Meeting, Ill. He said that it is a privilege to belong to an organization where each one can do his own thinking; the one essential principle of the Society of Friends is—Mind the Light, but it is one thing to know the light and another to follow it, and when the light received is not followed sin lieth at the door.

George R. Thorpe, of Richmond, Ind., spoke hopefully of the future of the Society of Friends, and of evidences of renewed life already manifested.

David W. Branson called upon those who were spiritually asleep to awake and receive baptism from Christ, assuring them that all who seek the Lord will find him.

Samuel P. Zavitz spoke of the Friend who goes with every one through life, warning, counseling and encouraging, and desired that all in the meeting might be baptized in the spirit of love and righteousness. After earnest prayers by Joel Borton and Rebecca Merritt the meeting closed under a covering of refreshing silence.

YOUNG FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION.

The Young Friends' Association of Richmond meets every First-day during the year at 6.30 p. m. The program is arranged in advance for the entire year, with a topic and a leader for each evening, with the exception of seven which are left for the discussion of current topics, under the direction of a committee. There are so many active workers in the association that no one has to act as leader twice during the year. There are executive, lookout, visiting, social, current topics, reception and First-day school committees of from five to seven members each, and no member is named on two committees.

The topic for this First-day evening was "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst." The leader, Margaret Breckenridge, read a few selections from the Bible and a carefully prepared paper on the subject. After this others present read voluntary selections, repeated texts or made remarks bearing on the topic for the evening. Among those who spoke was Henry M. Haviland, of Brooklyn. The meeting was full of life and interest and closed promptly at the end of one hour.

ADDRESS BY ANNA M. JACKSON.

At the close of the association meeting Anna M. Jackson, of New York, gave an earnest talk on "Race Prejudice." She spoke of the interest always taken by Friends in the colored race and of the importance of manifesting this interest anew at the present time. The first thing for Friends to do is to overcome their own race prejudice in order that they may influence the people of the North to deal kindly and justly with their dark-skinned brethren. She said that as a whole the colored race in America is in its infancy, that the people generally have the characteristics of children and need sympathetic direction and wise restraint. Her remarks were followed by a general discussion.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

ELIZABETH HUSSEY WHITTIER.

THERE are probably few of the present generation of young people to whom Whittier's noble poems are household words, who know what a source of life-long inspiration he had in the quick sympathy and clear judgment of his beloved sister "Lizzie." We are all familiar with his beautiful tribute to her character in "Snow-Bound," written when the sorrow and pain of her loss were still very fresh—

"I can not feel that thou art far, Since near, at need, the angels are,"

but only by a careful reading of his life do we realize to the full what a noble one hers was, and her beautiful soul seems to be mirrored in her equally beautiful features.

Elizabeth Hussey Whittier was born Twelfth month 7th, 1815, eight years after the poet, and died Ninth month 3d, 1864, just at the close of that long struggle between freedom and slavery, in which she had engaged as enthusiastically as her brother. Always frail and delicate, she was still the life and pride of that household, for the poet's shyness and reserve were offset by her genial wit and bright, vivacious sayings. Gifted with keen intellectual powers she was one of Whittier's best critics, and had her health been better and her distrust of her own ability less she might—to quote her brother—"have taken a high place among lyrical singers." Throughout all that trying period of anti-slavery agitation, when Whittier sacrificed all prospects of personal popularity and advancement for the cause of Freedom, in all the long days of pecuniary need and physical suffering "her large, sweet, asking eyes" were full of that tender sympathy and loving encouragement the poet needed. That she, too, possessed much of his fire and determination is shown by an incident in 1835, when she and Harriet Minot guided Samuel J. May safely through the angry mob of her Haverhill townsmen who had just broken up the anti-slavery meeting he was addressing; and in her diary and private letters she frequently gives vigorous expression to her feelings of indignation at the injustice that marked this period.

Among her dearest friends was that sweet singer, Lucy Larcom, and it was she who selected "The Vanishers," the first poem written by Whittier after his sister's death, to read at the memorial service held at the Whittier birth-place soon after the poet's own death. In such lives as hers, merged in the great work of another and seemingly unimportant to the world, do we find that inspiration and love without which our greatest men might have failed in their noblest efforts. Who of us can measure the influence of a Dorothy Wordsworth, Elizabeth Whittier, or Mrs. Gladstone?

The few poems from Elizabeth Whittier's pen are printed with the full editions of her brother's works, and in them we can get slight glimpses of her "fine individuality" and "intensity of feeling." Whittier tells us that her little poem to "Dr. Kane in Cuba," reached Kane on his death-bed and was listened to by him with grateful tears. The lesson incorporated in her little poem on "Charity," given below, is one that the world needs sadly to-day, when, in spite of all our philanthropic labors, the cloud of war is resting on us, and we are in danger of drifting away from the gentle teaching of the Prince of Peace.

F. H. P.

CHARITY.

The pilgrim and stranger who through the day,
Holds o'er the desert his trackless way,
Where the terrible sands no shade have known,
No sound of life save his camel's moan,
Hears, at last, through the mercy of Allah to him,
From his tent door at evening the Bedouin call:
*"Whoever thou art whose need is great,
In the name of God, the Compassionate
And Merciful One, for thee I wait!"*

For gifts in His name of food and rest
The tents of Islam of God are blest,
Thou who hast faith in the Christ above,
Shall the Koran teach thee the Law of Love?
O Christian! open thy heart and door,
Cry east and west to the wandering poor:
*"Whoever thou art whose need is great,
In the name of Christ, the Compassionate
And Merciful One, for thee I wait!"*

DR. J. G. HOLLAND once said: "I have all my days had a card-playing community open to my observation, and have yet to believe that that which is the universal resort of the starved in soul and in intellect, which has never in any way linked itself to tender, elevating, or beautiful association can recommend itself to the favor of Christian disciples. I have at this moment ringing in my ear the dying injunction of my father's early friend: 'Keep your son from cards. Over them I have murdered time and lost Heaven.'"

For Friends' Intelligencer.

INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION AND CONCILIATION.

(Concluded from last week.)

About the same time another board was formed independently of the Nottingham board, in the building trade of Wolverhampton, through the efforts of Sir Rupert Kettle. These were followed very rapidly by similar boards in the iron, coal and other trades, and have been now for almost forty years very successful in their dealings.

These boards have no legal existence and their work is only carried on by the mutual honor of the parties concerned, but this is usually sufficient to enforce the awards of the boards. Their proceedings are very informal and the matter is threshed out by what the men call "a long jaw," in which conviction is as often impressed on the men as on the masters. If there is not a thorough mutual conviction on both sides, it is usually a simple matter to effect a compromise.

These two boards of Nottingham and Wolverhampton are types of all the others which have developed from them.

The method of procedure in dispute is very simple. The party feeling itself aggrieved makes a statement through its secretary to the board. This is conveyed to the other party who submits a reply. The secretaries then try to amicably adjust the difficulty, when, if they fail, the matter is brought before the entire board. One of the invariable conditions of arbitration is that work shall be continued during the investigation pending a decision.

The procedure of the North of England Manufactured Iron Trades' Board of Arbitration and Conciliation is based on that of the Nottingham board. This board has furnished a very good test of the value and practicability of such boards. The first action of the board was under the umpireship of Sir Rupert Kettle, to decree an advance in puddling of 6d. From its formation in 1869 to 1874 wages were advanced from 8s per ton for puddling to 13s 3d. In 1874 the turn came: from that time there was a constant decline in wages until in 1880 the wages had been reduced 47 1/2 per cent. by this board without any serious difficulty, which surely could not have been peacefully accomplished without arbitration.

Now let us turn again to our own country. Voluntary arbitration has never arisen to very great proportions in America, except through the influence of the state boards established by law. Occasionally particular firms, and in a few cases, as we shall see later, a group of firms, have agreed to arbitrate differences with their employees; but only rarely was there any agreement to arbitrate beyond the particular case which was the cause of the calling together of the arbitration committee. In many of these cases there was not real arbitration at all, but more often they were of that character which we now call collective bargaining.

Pennsylvania is the State which has paid the greatest attention to industrial arbitration. The Pittsburg iron trade, which from its very beginning had been subject to serious and repeated strikes, was the first to enter upon it in the form of conciliation. From 1849 to 1860 there were continued strikes and reductions of wages. In 1858 the men had formed the "United Sons of Vulcan" and by 1863 this organization made its power felt. A conference was finally arranged, consisting of representatives of each side and an agreement was made by which the men's wages were proportionate to the price of iron products in the market and were to vary as it varied. The agreement, however, was not long kept, and the wages went back to the old unjust figure. Again the "Sons of Vulcan" made an organized effort and succeeded in establishing a sliding scale of wages, based on the manufacturers' selling card. This scale was revised several times in the course of the next few years, and there were several strikes. All these meetings for revision were in the nature of Conciliation, or rather, perhaps, of collective bargaining. The strike of 1874-75 resulting in a return to former prices ended concerted action in the iron trade on the part either of employers or men as a body.

In the coal trade there were three cases of arbitration before the legislative action of 1877, which was the result of the Pittsburgh riots of that year, and which was intended to make arbitration compulsory on the application of either party, with legal sanction and enforcement of awards.

The first case was in 1871 in the anthracite regions, and was contemporaneous with a similar attempt in Lynn, Mass. In 1868, the "Working-men's Benevolent Association of St. Clair" had been chartered and the organization spread. In 1867 there had been formed an association of operators called the "Mahanoy Valley and Locust Mountain Coal Association." This was very successful in quelling strikes and led to the formation of similar bodies. In 1869 the Anthracite Board of Trade of the Schuylkill coal region was formed, with William Kendrick as president. This organization was incorporated and afterwards acted in all negotiations with the men. These two organizations of employers and men attempted to conciliate and arrange a sliding scale of wages, on what was known as the basis system. The outcome of this movement was that the whole matter was placed for arbitration before Judge William Elwell of Bloomsburg, as umpire, Fourth month 17th, 1871. This effort failed because the operatives placed other matters before the board and entirely ignored the main question, which was on wages. On Fifth month 11th, the question of wages was arbitrated in Schuylkill County, the other districts having in the meantime gone to work by mutual agreement. The matter was this time successfully arranged and the result was hailed with great satisfaction. But trouble again arose through some of the loaders violating the agreement. This marked the end of arbitration in the anthracite region until the appointment of the existing board by President Roosevelt last year.

Ohio and Massachusetts furnish other examples of arbitration about the same time.

The classic case in this country is that of Straiton & Storm, cigar manufacturers, of New York City.

Theirs is the first board of arbitration founded on a permanent basis in this country. It arose out of a strike in 1876 which is said to have resulted in a loss to the firm of over $40,000. This board was formed in First month, 1879. Its rules provided for various boards in the different branches of the trade, and it has been very successful in its dealings. Its findings have been enforced by moral suasion, and it has brought about sympathetic co-operation between employers and workmen.

Having now considered the history of Arbitration and Conciliation let us consider in conclusion its benefits and results.

J. D. Weeks, in his little manual under the head of the "Advantages of Arbitration," states the objects as being three in number. The first is to prevent differences between employer and employed from becoming disputes and ending in strikes and lock-outs; and the second is to settle those disputes which unfortunately have arisen, and to put an end to strikes and lock-outs when they occur. The third object is to promote mutual confidence and respect between these two classes.

To accomplish the first of these objects it is evidently necessary that the board must be in existence before trouble arises, that is, the boards must be permanent in their character. It was partly through lack of this permanence that purely voluntary boards of arbitration have failed in this country. And it is this same feature which was the cause of success in the case of Straiton & Storm. This is the feature which makes the State Boards of Arbitration an important factor in industrial development. Such a permanent board is in a position to obtain a knowledge of the conditions of trade which is not possible for one which is called to settle a particular dispute. For instance, in his testimony before the trades unions commission of Parliament in 1880 A. J. Mundella said, "We sent two of the workmen to France last year and a third to Germany to see for themselves the prices paid for that work. They came home and said, 'It will not do, we must be content as we are for the present.'" The English boards take notice of the conditions of trade and competition, and A. J. Mundella continues, "we produce on the table the articles made in France and Germany and the men are convinced by their own senses of the justice of what we say and by their knowledge of the laws that govern trade, because this system has been a complete educational process for our men; they know as well as we do whether an advance can be made or not; they know whether the demand is good or bad, and at what prices the articles can be made in France or Germany, and they are accustomed to consider the effect of a fall or rise in cotton just as we do; and when they think that things are going well, they ask to share in the benefit, and when they think that things are going wrong, they are willing to take low rates."

That such a mode of settling disputes is entirely a success seems quite clear. A. J. Mundella points out its educational value, and the way in which it harmonizes otherwise clashing interests. Here is one of the great difficulties in the way of arbitration. Employers are too prone to consider their workmen as being in a servile position, just as their horses and cattle, merely to do their will. There is too much differentiation into classes with class prejudices; and it is only when this is done away with, and employers and employees can meet together as men with men and discuss the interests which are really theirs in common, that arbitration can be a success. That such purely voluntary boards do promote mutual trust and respect, as well as work beneficially from the economic point of view, is manifest from the experience in the Nottingham hosiery and lace industry where strikes have now been unknown for almost half a century. So, too, in the North of England coal trade.

Judge Kettle remarks, "I verily believe that, without limiting the influence of fair competition, boards of arbitration, properly worked, afford the best means of fixing the market price for a fair day's work. I believe, moreover, that their action has a tendency to secure the maximum prices which are consistent with steady employment, and that the presence of an umpire prevents the ruinous consequences to both parties which follow separation upon a disagreement."

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 32.

THE ROMANS.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Now we that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

—Romans, xv., 1.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xx., 17-35; xxi., 7-14; Romans, xv., 1-21.

WE do not know when or under what conditions Christianity made its way to Rome. When Paul first went to Corinth (about 52 A.D.) he found there Priscilla and Aquila "lately come from Italy," "because Claudius had commanded all the Jews to depart from Rome" (Acts, xviii., 2). In the course of the dispersion large numbers of Jews had settled in Rome. Jews "listened to the oratory of Cicero, and mourned over the corpse of Cæsar" (Morrison). Tiberius (A.D. 14-37) banished them from Rome, but the decree was not long enforced. Under Caligula (37-41) they returned to Rome, while Claudius, his successor (41-54), issued an edict granting complete toleration to all Jews within his dominions. A little later, however, on account of tumults, "led by one Christus," he was induced to forbid their meetings, or perhaps even, as indicated above, to banish them from the city. The statement as to the leadership of "Christus" is from the Latin author, Suetonius, who doubtless heard the name of Christ in connection with the riots, and naturally concluded that he was a leader. No distinction was made at this time between the orthodox and Christian Jews. This banishment, like that of Tiberius, was only temporarily effective. Christianity lived and spread abroad in Rome. Perhaps the persecution even helped them, since it drove out or silenced the violent, leaving the peaceful Christians unnoticed. It need hardly be said that Christianity at Rome did not confine itself to the Jews. On the contrary, we may infer from Paul's epistle (Rom., xv., 16) that a majority of the Roman Christians were Gentiles; of these Gentiles doubtless many or most were drawn from the class already referred to more than once, which was drawn to Judaism by its monotheism and by its ethical purity, while at the same time repelled by its formal law.

We should remember that the times were unspcakably bad, and perhaps worse in Rome than elsewhere. The series of emperors from Tiberius to Domitian could not be matched in history for inefficiency and wickedness. One-half the Roman people were slaves, their masters absolutely unrestrained by any law. The other half was made up of "a few rich men living in unstinted extravagance and luxury, and many poor living on the very edge of starvation" (Abbott). All labor was looked upon as servile, and a disgrace by those in the so-called upper classes. Drunkenness and debauchery of every kind ran riot in the society of the time. Every kind of vice flourished; and there was no power in religion to hold it in check, while education in any broad public way was wholly unprovided for. It is easy to see how Christianity appealed in such a time to those who listened to the call of God within their souls.

It was to this Christian group in the midst of this society that Paul wrote. Yet the Roman Church was not one of Paul's churches. It had been founded and fostered by others, and had prospered. Plainly it would have been in exceedingly bad taste for him to lay down the law to the Roman Christians as he did to those by whom he was regarded as the father of their faith. And Paul is careful to guard against this tone. He thanks God that the faith of the Roman Church is already widely known. He longs to see them "that I with you may be comforted in you each of us by the other's faith, both yours and mine" (Rom., i., 12). He is persuaded that "ye of yourselves are full of goodness, filled with knowledge, able also to admonish one another" (xv., 14). He claims some privilege of writing to them because of his special appointment—from God, not from man—as apostle to the Gentiles. He has longed to visit them, and still hopes to do so; but not as one who comes to evangelize them, but as one who stops among friends on a long journey. He hopes to go to Spain (xv., 24), and will make this an occasion of meeting. Naturally his letter is full of just those things which have filled his mind in the months just past. He treats of the evil and vice of the time—such as his church at Corinth had suffered from; and of the question as to the Jewish law which had risen again and again athwart his path in Galatia, in Antioch, in Corinth, in Jerusalem. But in addressing the Roman Church on these themes he is free from the pressure of an immediate and personal occasion. He is free to treat the matters more systematically and more philosophically than when he wrote to the Corinthians or Galatians. Lyman Abbott outlines the contents of the epistle to the Romans as follows:

Topic: "The Relation of Law to Life."

(1) Law as a Remedy for an Evil Age and an Evil Life.

(Continued on page 552.)

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, EIGHTH MONTH 29, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE ASBURY PARK CONFERENCE REPORTS.

AT an all-day philanthropic conference, some account of which appears in another column, the morning session was occupied with the reading of Henry M. Haviland's paper on "Peace" in the Asbury Park Conference Report, followed by a discussion. Those in charge of the meeting had not arranged for this, but on account of some disappointment in regard to the program, this plan was hit upon as a good way of having a profitable meeting in spite of having no distinguished speaker with a prepared address or paper. The meeting turned out to be an interesting and profitable one, and it might be a good plan for many of our meetings, or all of them, to take the hint from this and plan a series of local conferences for the coming winter for the purpose of taking up with some thoroughness the most important papers and discussions contained in the Conference Reports. In this way those who were not at the Conference can get perhaps almost as much good from it as if they had been there; while those who did attend it will find that there was much more of inspiration and helpful suggestion in such a Conference than one can possibly assimilate during the sessions of it. Such a series of neighborhood meetings, say once a month or oftener, during the coming winter, with the Reports as a text-book or guide, would bring the influence of the great Conference to bear in all our meetings, even the most remote and the weakest. The size of a meeting and the fact of its "having no minister" would not in the least interfere with the success of such a series of Conferences, and no help from outside of the meeting and neighborhood would be necessary; which would be a great gain, for we are in danger of falling into the way of thinking that we can not have a successful meeting or be a vital force in our neighborhood without having somebody from somewhere to come and take charge of us, if not as a permanent pastor, at least for every meeting of any special importance.

TRUE MEANING OF QUAKERISM.

A FRIEND, writing in reference to business matters, incidentally suggests that we, sometime, discuss the subject, "What is the True Meaning of Quakerism?" This is a subject one would not attempt to dispose of in a single article; each issue of the INTELLIGENCER ought to make important contributions to the answering of it. But there are some things that may be said briefly about it.

Quakerism is a religion, and one cannot afford to make it his religion unless it is to him such a full, rounded religion that he may live by it in all the many and varied relations of his life. True Quakerism is not an ism. It is not a set of doctrines and views and peculiarities handed down from father to son, different from the doctrines and views and ways of life of other sects. If that were all it were it would not be suitable as a religion to live by; it would either have to be put aside sometimes when a Friend, for instance, should engage in some of the good and important things of modern life that did not happen to be foreseen by the founders of his religion; or else he would have to refrain from many right and proper things and not be a full, rounded, modern, citizen of the world in the best sense. Both of these courses are pursued by devotees of Quakerism.

But true Quakerism does not appertain merely to the traditional devotees of an ism. It is a religion of universal application, one that all men may live by, one that ought to be more widely spread over the earth than it is. The foundation principle of Quakerism is suggested in the 15th verse of the 15th chapter of John: "Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." Quakerism means emancipation, it means being under the direct tutelage of the Father. That rules out all short cuts, and easy methods of letting someone else do your thinking for you; it rules out all ready-made systems of doctrine; all "plans of salvation." Salvation, to use the common but somewhat unsatisfactory word, is to be attained only by learning directly from the Father; through the faculties He has given, what your place and work in the world is, what He would have you do, and then, through the strength He gives, doing it. If one does this faithfully he grows in his capacity for learning what is true and worth while, and in his ability to fill the place in the world that he best fits into; as he thus is faithful and grows he attains to the highest and only true happiness a man is capable of.

It really would be better if we would not use the word "Quakerism," a fondness for which has grown upon us more and more of late. There could be no better word than "Friends" to call ourselves by, and it has the advantage that "ism" cannot be added to it. There really is no such thing as Friendism; the thing itself is as impossible as the word.

The one principle of true "Quakerism" is that a man can attain his best and truest only by being free from bondage to men and man-made, labor-saving devices and by keeping himself in good trim by exercising the capacities he finds in himself, and which will wither away if unexercised, leaving him dwarfed and unfit for the kingdom of heaven. This one principle has important bearings on everything in life, and there is much work to be done by many preachers and writers in making clear these applications; and there is much to be done by those to whom the importance of this principle has been brought home, in living their lives consistently in accordance with it.

BIRTHS.

POWELL.—At Litchfield, Connecticut, Seventh month 18th, 1903, to Wilson Marcy, Jr., and Elsie Knapp Powell, a son, who is named Wilson Marcy Powell, 3d.

WALTER.—At their home in West Haddonfield, N. J., Seventh month 7th, 1903, to J. Horace and Emma Fasson Walter, a daughter, who is named Mary Fell Walter.

MARRIAGES.

GLENN KINNARD.—Under the care of Fall Creek Monthly Meeting, at the residence of the bride's parents, William R. and Mary S. Kinnard, near Pendleton, Indiana, Oliver Edwin Glenn to Alice T. Kinnard, Eighth month 18th, 1903.

DEATHS.

LONGSHORE.—At their home near Dolington, Bucks county, Pa., Eighth month 3d, 1903, after a short but severe illness, Parmelia, wife of Abden B. Longshore, aged 79 years; a member of Makefield Monthly Meeting, and for many years an elder of said meeting.

SOCIETY NOTES.

ENGLAND.

The replies to the "Plea for Humanity," the address of London Yearly Meeting on Lynching, 30,000 copies of which were distributed in the United States, are divided by the Friend (London) under three headings: (1) Violent in tone against English interference and against the negro race; (2) Thanking Friends for the spirit which prompted the action, but saying that little or no good could be done by persons who were so far removed from the circumstances and ignorant of the actual facts of American life; (3) Warmly appreciating the action of Friends.

The Meeting for Sufferings has directed that legal steps be taken to prevent a firm of bottlers in Surrey from registering a trade-mark for "Quaker beer." The firm politely but firmly declined to withdraw their application, pleading that "Quaker" is a picturesque and obsolete term.

Seeborn Rowntree's "Poverty: A Study of Town Life," published at half-a-guinea about a year and a half ago, and having passed through four editions, is now to be issued through the Macmillans in a limp cover, cheaper edition that will bring it within the reach of everybody—at one shilling. The volume is recognized to be of the greatest importance on such questions as the cause of poverty, housing, health, the drink problem, education, religious influences, labor unions. It can be had through the Friends' Book Store, Philadelphia.

Dr. J. Rendel Harris writes to the British Friend from Armenia that his appointment to the professorship of Theology in the University of Leyden, vacated by the retirement of Professor van Manen, was regarded by him as the highest honor of his academic career, but was declined at once by telegraph, owing to his previous engagement as chief instructor of the Woodbrooke Settlement.

WOODBROOKE SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY.

Condensed from the Friend (London) of Eighth month 14th.

THE opening lecture of the second week was by Rufus M. Jones, on the sub-conscious life—a great subliminal realm from which the luminous peak of our own consciousness arises. Our consciousness is always a selection of sub-conscious thought; if one thought occupies the window of our consciousness, others can not get up to it. In our field of vision there is always more than we know we see; we hear, too, more than we know we hear; thus the mention of our own name in conversation to which we are not listening always catches our ear, even across a room full of speakers; and again, a mother sleeping through many noises is immediately awakened by the cry of her child. In mental processes it is the fringe of thought that guides us, the entire machinery of the association of ideas is in sub-conscious life; in acts of volition much is sub-conscious. Thus writing, eating, and many other habitual actions would be slow, inaccurate, and exhausting, were we to use only conscious processes: we originate an action and turn it over to the custodian of sub-consciousness; happy is he who has also, by choices and decisions, gained a moral dexterity of the soul, "truth in the inward parts."

The next lecture was devoted to Mysticism.

Dr. Adeney, in the course of his concluding lectures on the "Doctrine of the Person of Christ," gave an interesting exposition of the history of creeds.

The Friend's account of the second week of the Settlement (written by C. I. Evans) closes with the following IMPRESSIONS.

It is not easy so close to the end of the first fortnight to know what will be the most enduring impressions of a time that has been probably to all of fresh inspiration and of strengthening of purpose. Without doubt the backbone of the constructive teaching has been Rufus Jones' lectures. One reason of the attractiveness of the course is . . . the illustrations are almost all new ones. This freshness was equally apparent in the treatment of the Bible lessons on the Beatitudes, and on prayer.

Those who were at Woodbrooke with Philip H. Wicksteed will know how impossible it is to put into one paragraph a full estimate of his work there. At the beginning, we seemed to have merely a lecturer on social economics, who harped on two or three themes, and who was very skillful in evading direct answers to questions of detail; but before the end of the course we found two things were being successfully aimed at, viz. : that very diverse problems are referable to two or three root principles, and that, these principles once grasped, there remains the necessity of hard, clear thinking for each one of us; and the last lecture, as well as the extra lecture on gambling, indicated some lines of thought to be adopted and especially attitudes of mind to be cultivated. . . . A simple enumeration of his lectures gives no idea of what Mr. Wicksteed gave to the school; by the intervention of a timely suggestion when a lecturer and his audience seemed to be not quite in touch, by apt questions in discussion, and by unstinting help to individuals, he added much in value to things already good. Not soon will his appeal to Quakers be forgotten, to keep up steady, persistent, unobtrusive social pressure, combined with business capacity, in efforts to solve economic questions; and his final testimony, "If it is to be done, it may be done by you," coming from outside the Society, but yet from one who knows by experience something of the present state of Quakerism, gives us food for reflection as to what we personally are doing towards permanently bettering the economic position.

Accurately to gauge the work of the Summer School we must take into consideration other agencies at work there: the Greek class, the suggestive lessons on Isaiah, the generous kindness of Friends of the neighborhood, the object lesson of permanent work in the hands of Birmingham Friends, the social intercourse on excursion to Kenilworth, to Stratford, and to Worcester. The great lesson of the fortnight was, perhaps, the stimulus of unity; all felt themselves to be working toward similar ends, all were ready to give of their best to fellow settlers. This unity was apparent in many ways: the lectures, though diverse in subject and treatment, were constantly found to be based on the same fundamentals; the devotional meetings were remarkable, not only because part was taken in them by many, both of teachers and of taught, but because of the coherence of thought in diverse utterances; while the good comradeship so much enjoyed last summer at Windermere, was felt to be equally noticeable this year in the pleasant grounds at Selly Oak.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 32.

Continued from page 50.

(2) The Gospel as a Remedy for an Evil Age and an Evil Life.

(3) Scope of the Gospel—Who May Take Advantage of It.

(4) Practical Applications and General Ethical Reflections.

McGiffert notes three general divisions:

(1) An exposition of the Gospel of the divine life in man.

(2) A discussion of God's dealings with and purposes for the children of Israel.

(3) Practical application of the Gospel of the divine life in man to the everyday life of the Roman Christians.

Paul's letter was sent by a Christian woman named Phœbe, who happened to be setting out for Rome. We learn from the salutation, that Priscilla and Aquila, whom we last met at Ephesus, have returned to Rome (Rom., xvi., 3).

Paul now returned to Asia by way of the Macedonian cities, his companions with the contributions of the Western churches meeting him at Troas. A short stop at Miletus gave opportunity for a brief meeting with the elders of the Ephesian Church, who came out to greet him. Thence the party went on to Tyre, in Phœnicia, and down the coast to Ptolemais (the modern Acre), and to Casarea. At this point they met with Philip, one of the seven, including the martyr Stephen, which were appointed to look after the poor of the mother church (Acts, vi., 1-7). Here, also, he was warned of trouble to come in Jerusalem. The disciples urged him not to go up, but "when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, The will of the Lord be done" (Acts, xxi., 14).

For Friends' Intelligencer.

FRIENDS IN MEETING AND HOME.

SHORT CREEK AND WEST GROVE.

LEAVING Philadelphia about 8 o'clock in the evening, a ride of thirteen hours, including a short wait at Steubenville, brought me to Mt. Pleasant Station, Ohio. From the station to the town of the same name was a delightful ride of two miles in an old-fashioned stage-coach. The air was cool, the sky was deeply blue, along the roadside the weeds of late summer were in full bloom, and from every successive hill-top there was a broad panorama of meadow-lands, corn-fields and patches of yellow stubble dotted with shocks of oats.

In Mt. Pleasant a friend was waiting for me. Before going on another mile to Emerson (formerly Trenton), we saw the outside of the large brick meeting-house built in 1814, which is said to have cost $12,345.67, and to have a seating capacity of 2,500. It is now used by Friends only for yearly meetings, the "Hicksites" and "Gurneyites" occupying it in turn; in the alternate years the former hold their yearly meeting in Salem and the latter in Damascus. Between times the meeting-house serves the purposes of a public hall, being used for lectures, farmers' institutes, and even concerts.

Very few of the members of Short Creek Meeting have their homes in Mt. Pleasant; nearly all of them live in and around Emerson, near which is the little frame meeting-house, where First-day, mid-week, monthly and quarterly meetings are now held. The house stands on rising ground amid noble trees and commands a fine view in every direction. It is in good order without and within, the walls being papered, the woodwork and seats painted, and the floor carpeted. It has a seating capacity of more than one hundred. A First-day school is held here before meeting the year round. The Friends' New Testament Lesson leaves are used in the adult class and the Intermediate Lessons in one of the children's classes. There are several earnest young people in the meeting, but very few children at the present time. As there are hardly more than a dozen white children in the public school at Emerson there is no available material for a large school at this place.

More than half the population of Emerson is composed of colored people. They have a church and Sabbath school of their own, and a public school at one end of the town is composed entirely of colored children, taught by a teacher of their own race. A few families claim the right which the law gives them to go to the same school with the white children. All pupils who reach a certain grade, whether white or colored, may go to the high school at Mt. Pleasant at the expense of the township. A few colored girls have graduated from the high school; one of these has been quite successful as a book agent, the others are doing housework. The two races live together peaceably, the whites being dependent upon the negroes for help in the house and on the farms. Some of the old residents say that there has been no perceptible improvement in the condition and habits of the colored people during the forty years that have elapsed since their emancipation. School education does not seem to have spoiled them, but if there is any difference the girl that has been to the high school is a better worker than her more ignorant sister.

The meeting at West Grove, which is a part of Short Creek Monthly Meeting, is about eight miles from Emerson. The quaint little frame house stands upon a hill-top, the view from which on all sides is surpassingly beautiful. At the foot of the hill, on a part of the original grounds, stands the Gurneyite house, in which there is a much larger band of worshippers. The graveyard is divided between the two branches; the portion belonging to our branch is neatly kept and many of the graves are covered with flowers in full bloom.

The regular attenders of this meeting come from three or four families. At the close of the meeting for worship, which is silent except when visiting Friends are present, there is a First-day school composed of one class, in which all take an active part. The Friends' International Lessons are used, as the Friends here associate with members of other Sabbath schools in religious work. On the First-day following the Quarterly Meeting, after the lesson was over, all the meeting excepting one Friend (who had company at home) adjourned to one house, where there was a bountiful dinner and pleasant social mingling for several hours.

The first Friends in this vicinity came overland from North Carolina early in the nineteenth century. Not feeling free to keep slaves they felt that they could not prosper in a neighborhood where nearly all the land was tilled by slave labor; so they sought the Northwest Territory, in which, by the ordinance of 1787, slavery was forever forbidden. Afterwards other Friends came from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland, and before the separation there was a large body of Friends here.

A branch of the Underground Railroad ran through this section by which hundreds of slaves escaped from bondage. A story is told of one peace-loving Friend, that when a slave-holder came to search the house she took her hands from the pan of dough in which they were buried, and pressing them against his flowered silk waistcoat, advised him to depart forthwith. Her cooler-headed husband allowed the house to be searched, knowing that no fugitives were at that time within it. On another occasion, in this same house, the wife led a party of slaves to safety down one stairway while her husband conducted the searching party up another in a different part of the house. Many of the incidents connected with those exciting days have never been recorded, and will be lost to future generations.

E. L.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

SUMMER DAYS AT ASBURY PARK.

AGAIN we find ourselves at Asbury Park where your readers will recall is the place where Friends' Conferences were held last year. A beautiful seashore resort it is where thousands come from Southern and Eastern cities to avail themselves of rest and recreation in a pure bracing atmosphere.

The founder and original owner of the place has been liberal to all denominations in presenting them with ground on which to build their places of worship and he did not overlook Friends when he offered them free use of Whittier Hall for meetings.

A committee appointed by Shrewsbury Monthly Meeting have care and oversight of these, which are held at 4 o'clock and are visited by a number of Friends who sojourn at the Park and adjacent towns during the summer.

On hearing that monthly meeting was to be held at Shrewsbury meeting-house we boarded the trolley and rode twelve miles north to attend it. Meeting was small but as the ministry of the spoken word fell upon receptive minds it was a good one to us.

The ancient house, with its sacred environment of old and endeared associations in a rolling fertile country, claimed our attention and admiration.

Another meeting we attended is Manasquan, the oldest place for worship in Monmouth County, New Jersey. A new house was built about fifteen years ago on the spot of the original one, in which a flourishing meeting and First-day school is now conducted. A most encouraging feature is the good attendance of young people. They had a picnic for the school on Third-day the 18th, at Clark's Landing on Manasquan river, when fifty or more went in hay wagons to spend a day at the riverside, sailing and rowing at pleasure.

A Friend told me she lived on the bank several miles down the river and was conveyed there in her own boat by rowing herself. She is an old resident and I perceived clings fondly to her early memories in connection with this meeting as she related them to me.

My attention was called to a lovely shaded home nearby, where John Woolman's great-granddaughter resided. Other social visits were made to Belmar, Ocean Grove and New York city. The trip by boat from Atlantic Highlands to New York is a popular one and many take it for the ride on ocean and bay.

The New Jersey coast is rapidly growing into favor for summer homes and a ride along the ocean of seventy-five miles south from the city gives one an opportunity of seeing how much money and effort has been expended for material comfort and enjoyment. The fresh water lakes lying along the way between stations and towns so near the ocean, add much to the attractive scenery. S. B. F.

Chester, Pa.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

FAIRFAX QUARTERLY MEETING.

Held at Lincoln, Virginia, Eighth month 15th, 16th, 17th.

THIS occasion was not wanting in interest. The face of the country was charming. The Friends from Hopewell, in the historic "Valley of Virginia," came by carriage thirty or more miles. Every representative answered roll-call on the 15th, at the meeting of Minister and Elders; and on the 17th at the meeting of the larger body the same thing occurred. The attendance and manifest interest at the gathering on First-day morning, and on the morning following were gratifying, while the First-day School Union on First-day afternoon eclipsed all past sessions of that department of service, in liveliness of discussion and evident appreciation of the value of this line of work.

One voice we had been wont to hear on these occasions ring out its richest notes, this time was but a memory, that of Jesse Hoge; but we were not without witness to the truth as Friends interpret it in the ministry.

Besides spokesmen of our own quarterly meeting, Reuben Kester, of Pennsylvania, came and found time and place for acceptable service, not alone to Friends, but to audiences embracing many not of our fold, whether of other sectarians or outside of them all.

On Second-day morning, before meeting, the earthly remains of Hannah S. Birdsall, a noble woman, whose memory is precious because of good deeds, of loving service to the sick and sorrowing, were consigned to earth, adding to the solemnity of this annual gathering. H.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

DUANESBURG HALF-YEARLY MEETING.

Held at Quaker Street, N. V., 15th, 16th and 17th of Eighth month.

FRIENDS were in attendance from all the subordinate meetings composing this body, and it was felt to be a season of refreshment.

The meeting on Seventh-day afternoon of Ministers and Elders, was small, but we were favored with the presence of our esteemed friend Martha Townsend of Baltimore, Md., accompanied by Sarah A. Macy, of Hudson. The former spoke feelingly of the conditions in our small meetings and urged to continued faithfulness, as members of this branch of the church, in watching over the flock. At the close of the meeting our friends made two calls upon families of Friends in the neighborhood, which were gratefully received.

On First-day morning our friend Martha Townsend attended the exercises of the First-day School, giving words of cheer and encouragement, feeling the assurance that good seed was being sown, and that young hearts were receptive of the Truth. As we gathered into the quiet of the meeting, nearly all of the congregation of a neighboring church joined with us in worship. A deep and living silence was broken by our friend quoting the familiar text, "God is a spirit, and they that worship Him, must worship Him in spirit and in Truth." She lay great stress upon the word must, speaking of the many different forms of worship, but under whatever form it must be spiritual, striking down deep upon the rock of Eternal Truth and welling up from the heart's deepest recesses, not only felt and made manifest in the hour of worship, but spreading out in all that concerns our everyday life. She enlarged and emphasized these thoughts and then spoke to the different conditions present; to the aged and those in the middle walks of life, and to the young, tenderly appealing to them, to listen early to the divine call and in obedience thereto each one shall find that all the joy and richness and fullness of their young lives shall be so abundantly increased. She spoke of the home life, of the tender love and mutual forbearance and that care should be taken to give more frequent expression of love and appreciation, which means so much to the weary one particularly, performing the little round of duties.

And in a broader sense this gift of God, a pure, unselfish love, if allowed to control the life, becomes a wonderful power, as opposed to error and wrongdoing—and binding all mankind in a bond of brotherhood.

At the close a fervent prayer was uttered that all might come and partake of the Bread of Life, and find that nourishment that the soul needs.

On Second-day morning the meeting convened for the business of the half-yearly meeting. Reports from some of our meetings seemed not very encouraging, but still a desire to continue, notwithstanding a great loss through deaths and removals.

Our friend spoke words of sympathy and encouragement, and there was much expression given of appreciation and thankfulness that she had been led to come among us. M. J. H.

EDUCATIONAL.

WHY DO FRIENDS MAINTAIN SCHOOLS?

None of our schools furnish financial profit to individuals or to the Society. Practically all need meeting support. Many are only maintained through the generosity of a few benefactors. There are discouraging financial reports at many of our annual school meetings. Many of our schools show an enrollment of which seventy, eighty or even ninety per cent. are not connected with the Society of Friends in any way. Public Schools are daily reaching higher levels of efficiency. And yet private schools increase in number. Among Friends, as elsewhere, our busy men of affairs are not only giving money, but their valuable asset time, that our schools may increase and improve. Notwithstanding the apparent discouragements, and they might be still further elaborated, our schools have ample justification for existence.

1st. We have children, in our cities and towns where our schools are located, to whom we owe the most approved educational advantages.

2d. We have enough faith in the efficacy of the Friendly teaching to desire that its influence reach an ever wider circle.

3d. Many earnest and competent young Friends are year after year choosing the teaching profession. In this connection we seem to be justified in maintaining that the family discipline and influence among Friends is peculiarly adapted to turning out that well-balanced womanhood and manhood that is necessary for the best grade of teaching.

4th. There is no institution of our establishing that so surely and so broadly spreads the Friendly idea as our schools. All Friends conversant with present educational problems see clearly the increasing need of teaching our so-called "Principles." And here we are satisfied to feel that the leaven of Quakerism is permeating the views, firmly disclaiming any idea of proselyting. Other reasons equally worthy might be cited.

Friends have wisely avoided the complete systematizing of their schools. Individuality, brought about by the constant attempt to supply local demands, will continue to be in evidence. We have unfortunately had years of self contentment in which many overtook, and some outstripped us in recognizing the best among the new. But that lethargy is shaken off and the incentive of a keen competition is serving to put Friends' Schools again in the van.

Speaking of the "new" in matters educational, I am reminded that in this country particularly we are apt to be headlong in our adoption of spectacular and untried "methods." Nowhere is moderation more needed. For self preservation we must meet local demands, and these are often as sound as educational theory, but a wisely applied brake is a saving feature. Just now, for instance, schools are experiencing a great demand for short practical courses, and the colleges feel a like pressure. This is wise to an extent but needs to be restrained. Education must give culture, and a sense of appreciation of the best in life, beside being intensely practical. Business schools are supplying the demand that we have been too slow in recognizing. Business colleges, correspondence schools, etc., with an enrollment scarcely believable, furnish evidence enough of a demand we have not met.

Our teachers and our actively interested committees and patrons cannot afford to ignore the ever new educational thought. To be successful scholastically and financially we must be as watchful and devoted to our institutional interests as the modern business man is to his private interests. We have a commodity to supply. It is of a grade and character that once pleased the market. The market needs to be watched, however, and if something different is now desired let us be alive to recognize it and furnish the supply promptly. Through alertness, added to thoroughness, our educational future will be assured. EDWARD C. WILSON.

Friends' School, Baltimore.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE.

In an article on Swarthmore in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, we note the following:

The college buildings and the campus occupy a commanding position. The view includes many miles of the Delaware river, whose nearest point is about four miles distant. The college property comprises over 200 acres of land, including a large tract of woodland and the beautiful rocky valley of Crum creek.

The intention of its founders was to make the promotion of Christian character the first consideration, and to provide opportunities for liberal culture while maintaining a high standard of scholarship. These aims have been faithfully observed in the administration of the institution.

Parrish Hall, 348 feet in length, is a massive stone structure, the central portion of which is separated from the two wings by fireproof compartments. The central building is five stories in height, and with an extension at the rear provides for assembly rooms, lecture room, museum, library, reading room, parlor, dining room, etc. The wings are four stories high. The ground floors are devoted to lecture and recitation rooms; the remaining floors in the east wing contain the dormitories of the woman students, and in the west wing those of the male students. The Dean, as well as several instructors and matrons, reside in the building.

The daily sessions of the college are opened with an assemblage of students and instructors for the reading of the Bible, or for other suitable exercises, which are preceded and followed by a period of silence. The students attend meeting on First-day mornings, with the college officials and Friends of the neighborhood. By these means, and particularly by individual influence, and by the constant effort to maintain in the institution a spirit in harmony with the purpose of its founders, it is believed that a proper care is exercised to mold the characters of the students in conformity with Christian standards.

Swarthmore, as a co-educational institution, undertakes to provide college life in a home setting; to supply an atmosphere in which manly and womanly character may develop naturally and completely. It provides that freedom which places upon each individual the responsibility of self-control, demanding the right exercise of his judgment, while making provision for the correction of errors, supplementing his judgment and will, when necessary, by the direction of those in whom his confidence may be justly placed.

The system of physical training is based upon a thorough and careful examination of each student. The records of measurements and other tests afford a means of noting progressive development, and are, in large part, the basis upon which exercises are prescribed. Particular attention is given to all individuals whose physical development is below the normal, special work being prescribed for such, in order to produce, as far as possible, an evenly developed and healthy organism.

All athletic sports are under the immediate supervision of the Directors, and only those students who are in proper physical condition are allowed to participate. Great care is also taken to keep games and athletic contests within such limits as will make them only a proper means of exercise and recreation, and thus of real assistance to the work of the college.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

NEWTOWN SQUARE, PA.—An all-day conference was held on the 20th instant at Newtown Friends' Meeting-house, near Newtown Square, Delaware county, Pa., under the charge of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Philanthropic Committee. There was a fair attendance, being considerably larger in the afternoon than in the morning. Friends from the neighborhood and other sections of the quarterly meeting arrived with their lunches, some coming by carriage and many by the trolley running from West Chester to Philadelphia. At 10.45 a. m. Charles Palmer, clerk of the committee, opened the conference by reading the 107th Psalm. The article on "Peace," by Henry M. Haviland, at the Asbury Park Conference, was read and discussed, which occupied the time of the morning session.

After lunch from our baskets and coffee bountifully provided by the Newtown Friends, the afternoon session convened at 2 o'clock. The third chapter of James was read and Mary Caley, of Newtown, with her First-day school class, gave an interesting exercise composed of texts on "Mercy." R. Barclay Spicer, of the FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, gave an address on "Temperance," considered from a scientific standpoint, in which he reviewed at length the work of the "Committee of Fifty." The subject was further discussed by Lewis Palmer, Charles H. Pennypacker, Lewis Smedley, and others. The day's program was concluded with a short period of silence, after which we dispersed to our several homes with minds encouraged to keep on with the work.

MICKLETON, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met at the meeting-house on the evening of Eighth month 8th, 1903, and was opened by the president reading a portion of the 8th chapter of St. Luke. Benjamin Heritage read from Janney's History, 9th chapter, 3d volume, followed by reading from the Discipline by Annie W. Heritage. A verbal account of the life of Lowell was given by Marshall Pancoast, who considered him one of the greatest of American poets. Lowell's poem, "The Dandelion," was read and much enjoyed by the audience.

A very able paper was read by Benjamin Heritage, in answer to the question, "Is the race caste against the colored people disappearing?" He said, "I presume the question means, 'Is the race prejudice against the colored people disappearing?' If we compare the recent race riots and terrible lynchings of colored criminals by whites, with the conditions that existed a few years ago, we will be compelled to answer in the negative, although when we take into consideration the immense extent of our country and the great number of its inhabitants, the number participating in those occurrences is very small in comparison with the whole. The history of a race, like that of a nation, extends over a long period of time; and, in order to answer this question satisfactorily, we should go back, at least, to the time at which the first colored people were brought to this country and sold as slaves; and compare their condition then and the prejudice that was manifested against them, with the position they now hold, being that of free men and free women before the law, and endowed with all the rights of American citizens. I think we must undoubtedly conclude that the race prejudice against the colored people is disappearing, although the process may be a slow one and subject to an occasional set-back, one of which is now being enacted. In view of these facts, let us remember those emphatic words of the Declaration of Independence, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Lowell's poem, "The Changeling," was read by Emma W. Peaslee. An excellent sketch of the life of Lucretia Mott was given by Mary Owen, which was followed by a "Lowell Salad," prepared by Mabel Haines, and much enjoyed. Current events were given by Gideon Peaslee, and the following questions assigned: "What is the true meaning of Quakerism?" Eliza Busby; "What qualities must a book possess to be of real use to its reader?" J. Wilmer Pancoast.

ANNIE C. BRADSHAW, Secretary.

THE INDIGO-BIRD.

OH, late to come but long to sing,
My little finch of deep-dyed wing,
I welcome thee this day!

Thou comest with the orchard bloom,
The azure days, the sweet perfume
That fills the breath of May.

A winged gem amid the trees,
A cheery strain upon the breeze
From tree-top sifting down;
A leafy nest in covert low,
When daisies come and brambles blow,
A mate in Quaker town.

But most I prize, past summer's prime,
When other throats have ceased to chime,
Thy faithful tree-top strain;
No brilliant burst our ears enthrall—
A prelude with a "dying fall"
That soothes the summer's pain.

Where blackcaps sweeten in the shade,
And clematis a bower hath made,
Or, in the bushy fields,
On breezy slopes where cattle graze,
At noon on dreamy August days,
Thy strain its solace yields.

Oh, bird inured to sun and heat,
And steeped in summer languor sweet,
The tranquil days are thine.
The season's fret and urge are o'er,
Its tide is loitering on the shore;
Make thy contentment mine!

—John Burroughs.

THE Postoffice Department established during Seventh month 2,455 rural free delivery routes. The total number of routes established for the entire fiscal year ending Sixth month 30th, 1903, was 5,664.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

ALCHEMISTS.

OUT in the brake grows the little dodder vine,

And bravely he succeeds,
For he draws his strength where his golden tendrils twine,

E'en from the vilest weeds,—

But little cares the dodder vine

What thing his tendrils hold,

For within his heart, by the glory of his art,

He turns it all to gold,—

Yes, turns it all to gold, dear heart, he turns it all to gold!

Out in life's brake grows the poet like the vine,

And bravely he succeeds,
For he draws his strength where his golden tendrils twine

E'en from the vilest weeds,—

But little cares the poet's soul

What thing his fancies hold,

For within his heart, by the alchemy of art,

He turns it all to gold,

Yes, turns it all to gold, dear heart, he turns it all to gold!

HOWELL S. ENGLAND.

LET SOMETHING GOOD BE SAID.

WHEN over the fair fame of friend or foe
The shadow of disgrace shall fall, instead
Of words of blame, or proof of thus and so,
Let something good be said.

Forget not that no fellow being yet
May fall so low but love may lift his head;
Even the cheek of shame with tears is wet,
If something good be said.

No generous heart may vainly turn aside
In ways of sympathy; no soul so dead
But may awaken strong and glorified,
If something good be said.

And so I charge ye, by the thorny crown,
And by the cross on which the Saviour bled,
And by your own soul's hope of fair renown,
Let something good be said!

—James Whitcomb Riley.

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL CURRICULUM.

IN connection with the missionary institute at Chautauqua, N. Y., a conference on religious education was held. Among the speakers were Dr. Forbush, Professor Earl Barnes and Dr. G. Stanley Hall.

Dr. Hall made some broad statements and at every step was interrupted by some one in the audience, but the doctor always had his answer ready. Among other things he said that children up to the age of 12 years should be taught from the Old Testament, with the story of the Christ told only incidentally. From 12 on they were to study the New Testament, but the teachings of St. Paul were to be left alone until they were 18 or 20 years old.

"If children question the truth of the Old Testament Bible stories, then our methods are at fault. The modern Sunday-school is not doing the work we had hoped. It does not meet the needs of the pupils.

"The day of the 'international lessons' is past. They did a good work, but have outlived their usefulness, and we are ready for something better. There are some people who think they can improve on the Bible and they make out a course of lessons that skip hither and thither, with the result our children are painfully ignorant of the Bible.

"The kindergarten Sunday-school is a ridiculous situation. It is time we had a change, and a radical change."—[Philadelphia Press.]

HOW TO SOLVE THE DRINK PROBLEM.

Charles H. Shepard, M.D., in Health-Culture.

THE drink problem comes home to every people in every land, and it is one that has to do with every physician, for he knows that with many of his cases life or death depends upon the condition of his patient in regard to the use of alcohol. If he has been a free user of the drug there is not so good a probability of his enduring any severe shock or strain upon his endurance as there would be were he a total abstainer, therefore many physicians, after studying this subject simply from the scientific side of the question, have concluded that the only true solution will come from the fundamental position of total abstinence from all that intoxicates.

Our prohibition friends have worked long and diligently on the legal line, but the results are not so encouraging as one might wish. To convince persons against their will leaves them of the same opinion. As long as there is a demand for alcohol it is sure in some manner to find a supply or a substitute. For this reason it seems desirable that we should strike at the root of the trouble by efforts to decrease the demand, not only for alcohol but for all narcotics.

It is very certain that by instructing our children while in the formative period of their lives as to the real action of narcotics and the laws of hygiene we would soon have a generation of total abstainers, who would be a law unto themselves and who would not be tempted by any of the devices of the alcohol fiend. Furthermore, the scientific study of this question is largely instructing the present generation and driving away the clouds that obscure the truth in the minds of many. Some of the ablest savants of Europe and America find no use for alcohol in the human economy.

Alcohol is so deceptive in that it twists and clouds the minds of those who use it, and that is the trouble with a large amount of the literature on the subject which is written by believers in and users of narcotics. We can get an unbiased opinion only from those who are not under its influence.

Too many of the medical profession have not emancipated themselves from the thralldom of the deadly and destructive narcotic, not only using it themselves, but also prescribing it for their patients. The solution of this problem will be far advanced when the doctors cease to prescribe alcohol.

The food question has an important bearing upon the drink problem. Badly cooked or unwholesome food leads directly to the saloon. To improperly feed a person leaves his system starved and creates morbid desires that are only temporarily relieved by the use of alcohol, and if so treated are sure to return in an aggravated form. The seasonings of food, as ordinarily used, are provokers of continual thirst and destroy the keen appreciation of delicate flavors that come from living on simple natural foods. By instructing the people in the most wholesome manner of cooking their food we would prolong life, promote the cause of temperance and lessen the drink evil.

By building up the body with wholesome natural food and an abundance of outdoor exercise, and keeping the system clean, inside and outside, by systematic bathing, there will be less demand for the deceptive alcohol. Much also can be done for the present generation by providing attractive places of amusements and recreation. Public gymnasiums and baths would be invaluable in the way of health giving recreations and help to lift the community to a higher standard of life. There would be an immense gain if we could have public Turkish baths. A knowledge of their virtues and adaptability will convince any reasonable mind of their large utility. They are capable of great popularity and would be of vast service to the community, as they once were during the Augustan age of the Roman Empire. They should be established in accessible localities and the people educated to their frequent use, and every man, woman and child should be enabled to enjoy their privileges at least once a week. By thus making healthful practices a habit of the people we would help develop a new race. Epidemics would be unknown and many diseases would become extinct. A new era would be ushered in.

An Anti-War Congressman.

THOUGH he formally expressed to the Navy Department three months ago his belief that it is wrong to train men as soldiers and sailors in the Government institutions, Representative Robert Baker, of Brooklyn, is just beginning to hear publicly about it. He had been asked by Secretary Moody to send a list of candidates for Annapolis, but the Congressman sent instead this letter, which, under date of May 6th, at Matamoros, Pa., is on file in the department:

"I wish to say that I most emphatically differ from those who contend that war is unavoidable. To my mind it is as morally cowardly for a nation to make such a plea as its excuse for training men in the art of murder as it was for individuals to contend that their honor (?) required that almost any affront, however trivial, should be wiped out in blood by a duel. To me moral cowardice is much less excusable than physical cowardice, and we, the American people, could do no greater service to humanity everywhere than by openly condemning war and warlike preparations, and stating that we could not be parties to any war until an actual attack was made on the United States by force of arms. I regret my inability to reply at greater length."—[City and State.]

Woman's Rights in Russia.

"ABOUT ten years ago, I met a Russian lady of pre-eminent rank and great wealth who congratulated me upon being a citizen of a republic. As my allegiance to my sex is greater than it is to any theory ever established by men, I replied I could not see that being a citizen of a republic was a matter for any woman to be congratulated upon. She was amazed at this and asked me for an explanation; whereupon I asserted that I was confident that our sex had not fared so badly, either politically or legally, at the hands of the Russian Government as at the hands of the United States Republic. Each of us wagered that the other was wrong; and, to settle the question, we agreed to gather certain data concerning women in our respective countries. We found—that, while in America millions of wives had no individual control over their property, for about two centuries every wife in Russia had been the legal mistress of her own fortune; that, while every woman householder in Russia had had the right to vote on all municipal matters for several centuries, millions of women in the American Republic had no such rights; that 9,000 wives were deserted by husbands in the Republic to 500 in Russia; that thousands of tiny girls were employed in factories in the Republic, while no little girls can be legally employed by Russian factories; and that more women work in the fields of the Republic than in the fields of Russia.— [Kate T. Woolsey, in North American Review.]

Good News from Australia.

"GREATER Britain. Australia's Women Voters. A New Constituency of 850,000 Women. The Women's Political Programme." Under this heading the London Daily Chronicle of July 10th says:

"At the Australian federal elections this year, for the first time in history, the women of a continent will go to the polls. According to the latest figures over 850,000 female voters have been registered. Organization work in the two principal States, New South Wales and Victoria, is already being actively pursued by the various women's Progressive leagues and other agencies representing the Radical vote. Victoria is, however, first in the field with a Woman's Federal Political Platform. Our Melbourne correspondent sends us the document as adopted by a representative conference in that city:

I. EQUALITY OF WOMEN UNDER THE LAW.

(a) Men and women to be placed on precisely the same footing under the laws of the Commonwealth. No sex differences to be permitted in the marriage, divorce, or other laws.

(b) All offices under the Commonwealth to be open equally to men and women on the same terms and conditions of payment, etc. Merit and ability to perform the work to be the sole tests in making appointments.

Our correspondent adds: "All through the present Federal session, politicians in Australia will be thinking not so much of the measures before them as of the coming elections. Every wire-puller has his nerves on edge over the female vote. None dare say how it will go. The granting of the franchise to women and the mandate of the Legislature that every adult shall have only one vote, and that vote only in respect to his actual abode, have so completely overthrown the boundaries and voting strength of existing constituencies that a miniature electoral revolution has been produced. In New South Wales a Government Commissioner has just completed the re-mapping out of that State into Federal electorates. Free Trade Sydney has been given an extra seat, thereby weakening the representation of the country and border districts in which the protectionist vote is, strangely enough, very strong. The Prime Minister's constituency is considerably varied—so much so that Sir Edmund Barton will have practically to woo a new set of electors in December. These things give a new interest to the coming contest for political supremacy in Australia, and render accurate prophecy an utter impossibility."— [Woman's Column.]

The Victorian Women's Federated Political Association of Melbourne announces the candidature of its lady President at the approaching Senate elections. Eminent lawyers consider that a woman may be a member of the senate according to the constitution.

ARRESTS for drunkenness during the first month of license at Rutland, Vt., numbered 68 compared with four in the month last year under the prohibition regime.

THE latest project for translating Booker T. Washington's autobiography, "Up from Slavery," has been undertaken by Cleopas Kunene, in Natal, South Africa, who has applied to the publishers, for the right to translate it into the Zulu language for the benefit of those who are trying to better the condition of the masses of their countrymen.

CURRENT EVENTS.

LORD SALISBURY, Robert Cecil, who died on the 22d, was a second son, and also, having displeased his father in his marriage, had to make his own way until, by the death of his older brother, he became Viscount Cranborne. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church, Oxford. He was elected to Parliament in 1853, and early took a decided stand as a conservative. He was obliged to "eke out a support" by writing for newspapers and magazines. He wrote for the Saturday Review, for the Standard and was a contributor to the Quarterly Review. When on the death of his father he became Marquis of Salisbury, it was one of the great trials of his life that his career in the Commons had to come to an end. In the Lords he came to exercise almost unprecedented authority. Under his leadership the Conservative party has acquired predominance. In the field of foreign affairs—Lord Salisbury's special care—the policies and measures initiated by him in conjunction with Lord Beaconsfield and set aside by Gladstone, have since been generally accepted and become the settled rule of action. He was an imperialist, but in recent years he was distinguished by his conservatism in this as in other matters, leaving to younger men the development of the new phase of imperialism.

THE conviction of the Kentuckians, Jett and White, who murdered a lawyer named Marcum is a victory for law and order. The crime was the outcome of politics and of one of those fierce family or tribal feuds which have distinguished the mountaineers of West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee down to the present day. It is said that in this particular feud there have been twenty-six deaths without a single legal punishment until the trial and conviction of these two men. The lawlessness exhibited has no foundation in race prejudice, but is the sheer barbarism of communities that have dwelt for a century in one of the most isolated places in America. The penalty inflicted is life imprisonment, which to the mountaineers is far worse than death.

DISPATCHES from the Balkan regions are full of massacres, fighting between insurgents and Turkish troops, burning of Macedonian villages. Turkey's War Minister has signed a contract with the firms of Krupp and Mauser for 200 field guns, 200,000 rifles and 100,000,000 cartridges, at a cost of $12,500,000, and all the Turkish military men are reported as strongly desiring a war with Bulgaria.

THE sixth International Zionist Congress began its sessions in Basel, Switzerland, on the 23d. Six hundred delegates were present from all parts of the world, America being represented by 15, a larger delegation than ever before. The sentiment of the Congress is for Zion only and the idea of acquiring Palestine has not been abandoned although Great Britain has offered a large tract of territory in East Africa on which to colonize Jews, who would be given an autonomous government under British suzerainty.

THE Alabama coal strike Board of Arbitration of which Judge Gray, of Delaware, was chairman, made its award, increasing the miners' wages 2½ cents, granting semi-monthly payments of wages, comprising the 8-hour day question and forbidding boys under 14 years entering the mines. There seems to be general satisfaction with the award. The cost of the arbitration to the two sides was nearly $15,000.

THE news that the Senate of Colombia had rejected the Panama Canal Treaty by a unanimous vote came as a surprise. As the treaty-making power there, however, rests with the President and the whole Congress, not the Senate alone, there is still hope that Colombia may consent to the treaty. The Nicaragua route is still open, and was and is favored by very high expert authority; but Colombia knows that she cannot afford to let the canal go that way, and our authorities are so fully convinced of the superior advantages of the Panama route that it will not be given up until the last store is turned.

NEWS NOTES.

THE National Forestry Convention was held in Minneapolis beginning on the 25th.

ABOUT 7500 textile workers in Saxony, Germany, have struck for shorter hours of labor.

SERVIA is rent by factions and there are repeated reports that King Peter threatens to abdicate.

THERE have been fresh outbreaks of rioting in Croatia caused by bitter feeling against Hungarian rule.

MENOTTI GARIBALDI, eldest son of the noted Italian patriot, died at Rome, on the 22d, at the age of 55.

CHARLES REICHMANN, known as the inventor of the first oil cooking stove, is dead at his home in Brooklyn, aged 86 years.

THE fisheries at the Grand Banks, Newfoundland, continue a complete failure. The total catch of cod will be the smallest in 20 years.

THE International Geological Congress opened its sessions in Vienna on the 20th, the United States and Canada being represented.

THE Supreme Court at Vienna, by a judgment given recently, decides that marriages between Christians and persons of no particular creed are invalid in Austria.

THE statistician who finds that during the past year thirty-eight drunken men killed forty-one sober men in Indian Territory knows how to preach a temperance sermon.

PROF. MATZEN, of Copenhagen University, appointed by the Czar as one of the three arbitrators in Venezuelan affairs has declined to serve on the ground that Denmark is an interested party.

It is worth saying at just this time that the Vardaman scheme for crippling negro schools in Mississippi has been recently defeated in the Legislatures of Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina.—[Springfield Republican.]

THE report of the Canadian Royal Labor Commission to investigate the industrial troubles in British Columbia condemns international organizations of labor, which may at any time place Canadian workmen under control of an American executive, and recommends that such orders be declared illegal.

ELIHU ROOT, Secretary of War, has resigned and William H. Taft of Cincinnati, Governor General of the Philippines has been appointed Secretary of War. Vice-Governor General Luke E. Wright is to succeed Governor Taft in the Islands.

GOLDWIN SMITH, who has just passed his 80th birthday at his home in Toronto, still writes two columns of comment on current affairs for the Toronto Weekly Sun, and his lively concern in the affairs of mankind has not in the least abated with advancing years.

THE Oceanic, arriving in New York on the 10th, had on board 1000 bales of cotton, that had been sent to England, but reshipped to this country on account of the rise in price here. Two other vessels of the same line are due within a week, with 1000 bales each on board.

THE Czar has named to arbitrate at The Hague the Venezuelan questions Mouravieff, Russian Minister of Justice; Lardy, Swiss Minister to Paris, and Professor Matzen, of the University of Copenhagen. Their award must be given within six months. The first meeting of the court will be held Ninth month 1.

THE German Emperor is quietly advocating an increase of 39,000 men in the standing army, which would bring the total up to 647,000 officers and men. The annual additional expense would be over $9,000,000. The proposition failed in the last Reichstag but there seems to be hope that it may succeed now, though the "socialist" increase will be against it.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

8TH Mo. 30 (FIRST-DAY).—THE VISITING Committee of Salem Quarterly Meeting have appointed a meeting at the old Cape May Meeting-house, near Sea View Station, W. J. and S. R., at 11 a. m.

8TH Mo. 31 (SECOND-DAY).—FRIENDS' Flower and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Avenue, at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

8TH Mo. 31 (SECOND-DAY).—OHIO YEARLY Meeting, at Salem, Ohio, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding.

9TH Mo. 1 (THIRD-DAY).—BURLINGTON Quarterly Meeting at Mt. Holly, N. J., at 10.30 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 10.30 a. m.

9TH Mo. 5 (SEVENTH-DAY).—NEW YORK Monthly Meeting, at Rutherford Place, New York, at 2.30 p. m.

9TH Mo. 5 (SEVENTH-DAY).—MANSFIELD, N. J., Young Friends' Association, at home of Franklin S. Zellej.

9TH Mo. 5 (SEVENTH-DAY).—WHITE-water Quarterly Meeting, at Maple Grove, Ind., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day at 8 a. m.

9TH Mo. 5 (SEVENTH-DAY).—BLUE River Quarterly Meeting, at Benjaminville, Ill., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m.

9TH Mo. 7 (SECOND-DAY).—CENTRE Quarterly Meeting, at Half Moon, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding at 3 p. m.

9TH Mo. 12 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SALEM First-day School Union, at Salem, N. J., at 10 a. m. Subjects for consideration: (1) What preparation would you recommend for the First-day school teacher? (2) What preparation would you recommend for the First-day school pupils? A cordial invitation extended to all interested.

JOHN G. BORTON, } Clerks.
LOUISA POWELL, }

THE REPORTS OF ASBURY PARK Conference have been sent to the Friends' Book Association, 15th and Race Streets, —a package for each monthly meeting belonging to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting. Correspondents are requested to call for them or to give directions concerning their shipment.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

But if thou art one
On fire with thy impatience to become An inmate of these mountains. . . .

—Wordsworth.

IN addition to the cottages mentioned last week as for rent for Ninth month, three more have been placed with the Company to secure tenants.

Floralba Lodge. Three bed-rooms and bath. Fully furnished for housekeeping. On level walk to Inn.
Waldeck. New cottage; four rooms, bath. Fully furnished for housekeeping. Level walk to Inn.

Tanglewood. Five bed-rooms. Fully furnished. For rent after Ninth month 20th.

The Laurels, mentioned last week, has been rented for Ninth month.

The many friends of Buck Hill who have been disappointed in securing accommodations during the crowded Seventh and Eighth months can find comfortable lodgings now.

No pleasanter way for a mountain visit can be found than to organize a house party, take a cottage, arrange for meals at the Inn and — be comfortable.

First day, the 23d inst., was a b. h. water mark. Two hundred and eighty-five guests for dinner at the Inn. Including those keeping house in their cottages, the waitresses and help about the Inn and about the stables, the population of Buck Hill is close to four hundred.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 South Twelfth Street, Philadelphia
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
{ 623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: { Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWEDE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.
CONSHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES

Thompson Shourds, 2912 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds. Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a., Pa
Phone 3-5478 D Filbert.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.),
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

THE BEAUTIFUL SAPPHIRE COUNTRY IS A DELIGHTFUL PLACE IN WHICH TO SPEND YOUR VACATION.

Along the southern slopes and tablelands of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Western North Carolina, at an average altitude of three thousand feet, with broad ridges pointing off from the main chains towards the lowlands of South Carolina and Georgia, is a country full of delightful surprises to the tourist, sportsman and health seeker; which has been appropriately named "The Sapphire Country." No other State or region contains so many grand waterfalls, such wide sweeping mountain views and such beautiful lakes.

The most interesting of the many attractive features to be found are the beautiful Toxaway, Fairfield and Sapphire Lakes. Nowhere else in the South at this altitude are such bodies of water. All who visit these lakes are impressed with the wonderful beauty and great varied character of scenery. There are towering cliffs rising abruptly for a thousand feet from their shores, and cascades of rare beauty falling directly into the lakes from the lofty tableland surrounding. Some of the mountains in this vicinity range in height from five to six thousand feet. Indeed, it is the general verdict of widely-traveled people that in this respect the remarkable combination and varied and attractive character of lake and mountain scenery of this section is unrivalled by any in the world. Certainly no other part of America has anything to equal it.

Some of the finest hotels in the South are in this beautiful mountain country, the latest being the handsome new "Toxaway Inn," which is open for the summer season, and will remain open the entire year.

Low rate summer excursion tickets are on sale up to and including September 30th, 1903, from all principal points, with final limit to return October 31st, 1903.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

GETTYSBURG AND WASHINGTON. PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The tour will leave New York 7.55 a. m., and Philadelphia 12.20 p. m., Saturday, September 26th, in charge of a Pennsylvania Railroad Tourist Agent, and will cover a period of six days. An experienced chaperon, whose especial charge will be unscouted ladies, will accompany the party throughout. Round-trip tickets covering transportation, carriage drives and hotel accommodations, will be sold at the extremely low rate of $22 from New York, $21 from Trenton, $19 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to Ticket Agents, Tourist Agent 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court St., Brooklyn; 789 Broad St., Newark, N. J.; or address George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Phila.

THE BRITISH FRIEND.

PUBLISHED ON THE 15th OF EACH MONTH.
Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading "The Truth" among thoughtful enquirers.

The August Issue Contains:
"Fellowship in the Sight," Report of Woodbrooke Summer School," and "Pictures of the Past, V.," by the Editor.

"The Home Mission Committee," by John W. Graham.
"The Church and the Ministry," by W. E. Turner.
"How to Improve Children's Sunday Schools," by Amy E. Sturge.

"Work in Armenia," by Reudel Harris.
"Wordsworth and Browning," by Lucy Harrison.
"The Doctrine of the Cross," by Dr. A. E. Garvie.
"The Exile": a Poem, by May Kendall.

A distinctive feature is made of Reviews, and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to those engaged in religious and social work.

Subscription, 6s. 6d. ($1.58) per annum, post free. Specimen copy on application.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER:
EDWARD GRUBB, M. A.,
Devonshire Chambers,
Bishopsgate Without, London, E. C.
J. Linda Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING AND SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Souls of Black Folk

By W. E. B. Du Bois

A REMARKABLE BOOK that is provoking much discussion because of the wonderful eloquence with which the author pleads for right and justice to his people. In these days of increasing agitation over the "negro problem" this passionate human document can neither be overlooked nor ignored. Aside from its remarkable presentation of facts it holds the reader—prejudiced or not—by its fascination of style and overpowering pathos.

Some of the Chapter Headings follow:
OF SPIRITUAL STRIVING.
OF THE DAWN OF FREEDOM.
OF MR. WASHINGTON AND OTHERS.
OF THE MEANING OF PROGRESS.
OF THE TRAINING OF BLACK MEN.
OF THE BLACK BELT.
OF THE SONS OF MASTER AND MAN.
OF THE FAITH OF THE FATHERS.
OF THE PASSING OF THE FIRST-BORN.
OF ALEXANDER CRUMMELL.
OF THE COMING OF JOHN.
OF THE SORROW SONGS.

8d Edition $1.20 net Published by
A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago

The Albertson, New, First-class Family Hotel.
SITUATED AT MANTOLOKING, N. J.
Three miles this side of Bay Head, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, one and one-half hours from Broad Street Station on Market Street Wharf. Fine bathing, Fishing, Yachting and golfing. Send for booklet.
J. R. ALBERTSON,
Formerly of Peasns Manor, Pa.

The Bartram, Accommodates 100 guests.
WILDWOOD, N. J.
Pleasantly situated within 100 feet of beach. Especial attention given to the guests.
J. ALFRED BARTRAM, Owner and Manager.

THE DRIFTWOOD
OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Special Spring Rates. For particulars address
SARAH J. PAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst, Second House from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU, 1222 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN CITY, TENNESSEE AVE., ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

PURE FOOD
skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of Gem Lunch and Dining Room, 1317 Filbert St. These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS.

A Memorial of Robert S. Haviland
with portrait, published by the New York Yearly Meeting, is now ready for distribution. (The memorial is also printed, without the portrait, in the proceedings of the yearly meeting.) Copies of the memorial may be obtained at the New York and Brooklyn Meetings-houses. Friends residing out of the city and wishing copies will please address
Franklin T. Carpenter, Chairman Printing Committee, 787 Park Ave., New York, N. Y.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.
The Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information.

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

A GERMAN newspaper has recently propounded to its readers the question, "Who are the ten greatest men alive to-day?" An examination of the replies received makes interesting reading. Five hundred and two readers voted for Tolstoi; the German historian Mommsen was a close second with 496; Marconi followed with 445; Ibsen received 243; Edison, 368; Nansen, 270; Roentgen, 264; Menzel, the German painter, 248; Koch, the bacteriologist, 238; while the Kaiser ignominiously brought up the rear with only 202. It is well to note that of these ten candidates six are German; such insignificant personages as Herbert Spencer, George Meredith, and Thomas Hardy were not even mentioned. Among those who received over 100 votes were Chamberlain, the Russian novelist Gorky, Hauptmann, the dramatist, and Max Klinger, the German artist.—[Harper's Weekly.]

Y. F. A. Building,
140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
'Phone 1-33-55.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
232 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

PUDDIN'HEAD WILSON

proffered to read character in thumb marks. These may be a lot to that. At least if you saw thumb marks on some printing, fresh from the press, you'd be safe in deducing "cheese printer." Our success in guarding against this and other marks of carelessness has given us the reputation for producing clean, clear-cut work.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKEEKS: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyed. Leaflet 16 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

JUST PUBLISHED
Views and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hillborn, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia. 32 pages, paper. 50c. per dozen 50c.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
Philadelphia, Pa.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (GEO. CHAMBERS, Jr.) 524 1/2 7th St., Philadelphia

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)

REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER

The entire care of Real Estate a specialty.
616 Sanson Street. Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,

Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,

1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPULAR 29-38 D.

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General
Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

- WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
- JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
- ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
- CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
Assistant Treasurer.

Merchants' Trust Company, 611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $50,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
SURPLUS 50,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 42,349.29

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveyancing done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $2 and upwards, per annum
JOSEPH R. RHODES, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. B. LANE, Tell. and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS

- NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFERNY,
- S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIPPETH,
- JOSEPH R. RHODES, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
- JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED J. PHILLIPS,
- THOMAS K. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
- CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
- EDWARD S. SAYRES, EDGAR DUDLEY FARIES,
- JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.
809 Plaster Street, Philad'a, Pa.

Death takes a hand in every partnership.

How much of the success of your firm depends upon your life or that of your partners?

Whatever it is you should provide an equivalent for it by securing insurance in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Board and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTRAR AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, . . . $ 4,457,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

- Samuel R. Shipley, President
- T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
- Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
- Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
- J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
- David G. Alsop, Actuary
- J. Bartoo Towson, Assistant Trust Officer
- Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
- C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

- Samuel R. Shipley, James V. Watson,
- T. Wistar Brown, William Longstreth,
- Henry H. Ogdin, Edward H. Ogden,
- Richard Wood, Thomas Scattergood,
- Charles Hartsborne, J. Preston Thomas,
- Asa S. Wing, Robert M. Janney,
- Philip C. Garrett, Morrison C. Morris,
- Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: September 4th and 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a. m., excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Churnk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a. m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive matter or for connecting with the ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

PLEASE MENTION FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
STEAMSHIP LINES
FROM
PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 30, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 828 and 805 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General Offices, Baltimore, Md.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to all Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK

UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, NINTH MONTH 5, 1903.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' School,

FOURTH AND WEST STREETS, WILMINGTON, DEL.

A day school for both sexes, fitting for either college or business. Scientific, Latin scientific, and Classical Courses. Fourteen teachers. Excellent equipment. Thorough instruction. Graduates entered on certificate in leading colleges. Fall term begins Ninth month (September) 14th. For illustrated catalogue address
HERSCHEL A. MORRIS, A. M., Principal.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and pre- pares for college.

EDUEN BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES. Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The homelike surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or, Jenkintown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogonzi, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR

BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B.S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a. m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.

WANTED.—ROOMS WANTED, IN PHILADELPHIA, unfurnished, for housekeeping. R. B. S., this Office.

WANTED.—A TEACHER IN CHELTON Hills School living near by, will take as members of her family two girls under fourteen. Reference, Dr. J. B. Walker, 1617 Green Street, Philadelphia. Address No. 5, this Office.

WANTED.—REFINED WOMAN OR SMALL family to take main part of furnished house, with the boarders now in it. All conveniences. Terms liberal. Address A. 358 West Front Street, Media, Pa.

BOARDING.

BOARD WANTED IN PRIVATE FAMILY BY young lady. Friend. Friends' family preferred. Address No. 8, this Office.

LARGE, CHEERFUL, SECOND-STORY front communicating rooms, with board; also a pleasant third story room, in Friends' family; in pleasant neighborhood, near trolleys, in West Philadelphia. Write or apply 628 North 3rd Street.

BOARDING.—CHOICE WINTER ROOMS. Second floor front, communicating. Table board. Opens September 1st. Address 1618 Green Street.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS AND SISTERS, 189 1st, N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

TO RENT.—NICE HOMELIKE HOME, LANGHORNE, Bucks county, Pa., from Tenth month 1st. 11-room house, on main street. Bath, water closet, new plumbing, heater. Langhorne spring and other excellent water; porches front and back; old shade, stable, carriage house, fruit. First location. Apply to railroad. Apply soon. Dr. John Paxson, Newtown, Pa.

FOR RENT.—FURNISHED, TO A SMALL private family, for board of two adults, a modern three story porch house in Tioga. Apply No. 6, this Office.

FOR RENT.—DESIRABLE ROOMS IN Friends' family. Address 150 N. 21st St., Phila.

FOR RENT.—BUCK HILL FALLS COTTAGE. The Hemlocks, containing five bed-rooms and fully furnished for housekeeping, can be rented for September or October. Address Dr. W. W. Speakman, 1307 Pennsylvania Bldg., 15th and Chestnut Sts., Phila.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL

Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL.

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

"There's somepin kind o' hearty-like about the atmosphere
When the heat of summer's over and the coolin' fall is here.

Of course we miss the flowers, and the blossoms on the trees,
And the mumble of the hummin'-birds and the buzzin' of the bees;

But the air's so appetizin', and the landscape through the haze

Of a crisp and sunny morning of the early autumn days
Is a picture that to painter has the colorin' to mock,
When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fudder's in the shock."

—James W'itcomb Riley.

NINTH MONTH 1903 was many changes at Buck Hill. Eight of the cottages have, or will shortly change occupants, and there was an exodus of a number of people on Second-day, Eighth month 31st, sixty or more leaving on the various trains. Many guests are coming, however, and the Ninth and Tenth months will be full of life and activity. There will now be an absence of children as the opening schools will call them home. Four of the cottages mentioned last week and week before have been rented. There are still two available.

No more pleasant time could be found to visit Buck Hill than this.

The new bridge connecting the settlement with the plotting on the slope of Buck Hill is completed and is pronounced a success. It shortens the distance to and from the Inn very materially.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Railroad Time-table

for the Benefit of Friends wishing to attend Illinois Yearly Meeting, beginning Ninth month 14th.
Three 1. R. R. connects with C. B. and P. at DePue. Three 1. R. R. connects with C. R. and Q. at Zearing. Three 1. R. R. connects with Illinois Central at Lostaet. Three 1. R. R. connects with Alton, Santa Fe and Wabash at Streator.
Trains due at McNabb going east, 9.10 a. m.
Trains due at McNabb going east, 1.10 p. m.
C. B. and Q. arrives at Zearing, west 11.43 a. m.; east 11.27 a. m.
Three 1. leaves Zearing 12.10 p. m.
C. R. and P. arrives at DuPue, west 10.51, 4.58 p. m.; east 10.70 a. m., 4.26 p. m.
Illinois Central arrives at Lostaet, west 12.51 p. m.; east 7.40 a. m.
Three 1. leaves Lostaet 8.57 a. m., 1.11 p. m.
Toloca, Marquette and Northern leaves Ruland on Illinois Central 1.20 p. m. Arrive at McNabb 3.40 p. m.
Santa Fe due at Streator, west 10.45 a. m., 3.50 p. m.; east 6.12 p. m., 2 p. m., 10.15 a. m.
Chicago and Alton due at Streator, west 07 p. m., 8.03 p. m.; east 10.17 p. m., 1.55 p. m.
Indiana, Illinois and Iowa leaves Streator, west 8.30 p. m., 12.10 p. m.
Local freight carries passengers due at McNabb on I. I. R. R., west 2.40 p. m.; east 8.30 a. m.
BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

Dignified Printing

is not necessarily dull or unattractive, yet it carries that air of good-breeding—imperative in some kinds of printing. An examination of our samples will illustrate this point.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones, Phila., Pa.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXXVI.	561
POETRY: THE BELL OF THE ANGELS.	561
CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE.	561
INDIANA YEARLY MEETING.	562
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
Jerusalem and Rome.	564
WHY LIFE IS WORTH LIVING.	564
A WORD TO THE DOUBTING.	565
THE BATTLE OF LIFE.	565
EDITORIAL:
Conference at Toronto in 1904.	566
Notes.	566
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	567
CINCINNATI FRIENDS.	567
DEAN BOND IN ENGLAND.	568
WOODBROOKE SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY.	568
BIRD STUDY AT BUCK HILL FALLS.	570
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	571
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	572
LITERARY NOTES.	573
POETRY: The Abstainer's Clock.	573
MODERN JUDAISM AND THE BIBLE.	573
MISCELLANY: Clean Advertising; A Friend's View of Preferential Tariff; Bavarian Women Who Vote; Consular Reforms.	574-575
CURRENT EVENTS.	575
NEWS NOTES.	575
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	576

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
663 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: (Amler, Montgomery Co., Pa.)

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWEDD STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street,
From 736 Spring Garden Street

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

Thompson Shoups, 2212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1922 Atlantic St., Tigra.
Richards & Shoups, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1135 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa.
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sanson Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.
CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, PENNA.

JOSEPH L. JONES
AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada.
Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS
IRON FENCING
FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.
809 Naster Street, Philad'a, Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

THE PENINGTON,
Permanent and Transient Boarding
for Friends.
215 E. 15th Street, New York City.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuedig Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

The Albertson, New, First-class Family Hotel.
SITUATED AT MANTOLOKING, N. J.

Three miles this side of Bay Head, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, one and one-half hours from Broad Street Station or Market Street Wharf. Fine bathing, Fishing, Yachting and golfing. Send for booklet.
J. R. ALBERTSON,
Formerly of Penns Manor, Pa.

THE DRIFTWOOD
OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Special Fail Rates. For particulars address
SARAH J. FAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst, Second House from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,
1156 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN BEACH OF THOMPSON AVE.,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of GEM LUNCH and DINING ROOM,
1317 Filbert Street
These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
232 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $3.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 1850 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEO. C. CHILD,
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer
1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia
TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, NINTH MONTH 5, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 36.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903: XXXVI.

TRUTH once discovered is the same for all ; whereas, what separates us is, clinging to our own personal opinion—unwillingness to lay aside what we choose to think.

—British Friend.

Eighth month, 1903.

THE BELL OF THE ANGELS.

It is said, somewhere, at twilight
A great bell softly swings,
And a man may listen and hearken
To the wondrous music it rings,

If he put from his heart's inner chamber
All the passion, pain, and strife,
Heartache, and weary longing
That throb in the pulses of life ;

If he thrusts from his soul all hatred,
All thoughts of wicked things,
He can hear in the holy twilight
How the bell of the angels rings.

Let us look in our hearts, and question
Can purer thoughts enter in
To a soul if it be already
The dwelling of thoughts of sin ?

So then, let us ponder a little—
Let us look in our hearts and see
*If the twilight bell of the angels
Can ring for you and for me.*

—Selected.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE.

The Central Committee of the General Conference met at Salem, Ohio, Eighth month 28th and 29th.

In the morning there were meetings of the sub-committees on First-day schools, philanthropic labor and educational interests. There were thirty-two members present at the general session in the afternoon. The Committee on First-day Schools, in its report, advocated the gradual preparation of a graded course of lessons for use in the schools. The plan proposed, which was discussed and generally approved, will be explained in detail in a future issue of the INTELLIGENCER.

The Committee on Philanthropic Labor advised that delegates be sent to represent the Conference at the annual meeting of the Anti-Saloon League to be held in Washington in Twelfth month ; this proposition was agreed to. It was also recommended that the General Conference take some action in recognition of the Temperance Congress called by the other body of Friends to meet in Washington in 1906.

The Committee on Educational Interests recommended that at the next conference papers should be read showing the advantages of higher education and the value of Friends' schools to the Society of Friends.

A member of the Committee on the Advancement of Friends' Principles stated that members of the committee had visited meetings and families within the limits of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois Yearly Meetings, special attention having been given to Ohio.

The remainder of the session was devoted to the discussion of the place for the next meeting of the Conference. Invitations were given for it to go to Ocean Grove, Chautauqua, Mountain Lake Park, Toronto, Cincinnati and Columbus. It soon became evident that the choice would fall either upon Mountain Lake Park, Md., or Toronto, but the final choice was left until the next morning. When the committee met on Seventh-day it was decided with entire unity to go to Toronto, those who desired otherwise yielding their personal preferences. The time appointed was Eighth month 12th to 19th inclusive.

The Finance Committee reported a balance in the treasury of $981.89, and recommended that the assessment for 1904 be the same as that of 1903,—$1,300 for First-day school work and $1,200 for philanthropic work and the general expenses of the Conference.

To make arrangements for the meeting in Toronto sub-committees were appointed on Transportation, Homes, Building and Grounds, Publication, and Program, and also a general Business Committee. The committee then adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

On Sixth-day evening a good audience assembled to listen to two addresses. Joseph S. Walton gave an able portrayal of "The Faith of Friends." He said that there is a difference between faith and belief, the former being a much broader term. The beginning of religious faith is when one learns that he may walk close to the Father. As many as are led by the Spirit of God become sons of God,—the Spirit leads but whoever follows must make a personal effort. In earlier days the Church taught that a man might be saved by good works done for the Church ; Luther taught that men were saved by grace ; George Fox discovered that men were estranged from God and needed to become sons of God ; he entreated men to turn from darkness to light that they might receive Christ Jesus.

One peculiarity of the faith of Friends is that the unity and harmony of the organization is strengthened by the development of the individual, just as the hand is more skillful when each finger has been trained to do individual work. The development of this helpful individuality will be in proportion to the closeness of the communion between each and the All-Father.

J. Russell Hayes, of Swarthmore, read a paper entitled "The Call to Service" of which the following is an abstract:

Opening with lines from a song, "Comrades, Arise!" by Edna H. Richards, of Salem, Professor Hayes made a plea for the consecration of self for higher service. In order to lend the best aid to the various helpful works in philanthropy and humanity to which we may be called, let us make ourselves worthy instruments by cultivating all our latent powers of heart and mind. The austerity and narrowness that we have inherited as a society must be outgrown. The sweet and humane qualities of gentleness, cheerfulness, and kindness must not be allowed to fade out at the encroachments of absorbing worldly pursuits. The vast flood of tattle and foolish journalism will have no power upon us if we cultivate the finer tastes, fill the mind with noble ideals, learn to love only pure pleasures. As Jesse Holmes has put it in his wholesome way, we need every day to "seek release from the great prison of the commonplace."

If we are to give the finest service possible we must fit ourselves by affectionate familiarity with poetry and art and the world of nature; overcome our traditional austerity; and cultivate the rational and generous type of character that is to lead in the new and broader Quakerism. Emerson, Thoreau, Chas. G. D. Roberts and others, were quoted in support of the speaker's urgency of nature-love. The fully-rounded man or woman, says Emerson,

"Must be musical,
Tremulous, impressional,
Alive to gentle influence
Of landscape and of sky,
And tender to the spirit-touch
Of man's or maiden's eye."

Alice Witbeck, a Swarthmore graduate, was quoted in summing up this part of the paper. "Fellowman," she wrote, "cease thy vain search for what thou canst not find; grasp the golden moment of the present; see the glories of the radiant morn, the glow of the setting sun; adorn thy life with culture and refinement; but mercifully turn thine eye upon thy neighbor who is calling upon thee in his hour of need; teach him to know what thou dost know, and to see what thou dost see!"

Prof. Hayes urged the wide reading of two classics of Quakerism, Wm. Penn's sane and wholesome little volume, "Some Fruits of Solitude," a veritable guide of life in its cheery and helpful maxims (published by John Lane, New York); and John Woolman's "Journal," which Wm. Ellery Channing called "beyond comparison, the sweetest and purest autobiography in the language." A new pocket-edition (issued by Macmillan, at 25 cents) should be distributed widely by some philanthropist among us. It will give every reader a more living and loving devotion to Quakerism.

In conclusion, the speaker recommended a careful reading of the Reports of the Biennial Conferences, and quoted passages from papers by Robert M. Janney, Wm. M. Jackson, and Franklin Packer, as illustrations of his contention that these papers, and the after-remarks upon them, often embody the very essence of our Quaker attitude towards philanthropy and Christian teaching. "Let us make ourselves worthy," was the closing injunction, "of that beautiful primitive title borne by our fathers before they were called Friends or Quakers; may we veritably become the Children of the Light."

(To be continued)

INDIANA YEARLY MEETING.

(Continued from last week.)

THE business sessions of Indiana Yearly Meeting of Friends began Second-day morning Eighth month 24. One end of the house was well filled, there being about two-thirds as many men as women in attendance. After the opening silence Samuel P. Zavitz expressed an earnest desire for the welfare of all assembled. All the representatives were present except four, for whose absence sufficient reasons were given. In addition to those read on Seventh-day minutes were read for Edward Coale, a minister of Benjaminville Monthly Meeting, Ill., and one for Samuel P. Zavitz, a minister of Coldstream Monthly Meeting, Ont. The attendance of Friends from all the other yearly meetings except Ohio was encouraging and many expressed thankfulness for their presence. The absence of faithful members who were kept at home by bodily infirmities or had been removed by death was feelingly alluded to. The young people were asked to fill the places of these by taking hold of the business of the meeting, being careful, however, to seek for Divine guidance. A heartfelt prayer for light and strength was offered by Edward Coale.

The committee appointed to gather the exercises of the meeting were instructed to continue until their successors were appointed, that they might gather what is said on the First-day preceding the next yearly meeting. The trustees of the Benevolent Fund of the yearly meeting reported that they had expended $391 of the income of the fund during the year and that $450 of the principal was uninvested.

At the opening of the afternoon Aaron B. Chandler was reappointed clerk; Edith M. Winder having asked to be released Susan L. Brown was made assistant clerk. The epistles from the other yearly meetings were read and appreciated. Feeling allusion was made to the loss sustained by the death of Howard M. Jenkins, but the faith was expressed that his life and influence still inspires and strengthens those who are striving to carry on his work. Pierce J. Cadwalader, of Cincinnati, said that those who believe in immortality should never be discouraged because an individual has changed his form of living and is no longer with us in the body.

Joel Borton counseled all to be faithful and true and enjoined upon the young to mind their own light. Samuel P. Zavitz expressed his pleasure that the epistles now tell us what Friends are actually doing rather than what they ought to do. Esther B. Wallace spoke of the strength and peace that comes to those who daily hold communion with the Heavenly Father. Anna M. Jackson, of New York, said that the only way to pray without ceasing is to make every word and deed a prayer.

On Third-day the answers to all the queries were read and many helpful thoughts were expressed in connection therewith. While the attendance at many of the meetings is small there is evidence of increased life in several of them. Friends were reminded of their individual responsibility in this respect and each was asked to put to himself the question, Have I done what I could? The duty of the meeting towards its members was emphasized, for attendance will be greatly increased if the meetings are so full of the Holy Spirit as to make them worth attending. The young should be made to feel that their presence is very encouraging. Visiting Friends felt it to be a cause for congratulation that Indiana Friends so generally discourage the use of intoxicants and tobacco.

The ministers and elders held their concluding session on Fourth-day morning. This was followed by the usual mid-week meeting for worship, which was well attended but not so large as the meetings on First-day. Among those who spoke were David W. Branson, Samuel P. Zavitz, Elizabeth Lloyd, Joel Borton, Davis Furnas, Clarkson Butterworth and Abel J. Mills. The thoughts of those assembled were turned to the three essentials, Light, Life and Love, and it was shown how the co-operation of God with man deepens personal responsibility, and makes our life here on earth a part of the life eternal.

The sessions on Fifth-day were mainly devoted to reports of the various committees. The statistical report showed a total membership of 1,450, of whom 577 are males and 773 females. Although there has been a net loss of 18 during the year it was felt to be encouraging that 14 members had been added by conviction.

The committee to work for improvement in marriage and divorce laws reported that with the exception of a slight change in Indiana the needed legislation on this subject had been crowded out by temperance legislation.

The treasurer reported a balance of $157.71 and the meeting authorized that $350 be raised for next year. Joseph C. Ratliff was reappointed treasurer. Alma Kelly was appointed trustee of the Yearly Meeting Fund, in place of Nixon G. Brown, who asked to be released.

The Philanthropic Committee reported work along various lines. Temperance workers were much encouraged because of the good results that have followed the Beale law in Ohio and the use of the blanket remonstrance in Indiana. In securing these results Friends have cooperated with other religious denominations, and with the Anti-Saloon League. One monthly meeting reported having visited the county jail, orphans' home, and county infirmary. Anne M. Jackson reminded Friends that the first separate prison in the United States for women under the care of women was established in Richmond. Henry M. Haviland said that Friends should not advocate arbitration as a good thing in itself, but simply as being preferable to war. Difficulties ought to be adjusted by mutual concessions, without resorting to the machinery of arbitration. The following letter to Governor Durbin, of Indiana, presented by the Philanthropic Committee, was endorsed by the meeting, signed by the clerks, and given to a special committee of two to be presented to the Governor:

"We feel it right in our annual gathering to express our great appreciation of thy untiring efforts in endeavoring to suppress lynchings and kindred crimes in our State."

The Joint Committee on Isolated Members reported slow but sure progress; correspondents have been found in a number of Western cities through whom traveling Friends may arrange for religious meetings or personal visits.

The Committee on Friends' Boarding Home reported that they had in hand $10,435; of this sum $5,000 had been raised by subscription, and $5,000 contributed from the Cincinnati fund; to this the yearly meeting added $2,000 from the Alvin Fossett fund. The home will be situated at Waynesville, Ohio, and the committee was authorized to begin building as soon as the funds on hand amounted to $15,000.

The six epistles prepared to be sent to the other yearly meetings were read and approved. Several of the visiting Friends expressed their appreciation for the many kindnesses received and earnest prayers were uttered for the welfare of all present. The meeting then adjourned.

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL AND OTHER MEETINGS.

On Third- and Fifth-day mornings half-hour devotional meetings were held immediately preceding the business sessions; these were well attended, especially by the younger members, and were felt to be very helpful.

The First-day School Association held meetings on Second-day evening and Fourth-day afternoon. Delegates responded to the roll call with sentiments; these were followed by sentiments from many others. A discussion upon the lesson leaves showed that these are generally satisfactory as far as they go, but that there are several classes to which they are not adapted. A need was felt of Bible lessons for very little folks.

A part of Fourth-day afternoon was devoted to an address by E. C. Dinwiddie, Legislative Superintendent of the National Anti-Saloon League. He urged Friends to write to members of Congress urging the passage at its next session of the Hepburn bill, which would stop the importation of intoxicants into prohibition States.

On Third-day evening the young people held a social in the basement of the meeting-house, which is large and neatly-carpeted. This was attended by all the visiting Friends, and was much enjoyed by old and young.

'Tis looking downward makes us dizzy.—[Browning.]

WE in our day had best go back to Christ by pressing forward to Him who is before.—[Editorial in Friend, Philadelphia.]

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 33.
JERUSALEM AND ROME.

GOLDEN TEXT.—This I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so serve I the God of our fathers.—Acts, xxiv., 14.

Before study of Lesson read Acts, xxi., 27–36; xxiii., 1–10; xxvi., 1–23.

It was probably the year 57 or 58 when Paul entered Jerusalem for the last time, though some authorities date it four or five years earlier. He was cordially received by "the brethren" who rejoiced much at the news of his success in the West. But in the interests of the unity of all Christians they urged him to put at rest the rumors that he was teaching Jews as well as Gentiles to set aside the law of Moses. Let him personally go through with some typical Jewish formality in a public manner, thus making plain his position once for all. Paul consented to this, the more readily that he had made a vow after the Jewish fashion before leaving the West, which required some ceremonial to complete it. We cannot but feel, however, that Paul was lacking in perfect frankness in this matter; for his teaching was just what it was accused of being. But the fact of his vow shows perhaps that he had not reached perfect clearness of mind himself, though the teaching of his letters to the Galatians and Romans has no uncertain sound. In any case his attempt to make the Jewish Christians believe that he still observed the Mosaic law reacted upon himself. On suspicion of violating the sanctity of the temple by introducing a Gentile into its inner courts, Paul was mobbed by the Jews—probably including some of the Jewish party among the Christians—and was only rescued by the intervention of a Roman officer. The apostle's remarkable power as an orator was shown in his command over the mob when allowed to address it. But, like Stephen, his address, though skillfully introduced, led up to matter which the crowd could not endure, so that the outcry against him was renewed. His Roman citizenship saved him from an examination under the lash, and also procured for him unusual consideration. Next day when brought before the Jewish tribunal Paul skillfully introduced an apple of discord in the subject of immortality, about which Pharisees and Sadducees differed widely. Here, again, the Christian showed a willingness to use untruth in his personal interest which can hardly be considered admirable (Acts, xxiii., 6–10). It served the purpose, however, of preventing a conviction and sent the case back to the Roman authorities. A Jewish plot to assassinate him was thwarted by Paul's nephew, a resident of Jerusalem (Acts, xxiii., 12–25), and for greater safety the prisoner was removed to Cæsarea, the headquarters of the Roman government. Here he, with his accusers, was brought before Felix, the procurator, no conclusion being reached. The case was further delayed for two years. It would have been impossible to convict a Roman citizen on the charges brought against Paul; but he had won the ill-will of the governor by rebuking his vicious life; and, moreover, the governor by keeping him prisoner won the favor of the Jews, and hoped also to win a bribe from Paul's friends for his release.

At the end of two years a new procurator, Festus, was appointed, and the case came before him. The evident desire of Festus to decide the case so as to bring himself the greatest possible popularity with the Jews led Paul to make his famous appeal to the Emperor, "I appeal to Cæsar" (Acts, xxv., 12). The appeal, and the deference with which it was received, as well as the expectation of a bribe from Paul, already mentioned, show that at this time Paul must have been at least well-to-do in this world's goods. An appeal to Cæsar was an expensive operation, and the appeal of a poor man would probably have been treated with scant consideration. It may be, however, that Paul's family connection or some other circumstances may have given special importance to his case. A visit from Agrippa II., son of Agrippa I., soon after, made an occasion for an address by the eloquent prisoner, in which he made such an impression that the Jewish king was persuaded that he might have been released, except for the appeal, which had been granted.

Not long after Paul set sail, under charge of a Roman officer, for Rome. They met with many dangers from contrary winds and tempests, and were finally wrecked on the coast of the island of Malta. They were rescued not long after, and proceeded to Rome, where "Paul was suffered to abide by himself with the soldier who guarded him" (Acts, xxviii., 16). He was allowed considerable freedom, so that he carried on his mission work with his usual success. He remained here two years (probably 61–62), and we know nothing certainly of his fate. One tradition says that he was beheaded after a trial about 63 A.D. Another and more probable tradition says that he was released at this time, and carried on mission work again, both among his churches in Asia and Greece, and also in Spain. According to this account he was arrested again about 68 A.D., taken to Rome and executed.

From Rome were written the epistles to the Philippians, the Colossians, the Ephesians, and that to Philemon. From Rome, also, probably at the time of his second imprisonment, there were written the epistles to Timothy and Titus, the so-called pastoral epistles.

The epistle to the Philippians is a letter of thanks for a gift, and contains very little theology. The letters to the Ephesians and Colossians combat a tendency to make light of this world and its life, and so to consider conduct—morals—of little account. Ephesians is probably a circular letter, so named because the Ephesian copy has been preserved. Philemon, Timothy and Titus are personal letters to personal friends.

WHY LIFE IS WORTH LIVING.

George A. Thayer, in Christian Register.

WHAT are some of the simple, homely ideals which the most of us who ponder the matter set before ourselves as the main objects of living? One of them is to obtain sufficient leisure from task-work to add to our knowledge of man and nature,—in books,—in travel, in familiarity with the woods and fields.

Another is to make for ourselves a little companionship of congenial and mutually stimulating friends, who will stand by one another in time of trouble, who will contribute daily to each other's fund of bright thoughts and hopes.

A third is to build up within us sufficient character and conviction,—a body of reflection and moral sturdiness, to enable us to face all sorts of circumstances, and not break down into hypochondriacs or suicides, to keep us tranquil and self-poised wherever we are called to go. And a fourth is the wish to do and be that which shall leave our memory green after we are gone.

Instead of these what do we often find? In place of leisure and ripening of the mind, there is a universal passion for getting rid of time, for going somewhere, not to drink in new spiritual vigor for coming enjoyment of home privileges and one's own country folk among whom it is our business to live, but to have the perpetual sense of changing place, like occupants of a swing or a rocking-chair; and the steamers and the cars are filled with men and women who invite the satire of the verses,—

"How much a fool who has been to Rome, Excels a fool who has stayed at home!"

Instead of a talent diligently cultivated of making and conferring friendship, there is the struggle to get into sets and cliques of people who have money or a certain artificial social standing, and with whom there can be no unselfish love and good will because they are not associated, nor do they invite us to join them because of anything sought in common in the realm of noble thought, but to fill the dreary day.

Instead of fortifying the will so as to be able to anticipate misfortune, if it should chance to come, and sickness and death, which certainly will arrive some day, there is a dread of thinking, a feverish putting away of every disagreeable insinuation that the senses and the appetites may get dulled, that health may collapse, and that intelligence and oneness with good men and with God are the only standbys.

Yet surely a man is more than a machine, and has in him, somewhere, capabilities of seizing the beauty of the world, the vast body of wide human experiences, and storing them up in his mind for hours of enforced inaction, for the period of gout and rheumatism, for old age. This apparatus of our brain so wonderful in its reach, when at its best, ought to provide its owner with material for much contentment and hope on whatsoever island of fate he may by chance be tossed like Robinson Crusoe.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

A WORD TO THE DOUBTING.

"I FEEL so uncertain about the future," a dear friend was heard to say. Ah, there are too many earnest ones who feel just so, and why? It is because they do not fully realize that God is their father, and then take Him at His word, just as they would an earthly parent.

Our parents never exact more of us than we are able to do, neither does our Heavenly Father. He just asks the same loving obedience, and when He receives this He bestows a blessing. If we forget and go astray, still He watches over us, ever ready to forgive the moment we ask Him in earnest. It is only with those who continually and willfully disobey that He is grieved.

If we would only grasp the idea that the Christian life is made up of little things, just the simple obedience to the inner promptings of the soul, what heavy burdens would be lifted!

Sometimes it is to be patient with the aged and the infirm; sometimes it is only to give a pressure of the hand or a smile or a kind word where it is needed; but, again, we may be required to come out from among our worldly friends and be separate for Christ's sake. This often takes a great deal of moral courage, but it always pays. God rewards those who do special work for him with special blessings, known to no others, just as an earthly parent does.

"Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee, yea I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Take this blessed assurance to heart, and there need be no fear concerning the future, either in this world or in the world to come.

I. C.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE.

THE battle of life is an ancient phrase which I think I can remember in several commencement orations. Two modern phrases have taken their place beside it in our own day—the strenuous and the simple life. Each of these phrases has its own significance and value. It is when they are overemphasized and driven to extremes that they lose their truth and become catchwords of folly. The simple life which blandly ignores all care and trouble, all evil and conflict, soon becomes flabby and invertebrate, sentimental and gelatinous. The strenuous life which does everything with set jaws and clenched fists and fierce efforts soon becomes strained and violent—a prolonged nervous spasm.

Somewhere between these two extremes must lie the golden mean: a life that has strength and simplicity, courage and calm, power and peace. But how can we find this golden line and live along it? Some truth there must be in the old phrase which speaks of life as a battle. No conflict, no character! Without strife, a weak life! But what is the real nature and meaning of the battle? What is the vital issue at stake? What are the things worth fighting for? In what spirit, with what weapons, are we to take our part in the warfare? There is an answer to these questions in this strong little text, "Overcome evil with good." The man who knows this text by heart knows the secret of a life that is both strenuous and simple, for here are the three things that we need—a call to the real conflict, a plan for the right campaign and a promise of the final victory.—[Henry van Dyke.]

No man has more religion than he exhibits in his every-day conduct.—[Lutheran.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, NINTH MONTH 5, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

CONFERENCE AT TORONTO IN 1904.

THE decision of the Central Committee at its meeting in Salem, O., last week to hold the next General Conference at Toronto, Canada, comes, no doubt, as a surprise to many Friends, but it is not a surprise that the decision should be to hold it within the limits of one of our smaller yearly meetings. A majority of our members would prefer to have the Conference always meet at some point within easy reach of New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia, and many feel that it would be better to have it always in some Friendly center or so easily accessible to some such center that large numbers of Friends could always attend, the smaller conferences in connection with the meetings of the Central Committee being held each time within the limits of one of the smaller yearly meetings. And yet we cannot get away from the feeling, which comes up every time the matter is discussed in any gathering of Friends, that the Conference itself ought from time to time to meet in some place easily accessible to the members of one or another of the yearly meetings whose members could never come in any considerable numbers to a meeting in any one of the larger centers. We like to have a large attendance of our members at these meetings and we need the stirring influence of one of these great gatherings in our older strongholds as much as we do among the little, scattered, distant meetings. But we must remember that we cannot depend on the Conference meeting once in two years, to arouse these older meetings and to keep them interested in the work of the Society. Also there are many other gatherings possible among the meetings about Philadelphia, for instance. There is the Conference of the Young Friends' Association meeting each year with some eastern meeting, and there are First-day School and philanthropic conferences and quarterly meetings with larger gatherings of Friends than attend some, even, of the yearly meetings of our more distant branches. So that a great many cannot get away from the feeling that once at least in four, or six, or eight years the Conference ought to be held within some smaller yearly meeting even though distant from the majority of Friends, and that as many Friends as possible ought to go even though it be a long journey.

Besides the help these Conferences may be to the meetings in whose vicinity they are held we must not forget the importance of such gatherings in calling the attention of those who have known little or nothing of Friends, to our principles. We are responsible for the preaching of our message so it may come to all who could be helped by it. There are such in every part of the country whether it happens to have been settled by Friends or not, and from this point of view we cannot make a mistake in the place of holding our Conference as long as enough of our concerned members can go, to voice our message forcibly. Besides our Conferences will make a more decided impression on the country at large when held in a non-Friendly section than if always held in the old strongholds of Friends where our meetings have been known in the days of their earnestness and inactivity as well as in those of their earnest concern for the welfare of their neighbors.

Toronto would seem to be an especially suitable place for the Conference, too, because, while it is not so very far from the eastern cities it is so far to the north that a summer vacation trip can be very conveniently combined with the Conference trip.

THE British Friend announces that the assistance of Mary A. Wallis, of Southport, has been secured, for a time at least, and that she will be associated in the work of the editorship. The issue for Eighth month, in the editorial "Notes and Comments," discusses the Chamberlain preferential tariff plan and believes that it is not "making any real headway"; in briefer paragraphs are discussed the present amicable relations between England and France, statistics of the effect of alcohol in causing insanity, important experimenting in the line of substitutes for the saloon, some difficulties of imperialism in the Transvaal, the new shilling edition of Rowntree's "Poverty," the persecution of the Babis in Persia. What may perhaps be called the editorial sermon, is a beautiful and most suggestive and helpful presentation of the thought of "Fellowship in the Light" from the text, "If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another," which was spoken in substance at the opening devotional meeting of the Woodbrooke Summer School. "How to Improve Children's Schools," is an important paper on First-day school work by Amy E. Sturge. Some five pages are devoted to the Woodbrooke Summer School. The book reviews, always an important feature of the British Friend, include Chesterton's "Browning," Booth's "Life and Labor of the People in London," with notices of Biblical and theological, social and economic, and general works. "Pictures of the Past" gives extracts from the diary of John Grubb, a "young Quaker of 1786." Letters from J. Rendel Harris gives an account of "Work in Armenia," and one from Paul Sabatier tells of the "Poverty at Assisi," the home of St. Francis. An article on "The Home Mission Committee," by John William Graham, is of especial interest because he has never felt that he could unite with the Committee in employing paid workers, though he hopes "all will recognize that aloofness from the system of the Committee is not due to any carelessness as to the growth of the Redeemer's Kingdom, nor to a merely stupid conservatism and narrow dislike of change"; he also feels that the Committee's "recent decision that under normal circumstances its men resident workers should all earn part of their living, is a welcome sign of an approach to that general coöperation we have so long desired." William Edward Turner makes a contribution to the subject of the recording of ministers, and is answered by the Editor.

BIRTHS.

BAKER.—At the home of the parents, Cloverdale, London Grove, Chester county, Pa., to Thomas and Florence R. Baker, on Second month 13th, 1903, a daughter, who is named Mary Amie Baker.

DICKINSON.—In Chicago, Illinois, Fifth month 28th, to David Knox and Ina K. Dickinson, a daughter, who is named Helen Elizabeth.

MARRIAGES.

WOODSIDE—KESTER.—On Eighth month 13th, 1903, at the home of the bride's parents, near Grampian, Pa., William W. Woodside and Minnie A. Kester, daughter of Lewis and Alice Kester, both members of West Branch Monthly Meeting.

DEATHS.

BROWN.—Seventh month 23d, 1903, at the residence of her son-in-law, Walter S. Trew, Chestertown, Md., Elizabeth Thomas Brown, in the 75th year of her age. She was the widow of Cornelius C. Brown, of Kent county, and a daughter of the late Thomas W. and Elizabeth Simmons Trew. She was a member of the Society of Friends. Interment was in the family burying-ground on the Comegys farm.

DIXON.—Eighth month 22d, 1903, at her home in Kennett Square, Chester county, Pa., Susan M. Dixon, in her 81st year.

Interment was made in the old burial-ground at Hockessin, Delaware, of which meeting she became a valued and consistent member when she entered the Society by conviction in early life. The marked characteristic of her long and useful life was an uncompromising honesty of thought and expression as embodied in the Scripture injunction, "Let your yea be yea, and your nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." The same sincerity which made her faithful to rebuke, made her also the true friend and wise counselor, leaving a wide circle of friends to mourn her loss and to remember her virtues.

FRITTS.—At the home of her son, William, in Marshall county, Iowa, Eighth month 10th, 1903, Margaret Fritts, in her 75th year. Burial at the Marietta Meeting-house.

She was born in Orange county, N. Y., and lived for many years at Macedon, N. Y. She went to Iowa two years ago to live with her son.

GRIEST.—At Beaumont, Texas, on the 11th of Seventh month, 1903, Mordecai P. Griest, son of Daniel and Rose D. Griest, aged 26 years.

LEVIS.—At the home of his sister, Lucretia M. Rice, Media, Pa., on the morning of Eighth month 7th, 1903, after a short illness, Lewis Levis, son of the late Ezra Levis, aged 87 years; a member of Providence Monthly Meeting.

PENNOCK.—Eighth month 10th, 1903, at his home in Kennett Square, Chester county, Pa., Samuel Pennock, in his 87th year.

Stalwart, this life is done. The conflict brave between the good and evil forces here is ended well, as seen by human eyes. Thy brave soul did not falter when the smoke of battle filled the air, nor trumpet call at daybreak find thee dumb. The mustering-out gave back an honored name. Soldier, farewell! Not ours the final word; within that tent to which we saw thee go, thy Great Commander gives the pass-word true. M.

TAYLOR.—At Langhorne, Pa., Eighth month 25th, 1903, Elizabeth I. Taylor, widow of the late Joseph K. Taylor, in the 78th year of her age; a member of Middletown Monthly Meeting of Friends.

A life-long and consistent member of the Society of Friends. She was ever ready to extend a helping hand in time of sickness or death. She was very unselfish, always thinking of the welfare of others rather than her own comfort. Of her it may be truly said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Two sons survive her.

WALKER.—On the morning of Eighth month 20th, 1903, at her home near Highland Creek Meeting-house, Washington county, Indiana, in her 63d year, Lucy E. Walker, youngest daughter of William and Mildred Hayward, formerly of Clark county, Ohio.

She was a valued and consistent member of the Society of Friends, faithful and true in all the relations of life, to the poor and needy a sympathizing friend, and especially beside the bed of sickness was her loving heart and hand most tenderly manifest. She leaves a husband and two daughters, with a number of warm friends to mourn her loss. After a very solemn meeting, her earthly tabernacle was laid to rest in Friends' burying-ground at Highland Creek.

CINCINNATI FRIENDS.

THE Friends' Association of Cincinnati held its second annual "midsummer meeting" at the Butterworth homestead on First-day, Eighth month 16th. This historic mansion is beautifully located near the Little Miami River, about twenty-six miles from Cincinnati, and during the century of its existence has been the scene of many exciting and interesting events. In the early days of its history it was an important "station" of the "underground railway;" for years its great "living room" was used for Friends' meeting, and many notable people have been gathered within its walls. Elias Hicks once preached there, and in a tiny "upper room" is still shown the high-posted bed in which he slept. Nancy Butterworth, or "Grandmother Butterworth," as she is lovingly called by her friends, has spent in this old stone house many of the ninety-four years of her life, a life of the greatest simplicity, industry, and devotion to others.

The meeting was of unusual interest. It was held under the great trees near the house, and the opening silence was made more impressive by the natural beauty of the surroundings. Edna Hopkins read an appropriate selection from Whittier's poems. The clerk, Edwin Griest, followed with a short talk in which he briefly outlined the history and work of the Cincinnati Association, and spoke with much feeling of our privilege in coming together again in this beautiful place, and of having with us still the inspiring presence of "Grandmother Butterworth." Pierce Cadwalader read a sermon by Rev. Howard Melish, in which the question "What is Religion?" was answered with this definition: "Religion is giving the best we have to the best we know."

Clarkson Butterworth, Rachel Hadley, Isaac Butterworth and others gave some interesting reminiscences in connection with the place, and the incidents of former years. The assistant clerk read a letter from Addison Ballard, a Friend who spent many of his four-score years in this neighborhood, frequently attending meeting in the old house, and who still has a warm affection for the persons and places connected with his younger days. The letter recalled many events of pioneer times, and extended a kindly greeting to old friends and neighbors. A prayer by Rachel Hadley, and a few moments of silence closed the meeting, which was one of the most pleasant and profitable of the year.

GRACE D. HALL, Ass't Clerk.

Cincinnati, Eighth month 24th, 1903.

DEAN BOND IN ENGLAND.

FROM private letters from Elizabeth Powell Bond to friends at Swarthmore, we take these extracts:

WINCHESTER.—“ My table is close by the window looking out on the high-walled garden, shrub-lined, long enough for a tennis-court, with velvet turf and flower garden. This ‘ quiet place with a garden ’ (Baedeker) I have found altogether charming. At 4 o'clock I went to the cathedral service; the singing was very beautiful. After the service I was out in the close. You can imagine the turf and great lindens and cedars of Lebanon and rose-covered walks.

“ I was never more interested in anything at Oxford than I was in my visit to St. Mary's College here in Winchester. The porter was rather heavy at first, but he finally warmed up in response to my interest, and gave me many details. . . . But Lionel Johnson,—the porter remembered him, and that was about all. I asked, ‘ Was he thought of as different in any way from the other students ? ’ ‘ No,’ he replied, ‘ there was nothing remarkable about him; he didn't care much for sports, and did keep to his books rather more.’ At the book-shop near the college I was able to get a copy of his ‘ Poems.’

. . . Close by the college is a house marked with a tablet stating it to be the home of Jane Austen, in which she died. But a lady declared to me, ‘ Some of us older people are sure they have marked the wrong house ! ’ I ‘ snapped ’ it just the same ! ”

BEMERTON.—“ I wish I could do justice to the visit I have just made to George Herbert's Rectory, now occupied by Canon Warre. Mrs. Warre took me at first into the beautiful drawing-room looking upon the garden that slopes to the river, a very pretty stream about like the Brandywine. . . . She remarked that many interesting people from America come to visit the church and the garden. The pretty cap of lace and lavender ribbon she changed for her bonnet and mantle, then we went into the exquisite garden. There is a broad stretch of velvet lawn from the house to the river, with fine old trees here and there; the flowers are in beds along the river-bank, in great profusion and variety and beauty. We came to the medlar tree of George Herbert's planting, at the foot of the lawn. I enclose a leaf for you. The ancient tree has a little fruit on it, of the apple type.

. . . The dining-room also looks out upon the garden.

“ They seem to be full of reverence for George Herbert. His low-roofed study has two of the original windows, with tiny panes. When they were restoring the old church they found a nameless coffin under the altar; since it is known that the poet wished no name on his coffin, they believe this to be his. Canon Warre has placed in the wall a small tablet with ‘ G. H., 1632,’ nothing more. In Salisbury Cathedral is a box for contributions towards a memorial window to Herbert; a mite has gone into the box for Swarthmore.

“ Over the door of the Rectory are these lines of Herbert's, placed there by him :

‘ If thou chance for to find
A new house to thy mind
And built without thy cost,
Be good to the poor
As God gives thee store
And then my labour's not lost.’

. . . I walked back from Bemerton to Salisbury through the meadows, and the air was full of the sound of larks.’

From Oxford, Dean Bond writes : “ I am having two beautiful days here. This morning I have heard a most interesting lecture by Mr. Powys, of Cambridge, on Marlowe and his ‘ Edward II.’ This play is in progress at this moment by the Elizabethan Society. I was too late to get a ticket.”

WOODBROOKE SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY.

FROM the British Friend for Eighth month we take the following in regard to the Woodbrooke School :

More and more as the years go by, the work of the Summer Schools is passing out of the region of experiment into that of assured success. The gathering of the present year shows every promise of fulfilling the highest hopes of those who believe that the future of the Society of Friends, and its power worthily to deliver its message to the world, depends in no small measure upon this work. . . .

As the students assembled on the 23d ultimo the useful plan was adopted of requesting each to wear a card with his or her name plainly visible. The need for formal introductions was thus avoided, and many pleasant acquaintances were at once struck up—some friendships formed, indeed, which are likely to last through life. The spirit of love and comradeship, completely overshadowing petty differences of desire or opinion, was as manifest as ever; as also was the combination of strenuous intellectual effort, and earnest social inquiry, with deep and searching spiritual exercise.

The absence of Rendel Harris, who, with his wife, is still in Armenia, was, of course, severely felt. But he did what he could to make up for absence in body by sending a delightful and characteristic letter, which was read to the students. . . .

Woodbrooke is situated in the heart of a “ forward movement ” in the Society of Friends, there being within easy reach quite a number of meetings, most of which have been lately gathered. It was the desire of the local committee that the students should, as far as possible, be encouraged to visit these meetings, not only with a view to encouraging them by their presence, but also that they might be brought into touch with methods that have led to a large ingathering of numbers.

Wet and showery weather interfered a good deal with the excursions that had been planned for the first week; but a large party spent a delightful afternoon at Kenilworth, on the 28th, under the guidance of Harrison Barrow, who kindly entertained them to tea; and on several afternoons, by invitation of M. Catherine Albright, parties driving and cycling were entertained to tea at her residence, Finstall Farm, near Bromsgrove. Smaller parties were formed for cycling to the Lickey and Clent Hills, and in other directions along the beautiful Worcestershire lanes; others made their way to inspect the model village of Bourneville, or to wander in the grounds of Northfield Manor House (the present residence of G. and E. M. Cadbury), which on several afternoons were open for their use. With these and other resources, and the beautiful grounds at Woodbrooke always at hand, the time never dragged.

The British Friend closes its excellent summaries of the lectures, reports of which have already been given in the INTELLIGENCER, with the following:

In speaking of the special addresses, one other must be referred to, which had a very special charm. Elizabeth Powell Bond, Dean of Swarthmore College, near Philadelphia, read a paper giving an account of her recollections of Emerson and other New England worthies. Mrs. Bond was in Boston when the news came of Lincoln's proclamation abolishing slavery, and she joined in the great rejoicings. Her kindly face and beautiful voice gave an added charm to the paper which was very delightful on its own account. We were all glad to have this link added to those which bind us to our Friends across the ocean.

After the two morning lectures, those of the students whose appetite for knowledge was not yet satisfied met for special teaching,—a class in New Testament Greek . . . and a Bible class. . . .

THE SECOND FORTNIGHT.

The account of the second term of two weeks as given in the Friend (London) is, in part, as follows:

The settlers of the first fortnight have separated once again. It has been a fortnight of growing interest and enthusiasm from beginning to end.

. . . Only a very scanty remnant remained to welcome the new settlers who soon began to arrive.

. . . The newcomers were soon made to feel at home in an evening social gathering. . . .

Following on the devotional meeting at 9 o'clock each day, the classes began with a lecture from Dr. George A. Barton, of Bryn Mawr College, on "Studies in the Psalms." He carefully considered the probable period when the Psalms were collected into books, and the occasions which called them forth, when that was possible, and pointed out the subsidiary groups, such as Songs of Degrees, of the Sons of Korah, of David, which were incorporated in the five books as we now have them in the Revised version.

Professor Peake's lectures followed on the "Organization of the Early Church." The first lecture dealt with the extreme difficulty of arriving at clear conceptions on a subject which goes to the root of the divisions of the Church of Christ to-day. Our information is defective; critical difficulties abound.

. . . The lack of historic imagination which may exist in the sources as well as in ourselves, and whereby writers find it difficult not to read into the past the conditions of their own time. . . .

Following on the morning lecture came a Bible class by Susanna E. Wells, on the "Methods of Christ in Dealing with Individuals." In the evening E. Rowntree read a paper on the "Value of Political Economy."

First-day began early for some of the settlers, who were glad of the opportunity of visiting some of the many Adult Schools in the district. In the afternoon Dr. George A. Barton gave an account of the year he has spent in Palestine on behalf of the American Archaeological School. The settlers divided forces in the evening, a contingent going to Bull Street, Birmingham, to hear a lecture from Anna W. Richardson on the "Knowledge of God."

As Dr. Barton had to leave us early on Fourth-day morning, he was bound to compress his last two lectures into a single day. His final lecture was particularly valuable. In it he attempted a general classification of the Psalms for religious use. He thought much fresh light would be shed upon the Psalter by reading it through afresh after classification. In closing, he pointed out that the Psalter is a type of the varied religious life of modern Christendom. It mirrors the soul's religious faith and yearning after God. We need not be unduly disturbed if the Psalms are not the creation of a single poet but of many, for in the latter case its value is enhanced, since it is the expression of a great variety of religious experience.

The value of Professor Peake's lectures may be gathered to some extent from his own summary of the ground covered. Our Lord did not organize an external Church, though he doubtless foresaw it. Each "ecclesia" was left free for its own classification, under the guidance of the spirit. The problem of unity did not trouble the early Christian community, so long as it was merely on Jewish soil, but it sprang into prominence when the Gentile churches grew up. Paul, while recognizing the independence of each community, yet worked for unity, and defined the relation of the individual to the Church in his great metaphor of the "Body of Christ." In its early organization the primitive Church perhaps most nearly resembled modern Congregationalism. Two types of ministry were recognized (1) that in which the Spirit's presence visibly manifested itself through the gifts of prophecy, teaching, etc.; (2) that of oversight and general administration. The term "episcopos" (bishop) gradually attached itself to the official position of those who were selected from the "presbuteroi" (elders) for administrative purposes. Throughout the Church of the New Testament both these types of ministry were "charismatic," i. e., based on the recognition of gifts; that was no tendency to a central or monarchical pastor ruling over the churches of a particular city or district. A "bishop" had no authority outside his own church. The influence of Cyprian in the third century resulted in the development of sacerdotal and sacramentarian views. A Christian hierarchy was built up, claiming to be the channel of apostolic "grace," and thus the way was prepared for the emergence of Rome and the claims of Papal supremacy over the Church.

Professor Starbuck very kindly stepped into the breach caused by the early departure of Dr. Barton, and on Fourth-day morning gave us a lecture on "The Submerged Nine-Tenths of Life," in which he showed that most of our life is determined by the sub-conscious influences which come from within, and emphasized the importance of beauty in the inner man. "Intimation," not "Thought," is the religious sense. We cannot prove the existence of God, but yet "we know" it is a fact. Professor Starbuck kindly acceded to the request that he would give a second lecture on Fifth-day evening, which he entitles, "The Control of Life from Within." The inner life needs a progressive adjustment to circumstances; the great fact in human evolution is the progressive selection of a spiritual environment. Only as the human will recognizes this function can God work out his destiny in human lives.

We must not pass over the two valuable and interesting lectures given by Margaret Sewell on "Philanthropy in Relation to Social Prosperity." The first lecture was devoted to a luminous exposition of the problem and of the complex difficulties which face the social reformer. The second lecture indicated some of the points at which we may work, and the aims to be kept in view. "Character," more than anything else, lies at the root of social evils. Care of religion, education, and health contribute to the rebuilding of character. As regards relief, the canons of private philanthropy are (1) it should cooperate with public effort; (2) it must not undermine independence. Fruitful discussion followed these, and most of the other lectures.

(End of third week.)

For Friends' Intelligencer.

BIRD STUDY AT BUCK HILL FALLS.

BIRD study was pursued with enthusiasm by a number of persons at Buck Hill Falls during Sixth month and Seventh month. At almost any hour of the day there might be encountered out of doors groups or individuals with dangling glasses moving with that stealthy tread so soon acquired by the bird-lover, or pausing to stare fixedly at a puzzling sparrow or warbler. Their occupation was immediately apparent to all, and the passers-by showed their sympathetic interest by hushing all talk while near.

For all students, young and old, there was field work, in groups of never more than six or seven; and for most of the grown-ups, to enable them to continue the study by themselves, there was systematic work with skins to teach methods of observation, the use of the manual, family and specific characteristics. The object aimed at was not only to help all to make the acquaintance of the living bird, but to imbue each one with a sense of the rights of the birds and a knowledge of how to respect them.

The early rising thought to be necessary for bird-study is a bugbear to some, so there were early and later sections, the former breakfasting from an hour to two-and-a-half hours before the latter. During the cold and rainy days of which the season had so many, it was found that early rising was unnecessary, since the best work was done after the usual breakfast hour. Sometimes a section went out late in the afternoon, often carrying a lunch, in order to hear the evensongs of the birds.

Material for study is plentiful within easy walking distance of the Inn. Being surrounded by trees, the voices of woods birds are heard from the piazzas, and immediate vicinity of the Inn. Perhaps the commonest of these are the Ovenbird, the Whip-poor-will (early in Sixth month), the Red-eyed Vireo, the Wood-Pewee, the Wood-Thrush, and the Robin, who is everywhere. These voices not being well-known to persons in general, they therefore missed their familiar favorites. But one has to walk a short distance only to reach open fields, orchards and thickets, where may be found bluebirds, wrens, cat-birds, king-birds, swallows, and other well-known and beloved species, besides others not so well known. In another direction, through the woods and along the stream, are scarlet tanagers, whose glowing color delights the observer; warblers—at once the joy and despair of bird students, and the Wilson's Thrush, or Veery, the lover of moist cool woodlands. Longer walks take one to marshes and meadows, the haunts of Red-winged Blackbirds and Meadowlarks. This diversity of country gives a pleasant variety to tramps and ensures an interesting variety of species. A further variety is due to the altitude. Certain warblers are found in the upper Alleghanies which would be found farther north in a flat country. Then the cutting down of the hemlock forests has permitted the growth of thickets which invite such birds as the Brown Thrasher and the Yellow-breasted Chat.

The finding of the Chat was a pleasant surprise. It was from the thicket in the edge of the second growth which had replaced larger trees that I heard his unmistakable voice one morning, while out with a class. But several weeks passed before he was actually seen, for the wary chat is likely to disappear on the incursion of a number of persons, and one often finds it necessary to spend several hours in the still hunt before seeing his brilliant yellow vest, and clown-like contortions.

Bird study is full of these delightful surprises, and the season at Buck Hill was no exception to the rule. One of the most exciting of these was the discovery of a Whippoorwill's nest—or rather, a Whippoorwill brooding her two eggs, for nest she makes none. An effort was made to "hush up" this "find" for fear too many visits would drive the shy bird away from her eggs; and the few to whom the spot was shown were solemnly pledged to secrecy. Although a number of visits were made to the spot first and last, so carefully were they made that the bird would remain motionless, only opening her eyes a crack to scan the visitors. She did well to trust to her protective coloration, for so perfectly did she blend with the dead chestnut leaves about her that many could not see her when the exact spot was pointed out. After the two downy young were hatched she remained in the same spot, covering them by day for five days. It was very interesting to me to learn these facts, for I had wondered whether the young left the nest at once, as most down-covered birds do.

Another pleasant occasion to the bird-lovers was the visit of Mr. Witmer Stone of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, who gave an informal talk upon birds, and who identified, during his stay, the rare solitary Sandpiper and the Great Blue Heron at the foot of West Mountain.

The interest aroused in the birds extended to the children, even to those not in the bird class. One small maid aroused her mother at an unreasonable hour, demanding the name of a bird she heard singing. The mother sleepily denied all knowledge of it, whereupon the little girl, stamping her small foot, declared: "Well, mother, Miss M. may be a good teacher, but she isn't well teached!"

A few of the bird-students were so fortunate as to hear the Veery, or Wilson's Thrush, the bird with the wonderful æolian harp song, and this awakened a desire in the less fortunate ones to hear it too. When it was reported as heard some miles up the Buck Hill Creek nearly two weeks after it had been officially said to have ceased singing, three enthusiasts started on a tramp to hear it, regardless of threatening clouds. When the spot was finally reached there was no sign of the Veery, but as if to ensure some excitement, a thunderstorm broke and drenched the searchers who were three miles from anywhere, and had to tramp for an hour in pouring rain and roads which were pouring torrents. But these little incidents cannot dampen the ardor of your true bird-lover.

The list of species positively identified numbers seventy. This is, of course, not an exhaustive list, and there was no special effort to make it so, since that was not the object of the bird-study.

MARY MANN MILLER.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

WESTERN FIRST-DAY SCHOOL UNION.—At a meeting of the Union in Fourth month the subject discussed was "Taking Responsibility in Public Affairs." Following is the substance of two papers that were presented:

No one has a right to enjoy the manifold benefits and advantages of citizenship without contributing his fair share of labor towards securing them. It is true, some have more leisure and more opportunities than others, yet not one of God's children is so humble or so handicapped but that he at least can manifest a living interest in public affairs.

To be sure, there is nothing romantic or heroic in the ordinary affairs of public life, in visiting schools, meeting committees, going through the monotonous routine of First-day school work and meeting, and so forth; but some one must do it, and what right have you or I to shirk an obvious duty because it is not congenial or entertaining, or because, perhaps, it interferes with some social gayety dear to our hearts.

Are we growing so selfish and self-centered and narrow-minded that our horizon is thus meanly bounded by our own wants and desires? Houses and food and clothing and social distinction are not the only things needful, and they are not needful in the highest degree.

The time we give to public duties is no mere sacrifice, it brings its own reward. We learn the luxury of doing good, and it is a beautiful thing to be able in some respects to merge our private interests in the greater interests of the common life.

Enthusiasm is the lever that moves the world, and we have only pity for those who are so handicapped by self-love that they are never inspired by anything that fails to gratify their senses only.

From all sides comes the oft-repeated regret,—there are so few willing hands to take up the little responsibilities of life, and the work falls heavily upon the few faithful ones.

A few years ago our First-day School Unions were an inspiration and uplift beyond measure to First-day school work, but now it is almost impossible to obtain delegates even, who are willing to serve without protest or remembrance of some sort, and one cannot fail to mark the absence of the young men and women of our Society who have a right to be, and therefore should be, the life and inspiration of such gatherings.

Is it because they seek a more congenial atmosphere than a First-day School Union; a more exciting form of diversion on the holy Sabbath than our First-day schools and meetings can offer them?

Is it not time that Friends should earnestly consider their responsibilities in public affairs and arouse to the necessity of living for others, even as the Master of all lived and consecrated His life to His fellow-men? M. S. B.

It seems wholly inconsistent for one who desires to walk in the footsteps of Christ,—Him who drove the money-changers out of the Temple—to shirk the obvious duties of citizenship, for truly there is much to do; educational affairs; the struggle between capital and labor; the health of our cities and towns; the conduct of local affairs; the uplifting of the poor and ignorant whom we have always with us, are responsibilities which concern us deeply, for try as hard as he may, no man nor class of men can live to self alone.

It is not money that is chiefly wanted—thought and love are more than gold; those who give time and strength and hope and courage give far more than money.

From every side comes the query, why are the younger members so conspicuously absent from meeting and First-day school, from unions, committees, and so on? It has occurred to me that perhaps it is because we live in a "club" age; and that our spiritual life is being practically "clubbed" out of existence, for what with farmers' clubs, women's clubs and men's clubs, and the various and many social clubs, time and inclination to attend graver organizations is rare.

Perhaps after all the key to the situation is selfishness; if we could forget self and its gratification, and consecrate our lives to diminishing human misery and correcting human error, the question of responsibilities would be solved. "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another. By this shall all men know ye are my disciples." A. R.

NEWTOWN, PA.—The Newtown Junior Friends' Association met on Fourth-day evening at the home of T. Vaughan Stapler. The question under consideration was "What opportunities does the Society of Friends offer to the young people for active work during the next generation?"

Mary G. Wilson said that it is difficult enough to realize the opportunities of the present without looking ahead and telling what is in store for the young people thirty years hence. While she was no prophet, she felt very strongly that whatever opportunities the Society will offer the young people now or in the next generation, it is only through their own efforts that such opportunities will be available. She hoped that the young Friends of the future would continue in the philanthropic labors in which they are now engaged but thought they should do vastly more.

Any breaking away from established customs or any reforms of far-reaching importance can be carried to successful maturity by young people only. The Society of Friends must either grow or decay. If it is to prosper, it must be through the efforts of the young. Beside giving a helping hand to the less fortunate about us, we are not doing much to elevate mankind in our own land. Charitable work is not true missionary work. Feeding and clothing the poor and educating the ignorant are worthy works, but they are not preaching the gospel. And since the religious principles of Friends are their interpretation of the gospel, the spreading of these beliefs and principles should be their true missionary work. This is the broadest and noblest opportunity for young Friends of to-day, in the next generation and for all time.

Elizabeth Wordman expressed the belief that young Friends could do much for God and humanity by earnest labor in the temperance reform. Since the liquor traffic is the greatest foe with which Christianity has to fight, there can be no more practical or direct way of furthering Christ's kingdom than by the overthrow of the liquor traffic, and while many are laboring for this end there must be many more helpers before they can hope for success.

The subject was considered by Marion E. Briggs, who thought philanthropic work the most practical for the young Friends. She mentioned particularly the departments of prison reform, pure literature and work among colored people, and believed that any efforts along these lines would be well spent.

George A. Walton made an earnest plea for foreign missionary work in India and China, but did not think it necessary that we should make the so-called heathen Quakers, only that we should give them Christianity.

Maud E. Rice spoke on the department of prison reform and said that in this country there is not much need for labor along this line as formerly, as prisons are now so well conducted, that we might consider this reform accomplished.

Martha E. Wilson told of the early age at which the early Friends were called upon to testify to the Holy Spirit, and hoped that the young people of the next generation would not be content to remain silent.

Edward S. Hutchinson spoke upon the industrial problem of the South in its relation to the colored race and the poor whites. He thought that they have a right to a good practical business education, one that will make it possible for them to help themselves, and that Friends could do no nobler work than to spend their time and money in helping to give it to them.

At the next meeting to be held at the home of Elizabeth Woodman, the subject for discussion will be "Religious Toleration—the part which Friends have played in its progress, and do we need more toleration to-day?"—[Doylestown Intelligencer.]

QUAKERTOWN, PA.—The Young Friends' Association met Eighth month 20th, at the home of Howard and Ella H. Kinsey, with a fair attendance. Frank Ball, the President, called the meeting to order and read the 103d Psalm. After the reading of the minutes the president read a chapter from "The Man of Plain Speech." Eleanor Foulke recited from "Among the Hills," by Whittier. Ella H. Kinsey read from the same author "The Quaker of the Olden Time." Anna W. Ball gave a select reading entitled, "Two Colors."

"The blue and gray are the colors of God,

They are seen in the sky at even,

And many a noble gallant soul

Has found them passports to Heaven."

Frank Ball having just returned from a trip to Gettysburg gave a very interesting account of the trip. Sentiments were then given and the meeting adjourned to meet Ninth month 17th, at the home of Elizabeth Kinsey.

A. B. R., Cor. Sec.

A TRADESMAN has been elected to the Spanish Cortes for the first time in its history. He is Jaime Angles, and is a cooper by trade.

A MOST important discovery was made recently during excavations in the Roman Forum, consisting of the base of the celebrated equestrian statue of the Roman Emperor Domitian.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

FRIENDS of Blue River Monthly Meeting have enjoyed a visit of two days from Joel Borton, of New Jersey. We do not often have the pleasure of a visiting Friend, our situation being rather isolated. We have a flourishing First-day school and a strong meeting. We had four meetings with our friend Joel Borton, Fifth-day night, especially for the young people, with half-hour of devotional meeting, in which many took part; the rest of the evening was spent in social mingling. On Fourth-day afternoon our friend spoke feelingly of the duty of right living, that we might, indeed, be witnesses of the Truth. On Fifth-day afternoon prayer was offered by Ellwood Trueblood, after which our friend spoke from the message, "Love towards God and love towards our neighbor." This visit was to us a season of spiritual refreshment, making us to feel that "Blest be the tie that binds

Our hearts in Christian love,
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

John J. Cornell had an appointed meeting in Claymont Hall, Claymont, Del., on the morning of Eighth month 30th. It was well attended and his able discourse on the Friendly principle was listened to with marked interest and appreciation. Many persons in this locality are descended from Friends, but have long lost connection therewith.

In the afternoon of the same day and place a Philanthropic meeting was held, a good audience acknowledged the value of an excellent lecture on Temperance presented by John J. Cornell, giving new and useful information on this old but most important subject. His labors will surely be to the upbuilding of righteousness in this land of ours which is greatly needed.

The Friends of Eastland, a branch of Little Britain Monthly Meeting, are arranging to hold some commemorative exercises of the 100th anniversary of the building of their meeting-house and the establishing of the preparative meeting on Seventh-day, Ninth month 12th. Henry W. Wilbur, Mary Heald Way and Edwin R. Buffington will address the meeting. Historical and other sketches will be given. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested. The grove of four acres of fine old white oaks will accommodate all who may attend. Friends can go by train to Oxford, Pa., (nine miles away) or to Rising Sun, Md., (six miles). A goodly number of people from the neighborhood are expected and it is desired that a clear presentation of the work and views of Friends may be given. Howard Coates is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

Jessie Ashby Wood, a young woman Friend from Tunbridge Wells, England, arrived in New York on Second-day, the 17th, on her way to join with Hannah Bellows in teaching the Doukhobors at Devils' Lake, where the school work had been begun a year ago by Helen Morland, who has now returned to England.—[The Friend, Philadelphia.]

Albert Cook Myers, who is making researches in England, for his work on early Quaker migrations to Pennsylvania, has been visiting Thomas Hodgkin at Barmore Castle, Northumberland.

Two recorded ministers are enrolled among the students of Friends' school at Providence, R. I., for the next term.—[The Friend, Philadelphia.]

The extensive repairs at George School have made it necessary to postpone the date of opening one week. The school will open Ninth month 22d, 1903.

Joseph T. McDowell and wife attended the White Plains Meeting of Friends on the 30th of Eighth month and the ministrations of both were very acceptable. M. H. C.

LITERARY NOTES.

MAGAZINES FOR NINTH MONTH.

The leading article in McClure's for Ninth month by Ray Stannard Baker, "Capital and Labor Hunt Together," is an important contribution to the study of labor-war, and particularly of that menace to Society, the crushing of independent competition through conspiracy of workmen's unions and employers' associations. It deals with conditions in Chicago.

The number contains also a description of the "Great Work of the Pasteur Institutes Throughout the World," by Cleveland Moffet.

"Why Women Do Not Wish the Suffrage," by Lyman Abbott, is the opening article in the Atlantic. Friends of women suffrage, as well as those who are not, will find this interesting and useful as bringing together in a masterly way what many are thinking on this subject, who are not saying much about it.

Herbert W. Horwill in "The Bible in Public Schools," observes the increasing and generally acknowledged Biblical ignorance of the rising generation.

"An Educated Wage-Earner," is the experiences and reflections of a girl who worked in a factory, not as a social experiment, but because she "needed ready money every week, and factory work paid from the beginning."

Sir Leslie Stephen contributes the first of a series of "Some Early Impressions" in England fifty years ago. "The 'Literary Centre'" is a description of literary Boston in the days of its ascendancy. Bradford Torrey has a paper on "The Secret of Wordsworth." Another article of especial interest is "W. E. Henley and Journalism."

Harper's Bazar has "Shopping in Italy," "Training the Memory," "Frau Heyl—Domestic Organizer," by Mary E. Trueblood; the regular departments; "Simple Fashions," and those not so simple, the "Bazar's Recipes," the "Bazar's New Pattern Sheet."

The Delineator has "A Collection of Rare Samplers" and a poem "Grandma's Sampler;" "An Eighteenth and Twentieth Century Home;" departments, including "The Kitchen," "Needlework," "The Dressmaker."

Harper's Magazine in "A Paris School Colony," gives an account of how Paris sends each summer 1,000 of her primary school children in batches of 200 off to the hills for three weeks, and how this French "country week" work is conducted.

Natalie Curtis writes of "An American Indian Composer," and the wonderful music of the Hopis or "Moquis," an agricultural people who live on the inaccessible heights of the Rockies.

Professor Lounsbury, of Yale, discusses in his second paper on the subject, "The Standard of Pronunciation in English."

"Success in plant life," says the author of the article on "Some Successful Plants," does not mean a great show of beautiful flowers or foliage, or a high and exalted worldly position. It means the ability to obtain sufficient nutrition so that the plant may make a vigorous growth and produce flowers which shall be fertilized and produce a large number of sound, viable seeds."

Lippincott's has a poem by Paul Laurence Dunbar, "Summer in the South." This number contains the first of a new series by George Moore, dealing entertainingly and suggestively with English and Continental authors, and answering the question, "Why is it that England has failed to produce a first-class work of fiction?" There is the usual fiction.

In Scribner's, "Tom Folio" is a sketch by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, of an old book-worm and disciple of Lamb, who for many years haunted the book shops of Boston.

Senator Hoar in "Some Famous Judges," gives his reminiscences of Chief Justice Shaw, Rufus Choate, Daniel Webster.

The poems include one by Bliss Carman and one by C. G. D. Roberts.

In the Century John Gilmer Speed has a study of the development of the horse in the United States.

W. C. Dreher in the "Berlin Bourse," describes German methods on "change and compares them with those of New York.

"Heroes in Black Skins," is by Booker T. Washington, with a reproduction of a bust of Washington by Leila Usher. Andrew D. White continues his "Chapters from My Diplomatic Life."

W. R. Merriam, director of the last census, writes of "Noteworthy Results of the Twelfth Census."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE ABSTAINER'S CLOCK.

'Tis one o'clock, beware the rock!
O shun the cup which e'er doth mock.

The clock strikes two, be true, be true,
Your pledge will safety prove for you.

It tells at three, for you and me,
No soothing balm the license fee.

And hark! at four, 'tis sounding o'er,
When will ye drink, buy, sell, no more?

It sounds at five, pray ever strive
Truth's germs to plant and keep alive.

Six strokes, but pshaw, herein the flaw,
This awful mischief's framed by law.

This warning given-rings clear at seven,
No drunkard shall inherit Heaven.

A sound at eight, pray on and wait,
Yet fight the foe with fiercest hate.

O list at nine, the sparkling wine
Lures to deceive both thee and thine.

A voice at ten speaks yet again
Of thousands slain, earth's noblest men.

Eleven pleads, men of all creeds
Think of the rum fiend's awful deeds.

Twelve loud and long rings clear and strong,
Haste, help o'erthrow this giant wrong.

M. ALICE BROWN.

MODERN JUDAISM AND THE BIBLE.

At the recent sessions of the Jewish Chautauqua at Atlantic City Dr. Emil G. Hirsch, rabbi of Sinai Congregation in Chicago, and professor in Chicago University, gave a series of addresses on "Fundamental Questions of Judaism." What he said in regard to the Bible was, in part, as follows:

"In common with other religionists, the Jew loves the Bible. He has been accustomed to associate with its component books certain names and dates. These associations the 'higher criticism' has certainly rudely attacked. But, moreover, it is a sad fact that most, but not all, the exponents of the 'higher criticism' are tainted with anti-Semitism. The tone of many of their treatises is repellant to a Jew. Yet this fact should not prejudice the matter. Why Isaiah and the Psalms should not be treated as literature is certainly not easy to ascertain.

The contents of the books is not affected by the assignment of authorship. Truth carries credentials independent of all dates. Whether old or young, the thought that 'God loveth righteousness' retains its impressive sanctity. The alarm felt lest by the correction of our theory concerning the age and authorship of certain writings one jot of the truth be lost is without justification. It is true this 'criticism' has assumed or proven that the methods of literary composition in ancient days were radically different from ours. We are anxious to have our fame as authors shine forth with all the brilliancy of a searchlight. In the days of Bible Israel men were glad to hide their identity under the shadow of a great name. The Psalms were ascribed to David; the Proverbs to Solomon; the Pentateuch to Moses. But whosoever wrote the Psalms was a God-filled poet. The Psalms' beauty does not depend upon the Davidic authorship. The Pentateuch is, according to these studies, a compilation, the monumental work incorporating the mental and moral history of Israel, not of forty years, but of well-nigh 1,000 years. But this cannot, and does not, weaken a single one of its precepts, if of moral value, of its force; if of ceremonial character, of its suggestive symbolism.

"But does not 'higher criticism' rob Israel of the credit of originality? Certainly, in the old view, Israel had no claim to insist upon the credit of having originated Truth. Higher criticism certainly puts Israel on a level with all other peoples. It shows the similarities in its religion and religious development to those of other Semitic clans. But by this very method the dissimilarities appear all the more in striking contrast. Israel changed Babylonian polytheism into ethical monotheism. Israel may have at one time been intensely tribal; its god at one time, let us concede, was a tribal god. But under the profound genius of Israel's men of genius, the prophets, this misconception of God was cleared away and the God of Heaven and Earth, the Father of all mankind, was apprehended. 'Higher criticism' may, and does, speak of myth, fable, personified tribal experience, assumed eponyms. These are not religious questions, but archaeological. The religionist has a higher certainty for his truth. Abraham is still a reality because he is personified vital truth. And finally, 'higher criticism' saves us the duty to apologize for so much which, if coming from God, taxed our ingenuity beyond endurance. We are rid of the futile business to reconcile Genesis and genealogy. Remember, Judaism has never made of the Bible a fetish. 'Higher criticism' needs not be feared by Judaism. The truths of Judaism have other roots than those the theory on the date of a book can confirm or confound."

THE Supreme Court of Maine has given notice that possession of the United States internal revenue liquor stamp will be held as prima facie evidence of illegal liquor selling and will subject the possessor to a jail sentence instead of the usual fine. Dispatches state that joints and hotel bars are being closed all over the State, and that within a short time Maine will be completely dry.—[American Issue.]

Clean Advertising.

No newspaper can be self-supporting, much less make money, that does not carry a fair line of advertising. Few publications have a subscription list sufficiently remunerative to enable conducting the paper on up-to-date lines, and ordinarily the better the advertising columns are filled the better the newspaper is in every way. It is easy to understand, therefore, that the temptation is always open to every paper to accept advertisements of a doubtful character. By "doubtful" we mean advertisements of goods which, while they may not be absolutely worthless, are still to be viewed with suspicion because of their general unsavory character. In this latter class are certain kinds of so-called proprietary medicines which are little better than trash, as well as other articles and schemes which, upon investigation, prove to be of the "fake" order. The Advance never has, and so long as it is under its present management, never will accept this kind of advertising. We believe that the paper which exercises the greatest care in accepting advertisements, is the one offering the best results as an advertising medium. When the readers of a paper become thoroughly impressed with the fact that every advertisement it contains is reputable, they will instinctively transfer their business to such advertisers. Moreover we believe that a paper which goes into homes should be just as clean and wholesome in its advertising as in its news columns. Impressions, good or bad, are formed just as easily from advertisements as from news matter, and it is our aim to furnish a paper that can be perused with safety by the young and the old in every home that it may enter.—[Kennett Advance].

A Friend's View of Preferential Tariff.

Editorial in British Friend.

THERE is not much sign that the propaganda of preferential tariffs with the Colonies, with Protection against the rest of the world, is making real headway. A certain number of persons, in both political parties, have long been protectionist at heart, and these are now speaking out; but the mass of sober-thinking Englishmen so far see no salvation in dearer food. It is disheartening to see old fallacies, explicated a thousand times, brought out again as new and original ideas, even by those who ought to know better.

The true reason, we are convinced, why Germany and America are beating us in many departments of trade is because they are more alert, and more vigorous in promoting the education of their people. Two paths are open before us: the easy but delusive path of trying to stop our neighbors from competing with us; the difficult but safe path of qualifying ourselves to compete better. If our people are persuaded to return to the first, it will be because they have deliberately refused to follow the second. The so-called Education acts of the past two years could not have been passed if the English people had been genuinely interested in education.

Bavarian Women Who Vote.

WOMEN who own taxable property are permitted to vote at municipal elections in Munich, the capital of Bavaria, but they have never gone in person to the polls, sending instead male proxies. At a recent election, however, one courageous woman, who, by the way, is president of a large philanthropic association of women, appeared in person to cast her vote. She pleaded that it was not any more difficult to cast a ballot than to instruct some man how to do it, while the only way to be sure that the right ballot was used was to cast it herself. Her action caused something of a sensation, but she was not denied the privilege she asked for.

When it is remembered that until recently women in Germany were not allowed to attend political meetings or ally themselves with political parties, and that these laws are still in effect in many parts of the empire, this action of a woman voter, which passed without protest from the men, indicates a growing sentiment in favor of improved conditions for women. The Liberal Party and the Social Democrats all over Germany, wherever the laws are not unfavorable, are inviting women to join them. In Hamburg about 1,100 women belong to the social democratic clubs, and are even represented on their boards of directors.—[Baltimore American.]

Consular Reform.

The United States consular service has been greatly improved in recent years, but it is still far from being a perfect instrument for the development of our foreign commerce. The old idea that a consulate is a convenient berth for political workers to a considerable extent still holds sway, and the offices, especially those which are remunerative, are almost always bestowed as political rewards. The Lodge bill for reorganizing the consular service was pressed in the last Congress, but the influence of the spoilsmen was great enough to defeat it. The advocates of the reform are not discouraged. The National Business League is making an active campaign to arouse interest in the matter, is seeking any information which may lead to the still further perfection of the measure, and will have it introduced in both houses at the first session of the Fifty-eighth Congress.

The bill, as reported favorably by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations of the last Congress, provides for the classification of consuls into six classes and of consuls general into four classes, all of whom are to be compensated wholly by salaries, and the consular fees are to be turned into the Treasury. All vacancies in the higher grades are to be filled by promotion from the grades below, and when a vacancy is to be filled in the lowest grade the fact is to be certified to a board of consular examiners, consisting of the Civil Service Commission and a consul. This board is to hold competitive examinations and certify five names to the President, with detailed reports on their qualifications "for his information." From them the President is expected, though he is not absolutely required, to make his selection.—[New York Tribune.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Universal Peace Union held its 37th annual meeting at Mystic, Connecticut. The resolutions passed at the closing session on the 29th set forth that the duty of the hour is to overcome all conditions that make war possible by teaching the principles of peace and arbitration in schools and universities, by practicing them in every-day life, and by multiplying courts of arbitration. The increase of the Army and Navy, the building of battleships for Turkey and other foreign governments with all the improvements of American genius, the farcical and expensive playing of naval battles on the coast of Maine and the unrestricted sale of firearms is viewed with alarm. A peace conference, to be called by the president every four years, looking to the prevention of war, is favored. The Union recommends an appeal to all nations to set aside by legislation at least 1 per cent. of their annual appropriations for a permanent peace fund, to be expended under direction of The Hague International Arbitration Court. Alfred H. Love, of Philadelphia, is president of the Union.

An imperial rescript is published appointing Russian Minister of Finance Witte president of the Committee of Ministers. This position is one of great honor, but it does not carry with it necessarily the power and influence of Premier. It does not seem to be clear whether the appointment means that the humane and progressive policy of which the former Minister of Finance is the leading advocate is to supplant mediævalism in the administration of the Czar's Government, or that the enemies of the Witte system of finance have triumphed, and that, according to the curious custom of Europe, the discredited official has been promoted into titled obscurity. The new President of the Committee of Ministers is an enlightened and liberal statesman. The world will watch with interest to see whether there is a new order of things in Russia.

SINCE Seventh month 1st there have been 135 prosecutions in Illinois for violations of the new child labor law. In about 80 per cent. of these cases fines were imposed and paid. Under the new law children cannot go to work till they have certificates from public school or parochial school authorities. It may now be said that Illinois has a child labor law which is one of the best in the United States, and that it is being enforced.

WARDEN OSBORNE, of the New Jersey State-prison at Trenton, has persuaded the prison board to abolish stripes in the garb of the prisoners, and they now wear a suit of grayish blue. That it tones up the moral fiber of the convict seems to be the invariable result where the change has been made.

NEWS NOTES.

WORD comes from North China that there is a great famine there owing to the long drouth.

ALL but two of the eight men on trial for participating in the lynching at Danville, Illinois, were found guilty.

INDICATIONS are that the cotton crop will be something like 12,703,780 bales, 1,500,000 more than the largest crop in the history of America.

WARDAMAN, the reactionary and negro-hater, was nominated as candidate for Governor of Mississippi. Nomination is equivalent to election.

THE first bale of new cotton was received in Norfolk on the 1st from Clio, S. C. It weighed 502 pounds, and brought 15 cents a pound.

THE long-anticipated proclamation of a general insurrection in Macedonia was issued on the anniversary of the Sultan's accession, Ninth month 1st.

CHARLES CARROLL BONNEY, who was president of the world's congresses of the Columbian Exposition, died at Chicago at the age of 72, after an illness of three years.

DR. LARDY, the Swiss minister at Paris, has declined to serve as arbitrator in the Venezuelan claims, on the ground that Switzerland has claims against Venezuela which she proposes to submit to arbitration.

JOHN BLAZER, one of the old "underground railroad" men, has just died in Chicago at the age of 89. Between 1850 and 1860 he helped more than 200 slaves to freedom. Aside from his activity in abolitionism, he lived a quiet life.

THE International Medical Congress in Madrid, Spain, is reported by distinguished delegates to have been a failure, because Madrid had never before attempted to accommodate 5,000 to 6,000 people and was utterly unequal to the task.

THE third trial of ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers, of Kentucky, for complicity in the murder of Governor William Goebel in 1900, resulted in the verdict of "guilty and the punishment death." Powers has been in the penitentiary for three years on life sentence. Motion has been made for a new trial.

THE Zionist Congress at Basel, so far gave in from its rigid adherence to Jerusalem Zionism, as to appoint at its closing session a committee to investigate the South African proposition. The Russians left the meeting in protest and the Chicago Zionists cabled their protest, on the ground that Zionism must fail, if the purpose for the Jews to go to Palestine is abandoned.

POPE LEO XIII., though master of vast wealth, lived on $600 a year, or $1.66 a day, and occupied only four of the 1,100 rooms in the palace.

FIVE thousand employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad have been ordered to lay off a day at their own expense. The Pennsylvania, it is explained, is carrying on its pay roll more men than it needs or can use, and wishes to curtail expenses by laying off its men for a day rather than to discharge some of them altogether.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

- 9TH MO. 5 (SEVENTH-DAY).—NEW YORK Monthly Meeting, at Rutherford Place, New York, at 2.30 p. m.
- 9TH MO. 5 (SEVENTH-DAY).—MANSFIELD, N. J., Young Friends' Association, at home of Franklin S. Zelly.
- 9TH MO. 5 (SEVENTH-DAY).—WHITE-water Quarterly Meeting, at Maple Grove, Ind., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day at 8 a. m.
- 9TH MO. 5 (SEVENTH-DAY).—BLUE River Quarterly Meeting, at Benjaminville, Ill., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m.
- 9TH MO. 7 (SECOND-DAY).—CENTRE Quarterly Meeting, at Half Moon, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding at 3 p. m.
- 9TH MO. 7 (SECOND-DAY).—FRIENDS' Flower and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Avenue, at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.
- 9TH MO. 10 (FIFTH-DAY).—SALEM Quarterly Meeting at Woodstown, N. J., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.
- 9TH MO. 10 (FIFTH-DAY).—PRAIRIE Grove Quarterly Meeting at W. Liberty, Ia., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 8.30 a. m.
- 9TH MO. 12 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SALEM First-day School Union, at Salem, N. J., at 10 a. m. Subjects for consideration: (1) What preparation would you recommend for the First-day school teacher? (2) What preparation would you recommend for the First-day school pupils? A cordial invitation extended to all interested.
JOHN G. BORTON, } Clerks.
LOUISA POWELL, }
- 9TH MO. 12 (SEVENTH-DAY).—BURLINGTON First-day School Union will be held at Mansfield at 10.30 a. m. A cordial invitation is extended.
DAN'L WILLETS, } Clerks.
ANNE R. WALN, }
- 9TH MO. 12 (SEVENTH-DAY).—ONE Hundredth Anniversary exercises of Eastland Meeting-house (Little Britain, Pa., Monthly Meeting). Addresses by Henry W. Wilbur, Mary Heald Way, Edwin R. Buffington. A cordial invitation is extended. Friends can come to Oxford, Pa. (9 miles distant) or to Rising Sun, Md. (6 miles).

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY }
Pittsburgh.
EYMER-BAYMAN }
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS }
Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK }
Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR }
Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN }
ATLANTIC }
BRADLEY }
BROOKLYN }
New York.
JEWETT }
ULSTER }
UNION }
SOUTHERN } Chicago.
SHIPMAN }
COLLIER }
MISSOURI }
RED SEAL }
SOUTHERN }
St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO }
Philadelphia.
MORLEY }
Cleveland.
SALEM }
Salem, Mass.
CORNELL }
Buffalo.
KENTUCKY }
Louisville.

CONSUMERS should bear in mind that there are many brands of White Lead (so called) which are claimed to be "just as good" or better than Pure White Lead, which contain little, if any, White Lead, but are simply mixtures of Zinc, Whiting and Barytes, or other cheap, inferior materials.

Make sure that the brand is right. Those named in list are genuine.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

SAVE 1/2 YOUR FUEL

A Tea Kettle boils quicker on my chimney than on my Stove.

EASY

I can hold my hand over my chimney. No waste heat, I use a

ROCHESTER RADIATOR.

Get all the heat you pay for. You really get cool at half price for at least ten years; with it, you make one stove or furnace do the work of two.

Fully Guaranteed. Write for booklet on heating houses.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO.,
9 Furnace St., Rochester, N. Y.

9TH MO. 13 (FIRST-DAY).—THE FRIENDS of White Plains, N. Y., will hold their next meeting at 42 Fisher Avenue at 11 a. m. All friends welcome.

9TH MO. 13 (FIRST-DAY).—A CIRCULAR Meeting under the care of a committee of the Western Quarterly will be held at Union Chapel, Willowdale, at 3.30 p. m.

9TH MO. 14 (SECOND-DAY).—BALTIMORE Quarterly Meeting at Gunpowder, Md., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m.

9TH MO. 14 (SECOND-DAY).—ILLINOIS Yearly Meeting at Clear Creek Meeting-house, near Mt. Palatire, Ill., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 10 a. m.

9TH MO. 17 (FIFTH-DAY).—QUAKERTOWN, Pa., Young Friends' Association, at the home of Elizabeth Kinsey.

9TH MO. 17 (FIFTH-DAY).—HADDON-field Quarterly Meeting, at Moorestown, N. J., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.

WHY COUNTERFEITED.

Did you ever see a counterfeit ten dollar bill?

Yes.

Why was it counterfeited?

Because it was worth counterfeiting.

Was the ten dollar bill to blame?

No.

Did you ever see a scrap of brown paper counterfeited?

No.

Why not?

Because it is not worth counterfeiting?

Did you ever see a counterfeit Christian? Yes, lots of them.

Why was he counterfeited?

Because he was worth counterfeiting.

Was he to blame for being counterfeited?

No.—[Bethany Tidings.]

In an obituary, found in this paper, occur the following striking words, describing the departed wife and mother:—

The family had sojourned under many skies, and had often changed their place of abode, but, wherever she was, if only for a night, there was home.

We do not know where we have seen any more beautiful and tender description of a true woman.—[Cincinnati Herald and Presbyter.]

You want to know how to get my lamp-chimneys.

(1) Your grocer sells them, if he is fit to be your grocer; may be he don't.

(2) If you'll write me, I'll send you my Index; that tells everything.

MACBETH. Pittsburgh.

THE BEAUTIFUL SAPPHERE COUNTRY IS A DELIGHTFUL PLACE IN WHICH TO SPEND YOUR VACATION.

Along the southern slopes and tablelands of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Western North Carolina, at an average altitude of three thousand feet, with broad ridges pointing off from the main chains towards the lowlands of South Carolina and Georgia, is a country full of delightful surprises to the tourist, sportsman and health seeker, which has been appropriately named "The Sapphire Country." No other State or region contains so many grand waterfalls, such wide sweeping mountain views and such beautiful lakes.

The most interesting of the many attractive features to be found are the beautiful Toxaway, Fairfield and Sapphire Lakes. Nowhere else in the South at this altitude are such bodies of water. All who visit these lakes are impressed with the wonderful beauty and great varied character of scenery. There are towering cliffs rising abruptly for a thousand feet from their shores, and cascades of rare beauty falling directly into the lakes from the lofty tableland surrounding. Some of the mountains in this vicinity range in height from five to six thousand feet. Indeed, it is the general verdict of widely-traveled people that in this respect the remarkable combination and varied and attractive character of lake and mountain scenery of this section is unrivalled by any in the world. Certainly no other part of America has anything to equal it.

Some of the finest hotels in the South are in this beautiful mountain country, the latest being the handsome new "Toxaway Inn," which is open for the summer season, and will remain open the entire year.

Low rate summer excursion tickets are on sale up to and including September 30th, 1903, from all principal points, with final limit to return October 31st, 1903.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

GOIN' BAREFOOT.

It's more fun goin' barefoot than anythin' I know.

There ain't a single nother thing that helps yer feelin' so.

Some days I stay in Muvver's room a gettin' in her way;

An' when I've bothered her so much she sez, "Oh, run an' play!"

I say, "Kin I go barefoot?" En she says, "If y' choose"

Nen I alwuz wanter holler when I'm pullin' off my shoes!

If y' often go round barefoot there's lots o' things to know,—

Of how t' curl yer feet on stones so they won't hurt y' so,—

An' when th' grass is stickley an' pricks y' at a touch,

Jes plunk yer feet down solid an' it don't hurt half so much.

I lose my hat mos' every day. I wish I did my shoes,—

Er else I wish I was so poor I hadn't none to lose.—[Burgess Johnson, in Harper's Magazine.]

QUEER THINGS.

A CLOCK can run, but cannot walk;
My shoe has a tongue, but cannot talk;
A comb has teeth, but has no mouth;
A north wind blows the smoke straight south.

Bottles have necks, but have no heads;
And pins have heads, but have no necks;
And needle have to hold their threads
Right in their eyes—how it must vex!

If I were needle, comb or shoe,
I never should know what to do;
My head is really in a whirl,
I am glad I am a little girl.

—[Bertha E. Bush, in Presbyterian.]

THE New York Times inveighs against the promiscuous use of the word "unique," and quotes those ancient lines:—

"Pray your real opinion speak,
Is not Boston quite unique?"
'I agree with you, of course,—
Unus, one, and equus, horse!'"

GETTYSBURG AND WASHINGTON.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The tour will leave New York 7.55 a.m., and Philadelphia 12.20 p.m., Saturday, September 26th, in charge of a Pennsylvania Railroad Tourist Agent, and will cover a period of six days. An experienced chaperon, whose especial charge will be unescorted ladies, will accompany the party throughout. Round-trip tickets covering transportation, carriage drives and hotel accommodations, will be sold at the extremely low rate of $22 from New York, $21 from Trenton, $19 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to Ticket Agents, Tourist Agent 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court St., Brooklyn; 780 Broad St., Newark, N. J.; or address George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Phila.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. * * * Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. * * * A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

* * * All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address Friends' Intelligencer Association, N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER
TELEPHONE
1313 VINE STREET
ESTABLISHED 1860

"The Best is the Cheapest"

Applies in a two-fold way to

"NICE"

Paints, Stains,
Enamels,
Varnishes,
Finishes.

They are the best quality possible, hence the most economical, and doubly so when you consider that they cost no more than inferior goods.

YOU CANNOT AFFORD, Mr. Property Owner, to ignore these facts when arranging for exterior painting and interior finishing.

Send for Literature.

EUGENE E. NICE

272-274 South Second Street
PHILADELPHIA

United Security
Life Insurance
and Trust Company
OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General
Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
Assistant Treasurer.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

MILTON PHILLIPS
Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

Dead men's estates are often absorbed by their debts, leaving the family penniless.

The household loaf is never buried with the household head, when that head has a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES,
ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTER AND TRANSFER AGENT.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

DR. HOLMES had an odd liking for ingenious desk accessories in the way of pencil-sharpeners, paper-weights, pen-holders, etc. The latest contrivances in this fashion—probably dropped down to him by the inventor angling for a nibble of commendation—were always making one another's acquaintance on his study table. He once said to me: "I'm waiting for somebody to invent a muckluge-brush that you can't by any chance put into your instand. It would save me frequent moments of humiliation."—[T. B. Aldrich, in The Century.]

A BOSTON mother said to her little daughter, "If you had my faith, darling, you would have no toothache." The child replied, "Well, mother, if you had my toothache, you wouldn't have any faith." [Boston Herald.]

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: September 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on August 7th and 21st, September 4th and 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a.m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a.m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address GEO. W. BOYD, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.

STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
J. C. WHITNEY, 2d W. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philadelphia,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike

Table d'hôte 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk
*Phone 1-33-55.

PUBLISHED

J. Warner and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hillborn, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends Philadelphia. 32 pages, paper. 5c; per dozen 50c
FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
Philadelphia, Pa.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 20 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (JESUS BLENBORG, Jr.)
520 1/2 Media Sts., Philadelphia

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, NINTH MONTH 12, 1903.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School, FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES. Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to
GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Or,
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class environment.

For circulars additional information,
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A. M., (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Sabbath, from 10 a. m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED.

NURSE—EXPERIENCED, OF THIS CITY, wishes care of invalid, adult or child. Physicians reference. Address E. B., this Office.

TEACHERS WISHING TO WORK AS SUBSTITUTES in Friends' schools during the present school year are asked to register their names. LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street Philadelphia.

WANTED—EVENING EMPLOYMENT, To assist physician with accounts and correspondence, or other work. A. B. C., this Office.

WANTED—A YOUNG WOMAN TO ASSIST with housekeeping, in pleasant home, small family. Time for study, good wages. Address 57 E. Central Avenue, Morristown, N. J.

WANTED—YOUNG MANAGING AND working housekeeper. Good cook. $5. City. Address S., this Office.

WANTED—A TEACHER IN CHELTON Hills School living near by, will take as members of her family two girls under fourteen. Reference, Dr. J. B. Walker, 1677 Green Street, Philadelphia. Address No. 5, this Office.

WANTED—REFINED WOMAN OR SMALL family to take main part of furnished house, with the boarders now in it. All conveniences. Terms liberal. Address A., 328 West Front Street, Media, Pa.

BOARDING.

A FEW REFINED BOARDERS WANTED IN private boarding house. Swag arms and 2 beds, able second and third story front rooms; one back room. Friends' family. F., this Office.

LARGE, CHEERFUL, SECOND-STORY front communicating rooms, with board; also a pleasant third-story room, in Friends' family; in pleasant neighborhood, near trolleys, in West Philadelphia. Write or apply 668 North 32d Street.

BOARDING—CHOICE WINTER ROOMS. Second floor front, communicating. Table board. Opens September 1st. Address 1618 Green Street.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS, 4 SISTERS, 1827 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE OR FOR RENT.

FIRST MORTGAGES FOR SALE, BEARING 5 per cent. interest; $2,000, $2,500, $3,000, $3,500, $4,000; new and elegant Philadelphia houses. DAVID H. WRIGHT, 1420 Chestnut Street.

FOR RENT—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

FOR RENT—TWO NEATLY FURNISHED third-floor rooms, well lighted and heated. Address 331 N. 40th Street, West Philadelphia.

FOR RENT FOR TENTH MONTH, KEELWAY-din Cottage at Buck Hill Falls. Four double sleeping rooms, two baths, kitchen, dining room, large sitting room, two open fires. Furnished for housekeeping. CHARLES FAXSON, 234 Dock Street, Philadelphia.

TO RENT—NICE HOMELIKE HOME, LANGHorne, Bucks county, Pa., from Tenth month 21st. 13-room house, on main street. Bath, water closet, new plumbing, heater. Lamborne spring and other excellent water; porches front and back; old shade, stable, carriage house, fruit. Best location. Trolley to railroad. Apply soon. Dr. John Faxson, Newtown, Pa.

The Real Circulation of advertising matter depends, not on the number of copies sent out, but on the number read. We know how to get things read.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE BETTER KIND OF PRINTING
1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones, Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Or mortal evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.

—Wordsworth.

BEFORE the Conference Committee decided to meet next year at Toronto, Canada, we had an inquiry from a Friend active in the work, asking if it would be possible to hold the 1904 Conference at Buck Hill Falls. Much as we should like to have our settlement begin at once to be a Friends' Chaletauqua, and common meeting ground for all summer Friendly activities, the time has not yet come when such a great body of people could be comfortably accommodated. Should the settlement continue to expand for six years, in the same ratio as it has in three, the Conference at Buck Hill Falls in 1906 is not an impossibility. In the meantime special Conferences, Central Committee Meetings, and all Friends meetings involving a hundred people or so, can be cared for and welcomed with our present facilities.

Buck Hill Falls will be on the direct line of travel to Toronto next year, particularly to New York Friends.

The welcome presence of an increased number of members and others from the limits of New York Yearly Meeting has been gratifying and encouraging. It is hard to realize that Buck Hill is twenty some miles nearer New York than it is to Philadelphia. The fare is considerably less.

No feature of Buck Hill is more pleasant for the coming together of so many from so many Friendly centres.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Railroad Time-table

for the Benefit of Friends wishing to attend Illinois Yearly Meeting, beginning Ninth month 14th.

Three I. R. R. connects with R. I. and P. at DePue.
Three I. R. R. connects with C. B. and Q. at Zeating.
Three I. R. R. connects with Illinois Central at Lottant;
Three I. R. R. connects with Altoon, Santa Fe and Washak at Streator.
Trains due at McNabb going west, 9:10 a. m.
Trains due at McNabb going east, 1:10 p. m.
C. B. and Q. arrives at Zeating, west 11:43 a. m.; east 11:27 a. m.
Three I. R. leaves Zeating 12:10 p. m.
C. R. and P. arrives at DePue, west 12:57, 4:38 p. m.; east 10:19 a. m., 4:26 p. m.
Illinois Central arrives at Lottant, west 12:51 p. m.; east 7:40 a. m.
Three I. R. leaves Lottant 8:57 a. m., 1:11 p. m.
Tolona, Marquette and Northern leaves Rutland on Illinois Central, 2:30 p. m. Arrive at McNabb 3:40 p. m.
Santa Fe due at Streator, west 10:45 a. m., 3:50 p. m.; east 6:12 p. m., 2 p. m., 10 35 a. m.
Chicago and Altoon due at Streator, west 2:07 p. m., 8:30 p. m.; east 10:17 p. m., 7:55 p. m.
Indiana, Illinois and Iowa leaves Streator, west 8:03 p. m., 12:10 p. m.
Local freight carries passengers due at McNabb on I. I. R. R., west 2:40 p. m.; east 8:50 a. m.

BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISEMENT RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.

No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,

N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.

. TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXXVII.,	577
POETRY: HOW SHALL WE KNOW,	577
OHIO YEARLY MEETING,	577
CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE.—(Con- cluded),	579
HOW TO IMPROVE FIRST-DAY SCHOOLS,	580
EDITORIAL:
Money Giving,	582
Religion in School and Home,	582
Notes,	583
BIRTHS, DEATHS,	584
COMMUNICATION:
Literary Study of the Bible,	584
SOCIETY NOTES,	584
THE MINISTRY,	584
VISION OF THOMAS SAY,	585
THOMAS GAWTHEROP,	586
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	588
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES,	588
LITERARY NOTES,	588
POETRY: The Voice of the Fire,	589
THE CHARACTER OF JESUS,	589
MISCELLANY: Persecution of the Persian Babes; A Wonderful Fruit Belt,	591
CURRENT EVENTS,	591
NEWS NOTES,	592
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS,	592

CRANE'S

 MAKE BUT ONE
GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND

 CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT
MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP
CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE
AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS
SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

 JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

 ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

 G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery County Bar.

 WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

 JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: 609 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
{ Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

 JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWEDA STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

 WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

 CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street,
From 736 Spring Garden Street

 STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

 Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds. Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-76 D Filbert.

 J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Siddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents, Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

 EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a speciality
616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

 J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada.

 Morgan Boutang Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

WALL PAPER of
Attractive Styles

 Popular Prices
Samples Free to All Address

A. L. Diamond & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,
E. T. Kueudig,
R. W. Richards.

Atlantic City, N. J.

The Albertson, New, First-class
Family Hotel.

 SITUATED AT MANTOLOKING, N. J.
Three miles this side of Bay Head, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, one and one-half hours from Broad Street
Station or Market Street Wharf. Fine bathing, Fishing, Yachting and golfing. Send for booklet.

 J. R. ALBERTSON,
Formerly of Fenns Manor, Pa.

THE DRIFTWOOD
OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Special Fall Rates. For particulars address
SARAH J. PAXSON and SISTERS

The Pennhurst, Second House
from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,
1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric lifts, heated art parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

PURE FOOD
skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of
OUR LUNCH and DINING ROOM,
1317 Filbert Street
These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS, Proprietor.

Young Friends' Review

 Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

 HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
332 West Fourth Street, New York City.

 Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

 With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $1.50; with Scattered
Sends $1.00; all three $2.50.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 1820 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

 As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade
—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

 GEO. C. CHILD,
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

CLEMENT A. WOODUTT

 Undertaker
and Embalmer
1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, NINTH MONTH 12, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 37.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XXXVII.

TRUTH, like pure gold, stands the test of the severest scrutiny—the more it is handled the brighter it shines. Error, on the contrary, like base metal grows darker by exposure. —Amicus.

From letters of Paul and Amicus.

HOW SHALL WE KNOW.

How shall we know that what we say
Or what we sing

Brings peace to souls who go their way
In suffering ?

We know because the gentle word
And grateful song
Have soothed us when with hope deferred
The way seemed long.

How shall we know that kindly thought
Or breathed prayer
Is balm to souls whose paths are fraught
With ceaseless care ?

We know because our darkest ways
Unbidden shine
With cheering gleams—reflected rays
Of light divine.

Go thou, then, forth with song, with cheer ;
Go forth with prayer,

For souls bowed low with woe and fear
Are everywhere,

And not one thought or act of love
Or tenderness

But will return a homing dove
Thy soul to bless.

—Christian Work.

OHIO YEARLY MEETING.

Held at Salem, Ohio.

When the meeting of the Central Committee on Seventh-day morning, the 29th, adjourned to make way for the meeting of Ministers and Elders of Ohio Yearly Meeting, Joseph S. Hartley, the clerk of that body, invited all the visiting Friends to remain, and most of them accepted the invitation.

Minutes were read for David W. Branson, a minister and his wife, Ann B. Branson, an elder, of Hopewell Monthly Meeting, Va.; for Hiram and Mary Ann Blackburn, elders, and their daughter Margaretta Blackburn, a member of Dunning's Creek Monthly Meeting, Pa.; Samuel P. Zavitz, a minister of Coldstream Monthly Meeting, Ontario; Joel Borton, a minister of Pilesgrove Monthly Meeting, N. J.; O. Edward Janney, a minister, and his wife Anna W. Janney, a member of Baltimore Monthly Meeting, Md., and Elizabeth Lloyd, a minister of Buckingham Monthly Meeting, Pa.

The usual queries were read and answered and several living messages were given. Friends were reminded that there is something higher than intellectual development, that all should worship the Father in spirit and in truth, turn to Him in prayer, seek an acquaintance with him and be at peace. At a subsequent meeting on Fourth-day morning, Joseph S. Hartley, who is now almost eighty-two years old and has been clerk since 1859, was released at his own request. A feeling testimony was borne to his long life of good works and the inspiration that such a life is to others. Esther J. Fox was appointed clerk and Marietta Hartley assistant clerk.

On First-day meetings for worship were held morning and afternoon. In the morning one end of the house was filled and the other was half full by the time meeting closed. Many evidently came after their own religious service elsewhere was over. At the opening of the meeting prayer was offered that the words and thoughts of those assembled might be acceptable in God's sight.

David W. Branson admonished each one to be on the watch against his besetting sin. Samuel P. Zavitz spoke of the tendency to cling to non-essentials and said that the one essential thing is to know God's will and to do it.

O. Edward Janney, after explaining the basis of silence in Friends' meetings, spoke of those things that religious denominations have in common: a belief in God, his revelation to man, and his forgiveness of our sins; the strength that he gives those who seek him to resist temptation and live without serious error; and the ministry of Jesus, the messenger of God filled with light from Him.

Joseph H. Walton, of George School, Pa., said that a church receives its life from its members and can give forth only that which it has received. The mission of the church is to assist us to worship and to give. Just as the magnet in a trolley car needs to be rewound every little while, so do men need to be rewound under the shadow of the spirit of prayer, that they may go forth re-equipped to run on the track of duty.

Elizabeth Lloyd desired all to seek the more excellent things that grow by giving. Mary Travilla, of West Chester, Pa., said that the peace which passeth understanding comes only as we follow the spirit of truth that invites us, and learn through it the meaning of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Joel Borton spoke of the boldness of evil doers and the consequent temptations on every side; to resist these every one must strive to think rightly, speak rightly, and act rightly, to love the things that he ought to do, and to keep his heart with all diligence, "for out of it are the issues of life."

The meeting in the afternoon was almost as large as in the morning. Joseph S. Hartley, after speaking of himself as nearing the sunset of life, appealed to those who had been disobedient to turn to the Friend who is always ready to receive them. O. Edward Janney drew a lesson for those who are spiritually lame, from the lame man who sat at the beautiful gate. Samuel P. Zavitz spoke of the unseen Friend who goes with us through life. Elizabeth Lloyd asked all to train their ears to listen to the voice within. Joel Borton spoke from the text, "Be ye perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect." Mary Travilla testified to the influence upon our lives of those who are no longer with us in the body. Joseph S. Walton said that the words of Jesus to Peter were applicable to all his followers to-day, "If ye love me feed my sheep." He spoke of the many who, while comfortably clothed and fed, are starving spiritually, and said that as we feed others we are fed ourselves. After a prayer by Joel Borton the meeting closed.

Many of the members of the Central Committee remained for the business sessions of the yearly meeting on Second-day and the presence of so many visitors gave added life to the meeting. Joseph S. Hartley urged all to be faithful in speaking to business. Epistles were read from Illinois, Baltimore and Philadelphia, after which there was a good deal of expression suggested by their contents. The importance of selecting good books for children was emphasized and attention was called to the list of books for children prepared by Baltimore Yearly Meeting's Committee. It was suggested that any one who is a fairly good reader and has some spare time might meet with a group of children once a week and read to them. Mary Travilla said that although Howard M. Jenkins is no longer among men, his ripe, mature mind and heart are still with us. Joel Borton said that active philanthropic work gives life to any religious organization, and that a dearth of good works is followed by the death of a society that does nothing for others. Oliver Cope said that the Society of Friends needs the influence of new members. It is not enough merely to open the doors when others knock, but we should seek those who are spiritually homeless.

The number of visiting Friends was decidedly less on Third-day. Sarah C. Fox and Mercy G. Hammond were continued as clerks. The remaining epistles were read. Richard E. Roberts said that while each has within himself that which enables him to commune with God with profit, yet the coming together with others for this purpose is spiritually helpful.

The queries, with their answers, were read and considered. These show that while attendance at meetings is generally small, there are many faithful workers who are closely united in bonds of unity. Oliver Cope said that while our central thought is to "mind the light," it is also important to mind the shadows and learn from them lessons of humility, contrition and obedience. Henry M. Haviland, of Brooklyn, spoke of the need for Friends to be faithful to their testimony against oppression in these days of lynch law; it was also urged that Friends should strive to free themselves individually from race prejudice, and should never allow themselves to use the names so often applied to colored people in ridicule and contempt. Anna M. Jackson, of New York, plead for justice to the colored man in the North and wider opportunities for work.

The usual meeting for worship was held on Fourth-day morning, with a good attendance. David W. Branson urged those that had gone astray to return and enter upon the right road. The flowers that had been brought to the meeting-house suggested the next two messages: Samuel P. Zavitz spoke of the lily that grows in the swamp as an illustration of the pure life that may be lived even in the dark places; Elizabeth Lloyd said that living thoughts are the flowers that brighten every-day life. Joseph S. Hartley quoted many passages of Scripture to show the importance of the spiritual birth. Joel Borton said that more and more the one desire of the Christian is for that which will help him to live rightly. O. Edward Janney drew a lesson from the seed that dies in order to grow, and said that we must die in the things that are selfish if we would increase in the spiritual life.

At the business session in the afternoon the treasurer's report showed an expenditure during the year of $156.85, and a balance on hand of $387.99. The meeting directed that $200 be raised the coming year. Edgar A. Berry was continued as treasurer.

The report of the Philanthropic Committee showed that a good deal of work had been done, chiefly by individuals and in connection with other organizations. Much gratification was expressed with the workings of the Beale law, through which 137 towns have closed all their saloons. Susan W. Janney, of Philadelphia, read the report of Marianna Chapman, Chairman of the Friends' Equal Rights Association of New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia. After some discussion the department of Equal Rights for Women was added to the work of the Philanthropic Committee without a dissenting voice.

A memorial of Ezekiel Roberts, prepared by Short Creek Monthly Meeting was read, showing the influence of his long and beautiful life, and his gentle, persuasive ministry.

At the closing session on Fifth-day morning there were still fourteen visiting Friends present, including all the ministers from other Yearly Meetings who had brought minutes. William R. Clark and Jane H. Moore were appointed delegates to the National Anti-Saloon League, and Richard E. Roberts to serve on its Board of Direction. Joel Borton described the prosperity of Hoopston, Ill., now a town of 4500 inhabitants; it was founded by a Friend and has never had a saloon within its limits.

The clerks were directed to prepare a message of sympathy to be sent to Dr. Garretson, a member of the Meeting, who has been an invalid for several years. Visiting Friends expressed their appreciation of the generous hospitality of the people of Salem, and after loving words of counsel and farewell the meeting adjourned to meet at Mt. Pleasant at the usual time next year.

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

Second-day afternoon was devoted to the Ohio First-day School Association. At the opening of meeting nearly all present gave sentiments. Herbert P. Worth said that often the starting of a First-day school in a neighborhood would prepare the way for the setting up of a meeting. He made suggestions concerning work to be done in various grades, and emphasized the importance of close personal relations between teacher and pupils during the period of adolescence.

Henry M. Haviland gave an object lesson on Spiders, showing the importance of setting the children to work as soon as the lesson begins. Reports were received from the various schools composing the Association, all of which are kept open the year round. At a second session on Third-day afternoon epistles were read from other associations.

PHILANTHROPIC MEETINGS.

Two meetings were arranged by the Philanthropic Committee. On Second-day evening Edwin C. Dinwiddie, Legislative Superintendent of the American Anti-Saloon League, gave an address on Temperance. He described the League as a federation of churches for the overthrow of the liquor traffic. He said that the average man in political life prefers to be on the right side, and that recent events show that the church power is stronger than the saloon power.

On Third-day evening O. Edward Janney gave an address on "The Ideal Man." James Whinery, who presided over the meeting, is one of the oldest Friends of Salem. He told of anti-slavery meetings held in Salem meeting-house years ago, addressed by Lucretia Mott, Joshua R. Giddings, and Frederick Douglas, and of the memorable occasion when Douglas despaired of slavery ever being abolished, and that remarkable colored woman, Sojourner Truth, arose and asked, "Frederick, is God dead?"

Dr. Janney described the ideal man as one who is sound in mind and morals and free from bad habits, who takes plenty of fresh air and exercise, and is addicted to plain living and high thinking. Referring to the frequent lynchings of colored men for a certain crime, he said these would not cease until white men set an example of pure living to their colored brothers.

On Fourth-day evening a pleasant social gathering at the home of Stephen Richards was attended by the Friends of Salem and their guests, as well as by many who are not members of our Society. Gatherings such as this do much to promote real friendliness and religious unity.

ARE we as near God as we ever shall be? Yes potentially; that is, it is in our power to be.—
[Emerson.]

It may well be that the next great religious revival may come about at the hands of the scientists themselves.—[R. J. Campbell.]

CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE.

(Concluded from last week.)

On Seventh-day evening a public meeting was held under the auspices of the Central Committee. Prof. Lorin H. Bailey, of George School, whose home is at Sebring, O., read a paper entitled "The Value of Athletics in the Development of Character." He told of the changed conditions since the days when nearly every family provided mainly for its own needs, and people were generally healthy because their mode of living gave them plenty of fresh air and exercise. He said that to many of the youth of the present day athletics is a great help in moral as well as physical development. On the athletic field the boy learns patience, self-control, fair play and obedience; he learns to subordinate self so that he may work with others, and to meet defeat without complaining: all this fits him for the more serious work of life.

In further discussion of the subject Joseph S. Walton said that in well-regulated schools and colleges no one is allowed to engage in athletic contests who is deficient in class work, and many a boy is roused to take hold of study in earnest so that he may join in the games. A very important lesson taught by the games is that each must work, not for his own glory, but for the good of the team; this feeling may easily be developed into the highest type of patriotism. Also the self-denial practiced while training for athletic contests, and the knowledge thereby gained of what is good for the body, promote temperance and and hygienic living.

J. Eugene Baker, principal of the Friends' Central School, Philadelphia, then read a paper on "Religious Education in School." He said that ever since George Fox opened a School for boys and another for girls in 1667 and advised that "they be instructed in whatsoever things are civil and useful in the creation," Friends have maintained schools; have felt that the ethical element in education is of supreme importance, and have realized that school associates exert a more potent influence on the future life of a student than text books and apparatus. The need of "a guarded education" is more imperative to-day than ever before and Friends should regard the right education of the young as a religious duty. Youth trained in Friends' schools should enter life with broader sympathies for those whose ideals are below our standards; they should leave the school-room with higher appreciation of truth and keener discrimination between good and evil, giving to society and the business world higher social and commercial standards.

YOUNG FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION.

On First-day evening at a meeting held under the auspices of the Young Friends' Association, Edith M. Winder, of Richmond, Ind., read a paper entitled, "The Society of Friends and Its Duty to Social Reforms." She said there are two reasons why greater responsibility rests upon Friends than upon others for social reforms: the first arises from the fundamental principle of their belief, that God reveals himself directly to every human soul; the second arises from their ideal of the practical application of the Christ rule, that God is no respecter of persons. In her opinion the basis of all reform work is the betterment of the individual, and the chief aim of all Friendly organizations should be to build character for the world's spiritual work.

In the discussion which followed Anna M. Jackson suggested that often there is an unused part of a meeting-house that might be used for a boys' club, a sewing-school, a reading-room or some other good work.

Henry M. Haviland described the work done in the neighborhood guild in Brooklyn. Herbert P. Worth, of West Chester, told of a sewing-school that Friends had conducted in West Chester, Pa., for many years and the good results therefrom.

Another meeting of the Association was held on Third-day afternoon at which Henry M. Haviland, of Brooklyn read a paper on "Friends as Emancipators." The greater part of this has already appeared in FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER. He said that all should be set at liberty to seek the best: that each one who learns the better way, to him it is gain, and happy is he who points the way. In the further discussion of the subject Anna M. Jackson, of New York, alluding to Esau's sale of his birthright said that it is a wonderful thing to be born free, and that nothing can bind us unless we consent to be bound.

HOW TO IMPROVE FIRST-DAY SCHOOLS.

A paper read by Amy E. Sturge at the Annual Meeting of the London Yearly Meeting Home Mission Committee and published in the British Friend for Eighth month.

We do not need to be convinced that the work among the children of our First-day schools is immensely important, and even those who are giving their energies to forwarding other work appreciate what is being done in this direction. I think we Friends have neglected the First-day schools too much, and left them to make their own experiments, and to struggle through their own difficulties without as much personal help and encouragement as they might have had from us. In 1902 there were at least 20,000 children attending our schools (and probably there are no fewer now), and I do not think we can too often remind ourselves that these children come to us at the most impressionable age. It is generally admitted that a child up to the age of fourteen is receiving ineffaceable impressions, and that the earliest years are the most critical period. What a child will be throughout his after life depends largely on what influences he comes under at this age. We have the opportunity of moulding the lives of these little ones, who as yet have not formed such settled habits that a great conversion or turning round is needed to alter their characters.

I do not think we can be successful in this work unless we firmly believe in the indwelling spiritual powers of a child, powers of mind and heart that are waiting to be awakened and drawn forth. Starting with the belief that a child has a spiritual side as well as other sides in his nature, our ambition must be to train the highest side to a beautiful development. The question is, "How shall we train these dormant powers?" To begin with, we must teach the children to love what they ought to love, and to admire what they ought to admire; and by thus making Heaven known to them we give them the best means of keeping out of the paths which lead to hell. Love of right things necessarily excludes the love of evil, and we can in subtle ways help the child to understand the nobleness of human nature. How many men and women have fallen into sin because they were never given the most uplifting of all thoughts! We hope to create in each child such a habit of loving the good and true that his choice is biased, and in the difficult journey of life he will hereafter prefer the good and refuse the evil.

To do all this I am sure it is evident we must study child-nature more carefully, and be willing to take pains to read what others have written on the subject. It is a great error to think anyone can teach children, and that almost anything will do to teach them. We must select those things that will call forth this dormant side of their powers. Lessons from nature will develop their love of the beautiful, and carefully chosen stories of heroes in the Bible and out of the Bible will train their admiration of noble conduct; and we must give scope for unconscious imitation of unselfish action by requiring small services done by the children in class.

While admiring the patient and self-sacrificing work of our teachers, I feel sure that many of us wish that our influence through the organ of the First-day school were stronger. What can be done to make it more effectual and lasting? Already there is a lack of teachers, and if we ask that the standard of teaching be raised, will it not mean a further decrease in the number of those who volunteer to teach? I believe we should remedy this difficulty if some of those who have had a little more experience, and have received a better education, would come forward and help at this juncture. We want training classes for young teachers in First-day schools, just as we want training classes for teachers of day schools.

The reason so many of the older scholars hold back when they are asked to take a class, lies in the fact that they are conscious of their own ignorance and inability to interest children, and of their powerlessness to keep them in order. Although we may be thankful that there is a subtle influence which comes from the character of the teacher, as an upright, conscientious man or woman, which is more powerful than words or than the best teaching, yet surely their task as teachers would be made lighter and that of the children as listeners happier, if they were willing to adopt the hints that are generally acknowledged to be valuable. Teaching, like any other art may be learned, and a number of valuable hints about teaching can be taught. I firmly believe that many of our most retiring and humble scholars would be able to give useful service if we would take systematic pains to help them.

We should have to gain practical knowledge ourselves of modern methods of teaching used in both kindergarten and public schools, and then offer to hold preparatory classes for elementary teachers. The subject of teaching, and the ways of teaching could be shown by prepared lessons, given to illustrate the way it is possible to catch and hold the fleeting attention of the children. I think it would be well if the top class in every First-day school were considered by the superintendent as a training ground for teachers. To this class it should be a mark of honor to belong, and I do believe it is possible to inspire among the members of such a class the spirit that wished to give and to work for others. Few older girls—I do not know anything about the boys—can hold out for long against the persuasion that they are needed, and that some work wants their best thought; only do not let us forget to establish in their minds from the beginning a true ideal, and a constant aim that the precious time with the children should be used to develop their love of good.

In all teaching, the point is to interest. For it is only the things which interest us that take hold of our minds, and have a moulding effect on our characters. Other things pass over us and have no effect on our actions. After gaining the attention of a class of children (who have come to school with their minds full of the diverting scenes of the streets), we must keep their attention by interesting them, and to do that we must make them think. The secret of interesting children is to get them to think with us as we teach, and to take part in the lessons themselves, and we must be ready with plenty of devices to achieve this.

To begin with, the teacher must have chosen a subject that can be brought within the child's little world of experience, for a child only understands what it can associate with something it already knows. And of course the moral of teaching should be connected with those things they experience. With the splendid catalogue of the Perry Pictures we have no longer any excuse for starving the children from the pictures which interest them so keenly. Children learn more readily through their eyes than through their ears, and a picture forms a valuable means of getting the children to take part in the lesson.

Blackboards, light in weight, and of convenient size, can be obtained from some of the educational stores, and they may be an immense advantage to the teacher. The subject of the lesson may be written on the blackboard, and as children watch closely anything they see their teacher do, the blackboard can be made the means of riveting their attention. We have been too much afraid of originality in our teaching. Do not let us sacrifice the hold we might have on the children because we fear to be the first to introduce a new method. And to those who argue that pictures and blackboards introduce a most disturbing element, I should like to reply that when every class is supplied with them I believe they will be found productive of order, rather than of disorder. In some schools where it is impossible for each scholar to have a manuscript book, it has been found an excellent plan to keep a class record book, where the subject of the lesson is regularly recorded by the scholars in turn, and an illustration often added when obtainable. This book will show the natural link between one week's lesson and another, and is useful for recalling the various subjects discussed throughout the year.

I wish that we did more to gain the coöperation of the parents of the children in their moral training. There would be more consistency, perhaps, between what we try to teach and the home discipline, if we made the parents our confidants.

Before closing my remarks I want to say that it seems to me that we must realize how largely it depends on the superintendents of our schools, whether we shall see any powerful forward movement or not. If each superintendent is aiming for a really high tone in his school, his staff will soon feel it. If his ambition is to influence each individual child who comes, he will inspire in the teachers the wish to be regular and punctual in their attendance, and they will not casually be absent without letting him know in time to get a substitute; and further, he will get from his teachers such loyalty that they will coöperate with him in that good order without which no teaching can be what it ought to be. "The ultimate object of discipline is the establishment in the child's mind of an ideal of behavior such as promotes order and happiness in all human relations—for such an ideal takes away the very desire to do wrong."

Ruskin says that there is no wealth but life,—life including all the powers of love, of joy, and of admiration; and he says, "that nation is the happiest which has the largest number of noble and happy human beings." We may ask ourselves what portion of the 20,000 children in our First-day schools will grow up to be noble and happy human beings.

I will quote, in closing, from a man who had worked in a First-day school for nearly forty years. He said, "The First-day school is the field of labor which yields the greatest results when the work is entered upon and continued with regularity and devotion and an earnest spirit."

INTELLIGENT men and women in all denominations are reading and thinking about the modern discoveries which are slowly displacing former conceptions concerning the creation of the world, the nature of God, the method of revelation, the origin of the Bible, and the sacred books of all nations, together with many other things which relate to religion, ethics, and the philosophy of human life. Already this knowledge begins to show itself in the common ways of life. A generation is growing up that is wanted to these ideas,—a generation that has no binding associations of love and reverence with old thoughts and ancient ways which have lost their value. Some day, not far hence,—it may be very soon,—something will happen to reveal the change that is silently going on; and then all at once something will break. Something new, beautiful, and glorious will be revealed; and a new day will begin in the religious life of the world. What re-adjustments will follow nobody can predict, and we need not care to know. But we may be certain that something better than our present denominational arrangements will come, and will be welcomed by the forward-looking branch of every denomination.—
[Christian Register.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, NINTH MONTH 12, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

MONEY GIVING.

WHILE we recognize that the true spirit of Christ-like giving is best exemplified by the giving of self to a life of service, we feel that it may be profitable to consider the duty and responsibility of making donations of money for the furtherance of the various activities which the Society of Friends desires to foster. We have the idea of a free religion so firmly established in our thought that unless we have other necessarily related ideas in its constant company, we are in danger of failing of the possession of material means to maintain a free religion as a living, working force in the world.

We have among us men and women who give gladly of their abundance, and those who share their humble means with equal satisfaction; but we have also a considerable contingent membership to whom even the payment of a small meeting tax is a duty grudgingly performed, and whose interest in philanthropy, education, and the advancement of Friends' principles, exists strictly outside the financial field. Collectors of meeting tax record experiences of unwillingness to pay a few dollars because the member does not see what we do with so much money, or why he should pay for the membership which was his birthright. At the same time the person is willing to reap the financial advantage of belonging to the Society in sending children to George School or some other educational institution among us where the children of Friends are financially favored; or in another case of finding a home in his declining years in some one of the Friends' Homes which the benevolent bounty of a few has so abundantly provided for us.

But outside of any possible financial gain to the individual, if membership in a religious body means anything (and we believe it means much more than it is sometimes credited with), it is just and reasonable that every member, unless the circumstances of his life are unusual, should make some money contribution toward the support of an organized church.

Many of our members can easily find other channels for the expenditure of their entire incomes, and it is easy to put away the demands of the meeting with the thought that religion is a free gift to men, and those better able can well afford to pay the cost of sustaining our organization. This reasoning affects the poor man who indulges in it more injuriously than it does his richer neighbor, for every paying member is a better member than the one who transfers his financial responsibility. We value the things that we pay for either in money or sacrifice. The expense borne by the membership of other churches may well be a lesson to us in giving.

Special contributions for any purpose have about the same or a more discouraging history than meeting tax collection. A few give with generous hearts and open hands. The rest of us look around for more moneyed people to continue the good work, and are prone to consider that the call is not to us because the little we could spare would not amount to anything. The story of the widow's mite is familiar enough to us intellectually, but it seems to have need of practical application to our daily living.

When our one college needs an endowment fund, when the southern schools ask a little aid, when monthly meeting schools do not meet their expenses, when the missions are crippled for lack of money, when the heads of departments in the various fields of organized philanthropic labor must do little because it is the old story of "bricks without straw," if the entire membership would make a personal practical trial of the "mite" idea, considering the mite to mean what we are able to give, we would have money enough and to spare for the furtherance of every good work among us. And we believe that those financially most able, would give still more generously and with willing hands, if they felt the stimulus of a general financial effort in the direction of our common needs.

RELIGION IN SCHOOL AND HOME.

Two articles of especial importance to First-day school workers just now at the beginning of the First-day school year are "The New Movement for Religious Education," by Professor Sanders, of Yale, in the Review of Reviews, and "The Bible in the Public Schools," by H. W. Horwill in the Atlantic. Professor Sanders outlines the plans of work that the Religious Education Association, of which he is the President, is taking up, and discusses the problems and conditions of the movement toward making religious training more effective. The Association is to hold its second annual meeting in Philadelphia in Third month of next year, and it is planning to make that meeting the occasion for a noteworthy permanent contribution to the working literature of religious education. The general subject of the meeting is to be "The Bible in its Practical Application to Life." Attention also is called to a suggestion of the Directors, who met in Boston in Seventh month, that those who are interested in this work arrange for a discussion in each local neighborhood, sometime early in the autumn, of the subject, "The Bible in its Relation to Christian Life and to the Work of the Church." The particular day suggested is Tenth month 4th. Such conferences held on some First-day afternoon, or at some convenient time, would be a good opportunity of making clear to ourselves and our neighbors our testimonies in regard to the Bible and its use as a text-book in First-day school and home religious training. Some of us do not feel that we are making the most effective use of it in our First-day schools, and there is a very general feeling that it is neglected in our homes and that children are not growing up with the knowledge of it we all believe would be good for them to have. It would be a good thing for us to take up this subject in local conferences with our members and neighbors in papers and addresses and in informal discussion.

The other article mentioned closes with these suggestive words: "Mischief is done to the spread of true religion by the spectacle of the church member who demands that the State shall set up in every schoolhouse a light that has not yet been kindled within his own home." It certainly is true that putting the Bible into the school and requiring religious instruction to be given, even if it could be done without getting tangled up in theology and so violating our truce of "religious liberty," would in itself not by any means insure that the children who go to public school would become acquainted with the Bible in any supremely helpful way, nor that the rising generation would be more religious. We not only have the privilege of using the Bible in our First-day schools, but it is the text-book of general use there, and yet there is a deplorable ignorance of it among even those young people who attend these schools. The thing that seems to be of most pressing importance is to get the Bible into the home, then the question of getting it into the public schools will have disappeared. We need to take up seriously this matter of religion in our homes, and we have some important work to do in the line of bringing our First-day schools into such coöperation with the homes of the children who attend that the brief hour once a week may not be the only time that is seriously devoted to definite religious study and thought.

The Young Friends' Review in its issue for Eighth month calls attention to its new address which is 232 West Fourteenth Street. The number does not open as heretofore with "Current Comment," which seems to have been abolished, or perhaps is to be merged with the editorial department, thus obliterating any hard and fast line between current secular affairs and religious matters. The editorials are on "The Ministry" and on "Primitive Christianity" with a note on the new proposed School of Journalism at Columbia University. The opening article is by Professor Nutt of George School on "Hebrew History as one Method of Interesting Children in the Bible," a Buck Hill Falls First-day School Assembly paper. A new department which made its appearance last month, the "Lay Sermon" by a Friend who signs himself "Preacher Bird," is a sermon from out of the woods to indoor folks. The "Grumble!" has heard something of the annual meeting of the joint committee on isolated members and thinks we might well be concerned also about our isolated members "who live nearby, right around the corner, who could, an they would, come to our meetings—who could, an they would, make themselves of noble use in the Society, but who don't do either." He also has a word for "Isolating Friends." "M. R. S.," Editor of the department of "Random Reading," this time "feels moved . . . to do a little writing on her own account," and along with some excellent selections gives a message of her own from her summer home in the north country.

LABOR DAY, as celebrated by labor unions and their friends throughout the country, was notable for two things—that in spite of the conditions in many places that might make for bad feeling vast assemblages of workmen, many of them at this very time on strike, could meet and disperse without any breach of the peace; and for the unmistakable signs in the speeches that were delivered that there is a growing tendency to defer to wiser leadership, and to discourage strikes and boycotts as weapons quite as dangerous to the man who works as to the man for whom he works.

One most interesting speech was that by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor at Indianapolis, in which he said, "Strikes are diminishing in numbers, in spite of what our opponents say. We stand for arbitration, but we must be organized and prepared to defend our interests." Another was that by President Roosevelt at Syracuse in which he pointed out to the thousands of workmen, representing many of the larger cities of the country, who had assembled to greet him, the dangers of encouraging the growth of a separate antagonistic wage-earners' class. He reminded them that "the wage-worker is well off only when the rest of the country is well off; and he can best contribute to this general well-being by showing sanity and a firm purpose to do justice to others."

Our friend, John J. Janney, of Columbus, Ohio, calls attention to an error in the Asbury Park Conference proceedings. On page 243 the author of the poem quoted is W. H. Venable, of Cincinnati, O., who, though a catholic man is not a member of the Roman Catholic church, his church membership being with the Universalists.

WHENEVER an advertiser thinks he is hard up for something to say he would better simply tell the truth and tell it in his plainest language.—[Printer's Ink.]

BIRTHS.

CONROW.—At Hempstead, Long Island, Ninth month 5th, 1903, to Herman and Emma Hutchinson Conrow, a son, who is named Roger Hunt Conrow.

THOMAS.—In East Orange, N.J., Ninth month 3d, 1903, to Richard Henry and Grace T. W. Thomas, a son, who is named Thornton Walton Thomas.

DEATHS.

BLACKBURN.—At Fishertown, Pa., Ninth month 1st, 1903, Hermione Lucille, daughter of W. Dorsey and Lucretia M. Blackburn, aged six years.

Thoughtful in her home, a regular attender and interested member of First-day school.

JONES.—Suddenly in Malvern, Pa., on Ninth month 3d, 1903, Howard C., son of Elias and Sarah H. Jones, aged 30 years.

PANCOAST.—At Merchantville, New Jersey, Third month 12th, 1903, to Thomas J. and Kathryn R. Pancoast, a son, who is named Norman Lester Pancoast.

WAY.—On Sixth month 27th, 1903, Mary Jane Way, aged 64 years, only daughter of Job and Jane Way (both deceased). A member of West Branch Monthly Meeting. Her life was one of loving devotion to parents and home. For many years a great sufferer; we feel that she is now at rest.

COMMUNICATION.

LITERARY STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Editors FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER :

THE condensed article from the distinguished Jewish Rabbi, Dr. Hirsch, in the INTELLIGENCER of Ninth month 5th, is worthy of intelligent study and consideration. "Why," he inquires, "Scriptural exegesis should not be treated as literature is certainly not easy to ascertain."

The translation of these venerable writings are the results of immense knowledge and learning. "We are rid of the futile business of reconciling Genesis and genealogy," as he observes, and are quite ready to accept the exegesis of the apostle "of similitude and allegory," as applied to the Bible.

And in a recent book, by an eminent "divine" of Yale, written "for students of theology," he says that the 24th chapter of Matthew, etc., must be accepted and interpreted spiritually or allegorically. This Friends have always done, and during the delusion of Millerism, in 1844, I did not know of a single Friend who was misled by "Father Miller," with whom I became acquainted on the occasion of a trip up the North river in the above year.

The right interpretation of the Bible, as a whole, is to be found, as the key of knowledge, in the saying "without a parable spoke he not unto them." Aristotle (384 B. C.) writing on this subject says, "which is the reason why religion ever sought access to the mind by similitudes, types, parables, visions and dreams." DAVID NEWPORT.

SOCIETY NOTES.

At Pilesgrove Monthly Meeting held Seventh month 28th the following minute was recorded:

"The committee appointed in Fifth month last, to assist John J. Cornell and wife in their proposed work of visiting families of members, presented a report of their labor in each of the preparative meetings.

"From these reports it appears they made 149 social visits, held three parlor meetings and attended five meetings in the meeting-houses.

"The visits were received with marked appreciation, and there was much evidence that the labor of our friends resulted in a benefit to us."

The First-day meetings at Fairhill Meeting-house, Germantown Avenue and Cambria Street, Philadelphia, has resumed for the season.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE MINISTRY.

I HAVE read and re-read with much interest the article published in the INTELLIGENCER of Eighth month 8th, on "The Decline of the Ministry," for I think it a subject of most vital importance to our Religious Society, and would like to see the views of Friends in regard to the ministry published in the INTELLIGENCER. The author of the article above referred to gives his statements of the different views held by concerned Friends in regard to the causes of "the decline of the ministry." First, "that the philanthropic work, the greater number of conferences, papers, discussions, etc., have made us a less Spiritual body." Secondly, "that there is a mysterious sanctity in the acceptance of the ministry, and they that serve therein must come to it with a terrible wrestling of the Spirit." Thirdly, the writer gives what he terms the antipodal proposition to the above as held by some, "that preaching requires no special calling and election, but if each one endowed with ordinary thinking power and measurable confidence in utterance, would contribute to the meeting such portions of their ideas as we think are really good, we would meet the difficulty of a diminished ministry without recourse, as with some branches of Friends, to a salaried ministry." But the writer accepts neither of these propositions. By a salaried ministry he says "we would sacrifice our testimony for a free ministry," which is true, and "on the other side give up our testimony of a gospel ministry," which from my point of view is not true. For this antipodal proposition to my mind comes nearer to solving the problem than aught else suggested. What is a gospel message? Is it not the same as ever "glad tidings," some encouraging, uplifting words from a concerned thoughtful soul?

"This "antipodal proposition" to me is the basis of the Quaker ministry. It is the emphasis of the "holiness of helpfulness" given to each other; for all good work is holy, and "all that uplifts and enlarges the life of man is a part of religion." I believe many are deterred from accepting the ministry by thinking there must come to them a special consciousness direct from a Divine influence. I would not detract one "jot or tittle" from the responsibility of the preacher. But let us be consistent. There are many things we engage in that are as sacred and responsible as the ministry. Many of our members accept the position of teacher in our First-day schools. Can there be any position assumed that carries with it a greater responsibility than that of moulding and making up the character of the young? Is it not far above that of the preacher whose message, however earnest, too often falls upon ears that are sealed to the truths of life, as we experience them to-day by the settled convictions that come by age. Let us not look for a special call to this service, but accept the fact that when we see the opportunity of doing good, we are then called with a high calling that cannot be lightly passed away; for it is the true call to all who would be faithful servants to our human kind, for in thus serving we are giving the highest praise and adoration to our God. S. E.

VISION OF THOMAS SAY.

Republished by request from FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, Eighth month 27th, 1859.

THOMAS SAY was born of religious parents, in Philadelphia, Ninth month 16th, 1709, old style. He was educated an Episcopalian; but early in life he seemed to prefer getting into stillness, and would, in consequence, often attend Friends' meetings, where he said he frequently found spiritual comfort. "He was united to the Society of Friends when a young man, and throughout his life was remarkable for the tenderness of his conscience, and the benevolence of his character. He was guardian to a great number of orphan children, and was zealous in supporting schools, for black as well as white. He was a saddler and harness-maker by trade; and was remarkable for industry, as well as for the neatness and facility of his workmanship. His mode of life was temperate and simple in the extreme; and this may be one reason why his mental faculties continued clear and vigorous to the last, though he lived to an advanced age.

When about sixteen or seventeen years old he had a dangerous illness, and was supposed for some time to be dead. It was during this trance that he had the vision here recorded in his own words. Numerous contemporaries of the highest respectability were in the habit of testifying to the entire veracity of that part of his statement of which it was possible for them to judge; and many of their descendants have now a clear recollection of such testimony, often repeated.

"I was apprentice to William Robinson. Many were the ways and methods I took to get rid of my evil thoughts and melancholy meditations. I frequently used to stretch myself along upon a bench, viewing and counting the stars, and it often arose in my mind, If there be no Divine Being, whence came the stars? and why ranked in such order? These serious meditations caused the tears to flow down my cheeks, while my soul inwardly cried and said, Oh, if there be a God let me know it, before it be too late. At last I concluded that to believe there was a God and a future state, and to strive to obey him, could not hurt me; but if I should die in a state of unbelief, and find a God, my state would be miserable indeed. Here it pleased the Lord to work upon me according to the richness of his goodness, and under these considerations to beget a desire in me to know him, and a longing to be reconciled to him and he to me. At length he visited me with a sickness called the pleurisy, in which I continued for some time, in extreme anguish both of body and mind. Sometimes a small glimmering hope of mercy seemed to revive me a little; at other times I was almost in despair. Thus I continued for nine days. The fifth and seventh days, being exceedingly thirsty, I cried out to my mother, and said, 'Oh, that I could get my thirst quenched for a moment, before I go hence, that I might enjoy a moment's happiness; for I am afraid that if it is not quenched here, it will not be quenched hereafter.' This made my mother burst into tears, and she said, 'If that is thy state, what will become of the world?'

None but God knew the distressed condition of my poor soul at that time. But here the Lord showed me he 'opens rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of valleys; that he makes the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water.'

"On the ninth day, between the hours of four and five, I fell into a trance, and so continued until about the hour of three or four the next morning. After my departure from the body (for I left the body) my father and mother, Susannah Robinson, and others, who watched me, shook my body, felt for my pulse, and tried if they could discern any remains of life or breath in me, but they found none.

"When I opened my eyes I found myself laid upon a bed, as a corpse is on a board. I was told, after I got better, that the reason they did not lay me on a board was because my mother could not find freedom to have it done. They sent for Dr. Kearsley, who attended me, to have his opinion. When he came, he felt my pulse, and told them he found no remains of life in me, but as he was going away, he returned again, and said that something came into his mind to try further. He asked for a small looking-glass, which Catharine Souder, who lived with my father, procured. The doctor laid it on my mouth for a short time, and when he took it off, a little moisture appeared on it. He then said, 'If he is not quite dead, I think he will never open his eyes again; but I would have you let him be as he is while he continues warm, and when he begins to grow cold, lay him out.'

"This they told me after I returned into the body. At first, I inquired why so many sat up with me, not knowing that they thought me dead. They were very much surprised to hear my voice; the second time I spoke they all rose from their chairs, and when I spoke the third time they all came to me. My father and mother inquired how it had been with me. I answered that I thought I had died, and been going into heaven; that after I left the body I heard, as it were, the voices of men, women and children, singing songs of praise unto the Lord God and to the Lamb, without intermission, which threw me into transports of joy. My soul was also delighted with beautiful verdant groves, which appeared to me on every side, and such as were never seen in this world. Through these I passed, being all clothed in white, and in my full shape, without the least diminution of parts. As I passed along towards a higher state of bliss, I cast my eyes upon the earth (which I saw plainly), and beheld three men, whom I knew, die. Two of them were white men, one of whom entered into rest, and the other was cast off. There appeared a beautiful transparent gate opened; and as I and the one that entered into rest came up to it, he stepped in; but as I was stepping in I stepped into the body. When I recovered from my trance, I mentioned both their names, at the same time telling in what manner I saw them die, and which of them entered into rest and which did not. I said to my mother, 'Oh, that I had made one step further! then I should not have come back again.'

"After I told them what I had to say, I desired them to talk no more to me; for I still heard the melodious songs of praises, and while I heard them I felt no pain; but when they went from me the pain in my side returned again. I was glad of this, hoping every stitch would take me off, for I longed for my final change.

"After I told them of the death of the three men, they sent to see if it was so, and when the messenger returned, he told them they were all dead, and had died under the circumstances I had mentioned. Upon hearing this, I fell into tears, and said, 'Oh, Lord, I wish thou hadst kept me, and sent back him, who entered into pain.'

"Soon after this I recovered from my sickness. One of those whom I saw die was a negro, named Cuffee, who belonged to the widow Kearney. Some time after my recovery the widow sent for me, and inquired whether I thought departed spirits knew each other. I answered in the affirmative, and told her I saw her negro man die, whilst I myself seemed to be a corpse. She asked me, 'Where did he die?' I told her in her back kitchen, between the jamb of the chimney and the wall; and when they took him off the bed to lay him on a board, his head slipped from their hands. She said it was so, and asked me if I could tell where they laid him. I told her they laid him, at first, between the back door and the street door. She said she did not remember anything of that. I told her he lay there whilst they swept under the window, where he was afterward placed. She then said she remembered it was so, and she was satisfied.

"Though the negro's body was black, yet his soul was clothed in white. This filled me with greater joy than I had felt before, as it appeared to me a token of his acceptance. I was not, however, permitted to see him fully entered into rest, for as I was about to enter in myself, I came back into the body again.

"Each of these three men appeared to me in a complete body, separated from the sinful, earthly body. They were also clothed. The negro and the person who entered into rest, were in white; the other who was cast off, had his garment somewhat white, but spotted. I saw also the body in which each lived when upon earth, and also how they were laid out, but my own body I did not see. The reason why I neither saw my own body, nor entered fully into rest, I take to be this—that my soul was not quite separated from my body, as the others were; though it was so far separated as to see these things, and to hear the songs of praises I have mentioned."

Though Thomas Say lived to be an old man, it was universally remarked by those who knew him, that after this vision he walked through life like a traveler desirous to reach his home. He discharged all domestic and social duties in a manner eminently exemplary; but the other world was to him the reality, and this world was the shadow.

M. C.

THOMAS GAWTHROP, 1709 to 1780.

From Friends' Quarterly Examiner.

THE record of Thomas Gawthrop's early years is to be found in the Testimony issued in 1781 regarding him, from which the following particulars, not quite verbatim, are extracted:

"He was born of honest parents of our religious profession at Skipton. His father dying when he was young he was put an apprentice to a man near Leeds, not of our profession. Meeting with severe treatment during his service, to free himself, therefrom he was induced to enlist into the army, in which he continued about five years. Whilst in that service, being by permission on a visit to his relatives at Skipton, he attended a meeting there, at which he was effectually reached by the powerful testimony of our late valued friend, Mary Salter, and from that time attended Friends' Meeting when opportunity offered; and though he labored under great exercise of mind on account of his situation, yet he was not free to have his Discharge purchased, fearing how he might stand his ground. One of his officers, seeing his dissatisfaction with the way of life he was in, made him an offer of his discharge if he would return the money he had received when he enlisted; which, after solid consideration, he accepted, and paying the money so soon as he had earned by his industry sufficient for his purpose, he obtained his discharge and returned to Skipton. During his residence there, which was not long, he came forth in public testimony. From thence he removed to Kendal, and soon after accompanied a Friend on a religious visit to Scotland."

Shortly afterwards, Tenth month 31, 1735, he married Isabel, daughter of Simon Crosfield, of Lowpark, near Kendal, and settled nearby in the village of Gatebeck. They had four sons and two daughters; the two youngest sons emigrated to America.

He had appeared in the ministry of Friends when about twenty-five years of age (1733). In the "Rise and Progress of People called Quakers in Ireland," 1751, there is mention of "Thomas Gawthrop, from Westmoreland, 1741" as among the visitors to Ireland.

Six years later (1747) he made his first voyage to America. John Woolman, in his Journal, mentions meeting him in the summer of 1747, while travelling in New England. He says: "We then went to Boston, and proceeded eastward as far as Dover. Not far from thence we met our friend Thomas Gawthrop, from England, who was then on a visit to these provinces."

It was on his return from this first visit that the vessel was captured by a French privateer, a full and interesting account of which is given in the Journal of John Griffith:

"Soon after my health was restored, an ancient friend, whose name was Peter Davis, from New England, came to Philadelphia in order to take a passage for England, and our Friend Thomas Gawthrop having performed a religious visit to Friends on the continent of America, with Isaac Greenleaf, a friend on trade, I joined them; all agreeing to take our passage in a new ship bound for London. On the 30th of the Ninth month, 1747, the before mentioned friends, who were to be my companions on the mighty ocean, set out from Philadelphia in order to embark at Chester with many friends, and called for me at my house in Derby, being the direct road. Next day, being the 1st of the Tenth month, about two o'clock in the afternoon, we took leave of friends in great love and tenderness, and went on board the ship, which fell down the river that evening a little lower than Newcastle. Next day, in the evening, we came to an anchor, near Reedy Island, where we were detained by a great storm of wind and rain until the 5th in the morning, when we set sail with a fair wind, taking our departure from the capes of the Delaware about six the same evening."

THE city of Chicago was 100 years old on the 17th of last month. The big celebration is to be the last week in Ninth month.

They had favorable weather until the 18th, and very stormy and "trying" weather for ten days afterwards:

"The 20th proved a fine day, so that they had a good observation, and judged we were then about an hundred and fifty leagues from the Lands' End of England. Next day being the 30th of the Tenth month, Thomas Gawthrop, having had a very restless, painful night, by troublesome dreams, etc., had some expectation of our being taken (as he afterwards intimated), he stepped upon deck about eight o'clock in the morning, and immediately espied a sail upon our windward quarter, giving us chase."

The alarm was given but after about nine hours' chase they were overtaken, and captured by the vessel, which proved to be a French privateer. After much difficulty from head winds they landed at a place called Port Passage, and were taken from there by land to Bayonne, and confined in the castle. The account goes on to describe the places and the people, and to relate their adventures. Late in the year news was brought "of a cartel-ship from England being arrived at Port Passage," to which place they returned, but were delayed there several weeks, and at Sebastian.

"We arrived in England and came to an anchor in Torbay on the 26th of the First month, 1748, after a passage of five days. The ship was bound for Plymouth, but the sailors who had been prisoners in France, being in fear of another confinement by being pressed on board of the men-of-war, took the command of her from the captain by something, in appearance at least, like force."

They escaped great danger in landing, but received good welcome from Friends at a meeting held near Newton-Bushel.

"On Second-day we proceeded towards London as far as Exeter, where friends entertained us kindly that night. Next day, Thomas Gawthrop, Isaac Greenleaf, and myself (leaving our ancient friend Peter Davis with friends there) hired horses as far as Honiton." They soon afterwards separated.

Eight years later (1756) we find him, undeterred by his former experience, again visiting America for the second time. A minute of Wilmington Monthly Meeting states that "Thomas Gawthrop, from Westmoreland, England, visited the meeting in 1757."

As showing the character of the man and the respect in which he was held, a letter from John Pemberton to Samuel Fothergill is added:

"Philadelphia, First month 11th, 1757.
"Our Yearly Meeting at Burlington was a time of great favor to the upright. Honest Thomas Gawthrop was there, and had some very satisfactory opportunities in public. In the meeting of ministers John Churchman told me he thought him equal at least to any he had ever heard. In the meetings for discipline, he was several times singularly favoured; but it is not often he is thus permitted to ascend; his path is trodden by few, and he is often reduced so low, both in body and mind, as to be scarcely able to keep on his feet."

The following anecdote is related in the "Life of George Dillwyn" (Biographical Sketches and Anecdotes of the Religious Society of Friends):

"When Thomas Gawthrop, that honest old seaman, was on his second religious visit to this country, in the year 1755 or 1756, he was sitting at the dinner table in a Friend's house when George Dillwyn entered the room, whistling in his usual thoughtless manner. Thomas ceased eating, laid down his knife, and in accents of strong feeling said, 'I wished for the wings of a dove to be with you, and now you make my heart sick.' This short sermon made a powerful impression upon the lad to whom it was addressed, and it was remembered and repeated by him in very advanced life."

During this second visit he was as far south as Blackwater in Virginia, from whence he wrote a letter to Samuel Fothergill, dated Twelfth 8th, 1756.

In 1766 Thomas Gawthrop visited Friends in America for the third time. John Griffith notes in his Journal, eighteen years after their experience in France:—

"On Fifth-day, the 12th of the Sixth month, the Yearly Meeting for New England began at Portsmouth on Rhode Island. Here I met our Friend Thomas Gawthrop, who was upon his third visit to Friends in America; we both sat the whole meeting in silence."

And again, a few days later, they met at Nantucket. A minute of Wilmington Monthly Meeting, 11th of the Third month, 1767, records that "Our esteemed Friend, Thomas Gawthrop, from England, attended this meeting; whose company and service was acceptable."

"In his third visit to America he was particularly concerned on account of the hard and suffering state of the poor negroes, and we believe his labors in behalf of that oppressed people were of service." (Testimony of Kendal Monthly Meeting.)

Again, in 1775, he visited America for the Fourth time.

The following extract of a letter, written at the time of Thomas Gawthrop's last return from America, in 1778, gives some further particulars of him, and of the situation of affairs in Philadelphia:

"William Dilworth brought my brother, Thomas Gawthrop, home in a chaise, he was very feeble, he can neither write nor in any way use his right hand.

He says he was twenty-seven days on his passage from Philadelphia to Falmouth; he was in the former place when Washington and his army were in it, also after he left it and William Howe took possession of it without any opposition, many of the inhabitants rejoicing, though they had little left to give them, wanting almost everything necessary to the support of the body. Beef and mutton sold at half-a-crown and three shillings per pound, and other things in proportion. Before he left the place, four pins sold for a halfpenny, and Friends wished to have bought him two yards of flannel to put about him at sea, but could not get it. He says his son James, who is settled in Virginia, suffered much, and for refusing to muster when required by the Provincials he was taken and marched two hundred miles to Philadelphia with his hands tied behind him and a gun on his back; he was not kept long, but was sent home again, but was not allowed to see his father, though then in Philadelphia." (Letter from George Crosfield, Westmoreland, to his son, George Crosfield, Warrington, 1778. See Friends' Library, Vol. ix., published Philadelphia 1845, f. 191.)

John Woolman (1772) writes of being at George Crosfield's, and attending the meeting at Preston Patrick; Jane Crosfield, the wife of the latter, was a prominent minister in the Society of Friends. In this home John Woolman "rested a few days in body and mind." His niece was the wife of Thomas Gawthrop's son James (married in 1777), and he probably carried messages from the two sons in America to the parents in Preston Patrick.

Thomas Gawthrop survived the hardships of his last American experiences for nearly three years, and, "though under great bodily infirmity," was diligent in his attendance on Preston Patrick Meeting till "he met with a fall and fracture" which kept him a prisoner to his room. He died on Ninth month 28th, 1780, surviving his wife by more than five years.

Swarthmore, Pa.

HENRY GAWTHROP.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

HOPEWELL, VA.—The Young Friends' Association met Eighth month 23d. The session was opened by the President reading a chapter from "Royal Helps for Royal Needs." Most of the members were present, also quite a number of visitors.

Charles E. Clevenger read from our Discipline "Moderation and Simplicity." This was followed by interesting remarks from several of the members. Howell M. Bond gave a splendid collection of Current Topics.

Lydia L. Irish read a selection entitled "Looking for flaws." The article admonished carefulness in all to avoid looking for flaws in those with whom we come in contact. We were sorry that the appointees on history, and paper for discussion, were unprepared. But satisfactory excuses were given.

After a brief silence the Association adjourned to meet Ninth month 13th, at the Ridge Meeting-house.

BERTHA B. CLEVENGER, Secretary.

THE library of Dr. Heinrich Zimmer, the Celtic scholar of Berlin, was destroyed by fire with all his books and collections. A London scholar has made an appeal to replace it, to the slight extent that money can do so, as was done in the case of Professor Mommsen.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

BYBERRY FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION has arranged for an illustrated lecture by President Joseph Swain of Swarthmore College, on his recent visit to the Bible Lands, to be given at Somerton, Pa., in the town hall on Seventh-day the 3d of Tenth month, at 7.45 p. m. President Swain is also to make the address at the regular meeting of the Friends' Association the next day, First-day the 4th of Tenth month, at the Byberry Meeting-house, at 2.30 p. m.

Robert and Esther Barnes, who were to be at Salem, (N. J.) Quarterly Meeting, expect also to attend First-day School Union at Salem on Seventh-day, the 12th.

The extensive repairs at George School have made it necessary to postpone the date of opening one week. The school will open Ninth month 22d, 1903.

Beatrice Henszey, of Philadelphia, will take charge of the new Friends' School at Newtown Square for the coming school year. The school will open on Ninth month 14th.

The friends of William W. Birdsall and family note with much pleasure their return to Philadelphia. They will reside at 1723 Mt. Vernon street. The Philadelphia High School for Girls, of which William is Principal, opened on the 8th instant. Alvan Birdsall remains at Morganton, N. C., in charge of his father's business interests there.

LITERARY NOTES.

Of especial interest among books soon to be issued by Macmillan is "Tenement House Conditions in New York" two volumes containing the Report of the Tenement House Commission of 1900. This was a most extensive and intensive investigation; and its results have been looked forward to with interest by students of municipal problems throughout the country, as well as by those who, like Jacob Riis, are interested in the coming of the reign of decency and good order. Year by year New York moves onward toward better things in regard to the housing of its poor and of those who are endowed with but moderate earning power; and it is believed that this Report will mark one more step in the right direction.

Macmillan are also to publish a book on "The Vocal Interpretation of the Bible," by S. S. Curry, the design of which is to show those who have occasion to read the Bible aloud, how to bring out the full meaning and the largest possible part of the beauty of the sacred book. The book contains an introduction by Professor Francis G. Peabody, of Harvard, author of "Jesus Christ and the Social Question."

The frontispiece of the Review of Reviews for Ninth month is a portrait of the Marquis of Salisbury. The editorials discuss the present relations of Ireland and England, English preferential tariff and England's trade relations; race problems in Australia, in South Africa, and in the United States; the Macedonian, Bulgarian and Turkish situation; the far eastern situation; Finland and Russia and other affairs in Europe; capital and labor at home; Cuba, cotton, politics, the canal, "Mexico's perennial president."

Some special articles are on the cotton crop, the race problem in the United States by Lyman Abbott, and in South Africa by Arthur Hawkes, religious education by the President of the Religious Education Association, Rural School Libraries in North Carolina by C. H. Poe.

The North American has a symposium on the work and influence of the late Pope by Archbishop Ireland, an Episcopal Bishop, the Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, Washington Gladden, Dr. J. Wesley Johnson and others; The Problem of the Balkans by a former Minister to that region; on Whistler by Joseph Pennell; British Naval Progress; "Why the Panama Route was Originally Chosen" by a Guatemalan; on Malayan questions by a former Governor of Borneo; "The Ideal of a University" by Charles Waldstein; "How Shakespeare learned his Trade" by Brander Matthews; The Anti-Saloon League by Dr. Harvey Graeme Furbay; on lefthandedness by Prof. Lombroso; the "Hour Glass" by W. B. Yeats.

The Southern Workman for Ninth month has a sane word editorially on race questions in the South. Contributed articles are: Negro Rural Schools in Virginia, The Problem of Employment for Negro Women, Indian Town Officers, Hingham Village Industries.

St. Nicholas for this month has fine illustrations; among them being Lehmann's Browning, Guercino's "Guardian Angel." Besides the stories there are "The Sports of Negro Children," "A School Savings Bank," "With the Birds in Autumn," "A Little Talk about a Great Poet" telling how best to begin friendship with Browning.

THE VOICE OF THE FIRE.

[The following verses, recited at the Friends' Association of Purchase Quarterly Meeting, held Seventh month 29th, 1903, and sent to the INTELLIGENCER by request, were suggested to the writer one First-day morning last winter while listening to the roar of the wood fire in the old Purchase Meeting-house.]

CLOSE by the neighboring roadway
A plain-fashioned building has stood,
While Time's glass has run past a century
With its burden of evil and good.

It is here, through these years, "Friends" have pondered
Their duty to God and to man;
Here taught that the Light dwelling in us
Is a part of the Great Master's plan.

This old meeting-house shows in its contour
No proof of the architect's power;
No message rings out from the belfry
To tell of the worshipping hour.

No organ notes steal o'er the senses
From the recess of some dim alcove,
And yet there is one dulcet singer,
And that is an ancient wood stove.

How oft on a cold winter's morning
When the keen northern wind has blown chill,
Have I list to the voice of this singer
And its songs all my senses would fill,

Till I seemed to see the front galleries—
All so silent and vacant now,—
Filled with sweet-faced Quaker matrons
With the soft light of Faith on their brow.

Then, close by, the solemn-faced "brothers,"
All dressed in some somber hue,
With perhaps a broad-brimmed beaver
Not yet doffed, they to "principle" true.

Nor is this all there was of that meeting,
For I hear as the fire burns low,
A song that paints me a picture
Of the youth of that time long ago.

And up in the gallery above me
The "young folks" from their places look down
With, perchance, a sly joke on their elders,
Which occasions a smile and a frown.

Then I learn that from time immemorial,
In spite of command or reproof,
There are times when the mind is not able
To curb the bright laughter of youth.

Now suddenly into my dreaming
There comes a bright, joyous strain,
As a log that has smouldered in silence
Now breaks into life again.

As the merry flames dart upward
They voice a gladsome tune,

That tells of youth's bright spring-time
When life has the promise of June.

And I see once again rise before me
From the mist of the vanishing years,
This old meeting-house filled to its utmost,
While in through the doorway appears

The sweet Quaker bride and the bridegroom;
No matter the form or the creed,
The hearts that are joined "in the Spirit,"
Have Heaven's Divine seal, indeed.

With a snap the log breaks, and its embers
Soon to ashes will turn, and thus give Back to Earth all the parts from Earth borrowed
Silent forces that helped the tree live.

As the last low, sweet notes of my singer
Steal into my reverie again,
I hear mingled sadness and gladness
In the midst of this murmured refrain.

I see gathered again in the silence,
With hearts that are sorrowing now,
The friends of some deeply beloved one
Who has garnered what life can bestow.

And I realize, though time may bring changes,
Far excelling the marvels we dream,
The life that is real—Life Immortal—
Is the same through all ages supreme

* * * * *

I know not what fate in the future
Awaits this old building, nor who
Will walk in the paths of their fathers
To succor these worshipping few.

But we know the world's progress is upward,
And we rest on one promise secure,
Since "Friends" hold the Truth as their goal-star,
Light indwelling, The Truth will endure.

LOUISE E. HAVILAND.

THE CHARACTER OF JESUS.

By Professor Francis G. Peabody, of Harvard, in the Hibbert Journal (Oxford, England.)

THE most conspicuous aspect of contemporary Christian thought is the renewal of popular interest in the character of Jesus Christ. Never was there a time when the plain people were less concerned with the metaphysics or ecclesiasticism of Christianity. The construction of systems and the contentions of creeds, which once appeared the central themes of human interest, are now regarded by millions of busy men and women as mere echoes of ancient controversies, if not mere mockeries of the problems of the present age. Even the convocations of the churches manifest little appetite for discussions which were once the bread of their life and the wine of their exhilaration, and one of the leaders of a great Christian communion has been led of late to say: "What conclusions these discussions may reach is of small concern; the only really important thing is that they should come to an end." Under these very conditions of theological satiety, however, the mind of the age returns with fresh interest to the contemplation of the character of Jesus Christ. "Back to Jesus," "In His Name," "What would Jesus do?" "Jesus' Way"—phrases like these, caught up by multitudes of unsophisticated readers, indicate the force and scope of the modern imitation of Christ. To follow

Jesus even though one does not understand him; to do the will, even if one has not learned the doctrine; to perceive through much darkness that the life is the light of man—these are the marks of the new obedience. . . .

When he announced the principles of his teaching, the impression first made upon its hearers was, we are told, not so much of the message itself as of the messenger. The people were astonished, not primarily by the contents of the discourse, but by the authority with which it was delivered. The preacher did not demonstrate, or plead, or threaten like the scribes; he swayed the multitude by personal power. It was the same throughout his ministry. He called men from their boats, their tax-booths, their homes, and they looked up into his face and obeyed. He commends the instinct of the soldier who gives orders to those below him because he has received orders from above. What is the note of character which is touched in such incidents as these? It is the note of strength. This is no ascetic, abandoning the world; no dreamer, no joyous comrade, delighting in the world; here is the quiet consciousness of mastery, the authority of the leader, a confidence which makes him able to declare that a life built on his sayings is built on a rock. Jesus is no gentle visionary, no contemplative saint, no Lamb of God except in the experience of suffering; he is a Person whose dominating trait is force; the scourger of the traders, the defier of the Pharisees, the commanding Personality whose words are with the authority of power.

From whatever side we approach the character of Jesus this impression of mastery confronts us. On the one hand is the distinctly ethical aspect of his strength. It may still be debated whether the religious life is fundamentally an expression of thought, or feeling, or will; but the point at which the teaching of Jesus first touches the religious sentiment seems quite beyond debate. It is obviously not at the point of intellectual satisfaction, for Jesus repeatedly accepts as disciples persons whose theological convictions would satisfy few modern churches. "O woman, great is thy faith," he says to the Canaanite; "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel," he says of the centurion. The measure of knowledge, as Schleiermacher said, is plainly to Jesus not the measure of piety. Nor is it to the emotions that Jesus offers his teaching. Solemn exaltations of moods, experiences of prolonged temptation, moments of mystic rapture happen, indeed, in his career; but when we consider what a part these emotional agitations have played in the history of religion, one is profoundly impressed by the sanity, reserve, composure and steadiness of the character of Jesus.

It has often been assumed that he was an untutored peasant, an inspired workingman, whose intuitions were his only guide. On almost every page of the Gospels there are indications that the new Master was neither unlettered nor untrained, but equipped with intellectual as well as spiritual authority.

Perhaps the most striking evidence of this intellectual mastery was a certain lightness of touch which Jesus often employed in controversy, and which sometimes approaches the play of humor, and sometimes the thrust of irony. His enemies attack him with bludgeons, and he defends himself with a rapier. No test of mastery is more complete than this capacity to make of playfulness a weapon of reasoning.

The method of Jesus pierces through the subtlety and obscurity of his opponents with such refinement and dexterity that the assailant sometimes hardly knows that he is hit. Instead of a direct reply, the immediate question is parried and turned aside and the motive which lies behind it is laid bare. People come to him with an inquiry about the division of property, and Jesus first seems to decline jurisdiction in the matter. "Who made me," he says, "a judge or a divider over you?" Then, however, looking around at the faces of the crowd who are seeking his guarantee for their greed, he penetrates to the thought which the economic problem has disguised, and answers, not their inquiry, but their hearts: "I say unto you all, keep yourselves from covetousness." His disciples ask for the reward of their loyalty, "Lo, we have left all and have followed thee," and Jesus answers, "Ye shall receive an hundredfold, houses and brethren, sisters and mothers, and children and lands;" and then, as if with a playful sense of the little that all this tells them of that which should happen, he goes on: "Yea, houses and lands indeed, with persecutions." He opens the Book in the synagogue, and, with the familiarity of one versed in the Scriptures, selects that passage which is fulfilled in him, "He hath anointed me to preach the acceptable year of the Lord"; but then, while the minds of his hearers run on into the next phrase of the prophet's saying, Jesus abruptly closes the Book in the middle of a sentence and gives it back to the attendant, leaving it for the congregation to perceive that he declines to appropriate the ancient threat, "and the day of vengeance of our God." Here is intellectual insight matching spiritual authority. Here is no recluse or peasant or passive saint, but an intellectual as well as moral leader who may be rejected, indeed, but who cannot be despised. The picture of the historic Jesus which would reproduce this type of character and which is still left for Christian art to paint, is not of the pallid sufferer, but of the wise, grave Master, whom to meet was to reverence if not to obey.

The type of character directly derived from him—the Christian character—is not a survival of monastic or sentimental ideals, inapplicable to conditions of the modern world; it is a form of power made effective through strength of soul. Its force flows down like an unstinted river among the utilities of life because it is nourished among the eternal hills. It has its abundance and its reserves, its service and its solitude; and the power which moves the busy wheels of the life of man is fed in the deep places of the life of God.

Persecution of the Persian Babis.

From the British Friend.

THE persecution of the early Friends in the seventeenth century is having its parallel to-day in Persia, where the sect of the Babis have been undergoing terrible outrages. On June 27th last, the city of Yezd, in southwest Persia, was the scene of a massacre of Babis, on account of the refusal of the Governor to execute a prisoner whom, apparently, he considered innocent of crime. Next day the Governor surrendered, and quieted the mob by barbarously executing two Babis. This sect, which ten years ago was estimated by Lord Curzon to number nearly a million, is distinguished by devotion to freedom of thought and purity of life. It is, he says, the one Oriental "heresy" which seems to be imbued with the spirit of progress and reform. It has shown splendid heroism in the various persecutions which it has undergone since it was founded in 1844, and this is probably the great secret of its success. Only one Babi is reported to have ever recanted his opinions, and he, like Crammer, withdrew his recantation and died a martyr. The Times says:

"Their ethical doctrine, notably in regard to the position of women and to tolerance, their open testimony against the profligate imposture of degraded Mohammedanism, and certain aspects of their conception of the Deity, of the universe, and of the relation of man to both, raise them above the level of their oppressors . . . whose despotism yearly becomes more and more shameless in its debauchery and corruption."

A Wonderful Fruit Belt.

THE Alleghany orchard company, with headquarters at Cumberland, Md., has four square miles of orchards in the nearby mountain counties of West Virginia. It is a fine example of a specialized agricultural industry. Its scale and methods are of the type that we are accustomed to associate with the bonanza farms of the west, but it is almost needless to say that in the working out of details, a mountain peach farm differs from the western bonanza farm at almost every point. The manager, who is in charge of more than 1,000 acres, mostly peach, has his hands full even with the aid of his carefully organized force of assistants. He has a bookkeeper, a typewriter, a timekeeper and several messenger boys, who leave him free to go about the orchards on a good horse. In the orchards he is assisted by orchard superintendents, having the care of 200 or 300 acres each. Each superintendent has several bosses under his care. With this machine bound together by a system of telephone wires, Mr. Miller manages to keep 200 men in busy working order.

To keep the force steadily employed requires a steady succession of peaches to market. This succession is furnished by some 60 varieties now being grown on a commercial scale. To keep the orchard right up to date, there is a trial orchard where more than 500 varieties of fruit are being tried. Forty fertilizer tests are also in progress. The test orchard alone is large enough to make most farmers think they were orchardists if they had so many acres of fruit.

The opportunity to learn is being utilized by several future state pomologists, who are there working in the fruit and learning the practical supplement that the theory of the college requires.—[J. Russell Smith, in American Agriculturist.]

HENRY P. LOWE, Chief Engineer of the United States Steel Corporation, hurrying by special train from New York to Los Angeles, California, to reach his daughter who was dying, made the distance in 70 hours—1 hour and 20 minutes less than three days.

THE Dominion Government sent out a party of scientists, sailing from Halifax recently, to explore in the northern waters, to take possession of all lands on the western side of Baffins Bay, and to break up American poaching in Hudson's Bay.

CURRENT EVENTS.

FREDERICK LAW OLNSTEAD, the landscape architect, who has died in his 82d year, was the first in this country to plan a great park. Central Park, New York, was his first great work; Prospect Park in Brooklyn the next; he achieved a rare success in the magical adaptation of the before unimproved South Park in Chicago to the scheme of the Columbian exposition; and he planned the attractive and unparalleled park and parkway system which now environs Boston. After two years in business and a voyage to China "before the mast" he devoted himself to farming. He first met A. J. Downing and Calvert Vaux, his tutors in landscape gardening, while a farmer on Staten Island. He is the author of "Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England," and three volumes describing a journey on horse back through the Southern States. His work is to be seen in all parts of the land,—in the Yosemite National Park, where he was the first commissioner, and the Mariposa grove of big trees; the capitol grounds at Washington, the grounds of Leland Stanford university, the Vanderbilt estate in the North Carolina mountains, the Niagara reservation, Seaside Park at Bridgeport, Ct., Mount Royal in Montreal and other parks in Louisville, Detroit, Rochester, Milwaukee, and also in many private country places from Bar Harbor to California.

A DISPATCH of the 4th from Bangor, Me., says: "The August criminal term of the Supreme Judicial Court which adjourned to-day disposed of 140 liquor cases. There were 194 liquor indictments, and of about 140, over fifty respondents had fled from the city, fearing jail sentences. Six liquor dealers have been sent to jail for six months each, while jail sentences varying from six to eighteen months were imposed upon about 100 others.

This is the first time in twenty-five years that jail sentences have been imposed upon violators of the prohibitory law, and the liquor trade is demoralized. Nearly all of Bangor's 200 bar rooms are closed, most of the hotels are dry, and the druggists will not sell a drop of liquor even upon a prescription. John D. Long, Ex-Secretary of the Navy, in a speech at Buckfield, Me., on the 24th of last month said, "The repeal of the prohibitory amendment would be a step backward in the matters of moral and social reform. . . . I do not believe the good people of the State will ever allow it to be repealed."

IN THE unanimous re-election of Booker T. Washington by the National Negro Business Men's League, in session last week at Nashville, there may be perceived a significance that accords with the impressive meaning of the convention itself, comprising fifteen hundred intelligent, progressive, substantial citizens who are in the best sense representative of conditions and purposes that will benefit their people morally and materially. . . . We ought not to be more impressed by the clamor over a crime committed by some black wretch at the other end of the human scale than by the most excellent lesson from Nashville. —City and State.

AT A MASS meeting attended by several thousand citizens of Victor, Col., in the Cripple Creek district where a coal strike is in progress, the speakers were strong in their denunciation of Governor Peabody's action in sending troops to the district, but counseled their hearers to treat the soldiers with consideration and respect. Resolutions were adopted declaring that misrepresentation was employed in inducing the Governor to send troops, and condemning the Governor's action as "unwarranted by the facts, and anarchistic in spirit and consequences."

The resolutions declare that the Cripple Creek district is as peaceable as any in the country, and protest against the threatened establishment of martial law.

SENATOR GEORGE F. HOAR, the veteran republican of Worcester, Mass., was 77 years old on the 4th of this month. A pleasant feature of the day was a celebration and testimonial tendered him by his democratic Irish Catholic fellow-townsmen. In the course of his reply to their address which was made by Alderman E. J. McMahon, Senator Hoar said: "If my life has been worth anything, it has been because I have insisted, to the best of my ability, that these three things—love of God, love of country, and manhood—are the essential and fundamental things, and that race, color, and creed are unessential and accidental."

THE newsboys of New York must hereafter be licensed and wear badges, and these badges and registration cards are being issued at various schools. The age limit is 11 years, and those under that age are to be kept off the street hereafter. The board of education expects that 8000 badges will be necessary. A week's grace will be given the children before the law is enforced, and unlicensed sellers of papers will then be taken to the children's court. There are special officers appointed to enforce this law. No girls under 16 will be allowed to sell papers on the street.

THE English labor party is organizing contests for seats in Parliament at the next general elections on an unprecedentedly large scale, as an outcome of the recent successes at the parliamentary by-elections. Among others, Joseph Chamberlain's seat for West Birmingham will be contested by the prominent labor leader, W. J. Davis, who is a strong free-trader.

NEWS NOTES.

KING EDWARD has made a visit to Vienna, and was brilliantly entertained by Emperor Franz Josef.

AT the funeral of James C. McClure, a prominent coal operator of Scranton, six miners from his colliery acted as pall-bearers.

THE first bale of new cotton at Memphis was sold in open market at 30 cents a pound, the highest price ever recorded on the Memphis exchange.

WORD comes from Teheran, Persia, that the Shia religious sect are on the point of revolt against their Persian rulers, and will ask the Sultan of Turkey to take the country under his protection.

PROFESSOR JAMES MARK BALDWIN, professor of psychology in Princeton University, has accepted the professorship of philosophy and psychology in Johns Hopkins University.

A NEW world's record for long distance running was made by a passenger train on the Baltimore and Ohio Railway on the 6th, a stretch of 128 miles being covered in 125 minutes.

SO successful has been the experimental growing of cotton in British West Africa that the local railroad officials have been obliged to run extra trains in order to bring down the large supplies to the coast.

JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES, of Georgia, in an address before the convocation of the University of Chicago, advocated the separation of the races—the deportation of the negroes as the only solution of the problem.

AGUINALDO, in a letter of advice to his countrymen, urges them to forsake their besetting sin—gambling; to improve their methods of agriculture, and to attend the public schools so generously provided for them.

PROHIBITIONISTS of the United States on the 21st unveiled at Newton, Illinois, a monument to Hale Johnson, who was assassinated on election day last year, being at the time chairman of the Prohibition State Committee and National Committee.

THE postponement of the opening of the Venezuelan case before the arbitration court at The Hague was necessitated by the unavoidable delay in appointing successors to those members who had declined to serve. It is anticipated that the court will open on Tenth month 1st.

ALL the Ministers have agreed to support the British Minister in refusing to give up the political prisoners at Shanghai to the Chinese authorities, who would certainly subject them to torture as they did Editor Shenchien. They will be tried at Shanghai by a mixed court.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

9TH Mo. 12 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SALEM First-day School Union, at Salem, N. J., at 10 a. m. Subjects for consideration: (1) What preparation would you recommend for the First-day school teacher? (2) What preparation would you recommend for the First-day school pupils? A cordial invitation extended to all interested.

JOHN G. BORTON, } Clerks.
LOUISA POWELL, }

9TH Mo. 12 (SEVENTH-DAY).—BURLINGTON First-day School Union will be held at Mansfield at 10.30 a. m. A cordial invitation is extended.

DAN'L WILLETS, } Clerks.
ANNE R. WALN, }

9TH Mo. 12 (SEVENTH-DAY).—ONE Hundredth Anniversary exercises of Eastland Meeting-house (Little Britain, Pa., Monthly Meeting). Addresses by Henry W. Wilbur, Mary Heald Way, Edwin R. Buffington. A cordial invitation is extended. Friends can come to Oxford, Pa. (9 miles distant) or to Rising Sun, Md. (6 miles).

9TH Mo. 13 (FIRST-DAY).—HOPEWELL, Va., Young Friends' Association at Ridge Meeting-house.

9TH Mo. 13 (FIRST-DAY).—THE FRIENDS of White Plains, N. Y., will hold their next meeting at 42 Fisher Avenue at 11 a. m. All friends welcome.

9TH Mo. 13 (FIRST-DAY).—A CIRCULAR Meeting under the care of a committee of the Western Quarterly will be held at Union Chapel, Willowdale, at 3.30 p. m.

9TH Mo. 14 (SECOND-DAY).—FRIENDS' Flower and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Avenue, at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

9TH Mo. 14 (SECOND-DAY).—BALTIMORE Quarterly Meeting at Gunpowder, Md., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 3 p. m.

9TH Mo. 14 (SECOND-DAY).—ILLINOIS Yearly Meeting at Clear Creek Meeting-house, near Mt. Palatine, Ill., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, Seventh-day preceding, at 10 a. m.

9TH Mo. 16 (FOURTH-DAY).—PHILADELPHIA Monthly Meeting at 15th and Race Sts., at 7.30 p. m.

9TH Mo. 17 (FIFTH-DAY).—QUAKERTOWN, Pa., Young Friends' Association, at the home of Elizabeth Kinsey.

9TH Mo. 17 (FIFTH-DAY).—HADDONFIELD Quarterly Meeting, at Moorestown, N. J., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.

9TH Mo. 17 (FIFTH-DAY).—GREEN

Street Monthly Meeting at Fourth and Green Sts., at 3 p. m.

9TH Mo. 20 (FIRST-DAY).—PHILANTHROPIC Conference of the Western Quarterly Meeting at Centreville, Del., at 2.30 p. m. The committee will meet at 2 o'clock. Prof. Frank Green will address the meeting on "Improper Literature."

9TH Mo. 20 (FIRST-DAY).—CONFERENCE under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor in the Meeting-house at Concord, Pa., at 2.30 p. m.

9TH Mo. 26 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SCIPIO Quarterly Meeting at Scipio, N. Y. Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m.

9TH Mo. 26 (SEVENTH-DAY).—BUCKS First-day School Union at Langhorne, Pa., at 10 a. m., and 1.30 p. m. Subjects: (1) Work in the First-day School, (2) Whose duty is it in our meetings to fill the place the pastor fills in other religious denominations. Cora Haviland Carver, of Philadelphia, is expected to address the afternoon session.

9TH Mo. 28 (SECOND-DAY).—CANADA Half Yearly Meeting at Yonge Street, Ontario. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.

BLANKETS

NEW GOODS FOR AUTUMN

Prices for our autumn lines of bed-furnishings are based upon the old costs—most of these goods were contracted for many months ago; and, in view of the present condition of the market and the decided uncertainty as to future prices, we do not hesitate to advise our customers to supply all their probable wants very early in the season.

All of these goods are excellent values, and some of them are to be sold at less than it would now cost to duplicate them.

White Woolen Blankets

a fine cotton warp, with filling of pure wool; dainty border colorings; silk-bound;

size 60x80 inches—special at $2.50 a pair
size 72x82 inches—special at $3.50 a pair
size 78x84 inches—special at $5.00 a pair

White Woolen Blankets

strictly all-wool, warp and filling; handsomely made and finished:

size 60x80 inches—special at $5.00 a pair
size 72x82 inches—special at $6.00 a pair
size 80x90 inches—special at $8.50 a pair

Superfine Pure Fleece Wool Blankets

white, with handsome colored borders; very desirable grades:

size 60x80 inches—special at $8.00 a pair
size 72x82 inches—special at $10.00 a pair
size 80x88 inches—special at $12.00 a pair

Natural Gray Blankets

strictly all-wool, both warp and filling; a good weight, with plenty of warmth:

size 60x80 inches—special at $3.00 a pair
size 72x82 inches—special at $4.00 a pair

Medicated Scarlet Blankets

all pure wool and handsomely made:

size 60x80 inches—special at $4.00 a pair
size 72x82 inches—special at $5.00 a pair
size 80x90 inches—special at $7.00 a pair

Cotton-Warp Blankets

with wool filling; full size (72x84 inches)—special at $3.00 a pair.

White Woolen Blankets

strictly all pure wool; full size (72x84 inches)—$4.75 a pair.

Lamb's-Wool Blankets

in sizes for baby's crib; border colorings of dainty pink or light blue:

size 30x40 inches—special at $1.50 a pair
size 36x50 inches—special at $2.00 a pair
size 42x56 inches—special at $3.00 a pair

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

TOUR TO THE PACIFIC COAST.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL BANKERS' ASSOCIATION.

On account of the meeting of the National Bankers' Association, to be held at San Francisco, Cal., October 20 to 23, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company offers a personally-conducted tour to the Pacific Coast at remarkably low rates.

This tour will leave New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and other points on the Pennsylvania Railroad east of Pittsburgh, Wednesday, October 14, by special train of the highest grade Pullman equipment. A quick run westward to San Francisco will be made, via Chicago, Omaha, Cheyenne, and Ogden.

Five days will be devoted to San Francisco, allowing ample opportunity to visit the near-by coast resorts. Returning, stops will be made at Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs, Denver, and St. Louis. The party will reach New York on the evening of October 31.

Round-trip rate, covering all expenses for eighteen days, except five days spent in San Francisco, $190.

Rates from Pittsburg will be $5.00 less.

For full information apply to Ticket Agents, or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

GETTYSBURG AND WASHINGTON.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The tour will leave New York 7.55 a.m., and Philadelphia 12.20 p.m., Saturday, September 26th, in charge of a Pennsylvania Railroad Tourist Agent, and will cover a period of six days. An experienced chaperon, whose especial charge will be unescorted ladies, will accompany the party throughout. Round-trip tickets covering transportation, carriage drives and hotel accommodations, will be sold at the extremely low rate of $22 from New York, $21 from Trenton, $19 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to Ticket Agents, Tourist Agent 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court St., Brooklyn; 789 Broad St., Newark, N. J.; or address George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Phila.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike.

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
Phone 1-33-85.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet, 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope). 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet, 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet, 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet, 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

JUST PUBLISHED

Views and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hillborn, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia. 32 pages, paper, 5c.; per dozen 50c. FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION, Philadelphia, Pa.

BREAD MACHINE

FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Solid subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (OTRUS GRAMBERS, Jr.) 524 1/2 Market St., Philadelphia

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets
and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET.

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNTERTAKER

TELEPHONE

1313 VINE STREET

ESTABLISHED 1860

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

- WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
- JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
- ESMOND H. AUSTIN, Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
- CLAVTON FRENCH BANKS, Assistant Treasurer.

Merchants' Trust Company, 611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
 CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
 SURPLUS, 50,000.00
 UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 47,349.29

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveyancing done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $5 and upwards, per annum

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
 JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
 HORACE E. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas.
 CHARLES F. EARLY, Secretary.
 WM. E. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.
 DIRECTORS

- NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
- S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GREIFFITH,
- JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
- JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
- THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
- CNAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
- EDWARD S. SAVRES, EGGAR DUDLEY FARIES,
- JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co. 809 Flaster Street, Philad'a, Pa.

If everybody could have adequate life insurance at no cost at all, what a step in the march of civilization!

The next best is the safest at the lowest cost, furnished to and by the members of the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE, 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
 ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES.
 ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.
 FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTER AND TRANSFER AGENT.
 INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.
 Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, . . . $ 4,457,613.08
 Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.17
 Assets of the Company, 61,618,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

- Samuel R. Shipley, President
- T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
- Assa S. Wing, Vice-President
- Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
- J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
- David G. Alsop, Actuary
- J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
- Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
- C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

- Samuel R. Shipley, James V. Watson,
- T. Wistar Brown, William Longstreth,
- Henry Hatfield, Edward H. Clyden,
- Richard Wood, Thomas Scattergood,
- Charles Harshorne, J. Preston Thomas,
- Assa S. Wing, Robert M. Janney,
- Philip C. Garrett, Marietta G. Morris,
- Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSIONS.

LOW-RATE VACATION TRIPS VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has selected the following dates for its popular ten-day excursions to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: September 18th, and October 2d and 16th.

The excursions from Philadelphia will be run by two routes. Those on September 18th and October 16th, going via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna, special train leaving Philadelphia at 8.10 a.m.; excursion of October 2d running via Trenton, Manunka Chunk and the Delaware Valley, leaving Philadelphia on special train at 8.06 a.m.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

The special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run with each excursion running through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each excursion.

For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when advertising in it. Maria J. Warner of value to us and to the advertisers.

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets (Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

G. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 828 and 1007 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
 J. C. WHITNEY, and V. P. and T. M. W. F. URNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN DAIRIES. Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
 JOSEPH L. JONES

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, NINTH MONTH 19, 1903.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School, FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

J. EUGENE BAKER,
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to

JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES,
Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M.S., Principal,
Or, Jenkintown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country three-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars, address

A. DAVID JACKSON, B.S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone building; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars address

ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Sabbath-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Advertisements of "Wanted," "For Rent," "For Sale," etc., 5 cents a line, each insertion. Seven average words make a line. No advertisement inserted for less than 20 cents.

WANTED.

TEACHERS WISHING TO WORK AS SUBSTITUTES in Friends' schools during the present school year are asked to register their names, LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street Philadelphia.

WANTED—A SINGLE ROOM WITH BOARD by an elderly woman. Terms moderate. Address M., this Office.

WANTED.—AT YOUNG FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION, Philadelphia, young woman to act as superintendent of dining-rooms and to assist matron. Must lodge at home. Apply to MATRON.

WANTED.—A RELIABLE GIRL OR SETTLED woman to act as cook in a private family. Apply or address 6604 N. 6th St., Oak Lane, Phila., Pa.

WANTED.—EVENING EMPLOYMENT. TO assist physician with accounts and correspondence, or other work. A. B. C., this Office.

WANTED.—A YOUNG WOMAN TO ASSIST with housekeeping, in pleasant home, small family. Time for study, good wages. Address 57 E. Central Avenue, Moorestown, N. J.

WANTED.—YOUNG MANAGING AND working housekeeper. Good cook. $5. City. Address S., this Office.

BOARDING.

A FEW REFINED BOARDERS WANTED IN private boarding house. Sunny and very desirable second and third story front rooms; one back room. Friends' family. T., this Office.

LARGE, CHEERFUL, SECOND-STORY front communicating rooms, with board; also a pleasant third-story room, in Friends' family; in pleasant neighborhood, near trolleys, in West Philadelphia. Write or apply 662 North 30th Street.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS AND SISTERS, 1827 1st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

126 NORTH TWENTY-FIRST STREET. Nicely furnished second-floor front bedroom, for rent in Friends' family. Table board convenient.

TWO SECOND-STORY ROOMS TO RENT, either with or without board, in a Friends' family, near Logan Square. Address J., this Office.

FIRST MORTGAGES FOR SALE, BEARING 5 per cent. interest; $2,000, $2,500, $3,000, $3,500, $4,000; new and elegant Philadelphia houses. DAVID H. WRIGHT, 1420 Chestnut Street.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate prices. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

TO RENT.—NICE HOMELIKE HOME, LANGHORNE, Bucks county, Pa., from 10th month 1st; 11-room house, on main street. Bath, water closet, new plumbing, heater, Langhorne spring and other excellent water; porches front and back; old shade, stable, carriage house, fruit. Best location. Trolley to railroad. Apply soon. Dr. John Paxson, Newtown, Pa.

Association Printing.

Secretaries of associations or societies who want to place the printing they order beyond criticism, can best serve that end by entrusting it to

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phones. Phila., Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

O mighty mount, O crystal fount,
O hills and lakes and streams,
How dear thou art to all my heart.
How near it is my dreams.

—Henry Henderson.

THE following extract from an editorial in a Philadelphia paper Ninth month 14th covers the ground:

"It is among the eternal hills, after all, that fated humanity finds its surest and most grateful rest cure. After the hurly-burly and constraint of crowded watering places the breezy freedom of mountain uplands sounds a pressing note of invitation. The response is heartier and more general with each succeeding year. Pennsylvania's mountain resorts were never so numerous nor so popular; yet their development has as yet scarcely begun." The italics are ours.

Those who seek the mountains for the autumn foliage effects should now pack their trunks. Already the swamp maples, here and there, show a flame of color, and the sassafras, the sour gum and Virginia-creeper are changing. While there is yet green everywhere, still the autumn coloring has begun. The Pocosons, with their predominance of maples, oaks and chestnuts, with a pine and hemlock here and there to accent the reds and yellows, are particularly rich in their autumn dress.

One hundred and eighty-six guests over last First-day speaks well for the fall attendance at the Inn.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

BIBLE TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL, 81-83 East 55th St., New York City.

Incorporated by Regents of University of New York. Six departments. Two-year graded courses. Special one-year courses. Opens October 14th. Write for particulars about scholarships.
Address DR. WILBERT W. WHITE, President.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.

Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.

No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* * * TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XXXVIII.	593
POETRY: LIFE.	593
THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS AND ITS DUTY TO SOCIAL REFORMS.	593
PRESIDENT KNOWLEDGE AND INFLUENCE OF THE BIBLE.	595
THE SPIRIT OF PROPHECY.	596
GIVING GOD A CHANCE.	597
WHAT ARE WE HERE FOR?	597
EDITORIAL:
Respect for Law.	598
Transacting the Business of the Society.	598
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS.	599
SOCIETY NOTES.	600
BLUE RIVER QUARTERLY MEETING.	600
FRIENDS IN MEETING AND HOME:
Quaker City, Richmond, Salem.	601
STRAY THOUGHTS FROM THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE AND OHIO YEARLY MEETING.	602
MINUTE RETURNED.	604
A MISSION TEACHER.	604
EDUCATIONAL:
Swarthmore College Notes.	604
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	604
POETRY: My Own.	605
METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR EIGHTH MONTH.	606
SOME NEEDY INDIANS.	606
THE POWER OF MORAL SUASION.	606
MISCELLANY: "Dry" Conditions Made Zenia Work-house Almost Useless.	607
CURRENT EVENTS.	607
NEWS NOTES.	608
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	608

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
693 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: { Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
325 SWINE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street,
From 736 Spring Garden Street

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

Thompson Shourds, 2212 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS.
1225 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-49-78 D. Filbert.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis.
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.).
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents, Estates managed and settled, Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street. Philadelphia, Pa.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philad.

Margau Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

WALL PAPER of
Attractive Styles
Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address
A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

F. T. Kuedjg R. W. Richards. Atlantic City, N. J.

The Albertson, New, First-class Family Hotel.
SITUATED AT MANTOLOKING, N. J.
Three miles this side of Bay Head, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, one and one-half hours from Broad Street Station or Market Street Wharf. Fine bathing, Fishing, Yachting and golfing. Send for booklet.
J. R. ALBERTSON,
Formerly of Penns Manor, Pa.

The Pennhurst, Second House from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,
1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.
CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving DAIRIES. families. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
JOSEPH L. JONES

PURE FOOD
skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of
OUR LUNCH AND DINING ROOM,
1317 Filbert Street
These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS, Proprietor.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association
HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
332 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.
Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.
With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $5.00; all three $2.85.
SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.
Established 1870 at 84 1/2 North Second Street.

WATCHES.
As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.
GEO. C. CHILD,
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT
Undertaker
and Embalmer
1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia
TELEPHONE, POPLAR 59-38 D.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER
TELEPHONE
1313 VINE STREET
ESTABLISHED 1860

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873.

PHILADELPHIA, NINTH MONTH 19, 1903.

Volume LX.
Number 38.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XXXVIII.

FRIENDS were very careful that every one that belonged to them answered to their profession in their behavior among men upon all occasions; that they lived peaceably, and were in all things, good examples.

WILLIAM PENN.

From his preface to George Fox's Journal.

LIFE.

LIFE'S more than breath and quick round of blood;
It's a great spirit and a busy heart.

The coward and the small in soul scarce do live.

One generous feeling—one great thought—one deed
Of good, ere night, would make life longer seem
Than if each year might number a thousand days
Spent as is this by nations of mankind.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.

We should count time by heart throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest—acts the best.

Life's but a means unto an end—that end,
Beginning, mean, and end to all things—God.

PHILIP JAMES BAILEY.

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS AND ITS DUTY TO SOCIAL REFORMS.¹

In the mind of him who reads the life of Jesus of Nazareth, one thought is uppermost, one picture is more vivid than all the rest, that he came into the world not to be ministered unto but to minister, to give to every one that asked of him that which he most needed—food to the hungry, health to the sick, peace to the burdened spirit. More than all did he give to every soul of the abundance of his great love and sympathy. By such a pattern has Christianity tried to build the characters of men.

The founder of the Society of Friends, looking back upon more than sixteen hundred years of effort, saw the true pattern had been lost sight of, that men's lives were bound around by a margin of earthly authority, that to build aright men must learn only of the Master Builder, Him who created the pattern, who was in the beginning, nearer than church or priest's. He whose voice speaks in every soul, the light of whose everlasting love shines into every heart to show the way to truth, to life eternal.

As followers of Jesus, trying to be like him, to carry on his work of loving service, what shall be the attitude of the Society of Friends toward the evils that have arisen and will arise in our modern civilization? To him who suffers consciously or unconsciously, rich and poor, black and white, old and young, morally impure, intemperate, ignorant, defective, criminal; there is a duty for all those who bear the name of Friend. But there are two reasons why even greater responsibility rests upon those who bear the name of Friend. The first arises from the fundamental principle of their belief, that God reveals himself directly to the individual soul. Shall we not use every means to sweep away oppression, that opportunity may be given to every man to see God for himself. The second arises from the ideal of the practical application of the Christ rule, that God is no respecter of persons. Shall we still pass by on the other side, knowing that he who perishes is also a child of God?

It is useless to emphasize further the fact that we as Friends cannot escape our duty. The pages of our earlier history are illumined with such names as William Penn, Elizabeth Fry, Lucretia Mott, each one identified with a particular line of reform. And the history of the last quarter century of Friends in America includes nothing more nor less than the story of united effort in philanthropy, a philanthropy that has sent its ray of light into almost every shadow of evil in our land. Yet all of us, and especially those who have been most active in reform, believe that the work is only in its infancy.

We would do well to spend more time than many of us do, in learning what the Society of Friends has already accomplished, but there is one thing more important for us to learn, our present duty to humanity. We rejoice that our beloved Society had so large a part in the so-called emancipation of the black man, but our rejoicing is vain if we allow him to be bound by what now seems a stronger chain, the white man's prejudice.

The cry of distress arouses us to some immediate and rapid action for relief from whatever source it can come most quickly. The educational and religious world is already alive to the necessity of proper legislation in behalf of the wage-earner, the pauper, the victims of tenement-house evils, of vice and intemperance; and much has been accomplished. Let not the Society of Friends waver in its appeals to those of governmental authority, in its efforts at political reform.

But there is another way, a method that appeals to those who are younger in years, or perhaps only younger in experience along the lines of social reform. It is revealed by examining the root of social evil that it is embedded in the weakness of individual character; after all, then, must the basis of our work be individual reform? It is a slow and patient task, but when we remember that its results are from generation to generation, we shall understand that it is far-reaching, that it is indeed worth while. And if I were to ask the chief factors in individual reform, I am sure from the lips of every Friend would come the answer,— education and personal influence. As prevention is better than cure, so is love's persuasion better than the force of law.

¹Read by Edith M. Winder, of Richmond, Indiana, before the Young Friends' Association of Ohio Yearly Meeting, at Salem, Ohio.

But education and personal influence, to accomplish the most good, should be directed in certain channels, some of these channels are already made by other streams of the world's activity. The public school is not less than an agent for social reform. If we are not as teachers already working for the best development of the child, we should at least find some interest in what he is being taught. Many a discouraged teacher might gain inspiration for her work by our paying her a brief visit in the school-room. Our attention should be called also to our public libraries. A few years ago, in our own library, a children's reading room was established through the efforts of a literary club, and a suitable person employed to aid the children in their choice of books. Many a boy who was wont to pass his play-time in unprofitable ways, hastens eagerly to this attractive room. This plan might be followed by a Young Friends' Association, or a room elsewhere than in a public library might be devoted to a similar purpose.

There is doubtless a mission school in our vicinity that needs willing workers, where plain sewing is taught and talks are given upon economic and healthful ways of living. If no such opportunity is open, it is quite possible to make a small beginning in this direction, though it be only a class of three or four little girls, or a story hour for very small children. The atmosphere of many a home has been changed from one of impatient confusion to one of order and thoughtful consideration, through the desire of one earnest heart, the work of one willing pair of hands. It behooves us to emphasize in every possible way, the importance of family life, of home-training in individual reform. The primary cause of almost every social evil may be traced to carelessness and indifference to the details of physical as well as moral training in the home. This must be the central aim of all of our work, whether it be in the social settlement or in the various departments of organized and private reform, to preserve the sacredness of family relations.

But someone raises the objection, "I cannot apply the theory of personal influence in my own case. My daily occupation, my share in the support of my family, gives me no opportunity to go among the poor and distressed, to do social settlement work, to visit reform schools and prisons and the strongholds of vice." It is the purpose of this paper, however incomplete it may be, to answer just such a question. There is no one of us but that has a circle of friends and acquaintances. Even among these lies a vast field for social reform, the means of preparation, it may be, for a larger work among the so-called lower classes. Here may be some child, some youth, the workings of whose mind may one day move the world of thought and action. Whether it shall be for the world's good lies now in the power of the stronger personalities about him.

There is no more important work for Friends as a Society than that of being constantly on the watch for those among its members, especially among those just passing into manhood and womanhood, strong, hopeful, joyous boys and girls, vigorous in mind and body, who shall be leaders in the world's work, to give them opportunities for broad education, and for experience in simple methods of reform, in giving of themselves to others. We should regard the Young Friends' Association and the First-day school not only as training schools, to turn out members of the Society of Friends, however noble such a work may be; but let the aim of these organizations be to build character for the world's spiritual work. And since it seems impossible to give to all the greater opportunities for education, let us watch eagerly for those who will use them best. It is often necessary that financial aid be given, but I believe we shall find that a large part of our work lies only in creating, by our interest and sympathy, a desire for fuller knowledge and a larger life.

Let us return to that group of individuals, our friends and acquaintances, many of whom are not included in the membership of our religious society. In their relation to one another and to other groups there is many a problem that we may help to solve. There is one household where due attention is not paid to the laws of health, though it be only the household of our washerwoman, yet is she a friend if she does our work to the best of her ability. Disease may enter here. Surely there is need of our example if not of our advice. In another home we may have noticed a child whose hungering imagination is being satisfied with books and magazines of low moral tone. There is no more important work for us than to place within that child's hands a wholesome book. Such opportunities are numberless.

Among the most cultured class there may be one idea prevalent which destroys the harmony of social relation, which darkens the social vision. It is our duty and our privilege to introduce some thought that may check the error, that may even in time blot it out. It is for every one of us as Friends, with the ideal of moderation and simplicity, of pure manhood and womanhood ever before us, to raise the standard of purity of life in his community. In our own day there is so much carelessness, indifference and open violation of sacred laws by those who make the moral code of the weak and ignorant. If our modesty makes us falter let us so perfect our love for humanity that it shall cast out all fear of public opinion.

And now we ask in all humility, "How shall we prepare ourselves for this great work that lies at our door? How shall we perfect our love?" As soon as we recognize the voice of God within us, that He is our Guide unto all Truth, our preparation is already begun. There is only one way of learning to love our fellowmen, and that is by serving them. Beyond this there is necessary that development of our being of body, mind and soul, that "enlargement of our whole life," that we may know how to serve.

An echo from the Friends' Conference of a year ago says, "The human individual is a unit and must be developed as a whole, not in pieces. Education must proceed along organic lines to the enlargement and enrichment of the whole life, for in the largest and richest human hearts does the tide of spiritual life find its highest level." And we know it to be true, as someone else has said, that we serve better by what we are than by what we say or do.

There is not time enough here for us to call attention to every phase of the culture of to-day which may contribute to the enlargement of life for ourselves and others, but there are those ideas in our modern education that it will profit us to notice because of their usefulness in human betterment. No more complete equipment can be bestowed upon the future reformer than that clear perception, sound judgment, firmness of purpose and enthusiasm for work, which is the common result of the higher education of our colleges and universities. There is no more glorious mission than that of teaching this one truth, that the real joy of work lies in the ability to do it well, rather than in the hope of material reward. And what of that great power of the love of Nature and the beautiful in literature and art? Shall we not bring it to bear on our effort to uplift the human race? You who are true lovers of nature, disciples of the poets, do you not believe that Nature will do for others what she has done for you?

But we must not let it pass that because of fuller knowledge and greater opportunity our responsibility is heavier. Even the Friendly ideal is broader than ever before. No suspicion is cast upon the motives of Quaker youth and maiden who associate themselves with those of other sects for profitable work or pleasure, and higher education is no longer regarded as a tempter leading us into dangerous by-paths. We need no longer make ourselves conspicuous by wearing a peculiar cut of coat or frock. Blessed are we that our possibilities of usefulness in the world are not limited by any mere outward signs of religious belief. But more blessed are we that we know how rich is our spiritual inheritance, that we bear it not vainly but confidently into every effort of our lives.

One calmly-ordered life, one life of self-control, of reverence, of simplicity, of humility, of tender sympathy, of joy in the things that it possesses, one soul that strives to keep itself in harmony with the Divine Will, is as an angel of God with the message of freedom upon his lips. The ideal of becoming a great and loving spirit to create an atmosphere of purity and love wherein shall dwell all those who know him, is not too high an aspiration for any soul that minds the Light of God within.

I BELIEVE that the reason for the standard of Christian life being so low is that we are living on stale manna. You know what I mean by that. So many people are living on their past experience—thinking of the grand times they had twenty years ago, perhaps, when they were converted. It is a sure sign that we are out of communion with God if we are talking more of the joy and peace and power we had in the past than of what we have to-day. We must "grow in grace."—[D. L. Moody.]

PRESENT KNOWLEDGE AND INFLUENCE OF THE BIBLE.

THE knowledge of the Bible has been counted the most important furnishing of the mind and heart, and the influence of the Bible has been supreme in the lives of those who have made modern civilization. The Bible was never known so well, nor was its influence ever so great, as at the present time. People sometimes speak now as though the Bible were receiving less attention than formerly. This, however, is not the case.

The difference is not so much in the amount of attention which the Bible receives, as in the way in which the Bible is used and viewed. Family worship is not so common as a generation or two ago, but this is not because piety has declined, or the Bible become less valued; rather, it is due to the changing customs in family life and the modern "rush" of business, school, and society. The committing of Scripture to memory is also less frequent than formerly, but this is not because the Bible is thought to be superseded by other religious literature; rather, because "committing to memory" is in these days a disputed pedagogical method. Undoubtedly there is a loss that comes from the decline of family worship and of Scripture memorization. Both should be re-established.

This loss, however, has been more than compensated by a better way of reading and applying the Bible. Whereas, formerly it had been the custom to use the Bible almost wholly as a devotional book, and as a sort of mystical guide to conduct and belief, the rise of the modern historical spirit has brought thinking people largely to view the Bible from a historical standpoint, and to study it in a historical way. Not that the Bible has come to be regarded as antiquated and having no present value, but that its value for the present must be ascertained by an intelligent understanding of its origin and characteristics, and its meaning to those who wrote the several books. In other words there are principles of interpretation which must be applied to the Scripture in order to obtain their meaning for us.

In unenlightened periods of history, and among unintelligent people, misconceptions about the Bible, misinterpretations of its meaning, and false applications of its teaching have existed. It is not strange that survivals of these ideas and practices may be found to-day. Even yet there are those who look upon the Bible as a "divine deposit," direct from the pen of God, not given through men or mediated to men, with no human element or limitation, as complete and absolute a revelation as God could ever make. The book is conceived as having a mysterious sanctity about it, to be appreciated in a sort of religious ecstasy in which, as Paul said of the tongue-speaker at Corinth, "the mind is inactive." The very paper and ink of the book are thought to be "holy," and the material presence of the book is believed to bring blessing, like the handkerchiefs and aprons which have been in contact with Paul's body (Acts, xix., 12). Such persons think the Bible a book not to be studied or understood in an ordinary sense, but a sort of fetish, or idol, to be worshiped, or to be consulted like an oracle. The custom has been seriously practiced of opening the book at random to find a passage for specific guidance, a proceeding analogous to the casting of lots. . . . The whole general conception out of which such a view arises is a part of the superstition of the unenlightened mind. To worship the Bible without intelligently appreciating it, or to consult the Bible for guidance without knowledge and judgment as to how its utterances are to be applied to one's own affairs, is an action of superstition. . . .

The Bible is a collection of Books which were written at different times by different persons for specific purposes, and out of particular situations. The chief aim and interest of the Biblical writers was religion and morality. They found God present in the world, working out a certain great and beneficent plan for man. They found him also within their own experience informing their thought, their character, and their activity. To their minds the universe came from God, and existed to fulfill his will. Moreover, he himself was present in power, wisdom and love to work out in men and through men his eternal purposes. The Biblical writers sought to express for the religious and moral benefit of their fellow-men the conception and experience of God which they themselves had. In other words, God was revealing himself continuously in them and through them, in the events of life which they observed, or with which they were connected, and in the phenomena of nature. The world was alive with God. These men saw him, felt him, and heard him.

For these reasons they wrote these books, and it is this element in them that has made the Bible a treasure-house of religious and moral wisdom, and an inspiration to the best there is in the world. They wrote to and for their own generation, with all that is therein involved as to point of view, mode of thought, style of expression, and concrete instruction. Nevertheless, they were dealing with eternal truth and with the permanent principles of character and duty; they had a true vision of God and righteousness and human obligation. Therefore their messages have a surpassing permanent value. And in the Gospels we have a trustworthy and adequate record of Christ's own life and teaching, which reveal to us in a unique and supreme way what God would have men know and do.

It is because the Bible contains these records of God's revelation, and these accounts of the religious and moral growth of men that the Bible is for us also a book supremely worthy of men's knowledge, and worthy of the greatest influence which it can exert. It is one thing to exalt the Bible simply because it has been stamped with the signet of previous generations of Christians, without ascertaining a particular valuation of it for ourselves at the present time; it is quite another thing, and the thing of chief importance, to exalt the Bible because we know by an intelligent acquaintance with it, and judgment of it, that it now contains the highest wisdom and the greatest inspiration regarding matters of religion and morality. . . .

The Bible has not yet accomplished its full mission. In God's providence it has existed and now exists for the purpose of guiding and inspiring men to true religion and morality. It has in part performed this mission, as we well know, because the Bible more than any other body of literature has made the religion and morality of the present time. But true religion and true morality have been as yet only partially achieved, and the greater part is still to come. The fullest influence of the Bible is therefore still in the future, and we who labor to-day to exalt the Bible are seeking to secure its true and complete influence in the world. No one, therefore, can have a higher appreciation of the practical value of the Bible than the historical student of it, and no one can labor more effectively for the accomplishment of its ultimate purpose than he. The extension of the historical study of the Bible is the best thing we can now do to bring about the true understanding and appreciation of the book. Many thinking people will not continue to use the Bible in the superstitious or erroneous way which is still more or less in vogue from the past. They will, however, use it and be influenced by it when they, by a historical study of the book, understand the Bible as it was and as it is. To promote the true understanding, appreciation and use of the book is therefore the present obligation of all those whose interest, ability and training qualify them to teach the Bible.—[Biblical World.]

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE SPIRIT OF PROPHECY.

IN enumerating the gifts of the Spirit, such as the gift of tongues, of teaching, of healing, and of preaching, St. Paul says, "My brethren, earnestly desire the best spiritual gifts, but most of all to prophecy." Did it ever seem strange to you, as it has to me, that he should single out this gift as the one most to be desired, the one that is for the comfort and edifying of the Church above the others? I have pondered on this text a long time, and it has become clear to me, so perhaps it may be a service to some other mind to give expression to my understanding of it.

It is thought to be an idle thing to be a dreamer of dreams and a seer of visions, and yet is it not this spirit of prophecy, or a prophetic vision that animates all reformers and enables them to look beyond the present and see a day when prevailing evils shall be done away, and in the words of Isaiah, "When the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea" (Isaiah, xi., 9)? Was it not this spirit that sustained Joseph when he was sold into bondage and became a servant in Pharaoh's house, and that enabled him to forgive his brethren, saying, "It was the Lord God who sent me here," etc.? Did not this spirit dwell with David in the cave of Adullam where he was hid from the wrath of Saul, and yet his friends and relatives came unto him, not to comfort him, but to be comforted and counselled by him? It was said that "all who were in debt or troubled in their souls came to him to the number of four hundred."

John Bunyan in prison wrote that wonderful allegory that has been a guide and a reprover to generations since. Was it not this same spirit of prophecy that uplifted his mind and soul above the trivial and the temporary?

William Penn in Newgate prison was enabled to forget his persecutors, and write, "No Cross, No Crown," by this same uplifting power. Jesus was filled with it at an early age, when a prophetic vision of his mission caused him to answer his parents by the question, "Wot ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Abraham Lincoln, surrounded by his War Cabinet, laying before them the Emancipation Proclamation, was sustained by this gift of the Spirit, and enabled to rise above those deterring influences which tried to hold him back, and was emboldened to say, "Gentlemen, I promised God I would." Along the line of material betterment every invention for the relief of drudgery, every appliance which adds to the comfort of mankind, either in illness or health, is primarily the work of prophetic vision acting through the inventive faculty of man. Whether our work be in the line of teaching or preaching, or simply the more humble mode of ministering to the necessities of saints and sinners, may we through all "Quench not the Spirit," and most of all "despise not prophesyings."

SUSANNA M. GASKILL.

Swarthmore, Eighth month 29th, 1903.

GIVING GOD A CHANCE.

"GIVING God a chance at you—that is the meaning of the Quiet Hour. Teachers, friends, books, newspapers, business, pleasure—all these have a chance at us. Day by day they are influencing us, and day by day they are molding our lives. Shall we not also give God a chance at us?"

This is the Spirit-inspired message that was given us by our beloved leader, Dr. Clark, at the Troy convention. Friends, are we as a society putting the emphasis clearly in the right place? Are we as much concerned that each of our individual members shall be found daily in definite personal communion with God as that he shall be regular in his attendance at the prayer meeting? Are we giving Bible study and prayer the place in our lives that God would have us give them?

Friends, let us choose, let us select, the influence which shall dominate our lives. Let us morning by morning, before man is met, talk with God alone. Let us seek a great intimacy. Let us know His will before we go forth to do His work. Let us say as a society that daily, personal waiting on God in earnest searching of His word and in prayer is the first need, the first duty and the first privilege of every Christian Endeavorer. Let us give God a chance.—[Herbert E. Baright.]

"HAPPINESS is so frail a thing that it will not abide where contention dwells, therefore as one sees the shadows of life coming over her she will give thanks for the years of effort which have resulted in self-mastery, enabling her to bridle her tongue so that it may be directed into right paths, leading to, not from, love and peace."

For Friends' Intelligencer.

WHAT ARE WE HERE FOR?

THE story is told of a Roman Catholic monk in the olden days that he used frequently to ask himself and those about him, "What are we here for?" and in the answer to this question he would find the real purpose of his own life and of those of his people. It is a question well worth asking and considering frequently, for it serves to bring us face to face with our motives and the purposes that control, or should control, our lives.

A few years ago a large class in one of our colleges was discussing the doctrine of Immortality with especial reference to the place and condition of rewards for a well-spent life, which is commonly called Heaven. Before the class was dismissed, the teacher requested each member of it to consider the subject and bring to the next meeting a brief, written definition of the term "Heaven." A large number of these was presented the following day, and the teacher and all the class decided that the best definition given was this: "Heaven is the conscious and successful doing of the will of God."

"Unto which we are called," all of us. To find our highest happiness in the purposeful and successful doing of the will of God, this is what we are here for, and the striving to do this means real, true living for each one of us; and in this striving, and in the now and then successful doing, that must come to each honest worker, will the highest happiness that we can know here or hereafter be found. The successful doing of the will of God is not always possible for us here, but we may well believe that where the honest purpose exists and the earnest effort to do is made, however it may seem to fail of success here, the thought and the purpose will be accepted and approved by Him for whom it was attempted.

Some time ago a little six-year-old girl surprised her father by saying, "I sometimes think, what are we? and what are we here for?" thus repeating the very question of the monk of old. The father had only this reply ready for the grave questions, and it seemed given him for the little questioner: "We are all the children of the Heavenly Father, and we are here to do His will." The answer satisfied the child, who added, "The children of God!"

It is well to remember often what we are, and what we are here for. It will ennoble life to recall that we are in very truth the children of the Most High, "created a little lower than the angels, crowned with majesty and honor," if we live lives worthy of such honor, or make the honest effort so to do. We stumble at times, sometimes we fall, but let us remember that "our true glory consists not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall," and also that "as many as are led by the Spirit of God they shall be called the sons of God." * *

CLEAR thinking lies at the basis of the art of expression. He who cannot explain does not wholly understand. He who fully understands has taken the first long step toward attaining the power to make known.—[Nicholas Murray Butler.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, NINTH MONTH 19, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

RESPECT FOR LAW.

Recent manifestations of lawlessness over various sections of the country have led to many speculations and explanations as to the cause, and the opinion prevails among the pessimistically disposed that the world is growing worse and the conditions of civil government more unsafe for individual liberty. We cannot accord with this view of the case, nor do we wish to enter into any profound philosophy on the subject, but there are certain thought connections bearing upon these conditions that we wish to emphasize. Co-existent with the conduct of wars by enlightened nations, we may reasonably expect outbreaks of violence, since the minds of all classes of society are excited by ideas of vengeance, and the power of the strongest is everywhere lauded as the defender of right. There is enough of the savage in men so that when circumstances awake the latent impulses, temporary and sporadic relapses into barbarism occur. The safeguard of society against such reactions is the increased efficiency and greater respect for law.

Some good men are unconsciously helping to keep alive the spirit of lawlessness. Recently a well-known clergyman said in a popular assembly, "We have too much respect for the laws of the land. We must get away from this and learn to fall back on that higher law for our guidance in action." We may charitably suppose the speaker meant just what he did not say, viz.: that when civil law comes into direct opposition to the dictates of a divinely illuminated conscience, we are always to follow the behests of the greater rather than the lesser law. The discrimination between the law of conscience and the law of nations finally gave us religious liberty and was a potent factor in the emancipation of a race; but there is a vast difference between the law of conscience and the law of private judgment. The purpose of the laws of the land is not to subvert individual conscience, but to do away with the right of individual judgment in matters that concern the public weal. These laws reflect a majority interpretation of our understanding of the higher law, and are calculated to so train men in obedience and control that they become better subjects for the operation of the divine law. Any influence that tends to diminish a respect for civil law is an adjunct to anarchy and a dangerous foe to civilization. The remedy for bad or inefficient laws is to change them not to break them.

It is a generally recognized fact that children at home and school are less rigorously taught a respect for law than in the days of Penn's Holy Experiment. The disciples of Anarchy are active in gathering converts to their doctrines, if not to their ranks, a loose disregard of the distinction between men who set aside law for conscience' sake, and those who subvert it for opinion's sake, the corruption of civil offices and the existence of unsatisfactory laws, have all conspired to adulterate that pure respect for law which is the stronghold of government and the protector of the lives and property of our citizens. These considerations suggest the desirability of effort on the part of parents, teachers, newspapers, and civic clubs to teach and uphold the dignity of law, and exalt it to its true place in the thought of the people.

TRANSACTING THE BUSINESS OF THE SOCIETY.

ONE of our older Friends, who has had long experience in the affairs of our Society and who is earnestly devoted to its interests has written us the following letter:

"It has been said and perhaps with truth that in transacting the business of the Society, Friends are ruled by the minority. It seems to me that the time has come that we should improve upon our traditional methods in our business meetings. I have often observed a condition of almost interminable talk in which we wander far and wide from the subject under consideration. After a committee has reported on any subject it seems to me rational, and parliamentary usage would suggest, that the meeting should discuss only the adoption or rejection of the report, whereas we launch out into a discussion of the merits of the subject. We thus lose the advantage of the committee method of facilitating business.

"Individually I would not object to our Society adopting parliamentary methods of doing business, but if Friends object to so radical a change let us at least confer upon the clerk authority to insist that Friends confine their remarks strictly to the subject under consideration. We should have enough of originality in our meetings to improve upon methods adopted by our fathers centuries ago."

Our Friend is by no means the only one who has felt that perhaps after all our method of procedure in business meeting is little more than a relic of the older times and that where our meetings are lifeless or tedious or under the domination of one or two concerned and well-meaning, but perhaps too determined Friends, all could be set right by adopting parliamentary forms as other up-to-date bodies about us do. One very seldom hears the suggestion so frankly made; and yet some of our Young Friends' Associations have dropped into the way of having a president and secretary instead of mere clerks and of conducting their meetings by parliamentary procedure. Others that usually conduct their business "in the Friendly way" drop into parliamentary procedure whenever a decided difference of opinion comes up and take a vote instead of patiently working the matter out by free discussion and so getting at the "sense of the meeting." Indeed, many Friends seem to take it as a matter of course that any meeting not strictly a business meeting of the Society should be conducted according to Parliamentary usage. And though no one has ever ventured to urge definitely that we depart from our ancient usage in conducting our meetings, yet such criticisms as our Friend makes are not infrequently heard, these criticisms being usually very complacently made and with no thought of any change.

If it be true that our business meetings are tedious or unbusinesslike or dominated by the minority or by individuals, it is not a thing to be complacent about; it is a thing that we ought to be very much stirred up about. If the only way of remedying the evils is to do away with the ancient order, or even if that is the best way, we ought seriously to consider doing so.

If, however, we find that the difficulty is not with the ancient order but because we so imperfectly carry it out in some meetings, then the thing to do is not to abolish it but to re-establish it.

We will find if we study the procedure of those meetings that are thoroughly alive and that conduct their business strictly and intelligently "in the unity," that the method has great advantages where the important thing is, not that one or another should rule, or that one or another opinion should prevail, but that every opinion should have its due weight and that every concerned member should contribute from his own point of view to the final conclusion so that it may be the "sense of the meeting," and not merely the opinion of the majority.

If a meeting is ruled by a minority it will not better matters to turn the rule over to the majority, thus merely changing the number of rulers. If the members do not talk straight to business and in a business-like way it is not likely to make them any more business-like to change the method of procedure; a live presiding officer could rush business and bring matters to a vote, but that would be very much like shirking a responsibility on the part of the meeting as a whole.

Without going fully into the matter now, it would seem that the deficiencies we cannot but be aware of in the conduct of our business sometimes, are not likely to be remedied by any mere change of procedure; that what is much more needed, and what would be needed to make meetings efficient and business-like under any method of procedure is that the members be alive to their responsibilities and faithful in taking part in the affairs of the meeting. The ancient order of procedure among Friends has very great advantages entirely aside from its being endeared to us by its long use, and we ought to make a careful study of it that it may be applied to the best purpose and made the most of. Especially might the members of our Young Friends' Associations make a point of becoming as proficient in this simple order as most young people are and ought to be now-a-days in parliamentary procedure.

BIRTHS.

GRIEST.—Eighth month 31st, to Eli L. and Maria J. Griest, a daughter, who is named Mary Emma.

PANCOAST.—At Merchantville, New Jersey, Third month 12th, 1903, to Thomas J. and Kathryn R. Pancoast, a son, who is named Norman Lester Pancoast.

MARRIAGES.

BROWN—GRUBB.—Ninth month 1st, 1903, at the home of the bride in West Chester, Pa., by Friends' ceremony, Clayton Lippincott Brown, of Norristown, Pa., and Anna Miriam Grubb, daughter of Alfred C. and M. Elizabeth Grubb.

HIBBS—SHEPPARD.—Eighth month 12th, 1903, at the home of the bride's parents, near Norristown, Pa., under the care of Gwynedd Monthly Meeting, J. Russell Hibbs, of Germantown, and Emma B. Sheppard, daughter of William and Sallie R. Sheppard.

DEATHS.

BIRDSALL.—Near Lincoln, Loudon county, Virginia, Eighth month 15th, 1903, R. Hannah, wife of David H. Birdsall, and daughter of the late John and Ruth Hannah Smith, in the 57th year of her age.

DERBY.—Walter Janney, son of Samuel Carroll and Frances Janney Derby, and grandson of John J. and Rebecca A. S. Janney.

He was eighteen years old, and in the senior class in the Ohio State University, in which his father is professor of Latin, and in which he was acknowledged to be one of the brightest and best students. He left home on Third-day morning, the 8th instant, in happy anticipation of a pleasant outing with some friends at Buckeye Lake, but about 8 o'clock next morning he was drowned by the upsetting of a canoe.

J. J. J.

FISHER.—At his home near Unionville, Centre county, Pa., on Eighth month 25th, 1903, William P. Fisher, aged 85 years; a life-long member of Centre Monthly Meeting.

No printed eulogy can convey to those who did not know him a correct idea of his character and usefulness, and even an attempt to produce one would not be in keeping with his wishes, as he never desired popularity nor praise. But it is meet, in the passing of these long and useful lives, that we note the secret of their success.

William P. Fisher was a man whose honesty was proverbial, as his large number of business acquaintances both far and near can testify. A man who had firm convictions, and would express them in a mild but convincing manner. He was a born searcher after truth, both in material and in spiritual things. His life-long activity in the nursery and fruit business made him an authority whose opinions in these matters was often sought after by State and national investigators.

He was a living exponent of Friends' principles, consistent in dress, speech and dealing, and this manner of life brought him financial, mental and spiritual success.

Although not a public minister, his life is a testimony of the truth of "Seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven and its righteousness, and all things else shall be added unto you." K.

HIBBERD.—In Richmond, Indiana, on Ninth month 8th, 1903, Dr. James Hibberd, in his 88th year. Interment from North A Street Friends' Meeting-house.

The Richmond Palladium says of him: "The deceased was one of the best known men in this city, and, in fact, in Indiana, and his name is a synonym of honor and integrity wherever he was known.

"He has been signally honored by Richmond, having been elected mayor of that city, and in the medical fraternity, having been elected president of the American Medical Society. The deceased has been so closely allied with this city and her institutions that he was always looked to as authority on any matter pertaining to any subject of vital or minor importance.

"James F. Hibberd was born near New Market, Frederick county, Maryland, on November 4th, 1815. In 1839-40 he began attending lectures in the medical department of Yale College, and in 1840 he began practicing at Salem, Ohio. In 1848 he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, from which he was graduated the following year. He was immediately appointed surgeon of the steamship Senator, which made a trip to the Amazon River, Rio Janeiro, St. Catherine, Patagonia and Chile, and the Pacific coast of South and Central America, thence to San Francisco, the voyage consuming seven and a half months. Dr. Hibberd remained in the last named city until 1855, practicing medicine and dealing in real estate. He then spent a year in New York reviewing his medical information. In 1856 he opened an office in Dayton, Ohio, but shortly afterward removed to Richmond. During the season of 1860-61 he filled the chair of physiology and general pathology in the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati.

"Dr. Hibberd was a member of the city, county, district, State, tri-State, Rocky Mountain and American Medical Association, and had been the president of each, the last named Association having conferred that honor on him at Milwaukee in 1893. He wrote a number of medical essays and within the past few years reviewed a large number of medical books for a prominent journal. Outside of his medical work he spent the years 1869-70 in European travel, served in the Ohio State Legislature two years, served in the Richmond city council two years, served one term as mayor of the city."

MATHER.—Eighth month 25th, 1903, at his home in Wilmington, Delaware, Joseph M. Mather, in the 85th year of his age.

MORRIS.—On Ninth month 1st, 1903, at his late home near Richmond, Indiana, Thomas E. Morris, in his 79th year; a life-long member of the Society of Friends and an elder of Whitewater Monthly Meeting.

In 1857 he married Susan H. Shute. She and a married son, within the past year, preceded him to the better home. Two children and three grandchildren survive him.

PRATT.—At the Friends' Boarding Home, West Chester, Pa., on Ninth month 9th, 1903, Amy C., widow of the late Henry L. Pratt, in her 86th year; a member of Goshen Monthly Meeting. Interment at Goshen Friends' grounds.

A quiet, unobtrusive woman, her influence was felt in the direction of a cheerful contentment, a quality of character so desirable in the homes for aged or invalid persons, and appreciated therein.

PURDY.—In New York City, Eighth month 10th, 1903, Charles Purdy, aged 94 years; a member of Chappaqua Monthly Meeting.

This aged husband and father was privileged to keep his mind to the very last, and though his final illness was prolonged and one of much suffering, his patience and sweetness of character remained so marked as to ever increase the large share of love and tenderness that those about him had ever entertained.

SEAMAN.—At the home of her son, William Seaman, Marshall county, Iowa, Eighth month 10th, Margaret Fritts Seaman, in her 85th year.

She was born in Orange county, New York, married to Daniel Seaman at Macedon, N. Y., in 1843; had lived in Iowa with her son since Seventh month, 1901. Burial at Marietta Friends' burying-ground.

This notice was wrongly inserted in our issue of Ninth month 5th, under the name of Fritts, Margaret Seaman's maiden name, the notice being incorrect also in other particulars.

SOCIETY NOTES.

FRIENDS who attended Salem Quarterly Meeting at Salem, N. J., report it as well attended and a favored meeting. Robert and Esther Barnes, of Purchase, N. Y., were in attendance with minutes from their meeting. Isaac H. Hillborn, of Philadelphia, was also present. Other Friends in attendance were Rachel Bond, of Norristown, Pa., and Edwin A. Holmes, of Mickelton, N. J.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

BLUE RIVER QUARTERLY MEETING.

So almost imperceptible is the flight of time that nearly before we are aware of it a whole year has sped away since last in this place (Benjaminville, Ill.) we welcomed dear friends from a distance to a season of spiritual and social commingling, yet none the less gladly did we meet them on this occasion, commencing our series of meetings by the one for ministers and elders on the afternoon of Sixth-day, the 3d inst., which, though small, was characterized by life and earnestness.

The First-day School Conference was conceded to be unusually interesting and profitable, though there were no papers, but several questions, all pertaining to First-day school interests, were freely discussed.

Seventh-day the meeting was not very large. Death and removals have depleted our numbers so materially that the size of our meetings is much less than formerly. The efficacy and the necessity of trusting in a risen Saviour were forcibly portrayed and all were invited to come to a saving knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. It has been our custom for years to provide a lunch about noon, in the shade of the beautiful maples that grace our yard, and following this custom, after transacting a portion of the business, we adjourned for an hour and a half, and after refreshing ourselves with the good things brought in abundance by the careful Marthas of our flock, we returned to the house, rested and brighter for the interval and better able to finish what was before us. There was very little but routine business. The answers to the queries showed a well-maintained interest in our principles and testimonies, though presenting some deficiencies.

First-day morning the house was well filled, and the congregation listened very quietly and attentively to communications from several individuals, one following the other as if fitted in to one another, each upholding the foundation principle of Friends and corroborating it by reference to the Bible, although it was shown that the book was secondary to the Light, the Light that lighteth every human being, and that appeared to our first parents, and continues to shine to this day. The last remarks were a strong exhortation to endeavor to reach a high standard of purity, both moral and physical, and in order to attain to this, we must experience a salvation, not only from committing sin, but salvation from a desire to sin.

Our meetings were, all but one, personally represented.

ELIZABETH H. COALE.

Benjaminville, Ill., Ninth month 7, 1903.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

FRIENDS IN MEETING AND HOME.

QUAKER CITY, RICHMOND, SALEM.

On the 18th of Eighth month, I left the neighborhood of Mt. Pleasant for a visit to Quaker City, Ohio. The first part of the journey was by stage coach, and as the coach was large and not uncomfortably full, the day perfect and the scenery beautiful, the ride was very enjoyable. The driver was an intelligent, agreeable man, somewhat under middle age, with a distinctively American face. As he stopped at various places along the route numerous commissions were given him to attend to in Wheeling; of these he made no note, trusting to his well-trained memory. After leaving the coach a trolley ride of four miles, an hour's wait at an unattractive station, and a thirty miles ride on the train, with the cars so crowded that some were obliged to stand the entire distance, brought me to Quaker City in good time for dinner.

In the afternoon there was an appointed meeting in the Friends' Meeting-house on "Quaker Hill," half a mile from the town, at which over thirty were present; not more than half of these were members of meeting. The following evening the usual prayer meeting in the Christian Church gave way to a temperance meeting at which I gave a talk on "Alcohol and Its Effects." On the next afternoon a Women's Christian Temperance Union parlor meeting was held at the home of a Friend; this was well attended and a talk on the best methods of scientific temperance instruction was followed by pleasant social mingling. It is the general feeling in this neighborhood that since Friends have joined with members of other denominations in philanthropic work, they are better understood and their influence has increased.

In this part of Ohio the membership of the Friends' Church has grown larger while that of our branch has decreased. There were formerly several meetings composing Stillwater Quarterly Meeting; now these have all been laid down except the meeting at Quaker City, and the quarterly meeting has been changed to a half-yearly meeting. Although the meeting is small several of its members are thorough Friends and there is evidence of renewed life. A First-day School is held after the meeting in which all take part. During last winter the meetings were held at private houses in the town instead of on the hill. This increased the attendance and gave some invalids and aged people an opportunity to attend the meeting at least once.

The earliest settlers in this neighborhood were the Halls from North Carolina, the Williams family from New Jersey and the Websters from Chester county, Pa. I think it was the first Webster who had ten children who took up a quarter section for each one, thus becoming quite a landed proprietor. John Hall, the oldest son of the first immigrant, became of age soon after the migration. A log cabin was built for him on his portion of land and his outfit, according to the records, was a pewter plate, knife and fork, tin cup, a side of pork and a sack of flour. Starting in this humble way he afterwards became the wealthiest man in the country.

There was no well-defined route of the Underground Railroad in this immediate neighborhood, but some traditions of fugitive slaves remain. It is related that in one instance a slave pursued by his master had just found refuge in the home of a Friend. When the pursuing party came by the Friend was standing composedly at his front gate. The master asked if he had seen a runaway slave go by, and he replied, "Yes, he passed this gate a short time ago." The pursuers hurried along the road, and before they returned the fugitive had been safely hidden.

During the three days spent in Quaker City calls were made on nearly all the members of the meeting and on some others. Many of those visited spoke with pleasure of the previous visits of Joel Borton, Francis Robinson and Jesse H. Holmes, and of the encouragement these visits had given them.

On Sixth-day, the 21st, I took the train a little before noon, and going by the way of Columbus and Xenia reached Richmond, Indiana, about 9 p. m., having the company of Samuel P. Zavitz during the last part of the journey.

A report of Indiana Yearly Meeting has already appeared in the INTELLIGENCER. Although the weather was very warm most of the week, it was the general feeling that the change in the time of holding the yearly meeting from the Ninth to the Eighth month was beneficial, as it made it possible for many more young people to attend, besides suiting the farmers better. The interest taken in meeting work by the young people is very encouraging.

The Richmond Meeting-house is large, comfortable, and inviting within and without. The large yard surrounding the house is kept in excellent order by means of a lawn-mower, and many of the committee meetings were held under the trees. There is a basement under the entire house with a cement floor; this is divided into two rooms, both of which are neatly carpeted. In one of these an excellent lunch was served to the attenders at the yearly meeting, the tables seating 100 or more at a time. This basement is used for social meetings, which are held here once a month.

Quite a number of Friends left Richmond Fifth-day evening, the 27th, and traveled all night in order to be in time for the Central Committee Meeting at Salem next day. As it was necessary to change cars several times on the way, some of us were too sleepy to enjoy fully the excellent addresses next evening. The Friends and others in Salem had taken great pains to provide comfortable homes for all, and the committee meetings, as well as the sessions of the yearly meetings, were very enjoyable. The meeting-house had been freshly painted within and without, presenting a very neat appearance. After the yearly meeting two of us remained over First-day, visiting a number of Friends. There were thirty in attendance at the meeting on First-day morning, nine of whom were children. A First-day school was held at the close of the meeting, as is the usual custom, Friends' New Testament lesson leaves being used in the adult class.

E. L.

STRAY THOUGHTS FROM THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE AND OHIO YEARLY MEETING.

In discussing the report of the Educational Committee, Elizabeth Lloyd said that we might learn some valuable lessons from English Friends, who are a body of highly cultured people. We as a body lack the culture that comes from the close contact with the college life. Our great need is to make Friends more hungry for this deeper education.

In discussing J. Russell Hayes's paper, "A Call to Service," Dr. O. Edward Janney felt it to be our right and duty to cultivate our physical and mental and spiritual natures, so as to become better instruments for service. . . . We know almost enough, but little good it does unless it incites us to action.

Dr. Joseph Walton, in speaking of Lorin J. Bailey's paper on the "Value of Athletics," said he doubted if many Friends understood that among all our schools and colleges no boy could take a prominent part in the athletic work, unless his school work was up to a standard far above the average of the school.

Henry M. Haviland: Sometimes men say "I work thus and so, and have all the exercise I need." That is not true; we do not get the all-round development, nor the sharpening that comes with mingling with other minds.

Eli Lamb said that so far as his experience had gone, where the boys and girls had the opportunity for systematic gymnasium work, they developed more in the line of strength, physical and moral, than in field work. Should a man use a sledge-hammer to develop his right arm, he would no doubt develop it finely, but his left arm would suffer, and there would be discrepancies in his body development. . . . It is the full development of the entire body under careful and competent instructors, of high moral character, that leads to the best life.

David Branson regretted hearing no word in regard to the training of girls; he felt they needed and should have as full development as boys.

Discussing J. Eugene Baker's paper, and the need for at least having those in harmony with Friendly principles as teachers, quoted Emerson's words to his daughter "I care little where you study or what you study, but I care very much with whom you study."

THE YEARLY MEETING.

In connection with the epistle from Indiana Yearly Meeting, referring to the loss felt by the Society in the death of some of our members, a Friend said he always felt that when we spoke of such loss as irreparable, it was hardly fair to our belief in truth to say that the place will be left vacant, and scarcely fair to our belief in the work of these friends to say that because they have gone on, their work will fall.

Joel Borton expressed his conviction that among Friends the time has come when, as an organized body, we need to be more active than ever before in the line of Social Reforms. Where such activity comes not, there will surely be a dearth, and possibly a death, for no religious organization can exist in its own self. . . . Such a life is directly contrary to a true religion, to the life of the Master who came to do good and who did it and whose disciples we claim to be. . . . We must come out of ourselves and our meetings, and open wide our doors, even though in so doing we must get out of our old groves, and we must re-gather those who have gone from us because there was naught for them to do.

Oliver Cope, of Ohio Yearly Meeting, endorsing Joel's thought said, "We must not only open wide the doors, but we must go out and gather in the waifs, the religious waifs, who would be the better for the benefit of a religious home. . . . This can be accomplished without any change of Discipline, with no evangelism, with no aid from any Ministers, but simply by our own conscientious work, extending a welcome to those who would be glad to come were they sure of welcome.

Samuel Zavitz, Canada, rejoiced in the change of the nature of the Epistles, being no longer sermons telling us what we ought to do, but letters, telling us what we are doing.

In the First-day School session on Second-day afternoon Herbert P. Worth said: "We must all realize that it was the First-day School that first paved the way for greater freedom of thought, of spirit and of action. . . . Too often our influence may be going forth when we least feel it, sooner than we expect and oftener than we expect. Surely these meetings of ours need the best we can give. The element most needed in this work as in all others, is that of the active business man, we need the presence of those who are brought most closely in contact with the temptations of the outside life and the business-trained mind and heart."

Richard Roberts, of Ohio, in speaking of the Epistle from Genesee, in which we were urged to mold the material at our hands, be it gold or marble or wood, said he often felt we make a mistake in wanting our children to model after some great, good person, for each should move according to the inspiration that comes to him and carve his own life, in whatever material it might be.

Anna M. Jackson felt that no one is without fault. We love our friends in spite of their faults, and when the little child before whom has been held up as an example some other human life, finds the weakness, the child is greatly disappointed and a dissatisfaction arises in regard to human life. Let us learn to appreciate those around us, even while we know their faults.

Dr. Janney: Each one has a gift or gifts, some means of helpfulness. We do not always accept these as we should, often thinking that the gift is not what we ought to have, and we want to choose the gift. Rather should we ask for light and find out what to do, and how to do it. There are many kinds of gifts, but each is a means of ministry to some one. If we have a beautiful thought, we must share it, else we may rob some neighbor of what he should rightfully have.

First Query: Joseph Hartley feelingly expressed his conviction that this first query addressed to the human heart is the most important of all. . . . Why do we meet? That we may be together in the presence of our God—our God to whom all allegiance is due, and we feel we can so readily excuse ourselves from this duty and privilege by some piece of trifling work—"It does not suit me to go to-day!" Our children, seeing us, do the same, and thus, little by little, the entire neighborhood is affected by this feeling of inference. . . . When Friends first became converted to this need of the Spiritual Life they put aside all hindering things, and through persecution such as would make us tremble with awful fear, they would go in prostration of spirit and meet with their brethren. We can scarcely give a half hour to Him. . . . Can we not go now to Him, in humbleness of spirit and of heart, and ask that we may be strengthened to do His work, as He would have us do. . . . Let us turn in hope and in prayer with our brothers and sisters, and establish a more individual industry in this matter.

Samuel Zavitz: The great work needed by our Society is not in the large yearly meeting so much as in the little home-meetings. . . . We do not want to simply build them up, increase their size, but we do want to make them so full of vital life and interest, that our own members will be constrained to come—the growth in numbers will come then. . . . The development of life and growth in numbers in all our meetings depend upon our answer to the question, "Do we go to meeting for what we get or what we give?"

Second Query: Elizabeth Lloyd felt a deep concern that Friends do something more than simply discourage tale-bearing and detraction. . . . Just so long as human nature is as it is, much of our conversation will be about our friends and neighbors; let us speak warmly of their virtues, and kindly of their little faults, giving full justice to all good traits. It seems to me, that were this done by us all, there would be a great increase in love and unity amongst us.

David Branson: When the great reformer, the founder of our people, started out on his mission his sermons were generally preached on one of two texts, "Mind the light," and "Hold all your meetings in the power of God." . . . If we are truly His people, we would so love each other, that we could not absent ourselves on the day set for us to assemble, but we would feel we owe something to our God and to our neighbor. . . . And as of old it would be said, "See those Quakers, how they love one another!" . . . Those times are not the only times to worship Him in Spirit and in Truth," but every day, every moment, should be a living prayer. . . . How I desire that we shall wake up out of that lethargy, and love one another as the Master loved us.

Oliver Cope: While I believe that "Mind the Light" is a message full of meaning for us, I also feel that it is equally important for us to mind the shadows. There are lessons of obedience therein that are never taught by the light.

Richard Roberts: I have thought sometimes that this is probably the most important of our queries, for unless we love one another it is scarcely worth while for us to come together to worship God.

Henry M. Haviland: Referring to the query in regard to oppression, I feel that Friends should be most conscientious in encouraging the equality of all people and their equal recognition under the laws.

Elizabeth Lloyd thought we would do much toward solving the race problem did we individually free ourselves entirely from all race prejudice, and do naught to hurt the feelings of any one of this race.

Anna M. Jackson was concerned that we might realize this is not a question afar off in the South. In many ways conditions South are better than here. There the mechanics are open to the diligent negro—and the compensation is fair. In the North, few save menial positions are open to him, and the compensation is small, making him largely dependent upon tips, a custom that is wrong in principle, and especially harmful to an easy-going people. . . . So we of the North instead of helping him forward are pushing him backward. . . . The songs that are sung throughout all the land are very destructive of the character of the race. . . . One of the most pathetic is the one where the little child cannot play longer in the other yard. . . . Social equality is not asked for nor desired. . . . It is desired that this subject be considered apart from social equality, in the light of justice; that we learn to treat the negro as a man, not a colored man.

When the subject of uniting with other yearly meetings in the work of Equal Rights was being discussed, Elizabeth Lloyd said that she felt the main object of the Association is to educate women, to make them feel that even if they have all the rights they want, they are not performing all their duties.

In the closing session, Fifth-day, Dr. Janney, after thanking all for the tender hospitality of heart and home, said: "Let us all make this endeavor in parting, to keep close to the Guiding Spirit and to be loyal to Christ, to step in the pathway that is made clear. If we can do this, we will realize that development and growth of character which will come to us by a close contact with God."

Elizabeth Lloyd: Spiritual life does not depend upon numbers, for while we have been few indeed, the Spirit of our Father has been with us, and it has been indeed a privilege to be here.

Samuel Zavitz felt that we had been baptized by the one baptism into the Spirit. The influence of the loving hospitality and fellowship must go with us to our little meetings, and will help us to grow not merely in numbers but in the higher life.

MINUTE RETURNED.

[The following is an abbreviated copy of a report of John J. and Eliza H. Cornell upon the return of the minute granted them for this mission, which we don't not will be read with interest by their many friends who have been visited.—EDITORS.]

To the Baltimore Monthly Meeting of Friends held at Park Avenue.

Dear Friends: Having with Divine care and aid been able to fully accomplish the mission for which you so kindly granted us minutes to attend and appoint meetings and to visit families as way might open, within the limits of Philadelphia and New York Yearly Meetings, we now return said minutes and report the following statistics concerning the service performed—during the years 1901, 1902 and 1903.

Whole number of weeks engaged in the three years' service	63
Whole number of meetings attended	321
Whole number of families visited	1850
Number of miles traveled in public conveyances	11,006
Number of miles traveled in carriages	3,378

We have been everywhere received with much kindness and open cordiality, and very many expressions of satisfaction have been given both with the meetings and the family visits, the social feature being much appreciated.

The meetings, with few exceptions, have been largely attended, and by many not in membership with us and often by those who have never before been in a Friends' Meeting; and from these have come many expressions of thankfulness for the opportunity they had had.

This has given a large opportunity to explain our fundamental principles and to call to a pure Christian life.

The retrospect to ourselves is one of much satisfaction, and the consciousness that we have done what we could in the Master's work affords us comfort and peace.

A MISSION TEACHER.

THE teacher of vocal music in the First-day School Department of Friends' Neighborhood Guild of Philadelphia, will be missed in the work to which she has given of her talent and assistance for a number of years, as the acceptance of a call to usefulness in a larger field in a western city renders it impossible to continue with us.

The long term of her voluntary service in this mission work for the betterment of the children of the poor can be best appreciated when we recall the degree of consecration prompting her presence and the regularity of attendance during the sessions of the school.

The desire that her daily calling in the culture of the human voice in song shall be for the glory of God, as well as for the happiness of His children, will, she believes, be better accomplished in her new location than have been possible here in Philadelphia, though her classes of pupils have been of exceptional character.

Our sincere best wishes for her continued happiness and progress go with our friend to her new home, and the little boys and girls of our First-day School, as the days and years pass by, have occasion to happily remember the name of H. Edna Sleeper.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK.

Ninth month 15th, 1903.

A CASTLE, which is believed to have existed 400 years before Christ, has been brought to light near Cassel, Germany.

EDUCATIONAL.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NEWS.

THERE are but few changes in the teaching and household force for Swarthmore College next year. Beatrice Magill, after a year's absence, returns to take charge of the work in art. William Burdick, of Brown University, has been chosen Director of the Men's Gymnasium; Louise Goodbody, of Indiana University, President's Secretary; Mary E. Minott, Housekeeper; Ella D. Beck, Head of the Laundry.

New apparatus will be added to the department of Engineering and additional desks have been provided for students in Chemistry. New and modern machinery has been installed in the Laundry. Some changes and repairs have been made in the buildings during the summer. The room formerly used by the department of French has been added to the administrative offices and will be occupied by the Registrar. The buildings have been thoroughly gone over and four fire plugs have been provided and drinking water placed in the building from the Springfield Water Works.

The application list of new students is larger than ever before, all the rooms having been engaged and some students provided for in private families near the College.

All the members of the faculty have returned, many of them having spent the summer away. Dean Bond spent the summer in England; Professor Trotter in Canada; Professor Holmes in Maine; Dr. Appleton at Longport; Drs. Bronk and Battin and Miss Magill in Europe.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

BYBERRY, PA.—The Friends' Association was held at Byberry Meeting-House on First-day afternoon, Ninth month 6th, with a somewhat smaller attendance than last time, but an excellent meeting was held. In the absence of both President and Vice-President, Wm. P. Bonner acted as chairman. The meeting was opened by Alvan Tomlinson reading the 3d chapter of James, after which the minutes of previous session were read by the secretary. The subject of the afternoon was presented in three papers on "The Practical Application of the Friendly Religion in the Home, School and Business." The first division was given by Miriam Tomlinson, who felt the home to be the foundation of all else, "The principles taught and lived there have more influence on children than all later life. If early impressions are for the right then will strong characters result; if home be bad then there will be moments of weakness. Religion should be the conscience of the home—the benevolent action flowing forth from holy motive." While Friends must to an extent keep pace with the world, yet the moderation seen in Friendly homes has had a wide influence toward right living." Rachael Johnson presented a paper relating to the second division—schools, in which she expressed the feeling that in Friends' schools the absolute quiet enforced at times has a very beneficial effect in many ways. "The teacher should herself be a good example of those virtues she would teach, for example is more good than all precept. There may be in schools, and doubtless, are, many who do not have religious training of any kind at home, and who will not grow up to be church-goers, but if the elements of simple religion be taught in secular schools, would there not be a field cultivated that now lies barren?"

A paper prepared by Edwin K. Bonner was read by Wm. P. Bonner, relating to business life. In this he advocated substantial virtues, such as honesty, industry, meditation, temperance, morality, sociability, religion, etc., with explicit reasons for each—and, taken as a whole, all the fundamental principles of our religion may be employed for the betterment of business life."

Nathaniel Richardson, in discussing the papers dwelt especially on the hurry and rush of our modern life, "being on time is necessary, but usually pressure is too great." He then related instances showing the opposites in hurry and in ease, and wished we might emulate the latter, while he deplored the former.

Professor Willard, of Philadelphia, spoke in relation to school system, saying, "Some people consider our public school a Godless organization, but I cannot feel it is so. The curriculum and class that contains in study and recitation some of our most beautiful poems cannot help but, after the commitment of them, leave the boy and girl better, more refined and more cultivated. We should not teach sectarian religion, but all that tends to uplift and help should be taught."

A recitation, "Nobody's Child," was given by Alice Holt, and the program for next meeting, Tenth month, 4th, 1903, was announced to be an address on "A View of Nature and the Bible," by Joseph Swain, LL. D., of Swarthmore, who would also give an illustrated talk for us on Egypt the previous evening, Tenth month, 3d, 1903, at hall at Somerton, Pa., and all members were desired to invite their friends to both occasions. A. C.

HOPEWELL, VA.—The Hopewell Young Friends' Association held its session of Ninth month 13th, by invitation, at the Ridge Meeting House. Exercises were opened by the president reading the 19th Psalm.

After transacting the routine business, Jonah L. Kess read part of a recent speech of Senator Hoar on Woman Suffrage, which was much enjoyed by the Association.

Carrie D. Lupton read a selection entitled "The Need for Quakerism." This was followed by a poem from Proverbial Philosophy entitled "Tolerance," by Edward L. Irish. An interesting collection of Current Topics was given by D. Arthur Robinson. Susan T. Pidgeon read an able paper which she had written on "Attention to Little Things." She urged more carefulness in what we consider the smaller things of life, and closed her paper by saying we might all do well to take the following words from Michael Angelo as a life motto, "Trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle."

Carroll C. Clevenger gave an interesting paper on the origin and character of the Olympic games.

After silence the Association adjourned to meet at Hopewell Tenth month 18th, 1903.

BERHA B. CLEVINGER, Sec.

ACCOTINK, VA.—Young Friends' Association met at "Walnut Hill," Ninth month 6th, 1903. Charles Pidgeon opened the meeting by reading the 11th chapter of Romans. Sarah E. Walton read the Biography of Thomas Elwood. Joseph W. Cox read a selection from FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER entitled "The Whole Truth." Sarah E. Cox recited a short poem, "Let Something Good be Said." Sarah Anthony read an essay, "Canst Thou by Searching Find God?" which called forth some discussion. Edward Walton read a sketch of the life of Isaac Pennington. After roll-call and silence the Association adjourned to meet at the residence of Joseph W. Cox, Tenth month 4th, 1903.

ELLEN LUKENS, Secretary.

RIISING SUN, MD.—A regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association was held in the town hall on the afternoon of Ninth month 6th, and was opened by the vice-president reading a selection entitled, "The Two Lord's Prayers."

Edwin Buffington continued his talk on "The Power of Consciousness." Consciousness, he said, means knowledge. The same forces which exist to-day were just as prevalent in times past, the only difference is, the people in those days were not cognizant of that which through the evolution of thought has been made manifest in the minds of the people to-day. Electricity perhaps existed as much as when Adam was in the Garden of Eden, but man was not yet ready to appreciate the power of its existence. It is mainly through observation, experience and environment that we become conscious of our surroundings. The paramount thought he wished to emphasize was the consciousness of material things in connection or relation to consciousness of spiritual things, and of that power which is down underneath all things.

For that which constitutes the growth in the world's history, is man's power to receive. Thought control and discipline, then, is the key to the spiritual storehouse which will give unto us new attainment and new consciousness of strength.

Robert K. Wood read a very helpful paper on "What Constitutes Daily Heroism?" One thought expressed was that: "It is in our little struggles to overcome the enemies of our better natures; to be master of ourselves that we are called upon to exhibit daily heroism." It is the many little unselfish sacrifices we make every day of our lives, and patiently bearing daily trials and disappointments that go to make one a great hero in God's sight.

A selection was read by Ella F. Hunt entitled, "Let Something Good be Said."

"The necessity of Friends dwelling upon the present and future rather than upon the past," was the subject of a paper by Janet Reynolds. One thought was that "It is not for us to dwell upon the things of the past, only so far as they help to educate us and strengthen us for the performance of present duties, which will in turn awaken deeper thoughts, and prepare us to better understand and appreciate that Life which is back of all things."

At the close various thoughts were offered by different ones in attendance. Some one said we need to keep a close watch over ourselves, that we do not shirk our duty in standing up for truth. It was said that we are strenuous enough in business, which is of itself necessary, but the only way of building up a well-developed life is the proper cultivation of the ethical side as well as the secular. The meeting closed with silence.

JANETTE REYNOLDS, Cor. Sec.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

MY OWN.

To I. Frank and Elizabeth A. Hopkins, California,
AWAY in the hearts' deep shadow,

There sings the livelong day,
A little bird with a plaintive voice—
A sad and mournful lay.

It sings no songs of gladness,
As the branches toss about;
But shades with gloom, the once merry heart
Until it is steeped in doubt.

It sings; "Shall I ever find them?
Shall I ever find my own?
Shall I ever behold my birdlings
Which from the nest have flown?"

At night, when the world is sleeping—
My soul in anguish tossed
Calls out in the voiceless silence
For the darlings I have lost.

No sound but the plaintive moaning
For the blessings I have known;
And the wailing, wailing, wailing,
For my own, my very own.

Yet oft when it clamors loudest,
There comes a sense of peace
Like oil on the troubled waters,
'Till its wailing accents cease.

And give place to a stately measure,
Filled with a glad refrain,
And bids my heart grow lighter,
Its own it will find again.

For water seeks its level,
Each river finds its sea,
And thus I know beyond all doubt,
My own will return to me!

ANNIE T. MILLER.

THE State Temperance Union, of Kansas, announces that of the 754 papers published in that State only 20 publish liquor advertisements.

METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY FOR EIGHTH MONTH, 1903.

Mean barometer,	30.013
Highest barometer during the month, 2d,	30.417
Lowest barometer during the month, 20th,	29.728
Mean temperature,	71.1
Highest temperature during the month, 25th,	94
Lowest temperature during the month, 8th,	56
Mean of maximum temperatures,	78
Mean of minimum temperatures,	64.2
Greatest daily range of temperature, 25th,	26
Least daily range of temperature, 28th,	4
Mean daily range of temperature,	13.7
Mean temperature of the Dew Point,	63.3
Mean relative humidity, per cent.,	77.5
Total precipitation, rain, inches,	5.40
Greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours, 1.85 inches of rain, on the 27th and 28th.

Number of days on which .01 inch or more precipitation, 17.
 Number of clear days 8, fair days 9, cloudy days 14.
 Prevailing direction of the wind from southeast.
 Thunder storms on 7th, 11th, 24th, 26th.

SENSIBLE TEMPERATURE DATA.

Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 70.5° on 11th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 56° on 13th.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 a. m., 63.8°.
Maximum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 74° on 25th.
Minimum of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 55.5° on 27th.
Mean of the wet bulb thermometer at 8 p. m., 64.6°.
Mean of wet bulb thermometer for this month, 64.2°.

NOTE.—The means of the daily maximum and minimum temperatures, 78° and 64.2° respectively, give a monthly mean of 71.1°, which is 4.3° below the normal, and 1.9° below the corresponding month in 1902.

The total amount of precipitation for the month, 5.40 inches, is 1.15 inches more than the normal, and 2.19 inches more than fell during Eighth month, 1902.

JOHN COMLY, Observer.

Centennial Avenue, Philadelphia, Eighth month 31st.

SOME NEEDY INDIANS.

THE Indian Rights Association has been appealed to on behalf of the Indians in northern California. It will surprise many to know that there are probably 12,000 or more of these Indians scattered about the State, who are landless squatters, existing by sufferance on corners of ranches belonging to white men, and liable to eviction at a moment's notice; indeed, quite a number of them have not even such a temporary resting-place, but are kept constantly "on the move."

The Northern California Indian Association, formed a few years ago with a view to improving the condition of these people, has been conducting mission work in a few localities, but efforts thus far put forth show clearly the extent of the field still uncovered, and the need for a careful and thorough investigation. A memorial was presented by the Association to the President on the occasion of his last visit to California, reciting the wrongs inflicted on these Indians by gold-hunters and others, which reduced them to destitution and pauperism, and urging that the Government make some provision for these unfortunate people, "who are so in need of help and yet have not even been guilty of fighting for their own rights."

The matter was brought to the attention of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs a week or so ago by a representative of the Indian Rights Association. The Commissioner expressed great interest in the project to remedy existing conditions, but said the Indian Office had no funds available to purchase land for these Indians, or to employ a suitable person to make a proper investigation of their needs. He said relief must come through Congress, and he advised that the California Association ascertain the number of Indians, the available tracts of land on which they might be located, and all other necessary data, and appeal to Congress at the coming session. This information secured, and a proper public sentiment developed, especially in California, the Commissioner believed that something definite might be accomplished.

The California Association is therefore anxious to make a prompt, thorough, and detailed study of the condition and needs of all these Indians. Considerable data have already been secured, but to properly finish the work it will require the full time of two or three reliable men for several months, who should visit at least 150 known settlements where Indians are located, and cover several thousand miles of the most difficult and primitive kind of traveling. Owing to the apathy of so many Californians, the Association has been unable to secure sufficient money to cover the expense of this contemplated investigation, and has appealed to the Philadelphia organization. About $500 is still needed to permit the Association to conduct the work; and if the investigation is to be effective it ought to be undertaken at once, in order that the appeal may be ready for presentation when Congress meets.

City and State will be glad to receive any contributions those interested in the matter may care to send for the purpose indicated, and promptly forward the amount to Mrs. Augustus Taber, of San José, California.—[City and State.]

THE POWER OF MORAL SUASION.

A VISIT to the room in the City Hall where the little wards of the Juvenile Court are detained pending their hearings results in nothing so much as astonishment at the naturalness with which these waifs respond to moral suasion.

There they are, children gathered from various corners of this big town, of nationalities and dispositions as various. Yonder are two Italians, with their warm, olive complexions and large eyes; over there a pickaninny. Pent up together, inclined to be disobedient, as the very best children usually are, restless, cunning and mischievous—impish is a word that might apply to one or two—and yet all so subdued by a compelling power simply moral.

Of course, it has been realized that to make them in the least resigned to captivity it is necessary to provide them employment; so they have checkers, dominoes and other games. There are even trestles over which they can amuse themselves by taking running jumps. But, of course, now and then disputes and quarrels arise, which must be settled by the lady in whose charge they are.

This is usually accomplished by a quiet word or two. She never speaks angrily, never raises her voice, never resorts to harsh measures. Yet the boys obey her, very rarely make any sort of impudent retort, and actually grow to love her.

Seeing this, one is inclined to wonder how it is that so many mothers fail in controlling their own flesh and blood, children reared beneath their own eyes, amid desirable surroundings.

A restrained manner, earnestness, invincible purpose, and, beneath all these, real tenderness. These are the qualities that subdue the wildest child nature. The first three without the last might fail, for, after all, it is the real affection lying deeper than the stern purpose which touches and softens the child heart.

"Material too good to be allowed to go to waste," is what a practical worker says of the boys coming under the jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court. In many cases they are endowed with excellent qualities and keen intellects. That they appreciate what is done for them is evidenced by the fact that from time to time the probation officers receive very grateful letters from children whose condition in life they have helped to better.—[Woman's Interests, in Philadelphia Ledger.]

"Dry" Conditions Make Xenia Workhouse Almost Useless.

It appears that the Beal local option law has put the Greene county workhouse in a tight place. A few years ago the commissioners made a contract with a Columbus broom manufacturing concern to sell their contract labor at 25 cents per day, a certain number being stipulated. If less than that number was furnished then the county was to reimburse the contractors to the extent of the profit which they would have made on the men whom they could not supply. This plan worked very satisfactorily until the city voted dry, when lehold, the workhouse population fell off to such an extent as to alarm the commissioners, for they were obliged to pay good money to the contractors without the slightest return. Then it was they cut their rates and began hustling for the business that had formerly gone to Dayton. After figuring it out that their loss at the 20c. and 15c. rate for board would be less than by paying the contractors the "profit" on men they had agreed to supply, but during "dry times" could not furnish.

The Miami county commissioners have decided to send prisoners to the Xenia workhouse hereafter. Commissioner Cappock says that the local option law in Greene county has reduced Miami's bill for boarding prisoners one-half; he wishes Miami county would vote dry now and wipe out the other half.—[The Dayton Press.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

The leader of the Salvation Army Corps that started on its campaign in the Kentucky mountains on the 14th, said just before starting: "The mountaineers are practically without Christianity. We feel we should have a band of our Salvationists personally visit them to try our methods on them. We really hardly know how to get at them, and that is the purpose of our coming trip. We are very hopeful that the methods of the Salvation Army will prove just the thing to awaken this peculiar people and bring them out of their present condition. Our methods may not work at all. The coming trip will tell the tale."

UNDER an act of the New York Legislature a new branch of the judiciary in King's county, a Children's Court, has been opened. There are no cells in the building that has been provided for the Court. An attempt has been made to do away with any jail-like appearance, and in the conduct of the court every effort will be made to carry out the intent of the new law, to uplift, rather than degrade the little culprits whose whims, environment or childish needs may have suggested petty offending. The law governing the court provides that all under 16 years of age shall be taken there for the purpose of removing them from the influence of other prisoners in the police and other courts. The agents of the Children's Society and the probationary officers will be charged with the care of the boys and girls temporarily or pending disposition of the cases.

A NEW YORK newspaper correspondent writes that it is an open Church secret that a large element in the Episcopal Church there is not in sympathy with the erection of the immense towering Cathedral of St. John the Divine, which has been in progress on Morningside Heights for several years, and which has been a severe drain upon the financial resources of the diocese. The construction of the Cathedral has been the source of much anxiety to Bishop Potter. Many of the clergy and prominent laymen regard the project as mediæval and a great waste of funds.

THE example of the sheriff at Danville, Ill., who stood his ground and defended the jail successfully against a mob of lynchers, is having its certain salutary effect all over the State. It was seen last week in Shawneetown, when a "nigger-hunting" mob assailed the jail there, only to be met by Jailer Galloway in so determined a manner that it slunk off without making the promised assault.

DISCUSSING the "Problems of the Nation" recently Senator Hoar said, "I see that one enthusiastic Southern gentleman has renewed the proposition that we shall send the ten million negroes out of the country. This is totally impracticable. Let us not delude ourselves. We have got this question to meet squarely at home. The negro will stay. The European and Asiatic will come. You cannot turn them out and you cannot keep them out."

DR. R. F. COYLE, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, who has recently returned to his home in Denver from a tour in the East, believes that the time is not far distant when the twelve different Presbyterian Churches in the United States will become one. This probability, he says, is due to the reconstructing of the creed of his denomination. Calvinistic and Arminian lines, which have long kept his and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church separated, have now been effaced, and at present no distinctions, other than ceremonial, separate the two great religious orders that began as one in the days of Cromwell.

Committees representing the Cumberland Presbyterians and the Northern Presbyterian Church will hold a joint meeting in St. Louis, Tenth month 1st, to consider a basis of union.

THE Commissioners sent out by the Danish Government to inquire into the condition of the Danish West Indies have issued a report. They believe that by means of administrative reforms financial stability can be re-established, and they propose preferential treatment for Danish West Indian sugar in Denmark, improvements at the port of St. Thomas, and substitution of Danish for American coinage. It is also proposed that the islands shall be represented in the Danish Parliament by two seats in the lower and one in the upper House. The press, which last year advocated the sale of the islands, now admits that the Commission has done a useful work. It is expected that the Government at the coming session will introduce a West Indian reform bill based on the Commission's report.

PRINTERS of the Roman Catholic faith have been much exercised by the controversy over the oath of the Typographical Union which requires loyalty to the Union to take precedence over all other obligations, a bishop having declared that no one bound by the oath would be given absolution. Many Catholics have expressed their determination to stand by the Union. The editor of the Western Laborer is reported as saying, "I venture to say that not one Catholic printer in Omaha and few in America will give up the Union for absolution." On the other hand a prominent Catholic Union printer of Milwaukee said, "Until now the oath has never been considered as in any way conflicting with religion. I have administered this oath many times without ever thinking that it placed the Union above the Church. Now that the matter has been brought up I know that the next convention of the Union will change the wording so that it will not be objectionable."

NEWS NOTES.

THE American Pomological Society has been in session in Boston.

THE discovery of one military plot after another is reported from Servia.

THE Alaska Boundary Commission began its sittings at the British Foreign Office at 11 o'clock on the 15th.

INFLUENTIAL friends of Trinity College at Hartford, Conn., are suggesting its affiliation with Yale University.

POPE PIUS has taken steps to dispose of the remnants of the papal navy and it is said he intends to disband the Swiss Guard.

THE National Woman's Christian Temperance Union has begun its campaign for the expulsion of Reed Smoot, of Utah, from the United States Senate.

THE output of anthracite coal for the past eight months has been 13,046,000 tons more than for the same period last year. The companies claim there has been no over-production.

LAND has been purchased at Kingsbridge, N. Y., as the site for a new academy to be erected for a colony of nuns who were recently expelled from France under the new legislation there.

SECRETARY HITCHCOCK, at the request of President Roosevelt, has designated Charles J. Bonaparte, of Baltimore, to conduct the investigation of the land frauds in the Indian Territory.

THE investigations into the charges preferred by Seymour W. Tulloch, ordered by the President and made by Charles J. Bonaparte and Holmes Conrad, have been completed and a full report made.

KING EDWARD has appointed the King of Portugal Admiral in the British Navy, as a token of the friendship existing between the two countries, recently strengthened by King Edward's visit to Portugal.

THE District Government has, after some delay, granted the formal permit to the Pennsylvania Railroad to construct the twin tunnel under the United States Capitol and the adjacent blocks and streets.

CARROLL D. WRIGHT, in declining, on account of press of work, an invitation of the socialists of Lottsville, Pa., to address them, added that if he had accepted they would be disappointed, as he is no advocate of their doctrine.

AFTER many delays the Pittsburgh Councils have at last selected as a site for the Carnegie Technological School, a tract of 32 acres on the border of Schenley Park. The school will be built and equipped in the most modern manner and endowed with $2,000,000.

THE computer of prices at tidewater appointed by the Anthracite Strike Commission, has given notice that the miners are entitled to a 5 per cent. increase in wages in accordance with the recent advance in the price of anthracite, to be effective for the present month.

THE German Government will introduce in the next Reichstag a bill requiring saloon keepers to sell non-intoxicants, such as lemonade, milk, coffee, tea and cold foods, and forbidding the credit system so much used in the country districts and among students.

THIS is a jubilee year for the royal family of Denmark. It is fifty years since the King was recognized heir to the throne, and he has reigned 40 years. His eldest son, now 60, has been Crown Prince 40 years. His second son, the King of Greece, has reigned 40 years.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

9TH Mo. 20 (FIRST-DAY).—PHILANTHROPIC Conference of the Western Quarterly Meeting at Centerville, Del., at 2.30 p. m. The committee will meet at 2 o'clock. Prof. Frank Green will address the meeting on "Improper Literature."

9TH Mo. 20 (FIRST-DAY).—CONFERENCE under the care of Concord Quarterly Meeting's Committee on Philanthropic Labor in the Meeting-house at Concord, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Dr. O. Edward Janney, of Baltimore, is expected to address the meeting. Dr. Janney also expects to attend the morning meeting for worship at Concord.

9TH Mo. 20 (FIRST-DAY).—GOOSE CREEK First-day School Adult Class will read and discuss Jane P. Rushmore's address to the Baltimore Yearly First-day School Conference, 1901.

9TH Mo. 21 (SECOND-DAY).—FRIENDS' Flower and Fruit Mission meets each Second-day at 151 Fairmount Avenue, at 1 p. m., to distribute flowers.

9TH Mo. 25 (SIXTH-DAY).—WOODSTOWN, N. J., Young Friends' Association.

9TH Mo. 26 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SCIPIO Quarterly Meeting at Scipio, N. Y. Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m.

9TH Mo. 26 (SEVENTH-DAY).—BUCKS First-day School Union at Langhorne, Pa., at 10 a. m., and 1.30 p. m. Subjects: (1) Work in the First-day School, (2) Whose duty is it in our meetings to fill the place the pastor fills in other religious denominations? Cora Haviland Carver, of Philadelphia, is expected to address the afternoon session.

(Continued on page 611.)

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY }
 BEYMER-BAUMAN }
 DAVIS-CHAUDERS } FAHNESTOCK }
 ANCHOR }
 ECKSTEIN }
 ATLANTIC }
 BRADLEY }
 BROOKLYN }
 JEWETT }
 ULSTER }
 UNION } SOUTHERN } SHEPMAN }
 COLLIER }
 MISSOURI }
 RED SEAL }
 SOUTHERN }
 JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO }
 MORLEY }
 SALEM }
 CORNELL }
 KENTUCKY }

DWELLING house in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., built one hundred years ago, has always been painted with Pure White Lead and Linseed Oil—nothing else.

There is not a crack, blister, blemish or imperfection of any kind in the paint. Makers of mixtures, beat this record if you can!

Be sure the brand is right. Those in margin are genuine, and made by "old Dutch process."

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

My name on a lamp-chimney says, "Pay double for me; I give double light and don't break."

MACBETH.

How to take care of lamps, including the getting of right-shape chimneys, is in my Index; sent free.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

Special Sale of BLACK TAFFETA SILKS

Extra values are the rule and not the exception in our Silk Department—nearly every Philadelphia woman knows that: and when we can offer even lower prices than usual on such staple lines as these Black Taffetas, it is a good idea to get some of them while they are going:

- 75c Black Taffeta, 19-inch—58c
- 80c Black Taffeta, 19-inch—68c
- 85c Black Taffeta, 19-inch—75c
- 95c Black Taffeta, 21-inch—85c
- $1.00 Black Taffeta, 23-inch—85c
- $1.00 Black Taffeta, 36-inch—85c
- $1.25 Black Taffeta, 36-inch—$1.00
- $1.50 Black Taffeta, 36-inch—$1.25

All of these Silks are guaranteed to wear—they are of the same sturdy, reliable sorts that have made this department popular throughout our own country and famous in the great silk centres of Europe.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
PHILADELPHIA.

BREAD MACHINE
FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (OTRUS GRABERS, Jr.) 522 1/2 Main St., Philadelphia

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS IRON FENCING
FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.
809 Plaster Street, Philad'a, Pa.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

(Concluded from page 605.)

9TH Mo. 27 (FIRST-DAY).—LANCASTER, Pa., Young Friends' Association.

9TH Mo. 27 (FIRST-DAY).—HORSHAM, Pa., Young Friends' Association.

9TH Mo. 28 (SECOND-DAY).—CANADA Half Yearly Meeting at Yonge Street, Ontario. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.

10TH Mo. 16 (SIXTH-DAY).—TWO-DAY (16th and 17th) celebration of anniversary of establishment of Miami Monthly Meeting of Friends at Waynesville, O., It will be participated in by both branches of Friends.

THE FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION acknowledges receipt of the following additional contributions to the Children's Country Week Association:
Marion S. Comly, $ 2.00
Previously reported, 50.00

Amount, $52.00
JOHN COMLY, Superintendent.
Ninth month 11th, 1903.

TOUR TO THE PACIFIC COAST.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL BANKERS' ASSOCIATION.

On account of the meeting of the National Bankers' Association, to be held at San Francisco, Cal., October 20 to 23, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company offers a personally-conducted tour to the Pacific Coast at remarkably low rates.

This tour will leave New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and other points on the Pennsylvania Railroad east of Pittsburgh, Wednesday, October 14, by special train of the highest grade Pullman equipment. A quick run westward to San Francisco will be made, via Chicago, Omaha, Cheyenne, and Ogden.

Five days will be devoted to San Francisco, allowing ample opportunity to visit the near-by coast resorts. Returning, stops will be made at Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs, Denver, and St. Louis. The party will reach New York on the evening of October 31.

Round-trip rate, covering all expenses for eighteen days, except five days spent in San Francisco, $190.

Rates from Pittsburg will be $5.00 less. For full information apply to Ticket Agents, or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

LITERATURE FOR FRIENDS.

QUAKERISM: ITS BELIEFS AND MESSAGES. By William Edward Turner, (recently) editor of British Friend. Small pamphlet. 40 pages. Single copy 12 cents.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Paper for the World's Congress of Religions, Chicago, 1893. Small pamphlet (to go in ordinary envelope), 24 pages. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

DISARMAMENT OF NATIONS, OR MANKIND ONE BODY. By George Dana Boardman. Pamphlet. 27 pages. *Dr. Boardman, a Baptist minister of distinction, has been many years one of the most earnest upholders of the Peace cause. This is an eloquent and vigorous review of many features of the question. Single copy 5 cents. 25 copies $1.00.

THE SONG OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. By Elizabeth Lloyd. Leaflet. 1 page. *A beautiful Lyric for recitation or song. Of permanent value. Single copy 2 cents. 100 copies 30 cents. 1000 copies, $2.50.

THE MEETING FOR WORSHIP IN THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS. By Howard M. Jenkins. Small pamphlet. 11 pages. A concise statement. Single copy 3 cents. 50 copies 75 cents. 100 copies $1.00.

*All the above will be sent by mail at the prices stated. Address

Friends' Literature Association,
N. W. cor. 15th and Cherry Streets, Philad'a.

JUST PUBLISHED

Views and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hillhem, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia. 22 pages, paper, 5c.; per dozen 50c.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
*Phone 1-33-55.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

MR. ACHESON, an American engineer, thinks he has fathomed the secret by which the ancient Egyptians made bricks that were easy to work despite their extreme hardness. The Egyptians used straw, and by boiling straw in water and mixing clay with it Mr. Acheson found that it gave hard, shapely bricks that did not crack or deform in baking. Analysis proved the effect due to tannin dissolved in water. Further experiments showed that from 0.5 to 1 per cent. of the tannin of commerce added to the resistance of the brick. The process also economizes water, and such bricks dried in the sun are even more solid than those of the kiln.—[City and State.]

"GEO. T. ANGELL, Dear Sir:—Some time since I obtained from your office several copies of your paper containing articles on docking, and sent them to a wealthy family who came to our town bringing a span of beautiful horses cruelly mutilated for life by docking. Three times within ten days I sent Our Dumb Animals with its silent plea, when to my great joy the span was replaced by horses 'as the Almighty made them,' with beautiful flowing tails.

"I am glad of this testimony to the value of your paper in the line of humane education."—[Our Dumb Animals.]

SOME sorts of preaching might fill a church, but would not do much good. One of my old parishioners in Leeds described the impression left on her mind by one of our most eloquent bishops: "Sir, but warn't it fine? But it were all to be consumed on the premises; warn't to be carried away."—[The Bishop of Stepney.]

PROTECTION

FROM LOSS BY FIRE

Household Furniture

80c per hundred for five years

R. MOORE PRICE, 431 Walnut Street

MILTON PHILLIPS

Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETTI.

You can live without life insurance, but you won't live so much. Nothing adds to the zest of living like knowing your family is protected by a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

SAVE 1/2 YOUR FUEL

A Tea Kettle boils quicker on my chimney than on my Stove.

I can hold my hand over my chimney. No waste heat, I use a

ROCHESTER RADIATOR.

Get all the heat you pay for. You really get coal at half price for at least ten years; with it, you make one stove or furnace do the work of two.

Fully Guaranteed. Write for booklet on heating houses.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO.,
19 Furnace St., Rochester, N. Y.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000

Chartered 1836

SURPLUS, 7,500,000

ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES, ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER.

FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS.

Saves to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

LIQUIDATOR UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.

REGISTRY AND TRANSFER AGENT.

ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.

E. B. MORRIS, President.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO LOS ANGELES AND SAN FRANCISCO.

AND RETURN VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On October 7th to 16th inclusive, special excursion tickets will be sold to Los Angeles and San Francisco via Southern Railway, account American Bankers Association, at very low rates, tickets good to return until November 30th, 1903. Round trip rate from Philadelphia $89.70, proportionate low rates from other points.

In addition to the Standard Pullman drawing-room sleeping cars, operated daily, the Southern Railway operates on fast trains, tri-weekly, high-class, personally-conducted vestibuled excursion sleeping cars between Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco without change via Atlanta, New Orleans and El Paso, in which the double berth rate is only 57.

Excursion sleeping cars leave Washington at 9 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will furnish all information.

GETTYSBURG AND WASHINGTON. PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The tour will leave New York 7.55 a. m., and Philadelphia 12.20 p. m., Saturday, September 26th, in charge of a Pennsylvania Railroad Tourist Agent, and will cover a period of six days. An experienced chaperon, whose especial charge will be unescorted ladies, will accompany the party throughout. Round-trip tickets covering transportation, carriage drives and hotel accommodations, will be sold at the extremely low rate of $22 from New York, $21 from Trenton, from Philadelphia, and from other points at proportionate rates.

For itineraries and information apply to Ticket Agent, Tourist Agent 263 Fifth Avenue, New York; 4 Court St., Brooklyn; 789 Broad St., Newark, N. J.; or address George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Phila.

United Security

Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.

JOEL COOK, Vice-President.

ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,

Second Vice-President and Treasurer.

CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,

Assistant Treasurer.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodate and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. F. TURNER, G. F. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

PLEASE MENTION FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, NINTH MONTH 26, 1903.

Friends' Select School,

1821 I STREET, N. W., WASHINGTON, D. C.
A school of all grades for boys and girls. Has prepared students for twenty different colleges and technical schools.

Certificate privilege to Lehigh, Dartmouth, Swarthmore, Georgetown, Columbian, Vassar, Smith and Wellesley.

Excellent Gymnasium and Play Grounds.
THOS. W. SIDWELL, Principal.

FRIENDS' SCHOOL,

GREEN STREET, GERMANTOWN,
Under care
GERMANTOWN PREPARATIVE MEETING.
Kindergarten, Primary, Intermediate and Higher Departments. Manual Training.
For circulars address
ELIZABETH M. ROBERTS, Principal.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Central School, FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER,
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, } Principals.
Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.
Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.
For catalogue, apply to

J. EUGENE S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES. Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
Jenkintown, Pa.
CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogoatz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.
The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address
CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.
A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.
For particulars address
A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

THREE MONTHS FOR 25 CENTS.

WE will send FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER till the end of the year for 25 cents, beginning with the week the subscription is received.

Will our subscribers send us the names of Friends who might like to take advantage of this offer, but who may not see the advertisement? We will write to them.

WANTED.

WANTED.—A SMALL ADULT FAMILY (NOT over three) to take furnished house, 78th and Diamond Streets, in exchange for board of owner. Address B, this Office.

WANTED.—A SINGLE ROOM WITH BOARD by an elderly woman. Philadelphia. Terms moderate. Address M, this Office.

WANTED.—MATRON FOR FRIENDS' Home, Baltimore. Please address Rebecca J. Broomell, 2128 Bolton Street, Baltimore, Md.

WANTED.—BY THE HOME FOR DESTITUTE Colored Children, a position on a farm for a boy about fifteen years of age, with privilege of attending school. Address "S," Lansdowne, Pa.

WANTED.—A RELIABLE GIRL OR SETTLED woman for general housework in a private family. Apply or address 6604 N. 6th St., Oak Lane, Phila., Pa.

WANTED.—EVENING EMPLOYMENT, to assist physicians with accounts and correspondence, or other work. A. B. C., this Office.

WANTED.—A YOUNG WOMAN TO ASSIST with housekeeping, in pleasant home, small family. Time for study, good wages. Address 57 E. Central Avenue, Moorestown, N. J.

BOARDING.

A FEW REFINED BOARDERS WANTED in private boarding house. Sunny and very desirable second and third story front rooms; one back room. Friends' family. T., this Office.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 1st, N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

FOR RENT.—FURNISHED, SECOND FLOOR rooms. 835 N. 23d Street.

TWO SECOND-STORY ROOMS TO RENT, either with or without board, in a Friends' family, near Logan Square. Address J., this Office.

FIRST MORTGAGES FOR SALE, BEARING 5 per cent. interest; $2,000, $3,500, $3,500, $3,500, $4,000; new and elegant Philadelphia houses. DAVID H. WRIGHT, 1420 Chestnut Street.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTIETH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

TO RENT.—NICE HOMELIKE HOME, LANGHORE, Bucks county, Pa., from Tenth month 1st. 11-room house, on main street. Bath, water closet, new plumbing, heater. Langhorne spring and other excellent water; porches front and back; old shade, stable, carriage house, fruit. Best location. Trolley to railroad. Apply soon. Dr. John Paxson, Newtown, Pa.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

Thou shalt look
Upon the green and rolling forest tops,
And down into the scrolls of the glens,
And streams, that with their bordering thickets strive
To hide their windings.

Oo each side
The fields swell upward to the hills; beyond,
Above the hills, in the blue distance, rise
The mountain columns with which earth proppeth heaven. —William Cullen Bryant.

AN event of unusual interest will take place on Tenth month 3d and 4th, when the Program Committees of the General Conference will hold their meetings at the Inn as guests of the Buck Hill Falls Company. This will cause quite an influx of guests, but our friends need not fear that they will be crowded out; there will be plenty of room for all. Rates at the Inn are considerably reduced during Tenth month.

SUMMER TRAINS DISCONTINUED.

The last trip of the "Poccono Special," leaving Broad Street Station at 2.05 on Seventh-days, was made Ninth month 19th. The week-day train leaving at 9.05 a. m., and leaving Cresco on its return at 4.42 p. m., will make its last trip Seventh-day, the 26th. After that date, this train will run only as far as Stroudsburg, without connection for Cresco.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,

1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address
ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day from 10 a. m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.
809 Master Street, Philad'a, Pa.

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* * * TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1923.—XXXIX.	609
POETRY: The Reward of Service.	609
"THE IDEAL FRIEND".	609
THE MESSAGE OF QUAKERISM TO THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.	610
PROFESSOR WILLIAM JAMES ON QUAKER- ISM.	611
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
The Second Coming.	612
AN IMPERATIVE DUTY.	613
EDITORIAL:
Advancing Friends' Principles.	614
An Educated Ministry.	614
Notes.	615
BIRTHS, DEATHS.	615
CORRESPONDENCE: The Ministry.	616
SOCIETY NOTES.	617
THE MINISTRY.	617
HUNDRETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ESTAB- LISHMENT OF EASTLAND PREPARATIVE MEETING (Illustration).	618
HISTORICAL SKETCH OF EASTLAND MEET- ING.	619
A MAINE WOODS INCIDENT.	620
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	621
PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.	621
LITERARY NOTES.	622
POETRY: A Birthday; Toward the Light.	622
MISCELLANY: The Disappearing Race; Our National Capitals; A Live School Super- intendent; Texts Found in Hall Clocks.	622
CURRENT EVENTS.	623
NEWS NOTES.	623
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	624

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER
TELEPHONE
1313 VINE STREET
ESTABLISHED 1860

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
623 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
OFFICES: (Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.)

JOHN FABER MILLER,
395 SWEDEN STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street,
From 735 Spring Garden Street

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

Thompson Shourds, 2312 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds. Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis.
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected.
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sanson Street. Philadelphia, Pa.

J. Liden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 937 Chestnut Street, Philad.
Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT
Undertaker
and Embalmer
1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia
TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTHENHAM,

E. T. Kueedig Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

The Pennhurst, Second Home
from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,
2125 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like
and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

BIBLE TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL,
81-83 East 55th St., New York City.
Incorporated by Regents of University of New York.
Six departments. Two-year graded courses. Special one-year courses. Opens October 14th. Write for particulars about scholarships.
Address DR. WILBERT W. WHITE, President.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.
CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving families. Office 603 North
Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES

PURE FOOD
skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of
OUR LUNCH AND DINING ROOM,
1317 Filbert Street
These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS, Proprietor.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.
HENRY W. WILBUR, Editor,
232 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.
With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered
Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.
SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 1810 at 824 North Second Street.
WATCHES.
As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade
—established three generations ago— and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.
GEO. C. CHILD,
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

NOTICE.
THE BIDDLE PRESS, PRINTERS.
Edward T. and Howard Biddle are now ready for business at the S. E. Cor.
Tenth and Filbert Streets, Second floor,
Edward T. Biddle having resigned from
The Leeds & Biddle Co. of 1019-21
Market Street.
We will be pleased to see our friends at the above address.
THE BIDDLE PRESS,
PRINTERS,
S. E. Cor. Tenth and Filbert Sts.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, NINTH MONTH 26, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 39.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XXXIX.

We are all thieves, we are all thieves, we have taken the Scriptures in words, and know nothing of them in ourselves.

MARGARET FOX, 1652.

From her testimony concerning her husband, George Fox.

THE REWARD OF SERVICE.

THE sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.

The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells;
The Book of Life the shining record tells.
Thy love shall chant its own beatitudes
After its own life working. A child's kiss
Set on thy singing lips shall make thee glad;
A poor man helped by thee shall make thee rich;
A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong;
Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense
Of service that thou renderest.

—Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

"THE IDEAL FRIEND."¹

BY N. C. D. MURRAY.

There probably are no two Friends whose ideals of life are exactly the same. The religious ideals of one branch of our Society differ greatly from those of the other and the early Friends were unlike either of these in many respects. Several weeks ago the newspapers had an account of an invention of a thought-recording instrument. Different thoughts, it was claimed, produced different brain action, which in turn so affected the instrument that different colors were cast upon a screen. Every change of thought caused a change in the shade of color, and every shade of color represented a certain thought. It would be interesting, I thought after reading this article, if a color picture could be taken of every Friend's ideals. If we would examine these picture ideals closely we should probably notice a strong resemblance among them, as in faces of members of the same family, but each one would show his individual m. or differences. A composite picture of all these individual pictures would show what the ideals of the present day Friends are like. If we could apply the moving picture idea to this composite picture we should see the colors changing, denoting the changing ideals of the Friends from the times of George Fox, 250 years ago, down to the present. Through all these changes, however, there would be a few streaks or shades that would stand out more or less distinctly. These would be the fundamental, or principal ideals of the Friends, distinguishing them from other people.

The founders of the Society of Friends claimed that they were merely turning back to primitive Christianity, or as Penn expressed it, "Quakerism is primitive Christianity revived," for at the time of the Society's birth the Established Church was little more than a formal, outward, unspiritual institution; the times were worldly and full of war and civil strife. The teachings of Jesus Christ were either ignored or forgotten by the multitude. Jesus Christ, then, was the ideal whose life and teachings should be a model for all Friends. He was a perfect man. But to say that Jesus Christ was an ideal Friend and stop here, would be begging the question, as other denominations as well as the Friends regard Jesus Christ as their ideal. Different denominations interpret his principles or apply his teachings differently, or place different stress or importance upon different parts of his principles and teachings. An ideal Friend regards Jesus Christ as a man, like ourselves, but endowed with the Divine Spirit in its fullness, that he might set to other men in all succeeding ages an example of humanity, tempted by like passions and endowed with the same powers as other men. His life embodies, primarily, the great principle of love of God and love of fellow man. Some one has said that the three objects in life are love, the ministering to the wants of the body and the ministering to the wants of the mind. Of these the ideal Friend places love first in importance, love carrying with it the ideal of charity, justice, reverence, unselfishness and humility. In all his relations with other men, whether in business or socially, he is faithful to these ideals. He is always honest with his neighbor. He is in agreement with Robert Louis Stevenson when he says, to tell the truth, rightly understood, is not merely to state the true facts, but to convey a true impression; truth in spirit, not truth to the letter, is the true veracity. The Friend feels his word to be as good as a bond, and does not believe in taking an oath. The ideal Friend, regarding war as the outcome of hate, and contrary to the principle of love, always stands firmly for peace. The world at large seems to be coming more and more to this point of view. In his charity to all men the ideal Friend always opposes oppression, in whatever form it may be found. "Quakers" were first and foremost in opposition to negro slavery. They opposed all religious oppression, but were not like some other religious sects who claimed the right of religious freedom, but persecuted others when they had the power; Friends believe in the right of every man to hold any religious principle he pleases. This thought is well expressed by one of the best of "Quakers," John Woolman, when he said that "there is a principle which is pure placed in the human mind, which in different places and ages hath had different names; it is, however, pure, and proceeds from God. It is deep and inward, confined to no forms of religion nor excluded from any, when the heart stands in perfect sincerity. In whomsoever this takes root and grows, they become brethren."

¹ Read at a meeting of the Friends' Association of Cincinnati, First month 25th, 1903.

The ideal Friend is strictly pious; the organization of the Society was probably due more to the impiety of the time of its foundation than to any other cause. He carries his piety into his everyday life. He is pious not only one day of the week, but on every day; the loving obedience to the will of God, his affectionate reverence is the keynote to his character.

The ideal Friend opposes all worldly pleasures and pastimes only in so far as they lead to impiety or harm to humanity—gambling and betting, for instance, are regarded as wrong in principle, as they always have an injurious effect. As piety and love are of first importance, worldly pleasures are to be indulged in guardedly and never at the sacrifice of piety. It may not be against the ideals of a Friend to-day to attend a performance of the theatre if it be regarded on a moral plane. He may encourage art and music, always remembering, however, to keep them subordinate to the prime object of life, namely, love and the virtues arising therefrom. Extremes and excesses of all kinds are to be avoided as harmful to one's physical as well as spiritual well-being.

The harmfulness of excessive drinking of alcoholic liquors and danger of using them at all makes the ideal Friend an abstainer as well as a worker against their use. But he is also temperate in regard to his eating. He is opposed to the use of tobacco.

He is plain and simple in his habits and manners, but does not believe it necessary to use a particular form of language, as "thee" and "thy," "first month," "second month," etc. He would never be extravagant in his dress or mode of living, but is not confined to any set form. Some years ago a certain elderly Friend whom I know, went to considerable trouble and expense to get a new bonnet of the typical kind. She had to send East for it and pay an extravagant price, compared to her means. This was keeping up a set custom at the sacrifice of one of the true ideals of a Friend.

The ideal Friend believes that divine revelation did not cease with the writings of the Scripture, but that each individual is endowed with the same faculty or power as the early prophets, of having revealed to him a knowledge of the moral laws of the Creator—that is, the Light within. The power to apprehend this inner light or voice within is aided by silent meditation or introspection, just as a knowledge of the physical world is gained by study and outward observation. The more we observe and study, the more clearly do we understand the laws of Nature. So, the more earnestly we meditate in silence the more clearly do we apprehend the voice within. The exercise of a mental function or emotion stimulates and develops its strength. Communion with God as revealed through the inner light becomes easier as the mind and soul by frequency of exercise are moulded into the receptive and responsive mood, and the ideal Friend seeks this solace and this comforting divine contact with regularity. The incentive to good, the commands of God as revealed in this divine communion, are stronger and higher than any other inspiration. All conduct, all thought is moulded by these revelations, and to act or think in violation of these divine teachings, coming direct to the soul, would be like profaning a sacrament; hence the conduct, the thought, the moral and physical life are dominated by this communion.

The Bible is held in high esteem, as presenting the experiences of religious men, and is used as a guide and help, but is subordinate to the dictates of the voice within.

The ideal Friend believes with Hawthorne that "in chaste and warm affections, humble wishes and honest toil for some useful end, there is health for the mind and quiet for the heart, the prospect of a happy life and the fairest hope of Heaven."

THE MESSAGE OF QUAKERISM TO THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.

BY ALLEN C. THOMAS.

An abstract of a paper read at the Quarterly Meeting Conference of Orthodox Friends, Darlington, Md., Sixth month, 1903; published in the Interchange, Baltimore, Md.

A great feature of the present time is the breaking down of the walls of sectarianism. It is being more and more acknowledged that certain points of doctrine, and still more of practice, may be more acceptable to some than to others, and that it is proper that such as agree on these should unite for work and worship. This does not at all imply that those who so unite feel that they are holier than others, or that they condemn them. The attitude of Protestant bodies is more and more "Be friendly with us, we are not so far apart as we used to think." The great united Conferences on Foreign Missions, the Y. M. C. A. Conventions, the huge Christian Endeavor meetings, the Northfield and Keswick Conventions, are proofs of the change. The question therefore arises "Has any denomination any longer a special message to the church or to the world?" You might as well ask "Has any individual any special gift, or any special service?" That our Society had a clear message for the Seventeenth Century, no one can for a moment doubt. Is there any message for us to give to-day?

It does not follow that we have the same message as our fathers. The keynote of Fox's teachings was that there should be a fresh anointing for every service, and that whether the message be old or new it must be a message sent and delivered under a fresh impulse of the Holy Spirit.

Let us consider the attitude of people to-day on the matter of authority. There are two great classes. The one attaches importance to the authority of the church, of tradition, custom or creed. Those who belong to this class are willing to give themselves up to the external guidance of these things, and they compose a large part of the community. There is another and an increasing class who go to the opposite extreme. They do not care for the church, and are wearied with the services, and dislike the preaching. They prefer the Sunday paper in which they can read a sermon if they wish, and many of these go so far as to say that they do not need any religion. Some of the leading men of our country belong to this class. Of the first of these classes, there are some who, while they do not care to give up religion, still wish to enjoy the world and are glad to have their religious duties regulated by authority. Another set honestly realize their weakness and ignorance and find great relief in throwing the responsibility of their faith and practice upon those in whom they have confidence. The many doubts that are being thrown on the interpretation and inspiration of the Bible, and the wrangling of the schools, induce not a few to seek this refuge.

To such as these the Society of Friends has a direct message. It is that Christianity is not a method, it is not a creed, it is not an ordinance. It is power. It is life. You may discuss the theory of electricity and the conductivity of this or that metal. You may describe an ideal lamp. But after all it is the electric current that counts. Creeds, ordinances, organizations and all external accompaniments of religion are in themselves dead forms, but they may be made conductors of spiritual life and aids to it. But they may also be changed as occasion requires, just as iron wire has given place to copper wire, and old lamps to new. The essential thing is life. All else is of comparative unimportance. Therefore do not worry over differences of administration or practice, or creed, or interpretation, or whether this particular book was inspired, or whether it was written by this man or that. The important thing is: Does it speak to your soul? Does it "find you?" Are you helped and enlightened by it? Quakerism points to the indwelling Spirit as the guide, and tells people to prove the truth in their own experience, not by reasoning upon it, not by yielding to others, but by acting upon it themselves. As Christ is listened to and followed, the clouds will break and the sun of righteousness arise. This is the message of Quakerism to the restless souls of the Twentieth Century. Others give it also, but none have the vantage ground of Friends.

To the other class who neglect religion the message is: True religion is of the heart, true worship is in spirit and in truth. Come sit with us in the quiet and let Him speak to you in the silence. Come listen, not to political, economic or philosophical discourses, but it may be to the simple words of a brother or a sister, who may feel called upon to speak words not of man's wisdom, but spoken from a personal experience and from a full heart. Come with us and you will find a democracy where all are upon the same level, and that there is a strength in a union of worshipping souls, and a power through a communion of spirits. In your quieter moments, do you not feel the need of something that is higher than an ethical principle? In rough weather do you not long for a power to lift you above the strain and turmoil of the strenuous life?

To both of these great classes Quakerism says: There is One, even Jesus, who can speak to thy condition. The world and the church still need to get nearer to Christ as the Revealer of the Father, the great Pattern, the Saviour from sin, and the life and strength of them that believe. For this, Quakerism says, there is no need of rite, creed, ceremony or priest. Christ comes to the individual heart, and as he is received, light, life and grace are given. It is essentially the same message under altered conditions as it was in the Seventeenth Century. From their democratic organization, from their freedom from a clerical class, from rite and ceremony, from a formal creed, from the simplicity of their doctrines, no denomination can deliver this message so forcibly or so attractively as the Friends. Shall they let it be taken from them and entrusted to others?

PROFESSOR WILLIAM JAMES ON QUAKERISM.

From the Interchange (Baltimore.)

In connection with the paper on the message to the twentieth century by Prof. Allen C. Thomas, it seems well to give an extract on the subject from Prof. William James' book, "Varieties of Religious Experience." This book has created a deep impression and contains much that is well worthy of thought. In speaking of the fact that religious geniuses are often eccentric, and that they show signs of a certain amount of nervous unbalance, he illustrates his point by George Fox, choosing as an example the well-known occurrence, which Fox himself had difficulty in giving an explanation for, of his walking barefoot through the streets of Litchfield, crying out, "Woe to the bloody city of Litchfield." But Prof. James in order to make his position clear as to the value of Fox's message, says:

"The Quaker religion which he founded is something which it is impossible to overpraise. In a day of shams; it was a religion of veracity rooted in spiritual inwardness, and a return to something more like the original gospel truth than men had ever known in England. So far as our Christian sects to-day are evolving into liberality, they are simply reverting in essence to the position which Fox and the early Quakers so long ago assumed. No one can pretend for a moment that in point of spiritual sagacity and capacity, Fox's mind was unsound. Everyone who confronted him personally, from Oliver Cromwell down to county magistrates and jailers, seems to have acknowledged his superior power."

Words like these in the mouths of Friends might sound exaggerated, but from the pen of a careful and cool professor of psychology in Harvard University they carry the weight of an historical judgment, and are free from any sectarian bias. Have we the courage of our traditions, traditions that have to do, not with formulas or with dead methods, but with the principle that the true course for us is to live in the power of Christ and under his immediate guidance, as the apostles did. The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 34.

THE "SECOND COMING."

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let us, since we are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love.—

I. Thessalonians, v., 8.

Before study of Lesson read I. Thessalonians, v., 1-13; II. Thessalonians, ii., 1-12.

It has already been noted that Paul at first expected the second coming of the Christ and the establishment of the millennium during the life-time of his own generation; and it is equally clear that he taught this in his early ministry. Such teaching is especially clear in the first letter to the church at Thessalonica where he speaks of "we who are living, who survive to the appearing of our Lord" (I. Thessalonians, iv., 15). It is also implied in the Acts (xviii., 7), and referred to in the second letter to the Thessalonians (ii., 5). But, as time went on and many of the believers passed on to the other world, Paul gradually surrendered this belief, substituting for it a spiritual counterpart. He did not give up the idea of the second advent altogether. But it became more and more an unknown and unknowable time, and by degrees ceased to have any vital reality whatever. In its place came the growing conception of the coming of the Christ in the individual heart of those who were faithful (II. Corinthians, v., 16; Romans, viii., 9-11). This new point of view involved a difference in the manner of the second coming as well as in the time of it. The primitive idea, which was at first shared by Paul, was that of a spectacular reappearance of the Master, as a king. He "shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, with the trumpet of God." The faithful "shall be caught up into the clouds," etc. (I. Thessalonians, iv., 16). We find none of these statements in Paul's later epistles.

The earlier conception of the second advent has been made prominent again and yet again in the history of Christianity. To say nothing of earlier cases, there was a very general expectation that the world would end at the close of the thousandth year of our era. Great wars and other disasters have frequently aroused in the minds of individuals, or groups of individuals, a belief that the new era was at hand. A pretended or misinterpreted prediction presented with assurance has sometimes carried conviction; as what was called "Mother Shipton's prophecy," which closed with the lines, "All the world to an end shall come in eighteen hundred and eighty-one." The writer knows of several who were more comfortable when that year gave place to its successor. The Millerite craze has already been referred to in these lessons. A fanatic claimed a special revelation of the exact date when the present order of things should pass away. A great many believed in this prediction, and preparations were made in some places on a large scale for its fulfillment. There is a considerable sect now in America, known as Adventists, which proclaims that the last day is impending. A popular book recently published appends a list of twenty special indications which point to the end of our era and the beginning of the next before 1920.

It need hardly be said that as Friends we have nothing to do with these matters. Like Paul himself, in his later ministry, we must put away childish things—and these speculations are childish, being supported only by the credulous reading into selected portions of Scripture, meanings never intended by the writers. The early church was simply mistaken in its views as to the quality of the "kingdom," as well as concerning the time of its coming. Jesus strove earnestly, throughout his active ministry, to elevate the ideals of his followers beyond the petty glories of an earthly court; but his success was only partial. They could have accepted the glory of a kingdom of brotherly service for a time, but it did not satisfy their longings for success on a large scale.

We have not yet outgrown the narrow and childish view of "the kingdom." We speak of the spread of Christendom when nations, nominally Christian, extend their territories by methods the reverse of Christian. If we speculate at all on the coming of the Christ, it is, in many cases, as a kind of glorified despot. We have yet to learn that a great kingdom may not be a unit in itself, but a summation of a multitude of small kingdoms. Yet so is "the kingdom." It is to be found literally in the minds and hearts of those who welcome there the Christ spirit. Its conquest of all the world will be complete when the lives of all men are ruled by the Christ principle from within; not dictated by laws from without, however correct the acts dictated by such laws.

Now this fact is at once more hopeful and closer to our own lives. If the kingdom can only be ushered in by means of a world conquest by Christian nations; if it can only be extended by adding large territories or large groups of people; then indeed many of us, perhaps most of us, may feel excused for sitting aside and waiting for God to make manifest some great power by which this great work can be accomplished. But when we realize that "the kingdom" is something living and that it grows by accretions; that when the Christ spirit has mastered a soul so that brotherly love rules there, casting out all selfishness, the kingdom grows, how then shall we hope for pardon if we neglect our share of the work? Here are souls in which we individually rule. Have we made them a part of "the kingdom"? They are under our control—it is for us to speak the final word of command, "Thy kingdom come." We may extend the millennial era so much if we will. Have we done it? It will not do to assert that we have accepted the principles of Christianity "so far as they are practicable"; for acceptance of them means that we believe them practicable and intend to live by them. It is not acceptance at all to assert that under ideal conditions we could live by the Christ spirit. So far as we are concerned it is good for now, or it is good for nothing.

We may each add the incalculable area of a soul to the Christ kingdom. We may each enlarge by the inestimable measure of one soul the space in which the second coming is already accomplished. But this is not all. We have command of one soul each; we have also influence over others. Is our influence all given to enlarging the empire of the risen Lord? It cannot be so given if, like the early church, we must measure successes in terms of churches, of acres, of dollars, of splendor and gold. Only when we know that the success of each life lies wholly in bringing it under the control of the power which makes for righteousness, and that the success of "the kingdom" consists in the increase of such souls, can we work effectively for the "second coming" of the Christ.

AN IMPERATIVE DUTY.

THE welfare of the young is so dear to the hearts of parents that they are ready to make almost any sacrifice to assure it.

It seems, however, that one important phase of education is overlooked, in most instances, which, being neglected, opens the door to evils which may and often do lead to the wrecking of the character, or else its re-establishment after years of regret and struggle.

Reference is here made to the neglect of many parents to instruct their boys and girls as to the attitude that one sex should assume to the other through life, and to teach their children the fundamental truths of reproduction and development.

Many parents and teachers hesitate to give such instruction because they are not sure of their own knowledge. Such should inform themselves by means of the excellent literature at hand.

Others think that inasmuch as they have had to stumble along without instruction, their children must learn in the same hard school. These may live to see their error punished in the mistakes of their children.

Others have faith that the very innocence of their children will be their protection. So it will be in many instances, thanks to the goodness of God, who has implanted an innate manliness in the bosom of most men, to which helpless innocence appeals not in vain. But, on the other hand, innocence and ignorance constitute a source of danger and offer a temptation to men of another class. Life, even at the outset, is full of temptations and dangers, which, to be met and avoided, require instruction and warning. Far, far better that this instruction should reach the boy and girl early in life, from the lips of the wise and loving parent or teacher, than from the loose tongues of playmates, servants or business acquaintances. Such knowledge must come to every young person, sooner or later, then let it come from the God-given source—the parent—and let it come early enough to forestall the temptation and the danger. Thus many young people may be saved from great distress of mind and others from errors which entail untold wretchedness.

There are some who declare that such matters should not be spoken of or written about in public. To these we would reply that public discussion would indeed be unnecessary if parents would but do their duty, but as they do not, in the great number of instances, public discussion becomes imperative to rouse them to their duty and to save our young people. Moreover, the way to make an evil flourish is to cover it up and keep the light from it. Besides, when viewed in the right way, there is nothing in nature more holy, more wonderful, more interesting than the consideration of reproduction and growth. Here we are permitted to enter the workshop of the Creator and come to understand something of his ways and how mankind is enabled to work with God in the creation of new beings.

Let us then decide to do these things, under Divine direction:

Keep ourselves pure in heart.

Help parents to inform themselves.

Instruct our children at home and at school.

Disseminate literature.

Hold public meetings.

As way opens, the Superintendent of Purity work in the General Conference is ready to give any assistance in his power to those who desire to enter into this needed work. O. EDWARD JANNEY, Supt.

LOVE.—Love is the very centre of existence, the source, the power, and so the heart which implies love must be nourished first. And it needs three kinds of food. First, it needs friendship. We must love other people in order to keep ourselves in a temperate condition. The selfish man is generally an intemperate man. The man who has true friends and cares for them soon learns, through love, self-control. If I am dealing with a drunkard I always say to him: "Make some good friends who are worthy of your friendship, and then give your attention and interest to conserving them as your friends." Second, the heart needs the companionship of children. Men who have no children, or who do not love to associate with children, are like the man whom Shakespeare declares to be "fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils." The simple, true purity of the little ones warms the heart and beats the passions down. And third, the heart needs God. Love is of God, and the heart is the centre where His very existence in us centres. Without God the heart dries up, or else wanders away in search of ruinous and false pleasures. Ah, how hungry the heart often unconsciously is for its Maker! And the man, not knowing what the craving of his inner nature means, seeks all kinds of dissipation in the vain hope of gaining relief. But all the while he is starving himself, for the heart can be satisfied with nothing less than the nature of the Infinite.

"My heart is pained, nor can it be At rest, till it find rest in thee."

—[Philadelphia Ledger.]

☞

THE fellow who shouts for his college with blind enthusiasm, who takes the part of his college every time against its rival in athletic sports or literary debate, is preparing himself to go out in the world as a shouter for his political party or for his country, right or wrong. Wherever the college spirit becomes a noble reverence for that which all colleges aim at, and a devotion which springs out of gratitude for blessings which have come out of the college which educates one, it is a fitting preparation for that nobler patriotism which reverences the ideals of the country, and loves the flag because it is the emblem of them.—[Christian Register.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, NINTH MONTH 26, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

ADVANCING FRIENDS' PRINCIPLES.

WE have full unity with the Committee for the Advancement of Friends' Principles and hope that the scope of its action may be greatly enlarged; but this committee has but twenty-two members and we earnestly hope that the other five thousand concerned Friends will not feel that having such a committee, all that they need to do is to give it their encouragement and sympathy financially and spiritually. Every Friend who desires the continuance of our religious Society should go to work at once to advance the principles of Friends, and the place for him to begin is generally with himself.

He probably is not quite sure in his own mind what are our most important testimonies, or has not read much of Friends' history, or is not filled to saturation with the Friendly spirit. Then let him read the book of discipline of his yearly meeting more carefully than ever before; if he can get some one to read it with him, so that they can talk it over as they read, so much the better. Let him read the life of one or more eminent Friends, that he may gain a clearer idea of the spiritual forces that work in the human heart; the pocket edition of John Woolman's Journal would be a good one to start with, for a simpler and sweeter soul never lived. And let him read at least a few chapters of Janney's History or George Fox's Journal, to gain an idea of the faith and courage of his ancestors. If he appreciates and enjoys clear-cut logic let him by all means read Barclay's Apology, and he will ever afterwards be able to give a reason for the faith that is in him.

As he becomes filled with enthusiasm for Friendly essentials let him strive to infect some one else, for nothing is more contagious than religious zeal. But just here is where so many fail in their efforts because they aspire to do too much; they want to arouse a whole neighborhood or make over a meeting immediately. It is better to look around for some person near by who is spiritually hungry and strive to feed him; when that one is fed and strengthened he will be ready to feed another. It would be easily possible for each concerned Friend to arouse one person every year who is spiritually indifferent, and a quiet continuance of this individual work would in a very short time result in a perceptible moral and spiritual uplift of the entire nation.

In this individual work the isolated Friend has even greater opportunities than those who are connected with large meetings, if he will but use them; all that is necessary is that he shall continually refresh himself at the fountain and then he will always have abundance with which to refresh others. If he attends other places of worship, and it is generally best that he should do this, let him make it known that he is a Friend and there will be many who will ask him what Friends believe. If he joins a Sabbath school class or a Christian Endeavor Society he will have many opportunities of emphasizing the things that are essential to the religious life, and when the essentials stand out in their true proportions the insignificance of the non-essentials becomes at once apparent.

If there is a long and steep hill to be climbed and a lot of feeble people who must be helped to the top, it will do very little good for two or three who are strong and swift to run up the slope and then call to the others to follow; but if each one of the stronger half takes a step upward and then reaches down and helps one weaker brother to rise to his side, all will by and by reach the hill top.

AN EDUCATED MINISTRY.

So much interest exists in the Society of Friends at large concerning the ministry, that we feel to add to what has already been said upon the subject.

The concern is expressed by our correspondent, in his communication on page 616, and is ever and anon heard in gatherings of Friends, that we ought to provide some means for the broader education of the ministry to meet the demands of an educated people.

The answer to this concern seems to us to have been provided for in the original organic structure of the Society. The education of our members has always been of paramount importance to Friends. By the establishment of schools of all grades, and constant querying as to the opportunities of education open to members, we have endeavored to fit our membership by mental culture for whatever call may afterward await them. Since ministers are chosen from the body of members by no man's election or choice, they can only all be intellectually qualified to be expounders of God's truth, by equipping everybody with such culture and training as shall enable them to respond acceptably to any call for vocal service that may be laid upon them. We have not always lived up to our ideal. We have members whose "school learning" does not adequately fit them for participation in many business concerns of life. We have ministers whose message is tiresomely and disconnectedly presented, and fails in a large measure of its purpose on account of the educational limitations of the speaker; but that is not the fault of our ideal, but because of our failure yet to attain to that universal liberal education in which we believe. Our desire is to have every member educationally trained, and when we speak of an educated membership, the term is inclusive and means, also, an educated ministry.

Special professional training is impossible in a sect that does not recognize a sacerdotal class. It was against a professionally-trained ministry that George Fox and his followers uttered their protest and bade us to "mind the light." We to-day who strive to follow that light to whose guidance Fox first called us, would be, indeed, unfaithful disciples of the faith that God himself prepares and trains His ministers for His service, if we turned backward to the feeling that ministers, like lawyers, need to be trained in special schools. Lawyers interpret and apply laws made by men. It is suitable that they should be trained in the learning of jurists and statesmen to prepare them for the calling they have chosen. Ministers do not elect their vocation, but are called to serve therein. They are interpreters of Divine laws, and can only be trained in knowledge of the things of the Spirit by living lives of spiritual communion with the Father. Readiness of vocal expression is provided for in our general educational plan, but it is not to him who is wise in lore of books, but to him who is of God, that the things of God are clear. The wisdom learned at Gamaliel's feet did not make Paul wise in the means of salvation; the overshadowing light that came upon him on the Damascus journey was his teacher.

The feeling that sufficient opportunity has hitherto not existed among us for instruction in the history of religious peoples, and the ethical import of such history and movements in the past, has given rise to the establishment of a chair of Biblical History at Swarthmore and the effort to organize summer assemblies for the study of religious topics. These places cannot have a selected body of ministers for training, for no man knows the law of selection, but they broaden the intelligence of the entire body of our people, and serve to turn the thoughts and interest of students toward religious contemplation, and from this may naturally develop intelligent ministerial service.

It is not said, "Well done, good and successful servant," but "Well done, good and faithful servant."

A PERMANENT settlement of Friends for religious study will open on the 13th of Tenth month at Woodbrooke, Selly Oak, near Birmingham, England, where the Summer School of Friends was held this year. Dr. J. Rendel Harris, recently of Cambridge University, who is well-known in America, having taught at Haverford College and at the Johns Hopkins University, is to have charge of the school as Director of Studies. Dr. Harris recently received a call from the Queen of Holland to the chair of New Testament studies in the University of Leyden, the chair once occupied by Erasmus, but declined it on account of his interest in the work among Friends. Joshua and Isabella Rowntree will act as Wardens of the School for the first term. An announcement published as a supplement of the London Friend says:

Whilst preference will be given to Friends coming for longer periods, facilities will be offered, when possible, for shorter visits, ranging from a week upwards. Ample notice should be given.

It is hoped with the minimum of regulations to combine simplicity of organization, with the best possible help for the differing needs of residents.

Woodbrooke is within easy reach of several meetings for worship, with their many dependent activities, and offers special opportunities for the investigation of Adult School and social work.

It is earnestly desired that an enrichment of the soul, an increase of spiritual power and ability for service, may be the first fruits of the Settlement.

It is important that the names and addresses of intending Students should be forwarded as soon as may be to the Local Secretary, John H. Barlow, Selly Oak, near Birmingham, together with some intimation as to any course of study they may desire. This will assist the arrangements which will now be entered upon for Lectures, Classes, and Private Study.

The Fee will be 25s. per week.

It is proposed, as the accommodation permits, to open Woodbrooke to others who, though not Friends, are yet in general sympathy with the aims and purposes of the Settlement as conducted by Friends.

BIRTHS.

BRINTON.—At Fontella, Virginia, Seventh month 1st, 1903, to William H. and Ella P. Thomas Brinton, a daughter, who is named Elizabeth Conard Brinton.

PALMER.—At Moorestown, N. J., Ninth month 19th, 1903, to George Martin and Marian Rogers Palmer, a son, who is named Roger Lewis Palmer.

DEATHS.

BARLOW.—Maria L. Barlow, at the home of her son, at Blue Rapids, Kansas, Eighth month 18th, 1903, aged 84 years.

She was born at Washington, Dutchess county, New York, and was the only daughter of Jacob and Amy Clement Haight. Her parents were members of the Society of Friends, and she was brought up a Friend and always remained one. Her education was received at the Friends' school at Nine Partners. In 1841 she was united in marriage to James P. Barlow, at Washington, N. Y. They lived three years in New York City, and then made their home at "Sully," Fairfax county, Virginia. The plantation, Sully, was very near Chantilly, and only a few miles from Centreville and the famous Bull Run battle fields beyond; and it was her sorrowful privilege to minister to the wounded of both armies. In 1872 they moved to Blue Rapids, Kansas. Her husband died in 1879. Seven years ago she was so severely injured by a fall that for a time her life was despaired of, but of late years, although nearly helpless and unable to read, she was free from all bodily suffering, and was interested in the events of the day and the welfare of her family and friends up to the moment of her death, which came very suddenly from hemorrhage of the lungs. She bore the long period of her partial helplessness with cheerful patience, sustained by her Christian faith. She left no near relatives except her son and grandson, but beside her family many friends will mourn her loss.

BIRDSALL.—At Purcellville, Virginia. Eighth month 15th 1903. R. Hannah, wife of David H. Birdsall, and daughter of the late John and Ruth Hannah Smith in her 57th year.

She was a life-long member of the Society of Friends, and was a regular and faithful attender of meetings. She was a devoted wife and mother, and will be greatly missed in her family, as well as in the community.

BROWN.—Sarah Mullin Brown was born the 10th day of First month, 1831; departed this life the 24th day of Eighth month, 1903, aged 72 years; a member of Westfield, Ohio, Monthly Meeting.

She was the daughter of Samuel and Mary Ann Mullin, and was the fourth of a family of ten children, four of whom survive her. She was united in marriage to barclay Brown, the 7th day of Third month, 1849, in the Friends Meeting-house at Westfield, Ohio. To this union were born five children, four of whom survive her. Three sons, Levi, Samuel, and William, and one daughter, Elizabeth Campbell, one son having died in infancy. The husband also remains to mourn the loss of a loving, devoted wife, who for fifty-four years has shared with him his joys and sorrows.

She accepted with Christian submission a lingering illness of many months and was an example of patience and fortitude to the end. During the last few weeks of her life she realized that the end was drawing near and expressed a cheerful willingness to yield to the will of Him who doeth all things well. Although a sufferer for many years, life meant much to her, and while she felt it would be pleasant to remain a few more years with her many friends and dear ones who so tenderly loved and cherished her, she said: "If God wills it otherwise I am ready at any time."

COFFIN.—At Indianapolis, Indiana, Lydia B. Coffin, widow of the late Robert Coffin, in the 87th year of her age; a member of New York Monthly Meeting.

EATON.—On the 21st of Ninth month, Julia A. Eaton, daughter of the late Sidney Averill and Elmira, his wife in the 61st year of her age.

HADLEY.—Eighth month 7th 1903 at the home of her son-in-law Morris Lancaster, in Chicago, Illinois. Anna Hadley, daughter of William and Martha Nixon, aged 78 years; a member of Waynesville Monthly Meeting, Ohio.

Her home was near Clarksville, Ohio, where she was laid to rest beside her husband on the 6th. She was born in Chester county Pa., Third month 20th 1824; was the youngest of seven sisters, and the last one summoned to the higher life. Her wonted vivacity and cheerful disposition had endeared her to many friends.

MERRITT.—In Harveysburg, Ohio, Seventeenth month 10th 1903, Josiah Clement Merritt, aged nearly 74 years.

He was born in Belmont county, Ohio, and was an active worker in another branch of Friends, but after his marriage with Rebecca Fravel he was in the habit of attending meetings with her. He had been in feeble health for some time and in Second month last he was stricken with paralysis, so that he lost his speech entirely. He bore his suffering patiently and with clear mind and firm faith passed on to his reward above. During his life-time the poor and afflicted always had his sympathy and kind assistance. Shortly before his death he left in writing an account of his Christian experience and a clear testimony of his acceptance with God.

STARR.—At Battle Creek Sanitarium, Michigan, Eighth month 10th 1903, in his 62d year, Benjamin Starr, of Richmond, Indiana, youngest son of the late Charles West and Elizabeth Wilson Starr.

TEMPLE.—After an illness of four weeks Elizabeth Sharpless Worrall Temple, widow of the late Thomas B. Temple of Uwharrie township, Chester county Pa., who died over 25 years ago in Lionville), on First-day morning, Ninth month 13th, 1903, aged 83 years, at the home of her son-in-law, Richard J. Baldwin, Chadd's Ford, Pa.

She was a descendant of John Sharpless, the emigrant from England in 1662, and John Worrall from England in 1682, and a daughter of the late Peter and Mary Sharpless Worrall, of Middletown township, Delaware county, where all her childhood was spent until she married, in her 19th year, Thomas B. Temple, of Chester county. She had a birthright membership in the Society of Friends, being at her death a member of Concord Meeting, and had always a deeply interested feeling, though in a quiet, mild way, in the work of its members.

She was in perfect, rugged health up to within about four years ago, when a severe attack of grip left her with her eyesight impaired. She was a cheery woman, with keen discernment and marked characteristics of a highly elevating nature. Her frequent expression was: "Love, love one another; be loving." She leaves to survive her three daughters and a son—Mary W. Smith, Burlington, N. J.; Sarah W. (Temple) Baldwin, and Elizabeth Lewis Temple, Chadd's Ford, Pa.; John Worrall Temple, Lionville, Pa., and several grand-children, among whom are two children of a deceased daughter, Anna B. (Temple) Marshall, living in Maryland.

THOMAS.—At Norristown "Friends' Boarding Home," Ninth month 15th, 1903, Mary M., widow of Charles Thomas, in her 87th year; a minister of Gwynedd Monthly Meeting.

Interment at Valley Friends' burying-ground on the 18th instant.

WOOD.—On Eighth month 31st, 1903, Lydia Ann Wood, at the home of her brother, Pemberton Wood, near Union Bridge, Maryland, aged about 77 years. She was a member of Pipe Creek Monthly Meeting, and lived a quiet, retired life.

During the late Civil War she was ever ready to make comfortable and prepare meals for the many refugees from Virginia, who sought the home she then occupied. For twelve years she suffered from a dislocated hip, the pain of which she endured with resignation to the will of the Heavenly Father. "Patient when favors were denied, and pleased with favors given."

CORRESPONDENCE.

EDGERS FRIENDS INTELLIGENCER:

THE editorial in issue Eighth month 8th, regarding "The Decline of the Ministry," touches upon a subject that has interested many in our Society.

It seems to me much remains for us to do, to provide some way to educate a ministry; the demands of an educated people are certainly along the lines of educated "Food" intelligently presented.

That God is a real person, and not only a matter of faith, seems to me to be the key-note to the whole situation. If we recognize that while "His is a spirit," he is also a real God and that we are by his wise provision, his adopted children, then as real children we can come to a real Father.

Our Father is a practical person, as shown in his wonderful practical creations, therefore our work must be practical to be acceptable, successful.

Should one feel called upon to become a doctor, lawyer, or to fill any other position in life we all recognize the importance of preparation, of study. The cook must be trained before the meal is prepared and is in condition to be served. How then will we provide a means to this end? is a practical question.

I would suggest the appointing of a committee of Friends by each monthly meeting who should be authorized to receive all written testimonies and supplement this committee by appointing at least two readers for each meeting-house whose duty it shall be to read suitable writings at convenient periods.

1st. My thought is that many of our Society have at some quiet moment inspired thoughts which when written and given to the world may prove the stepping stone to a better life.

2d. That many do not feel able to give mental thought to their inspirations or may lack the courage to properly express themselves.

It seems to me that St. Paul has set us the example to write, which if adopted will in a measure remove all complaints about silent meetings and prove a preparation for the higher calling of the ministry.

Silent meetings are like "make believe" meals of the child and cannot satisfy the hungry soul and those who seek comfort and righteousness.

These thoughts I give you in the name of my Master whose example we are called to follow.

WILLIAM J. MACWATERS.

[Comment on one topic introduced by our correspondent, the education of the ministry, will be found in our editorial column. In a later issue we shall have a word on silent meetings.—EDITORS.]

SOCIETY NOTES.

THE Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit the smaller meetings will attend:

Ninth month 27th, Merion Meeting at 10.30 a. m.; Tenth month 11th, Reading Meeting at 11 a. m.; Tenth month 18th, appointed meeting at Radnor, at 3 p. m.; Eleventh month 1st, appointed meeting at Haverford, at 3 p. m.; Eleventh month 8th, Schuylkill Meeting at 10.30 a. m.; Eleventh month 15th, Valley Meeting at 10 a. m.

Due notice of each of these meetings will be given in the "Calendar of Events of Interest to Friends."

The Centennial of the establishing of Miami Monthly Meeting is to be commemorated by both branches of Friends on Tenth month 16th and 17th, 1903. A most interesting program has been arranged.

All Friends are cordially invited to be present but especially those who were at one time members here or whose ancestors were identified with this meeting. All wishing to attend should notify Wm. T. Frame, Waynesville, Ohio, chairman of reception committee. Meals will be furnished at twenty cents each and lodging provided at like rates. Reduced railroad rates are being arranged.

LAURA DUNHAM, Sec'y.

At the Chicago Executive Meeting of Friends, Ninth month 20th, 1903, were several visiting Friends from a distance, among them Isaac Wilson, of Canada, who spoke, using the text, "The Kingdom of Heaven is Within." He reminded us that if we have the love of God in the heart, we have it everywhere, if not in the heart we have it nowhere. There will be a portion of God's holy design unimproved if we do not awaken to the call to be up and "about our Father's business."

M. E. V.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE MINISTRY.

THE articles which have appeared recently in the INTELLIGENCER, relating to the ministry, have no doubt awakened in many minds a train of thoughts, which, were it all written for publication, would perhaps present as many different ideas as there were writers. This, I doubt not, would prove very helpful to all of us by awakening in each one some new thought, although the ideas expressed might differ very essentially from our own.

It is perhaps true, that among Friends the tendency toward silent meetings is greater now than it has ever been before, and wholly from the fact that those who are qualified to appear in public are fast passing from among us, and few are coming forward to take their places.

There is an axiom which says: "The stream can not be more pure than the fountain from which it flows," and its corollary, "The fountain cannot flow, without, to a greater or lesser degree, influencing the stream into which it flows," is equally true. Let us consider the latter statement first.

The devout Christian who believes in plitically in "God teaching His people Himself," and who strives earnestly and at all times to understand and follow this teaching, is comparable to the stream into which this Great Fountain of Light and Life is constantly pouring its pure waters, and as the influence of this Fountain mingles from day to day with that which flows from other sources, we may notice a change and as this change is heeded we can discern the effect upon its onward course. With each individual then lies the power to aid or hinder the operation of the Divine influence within the soul, and each impulse to aid is to my mind, a small inspiration, as Divine in its character as any which it is possible for the human being to experience, differing only in depth, as the spiritual understanding is capable of receiving.

One of the injunctions to the early Friends was "Mind the Light." What is minding the Light? The Light is the consciousness or understanding which comes to that part of man which controls his moral and spiritual life, giving, if heeded, the feeling of depression if he has done something wrong, or the feeling of rest, joy, and contentment if he has done right. It is this which makes it possible for one to have a feeling of good will toward all mankind, and stimulates in all effort to forward the cause of Christianity.

This brings us then to the work of the ministry. There are, I believe, few who have ever experienced this feeling of rest or joy, who did not, in a measure, wish to share it with those around them, and have from a sense of awe, refrained from so doing. To my mind this is one of the errors into which we as a Society have fallen.

I feel it right, just here, to add a word of explanation and caution in regard to public utterances in a religious gathering. To a great degree, I believe, we are each individually responsible for what we may feel or say on occasions of this kind, and it is very necessary that each one should carefully consider, first, his own understanding of what he feels called upon to say, and second, whether he can consistently say that which he feels. That effort is worse than wasted, if one does not understand what he is trying to convey to others, and he who expresses that which by his life and actions he contradicts, makes a mockery of his profession.

That the inspiration which is necessary to fit one for the vocal ministry should be of a different and more supernatural kind than that which inspires to all good and noble acts, seems to me to indicate a belief in a God of a dual purpose. "The same fountain cannot pour forth both bitter water and sweet," neither can the inspiration of the Creator be of more than one character. He then who feels within him the workings of this uplifting power, which brings contentment and peace to the soul, and who can testify from a living experience that it is not a fleeting fancy, is surely "Divinely" inspired, and in the words of Jesus is commanded, "Freely have ye received; freely give."

Let us now consider the first part of our statement. If we believe this, and I think we all do, then we must also believe that any vocal expression from one who has experienced this feeling of strength, will have a tendency for good with others, and in the measure of faithfulness, with which that one responds to the Divine requirements, that much deeper will be the inspiration for the next call to service. Here, however, comes the objection, that we are opening the way to expressions which are not truly inspired, but come from the action of the creaturely will. That may be

HUNDRETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF EASTLAND PREPARATIVE MEETING.

Near Little Britain, Lancaster county, Pa.

An inspiring subject, a perfect day and a grove of fine old white oaks in which to meet, combined to make the centennial exercises at Eastland, Pa., a day to be remembered by all who were present.

For the better accommodation of the expected company, a stand and seats were provided in the grove. On the front of the stand, in gilt letters on a true and it is something which should be guarded against. How this may be done is not my purpose in this paper to discuss, but to suggest a manner in which the silent meeting may be overcome, and perhaps to encourage some earnest seeker after truth to be faithful to the first small promptings of the Spirit, that in the end may lead to a plenteous harvest.

EASTLAND FRIENDS' MEETING-HOUSE, BUILT 1803.

Philadelphia.

ALBERT H. JOHNSON.

BETTER is a little with righteousness than great revenues without right.—[Bible.]

»»

We are happier than we know, just as we are healthier than we know, and, let us hope, wiser and better than we know.

»»

THE will of God will be done; but, oh, the unspeakable loss for us if we have missed our opportunity of doing it!—[Brooke Foss Westcott.]

white ground, were the dates 1803 and 1903, while a few flowers and plants were used with fine effect in simple decorations, which won praise from all.

Under these old oaks the speakers drew inspiration from nature. The meeting-house in front and the graveyard to the right were used with good effect by some of them in illustrating scenes and memories of the long ago. The thought of the committee in making up the program was to have the essential principles of Friends clearly and forcibly presented, with such historic and personal reminiscences as we might be able to get.

Henry W. Wilbur, Edwin R. Buffington, and Mary Heald Way were at their best as exponents of Quakerism.

The opening address was made by Robert K. Wood, whose great-great-grandfather, Joseph Wood, married to Catherine Day, settled within the limits of this meeting 140 years ago.

The historical sketch was prepared by Howard Coates. The First-day school was represented by Eva Lynch, who recited with good effect, "The Quaker Meeting." Charles S. Coates read a poem historic and descriptive of Eastland, written some thirty years ago by William M. Way, who sat in the audience. The admirable address of Edwin R. Buffington closed the morning session.

The attendance of about 600 was doubled when the meeting was called to order at 2 p. m. Elizabeth L. Brinton, of Oxford, read her personal and family reminiscences. Her mother, Lydia Pierce, attended school here 80 years ago, as she did at a later period the public school near by. Henry W. Wilbur then spoke on "The Friend in the Present-day World," showing that the world has not outgrown the need of the Friendly principles and thought in the social and business relations. Emma Brown Harlan, of Hoquiam, Washington, whose young life was spent here, sent a paper descriptive of the meeting of 60 years ago, with some nicely drawn character sketches of the members, old and young, of that time. A few of her associates thus mentioned were seated on the platform during the reading, which was finely done by Walter Wood. The program was closed by Mary H. Way, in her happy, yet forceful style. The meeting closed with a pleasurable feeling with all and the thought expressed from the stand,

"We thank Thee for the era done
And trust Thee for the opening one."

HOWARD COATES.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF EASTLAND MEETING.

In the early part of the year 1796 a number of the Friends that now constitute said meeting united in solid conference in requesting liberty of Nottingham Monthly Meeting to hold meetings for worship on First- and Fourth-days of the week in the school-house near this place. After mature deliberation this was allowed of by said meeting, and established by Western Quarterly Meeting. After which a suitable house was built on land conveyed by Henry Reynolds and Reuben Reynolds for that purpose, by deed dated first of Tenth month, 1798. Trustees named were James Harlan, Henry Reynolds, Jr., and Abner Brown.

In 1802 a further request was made for the liberty of holding a Preparative Meeting, which was presented to Nottingham Monthly Meeting held 26th of Fifth month. A committee was appointed to investigate, which reported 25th of Ninth month, in favor of granting said request, which the meeting approved.

The Quarterly Meeting held 21st of Second month, 1803, also approved, after which the Monthly Meeting made minute as follows, under date of 26th of Second month, 1803:

"The representatives to the Quarterly Meeting report that they all attended and inform that the Quarterly Meeting has allowed the request of Friends of Eastland, meeting to be held the second Fourth-day in each month.

"As a committee to attend the opening session in next month, Third month 9th, we appoint Robert Brown, George Churchman, Jr., Jesse Pugh, Joseph Richardson, John Webster, Joshua Brown, Thomas Waring and Thomas Richards."

Within the first year or so I find the names of three men whom I knew as a boy. They were Joseph Paxson, who married Hannah, a daughter of James Harlan; Cyrus Milner, whose wife was Sarah Carter, an aunt of Mercy M. Wood; and David Cope, who was reported as absenting himself from our meeting and joining the Methodists. In 1804 Nathan Pyle, who was a member by conviction, married Grace Cope, daughter of David and Margaret Cope, and sister of the above David, and in 1807 they removed to Deer Creek Monthly Meeting. The Pyles and Harrys, of that meeting, are of their descendants.

George Mason moved to Nottingham in 1807 and I presume that the family there of that name are of his descendants. Samuel Coale, who had a tanyard on the property now owned by James Wood, married a Mason. Later they went West where one, at least, of their sons is prominent in Society affairs. John Kinsey and his sons, Abel and Seth, were prominent in business affairs as well and were well-known as workers in iron at Kinseyville.

Tradition saith that in one of those days a visiting minister remarked that the Friends sitting in the gallery at Eastland were the finest-looking company of men and women to be seen in any meeting. Perhaps they were "Quakers of the olden time, so noble, grand, and true," as portrayed by Whittier, and their mantles do not fit us, leastways we do not sit in the gallery any more.

In 1828 a few of the members left the fold. Few as they were in numbers they disowned the others as is proven by "testimonies," shown me by Emily Montgomery, a granddaughter of Thomas Wood.

Later the agitation of the slavery question, which alienated society, severed the church and almost shattered the State, grew quite heated at times. On one occasion the use of the meeting-house was granted for an anti-slavery meeting. But an old Friend solid in avoirdupois and strong in feeling, closed the house, put out the fire, and with the aid of some persons, not members, stood guard over the door. The meeting was adjourned to the tannery nearby, while Morris Reynolds and his riotous gang held high carnival around the meeting-house. Those only who were actors in that great drama can know how one's feelings are stirred by their rehearsal, and I watched with interest the light in the eye of the old Friend who recently told me of her experience and the scenes of that day 59 years ago. A public hall was then built.

The fulling mill of Joseph Wood was the oldest of the neighborhood industries of which I have any account. Dr. Peeples informs me that his grandfather worked there before buying the George Jenkins farm in 1797. John Kinsey and sons, as workers in iron at Kinseyville, were capable and successful in their line. The nails used building this house were made by them and are something of a curiosity. Samuel Carter had a grist mill, and on the farm of Fred and Howard Reynolds there was a saw mill where the lumber was sawed for the meeting-house; also a pottery.

In 1812 to 1816 Jacob Kirk erected the dwelling, store and mill at Kirk's Mills. And in 1814 the post-office was established with Jacob Kirk as postmaster and he with his sons, Levi and Lewis, have held the appointment for 89 years, a record hard to equal. Lewis has the commission issued to his father as postmaster in 1814, signed by Return Jonathan Strong. By the way, how many of you can tell why he was given such a name? Timothy Kirk had previously built a clover mill lower down the stream, long known as the lower mill. I remember going to the cider mill 52 years ago.

So far as I know, William M. Way is our only recommended minister. Others there were who spoke to us and acceptably, too—Elwood Brown and Margaret Griest. She and her good man, William, were heads of the meeting in my day. He, a wheelwright, and she, a housewife, who like Paul plied her vocation daily and ministered to our spiritual needs on the Sabbath, in all humility and patience, little dreaming that their grandson would come to be so prominent in politics in Lancaster county.

HOWARD COATES.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

A MAINE WOODS INCIDENT.

THE circumstances under which it has been the good fortune of my wife and myself to spend our vacation days have been so full of interest and pleasure, that we venture to submit the following incident (one of many) with the hope it may prove interesting to others also.

Our camp is situated on the Black Pond, in the very heart of the Maine woods, reached only by a two days' journey in canoes from Mt. Kinco on Moosehead Lake, and is surrounded in every direction by dense woods—the home of the moose and deer.

Tramp as quietly as one will through the woods it is next to impossible not to occasionally step upon a dead twig, the cracking of which is sure to reach the keen ear of the deer, and they are off before one can catch more than a glimpse of their white tails.

Finding this to be our case, we selected a mossy spot in the forest up on the highland some half mile from camp, where it was open enough to see through the woods some 30 or 40 yards in all directions. Here we spread our blankets, the top one being a bright-colored Mexican serape and made ourselves comfortable to await results. The forest was beautiful with a carpet of perfectly-harmonizing green and brown, so soft and velvety that we could trace in many places the footprints of the deer. Numerous small spruce and balsam trees, with tall ferns, moss-covered fallen trees, and now and then the stump of a fine old white pine which had been lumbered years ago formed more or less of a screen about us; although not dense enough to obstruct our view, it made our presence less pronounced. The straight smooth trunks of the balsam, the scaly spruce, the moss and lichen-covered silver maple, the curving, furrowed cedar, the white birch with its always useful bark, the ash with its light-colored trunk and towering light-green top, and an occasional maple, whose frost-touched leaves settled down as brilliant figures in the velvet carpet, rose about us, and made this an ideal home for the deer. It was joy enough to sit here quietly trying to store up memories of this full, free, natural life to help along over some of the more prosaic days when duties weigh heavy, but more was in store for us.

Quietness seems to reach its fulness here in the woods, and except for the gentle rustle of the tree tops in the light air and the occasional scolding of a passing squirrel, or the low twitter of birds, all is silence. The sound of soft footsteps attracted our attention, and to our right, not more than thirty feet distant, we saw a fine large doe. So suddenly did she appear we are inclined to believe she had been napping in the very spot in which she was then standing.

The bright colors of our blanket soon caught her eye and such a picture she made we shall not soon forget. For an instant she stood perfectly motionless, her eyes intently fixed upon us, then moved a step or two toward us for a better view. We could now see very clearly the beautiful lines of the body, the graceful curve of the shapely neck, the bright sparkle of the eye, and the keen alertness of the raised head, with ears erect and forward to catch every sound, but still she was in doubt. The inquisitiveness of the deer is very great and she was apparently not alarmed, but gave every indication of alertness and was ready for instantaneous action. Failing to discover our identity she adopted more radical methods, determined to scare us into action, whereupon she stamped first lightly upon the ground with her fore feet, then more and more heavily, finally stamping and whistling through her nose simultaneously. This she continued some six or seven minutes until we found our more or less cramped positions unbearable, and by our moving she became alarmed and bounded off into the more dense woods. We imagined this would be the last we should see of her, so we walked to the spot where she had been to find out whether or no she had been napping there. We could not be sure on this point, but looking ahead of us we saw the same deer quietly feeding on the grass which grew in a marshy place, and presently two other does came into view, one of which soon discovered our presence, as she seemed more keenly sensitive, owing to the fact that she was probably the mother of a spotted fawn which we had not previously seen, but now with a bound and a whistle the mother doe retreated up the logging road and after her the three other deer, a sight which thrilled our hearts with a deep joy.

PROHIBITION is rapidly spreading over the South, and the saloon is steadily diminishing in numbers. While New York State has 34,000 saloons, the combined States south of Mason and Dixon's line have but 27,000.—[American Coöperator.]

THERE was a strike of street railway employes at Richmond, Va. Its population is 85,050. The strike lasted just sixty-nine days and is estimated to have cost the street car company $125,000; the strikers, in loss of wages, $50,000; the State, for troops to maintain order, $75,000, and the city for special police, etc., $5000. One man was killed by soldiers. One motor-man was fatally stabbed by another, while scores of persons have been more or less seriously injured. At this rate a strike is a pretty expensive matter.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL UNION, SALEM, N. J.—An interesting meeting of Salem First-day School Union was held at Salem Ninth month 12th, 1903. Thirty delegates had been appointed and twenty-six of them were present, representing all of our six schools.

Reports from the schools show that they are now all open with prospects of a year of good work before them.

Dr. Jesse H. Holmes, of Swarthmore, was present by invitation to address us upon "How can we develop interest in Bible study?" He said that teachers ought first to know just what they start out to do in First-day school teaching. They should try not only to develop good character in the pupil, but to bring about his conversion, meaning by conversion the giving up of self, the losing one's life in order to find it—the development of a selfless character. We teach the Bible because it is the best book for this purpose. We should not seek alone to interest the pupils, even in the Bible, for being interested does not always prove that the pupil is receiving the greatest benefit. We should apply pedagogical principles in First-day school teaching as well as in teaching in other schools. We must first find the point of contact, start from where the pupil is, but not stop there. We must consider the age of the pupil, giving stories, chiefly from the Bible, to the little folks up to the age of ten, and not try too hard to drive in the moral. Next take up the biographical history of the Bible and the lessons which come from it. The history of heroes will suit this age, and will be found in the history of the Hebrews taken biographically. It was the opinion of the speaker that we should not eliminate the gory combats from these stories, as he does not think hearing of them will of necessity hurt the pupil's peace principles as he grows older.

In the next grade take up the great ethical questions with the aim of conversion. Between, say, fifteen and twenty years of age, is the time to deal with the great problems of life. We must help the young people to get the whip hand over themselves, and for this purpose the writings of the Hebrew prophets should be used.

In the adult classes apply the lessons we have been learning to the conduct of our daily lives. Take up minutely the study of the various books of the Bible, and the history of other religions as well.

In view of this plan of study, lessons for all classes upon the same text cannot properly be prepared.

Dr. Holmes was listened to with earnest attention, and our thanks are due to him for so clearly explaining to us his theories concerning the best way to develop interest in Bible study.

At noon the large number of delegates and others were entertained at a bountiful luncheon by the Salem Friends, and at 2 o'clock the meeting again convened.

Following beautiful recitations by the children three papers were upon—first, "What preparation would you recommend for the First-day school teacher?" and second, "What preparation would you recommend for the First-day school pupil?"

The papers contained suggestions which should be very helpful to us.

Near the hour of four the Union adjourned to meet again at Mickleton, the second Seventh-day in Fourth month, 1904.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.—On the evening of the 17th of Ninth month the Young Friends' Association met at the home of Elizabeth Kinsey. The president, Frank Ball, opened the meeting with a Scripture reading, Mark, 12th chapter.

After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, Sada M. Johnson read from Friends' Journal, "Attendance of Meetings." Annie B. Roberts read from same paper, "A Tuned Receiver." A poem was read by Lizzie M. Strawn entitled, "The Village Weaver." Martha A. Johnson recited "Be Pleasant." Hannah M. Penrose read "How Shall we Know?" This concluded the literary program.

We were pleased to have with us several Friends from Mt. Holly, who gave us an interesting account of their Association, after which some very good sentiments were given, and the meeting adjourned to meet the 15th of Tenth month at the home of Milton and Martha Johnson. A. B. R., Cor. Sec.

SOLEBURY, PA.—The first meeting for the year of the Solebury Young Friends' Association was held on First-day Ninth month 12th, 1903, in the meeting house. After a short Scripture reading by the President the minutes were read and approved. Eastburn Reeder, reporting History, read an article on John Jackson, which recalled some of his difficulties with Friends of his time as a preacher. Joseph Simpson and John Williams spoke of having heard him in our meeting, and it was proposed by one of our members that we make a practice of having biographical sketches of such worthy men at our meetings. This man was of the belief that the Crucifixion of the Master did not atone for the sins of people at all, in the way in which churchmen say, and regrets the complacent fashion in which men rely on the compassion of the Saviour. This is an interesting opinion and not agreeable to some minds now. The section of Current Topics was reported by Hannah Lownes, with notes of the Pope's accession and Mt. Pelee's new phenomenon. George Roberts gave a reading from Hamlin Garland, and Moore Price presented interesting figures from the census, the report of which has just been published. Seth Walton, in speaking on the question of lynching, commended Justice Brewer's proposal that there be no appeal in such cases. The meeting was well attended.

C. PRICE, Sec.

MANSFIELD, N. J.—The Young Friends' Association met Ninth month 7th, at the home of Franklin S. and Elizabeth Zelley with an unusual attendance. Thomas Bunting, the Vice-President, called the meeting to order and read the 3d chapter of John. After the reading of the minutes, which were approved, the executive committee reported.

Discipline was read by Martha Boune: "Parents and Children." Thomas Bunting gave an account of the life of Robert Barclay.

The question, "What instances in the Society of Friends are similar to Paul's conversion?" was answered. Franklin S. Zelley said, "Paul traveled for the good of the people. He was converted to be a Christian and then tried to convert others. He traveled like our ministers to do good and not for pay. 'Freely given and freely received.' Living as he did in the first century, he had much to contend with, as did the Quakers about two hundred years ago. He could not make much headway. Paul and the early Quakers tried to keep strictly to the Golden Rule."

Peter E. Harvey said, "Paul converted from the 'Word of God'; so do our ministers." Many other good remarks were given.

Bessie E. Bunting's Current Topics were interesting and carefully collected. Anna C. Scott recited "Planned." A reading was given by S. Anna Biddle entitled, "Speak Gently." The next meeting will be held at the home of Anna and Thomas Bunting, on Tenth month 10th.

MABELLE E. HARVEY, Sec.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

DR. EDWARD CARY RUSHMORE, a member of New York Monthly Meeting, and a graduate of Swarthmore College, was thrown over an embankment fifty feet high on account of the failure of the brakes to hold his automobile, on Fifth-day of last week. He was severely injured and his condition is still critical, but late advices indicate that the attending physicians are hopeful of his recovery. His niece, Cornelia Herrick, who occupied the car with him, was instantly killed.

Isaac Roberts, the present cashier of the Tradesmen's National Bank of Conshohocken, Pa., has been selected as cashier of the re-organized Doylestown National Bank.

GOVERNMENT experiments in raising cotton in Ceylon cover 150 acres near the ancient capital of the island.

LITERARY NOTES.

ADMIRERS of Lloyd Mifflin's sonnets will be pleased to know that at the recent semi-centennial of Franklin and Marshall College, the poet was made a Litt.D. for "services in the cause of literature and for conspicuous merit among the literary men of the present day." These lines, from the stately Ode delivered by Lloyd Mifflin on this occasion, may well ring out true and strong in an age when even in colleges of pure ideals the corrupting power of gold is allowed to debase the standards of right:—

"Equip thy youth with rugged virtues high,
Not with that apathy the indifferent wear
Fatal to man and state,
But anchored, resolute to do and dare,
Unpurchasable of nerve and deed,
Men simply great."

A new book of poems by Lloyd Mifflin, "Castilian Days," is in press. It will be issued simultaneously in London and New York. The poet is at present engaged upon his "Collected Sonnets," three hundred and fifty in number.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

A BIRTHDAY.

Another year has added to thy crown
Experience—that wondrous, changing gem;
Another tiny furrow to the frown,
An added ripple where thy laugh has been!
And in the shining gem the year has set
In thy life's crown, behold a wondrous show,
For lights and colors gleam, shades come and go—
They were the scenes thy year may not forget!

The silver threads are weaving in thy hair—
Fit setting to time's one great gem of cost;
But youth, alas! sweet youth so dear and fair,
Its love and faith and innocence are lost!
Instead—the crown that jewels with the years,
When youth and wisdom lend their matchless light,
Look thou beyond, above past joys and fears—
May each year grace Life's crown with jewels bright!
SARAH PALMER BYRNES.

TOWARD THE LIGHT.

I ASKED the roses, as they grew
Richer and lovelier in their hue,
What made their tints so rich and bright;
They answered, "Looking toward the light."
Ah, secret dear; sad heart of mine,
God meant my life to be like thine—
Radiant with heavenly beauty bright,
By simply looking toward the light.

—Sunday School Times.

The Disappearing Race.

INCLUDING the Caddos and remnants of the Delawares, and a few other tribes, the population of the Wichitas numbers less than one thousand. They differ from other tribes in the building of their grass houses, which, not being movable like the ordinary teepee, would indicate that the Wichitas are more inclined to a settled home life than other tribes. In fact, the Wichitas are one of the most advanced of the Indian tribes in Oklahoma. For many years they have had their peach orchards, and when the crop was good, sold their peaches to white people and others. They have had their small fields of corn and other crops. Some have raised cattle. Their friendliness for civilized ways is further seen in the readiness with which they have sent their children to Eastern schools. Compared with many other tribes they are small in stature. They are peaceable, and, in a measure, industrious, and if treated rightly would make good citizens of the future State of Oklahoma.—[City and State.]

Our Nation's Capitals.

How many readers could tell off-hand the number of national capitals this country's Congress has sat in, and give the names? Not many, probably. Well, there have been nine of them—Washington, D. C.; Baltimore and Annapolis, in Maryland; Trenton and Princeton, in New Jersey; Philadelphia, Lancaster and York, in Pennsylvania, and New York city.

The first session of the Continental Congress was held in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, September 5th, 1774. Thereafter the American Congress was for a long time something like the Philippine Congress while the latter was dodging the American troops—and for much the same reason. Fearing to remain in Philadelphia after the defeat on Long Island, Congress went to Baltimore and voted George Washington dictatorial power for six months. Congress returned to Philadelphia two months later, February 27th, 1777. Lancaster and York got their sessions after the defeat at Brandywine, Congress again retreating. Nine months the lawmakers remained in York; the news of Burgoyne's surrender was received there. Then six months in New York and another term in Philadelphia. Menaced by unpaid troops, Congress went over to New Jersey. Sessions were held in Princeton College Library. Annapolis next, where General Washington resigned his commission. Trenton had a trial then, with Henry Lee as president. Here Lafayette took leave of his American allies.—[National Magazine.]

A Live School Superintendent.

THE Southern Workman tells a little story of one Southern superintendent's work, showing the spirit which characterizes many of the men, who, in quiet, unostentatious ways, are helping to solve the educational problems of their section. A Southern man was called to take charge of the educational work in a certain Southern town. The public schools for both races were so poor that self-respecting white and colored parents refused to send their children to them. As a consequence, the town boasted six white and ten colored private schools!

The new superintendent reached his field of labor in August. He found that each of the public schools had as perquisites a janitor and five acres of land. The janitors were drawing pay in the summer for doing nothing. Being endowed with vigor and common sense, the new school man took his janitors and put them to work on the land, "shoveling dirt" himself also, as he expressed it, for "sixty consecutive days." At the end of that time he had planted in his schoolyard all the trees and shrubs native to the locality, had set out vines and flowers, laid out gardens, and cleaned up generally both the grounds and the houses. He then opened the schools and set to work on the course of study, introducing gardening and other forms of manual training, gradually increased the number of rooms and teachers, and in four years he had closed, by means of his first-class public schools, every one of the sixteen private ones, besides establishing an enviable reputation as an able superintendent.

Text Found in Hall Clocks.

JOHN B. HARE, of Baltimore, Md., the well-known antiquarian, has quite a collection of verse which he has found from time to time in old hall clocks. Some are very terse and teem with truth. Pasted inside the case of an old sentinel of Father Time was a piece of parchment on which was written in ink that had long since faded:

"I am old and worn, as my face appears,
For I've walked on time for a hundred years.
Many have fallen since I began,
Many will fall ere my race is run.
I have buried the world, with its hopes and fears,
In my long, long march of a hundred years."

In another old Colonial time-piece was written :

"Master behold me. Here I stand
To tell the hours at thy command ;
What's thy wish, 'tis my delight
To serve thee both by day and night ;
But, master, be wise and learn from me
To serve thy God as I serve thee."

A wise old clockmaker had scratched upon the plates of another this bit of trite philosophy :

"The man is yet unborn who truly weighs the hour."

Scribbled in the case of another old clock, which for years told the flight of the hours in a hallway on Cathedral Street was the following :

"Time marks the way of life's decay."

—[The Jeweler's Weekly.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

THE National Convention of Negro Baptists in session in Philadelphia, beginning the 16th, was notable for its attitude toward the back-to-Africa proposition. S. E. Griggs, of Nashville, introducing the discussion on the subject said, "Africa is not suitable as a place of refuge just now, for the American negro has as much prejudice against the African as the white Southerner has against the negro. It may be necessary in a short time for us negroes to seek another home. Let us, therefore, set about the civilization and Christianization of Africa, so the country will be ready for us if we have to go there. Our best present policy is to stay here, be law-abiding and imbibe all of civilization and refinement that the white man has to offer. Our work of the future is to become the civilizers of Africa, our native land." The proposition was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and it was decided to send A. R. Griggs, of Dallas, Texas, to Africa, as a high commissioner, to investigate conditions and affairs there. At a later session Dr. Booker T. Washington was present, and was enthusiastically welcomed.

THE summer Pasteurized-milk depots maintained by Nathan Straus, in New York City, closed on the 12th, having dispensed more sterilized milk than in any previous year since the beginning of the work in 1892. An officer of the New York Health Department who has been investigating the results of various forms of milk diet on infants, said : "In my three years' clinical experience with the Straus milk I have found it almost indispensable to the dwellers in tenements. The ordinary milk to be purchased in the grocery stores of the congested districts of the city, the only milk within the reach of the poor until the establishment of the Straus milk laboratory, is unfit for infant consumption, and as a result of its use the babies are attacked by all forms of gastric and intestinal diseases." The present season has seen the establishment of Pasteurized milk dispensaries in Chicago and Philadelphia. In both these cities Nathan Straus donated the plant for Pasteurizing.

AN association known as the American Bible League is being organized with headquarters in New York. Its one object is "to promote a more thorough, reverential and constructive study of the Bible, and to maintain the historic faith of the Church in its inspiration and infallible authority as the word of God." The League owes its origin to a movement inaugurated last spring by Dr. Patton, President of Princeton Theological Seminary, and Dr. Buttz, President of Drew Theological Seminary, at Madison, N. J., to combat certain tendencies in the direction of higher criticism. Ministers and laymen of the evangelical churches are interesting themselves in the movement. A monthly periodical is to be issued on or before the first of the year.

THE eleventh session of the National Irrigation Congress was opened at Ogden, Utah, on the 15th and continued through the 18th. Delegates were present from eleven States west of the Mississippi river, representing practically every commercial organization in the territory included in the semi-arid and arid region of the country and the State and municipal governments. A particularly interesting feature of the meetings was an address on "The Relation of Colonization to Irrigation," by Commander Booth Tucker, of the Salvation Army, showing what the Army has done toward providing homes in the arid regions for the poor of large cities.

CHICAGO'S program for her centennial week, beginning on the 26th, has been practically completed. On the first day of the festival eight tablets, marking historic spots in the city, will be unveiled, and in the evening red fire will be burned on the roofs of the skyscrapers by way of an attempt to reproduce the conflagration of 1871. First-day will be devoted to special services in the churches, and on Second-day the rehabilitation of the burned city will be begun. The reproduced Fort Dearborn will be opened to the public, and later in the week there will be automobile and industrial parades, sports, banquets, speechmaking and fireworks.

THE President of the National Brotherhood of Carpenters, who, with other officers of the Brotherhood, has been in Philadelphia investigating the recent Carpenter's strike said : "The strike of carpenters in this city for 50 cents per hour, ordered May 1st last, and lost after several weeks of idleness, should never have occurred. The demands were exorbitant, in my opinion, and the unions should have accepted the employers' proposition of 45 cents per hour.

PRESIDENT ANGELL, of Michigan University, comes out strongly in favor of co-education, in his annual report to the regents of the institution, and just as strongly against the separation of the sexes as now practiced in the University of Chicago. It is stated that his views are generally indorsed by the members of the Ann Arbor faculty.

PRESIDENT W. R. HARPER, of the University of Chicago, has returned from a four months' stay abroad, most of which time was spent in Turkey, making the preliminary arrangements for the proposed exploration on the site of Babylon. The mission has proved a complete success. The expedition can now go ahead, and the way is clear for a good five years of exploration.

NEWS NOTES.

THE National Prison Congress meets in Louisville Tenth month 3d to 8th.

A DEMONSTRATION in connection with the municipal elections in Athens, Greece, on the 14th, was followed by hard to hand street fights, fourteen persons being killed or wounded.

THE directors of the Dallas Commercial Club have called a national convention, to be held in Dallas, Texas, Tenth month 8th, to consider the boll weevil situation in the cotton growing districts.

CARRIE NATION has decided over certain valuable property to the Associated Charities of Wyandotte county, Kan., to be used as a home for the destitute wives, mothers and children of drunkards.

CHARLES H. MARSH, pastor of the Rockwell, (Ia.) Baptist Church, whose salary is $600 a year, has refused an offer of $3000 from an Eastern baseball team which wanted him to sign for next year.

THE Chinese Minister has taken steps to make a claim against the Government of the United States on account of injuries inflicted by residents of Tonopah, Nevada, upon Chinese residents of that place on the 16th.

A RESOLUTION was passed unanimously by both Houses of the Legislature of Alabama on the 17th, naming the late Dr. J. L. M. Curry as one of the two men to represent Alabama in Statuary Hall, in the National Capitol.

FREDERICK W. VANDERBILT, of New York, has presented to the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale another dormitory, similar to that under construction, which was the beginning of an extensive dormitory system for the school.

A MEMBER of the British Legation, at Peking, has made a successful journey through Eastern Mongolia, covering 1000 miles, mainly unvisited by any European. The party met with unflinching courtesy from all classes of Mongols and Chinese.

CHICAGO school children have refused to provide themselves with bottles of boiled water to drink in school, as requested by the educational authorities, and the latter have been petitioned to turn on the regular supply in the mains, which had been cut off to bring the pupils to terms.

A COMMISSION to study and report on every phase of education in the United States will sail from Southampton, England, Tenth month 3d, under the patronage of Alfred Moseley, who last fall sent a commission of trade unionists to investigate labor conditions in this country.

THE National Prohibition Committee, of which Oliver W. Stewart is chairman, is called to meet in Chicago Twelfth month 16, to fix the time and place of the next National Prohibition Convention. Buffalo, Detroit, Indianapolis, Columbus, Kansas City and Minneapolis want the convention.

PROFESSOR JEREMIAH W. JENKS, of Cornell University, who has just returned from serving on the American Monetary Commission sent to Europe to promote plans for putting China and other silver using countries on a gold basis, has been selected by President Roosevelt to go to China in the same interest.

PREMIER SEDDON has introduced a very drastic bill for the prevention of monopolies in New Zealand. It proposes to establish a monopolies court with full powers to investigate all complaints regarding the enhancing of prices by the formation of trusts, and prescribes heavy penalties for offenders.

THE economic science section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in session on the 15th, debating the tariff question, gave little support to a Cambridge professor who advocated the levying of preferential and retaliatory tariffs, the majority of the speakers favoring the maintenance of free trade.

A BRITISH-AMERICAN COMMISSION, to determine the boundary lines in the neighborhood of Borneo separating the island possessions of the two countries, may be the eventual solution of the inquiry which the London Government has addressed to the State Department as to the sovereignty over certain of these islands.

THE correspondence between William I. and Bismarck, published by the latter's express desire, because he considered the letters would show better than could be done in any other way, "the unique relationship which existed between him and his august master," were issued in English in New York and London on the 15th.

A LETTER from the Pope to the rector of the Catholic University at Washington, warmly recommends the university to the support of the whole people of the United States, "trusting to their generosity to enable it to accomplish its final object, which is to maintain and augment the intellectual supremacy of America."

At the opening of the State Parliament of Victoria at Melbourne on the 8th, the Governor's announcement of forthcoming legislation included measures providing for more effectual control of the railroads, the establishment of a Court of Industrial Appeal to review the scale of wages upon the application of either side in a labor dispute, comprehensive irrigation works in the arid portions of Victoria and a measure for the compulsory purchase of land suitable for subdivision into farming homesteads. By the latter the Government hopes to check the undue concentration of the population in cities, to give youths openings and to check the tendency of people to seek their fortunes elsewhere.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

9TH Mo. 25 (SIXTH-DAY).—WOODSTOWN, N. J., Young Friends' Association.

9TH Mo. 26 (SEVENTH-DAY).—REGULAR meeting of the Executive Committee of the General Conference of Friends' Associations, at 1.30 p. m., in the Young Friends' Association Hall, Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

9TH Mo. 26 (SEVENTH-DAY).—SCIPIO Quarterly Meeting at Scipio, N. Y. Ministers and Elders, day before at 2 p. m.

9TH Mo. 26 (SEVENTH-DAY).—BUCKS First-day School Union at Langhorne, Pa., at 10 a. m., and 1.30 p. m. Subjects: (1) Work in the First-day School, (2) Whose duty is it in our meetings to fill the place the pastor fills in other religious denominations? Cora Haviland Carver, of Philadelphia, is expected to address the afternoon session.

9TH Mo. 27 (FIRST-DAY).—LANCASTER, Pa., Young Friends' Association.

9TH Mo. 27 (FIRST-DAY).—HORSHAM, Pa., Young Friends' Association.

9TH Mo. 27 (FIRST-DAY).—CONFERENCE under the care of the Philanthropic Committees of the Yearly and Quarterly Meetings will be held in the Meeting-house at Wrightstown, Pa., at 2.30 p. m. Address by Henry W. Wilbur, of New York; subject, "Temperance."

9TH Mo. 27 (FIRST-DAY).—MERION meeting will be attended by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit smaller meetings, at 10.30 a. m.

9TH Mo. 27 (FIRST-DAY).—THE FRIENDS of White Plains, N. Y., will hold their meeting at 78 Fisher Avenue.

9TH Mo. 28 (SECOND-DAY).—CANADA Half Yearly Meeting at Yonge Street, Ontario. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.

10TH Mo. 3 (SEVENTH-DAY).—ILLUSTRATED lecture by President Swain on his recent visit to the Bible Lands, given under the auspices of Byberry Friends' Association, in the Town Hall, at Somerton, Pa., at 7.45 p. m.

10TH Mo. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—AT BIRMINGHAM Meeting-house, Chester county, Pa., a circular meeting under the care of a committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting, at 3 p. m.

10TH Mo. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—ACCONTINK,

Va., Young Friends' Association at home of Joseph W. Cox.

10TH Mo. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—A RELIGIOUS meeting will be held at Friends' Home for Children, 4011 Aspen Street, Philadelphia, at 3 p. m. The opening meeting of the season, a good attendance is desired. Ministering Friends and all interested in the Home are particularly invited. Mary Travilla has a prospect of attending.

10TH Mo. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—BYBERRY Friends' Association at the meeting-house, at 2.30 p. m. Address by President Joseph Swain.

10TH Mo. 7 (FOURTH-DAY).—FARMINGTON Half-Year Meeting, at Farmington, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

10TH Mo. 7 (FOURTH-DAY).—NEWTOWN, Pa., Friends' Association, at the home of Mary Anna Packer.

10TH Mo. 16 (SIXTH-DAY).—TWO-DAY (16th and 17th) celebration of anniversary of establishment of Miami Monthly Meeting of Friends at Waynesville, O. It will be participated in by both branches of Friends.

(Continued on page iii.)

THE BRITISH FRIEND.

PUBLISHED ON THE 15TH OF EACH MONTH.
Being the only religious and literary review written chiefly for the general public, but from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, The British Friend offers a unique opportunity for spreading "The Truth" among thoughtful enquirers.

The September Issue Contains:
Woodbrooke Summer School: Report of Second and Third Fortnights
Woodbrooke Permanent Settlement.
"The Meaning of the Cross," by L. A. E. Garvie
"Friends and the Education Act," by Ernest E. Taylor.
"The Birthright Member," by A. S.
"The Ministers' Gallery," by Wm C. Braithwaite
"The Attendance of Meetings: A London Census," "Ministry and Eldership," by W. E. Turner.

A distinctive feature is made of Reviews, and Notices of Books, especially such as are likely to be helpful to those engaged in religious and social work.

Subscription, 6s. 6d. (£8. 5s.) per annum, post free. Specimen copy on application.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER:
EDWARD GRUBB, M. A.,
Devonshire Chambers,
Bishopsgate Without, London, E. C.

Shoe Specialties

We mention two of our popular specialties in "comfort shoes"—made for the especial benefit of people who have tender feet or bunions, but just as shapely and stylish as the usual shoes; also some of our latest novelties in autumn and winter shoes for women and children.

A point about this department worth remembering—one can't buy a poor shoe here at any price:

Men's Cushion-sole Shoes

Easy on tender feet. Made of vicid kid: extra-broad on the soles, cushion of thick felt covered with kid for innersoles; soft and flexible—$5.00.

Women's "Bunion" Shoes

For "women who have enlarged joints. Made of fine vicid kid; the specially prepared insoles are very flexible, making these shoes exceedingly comfortable. They look just like other shoes, but are great for ease and comfort—$5.00.

Women's Mannish Shoes

Of patent coltskin; a low, mannish button shoe, foxed, with dull top and dull buttons—just the thing for natty young women, and very dressy also. An up-to-date shoe at a popular price—$4.00.

Women's Blucher Shoes

Of patent coltskin, with dull tops, and for ribbon lacers; made in the blucher effect, but not quite so heavy as the regular blucher street shoe—$4.00.

Misses' and Children's Shoes

Our new "Royal Oak" line now ready. Soles are of the best oak leather, selected for this line, with oak boxes and oak counters—made with the idea of securing the utmost comfort as well as durability. One cannot make a mistake in selecting from this line. Sizes 8 to 10½, $2.00; sizes 11 to 2—$2.50.

Strawbridge & Clothier,

PHILADELPHIA.

THE ARRANGEMENT

of a book, catalog or any bit of printed matter, makes it attractive or not, easy to read or not. Tasteful arrangement is a characteristic of our work.

The Leeds & Biddle Co., Inc.,

MAKERS OF THE
BETTER KIND OF PRINTING

1019-21 Market St., Both 'Phone. Phila., Pa.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

(Concluded from page 62.)

10TH MO. 17 (SEVENTH-DAY).—ABINGTON First-day School Union, at Upper Dublin, Pa., at 10 a. m. Subject for discussion: "Should Friends' Principles and Discipline be taught in our secular schools?" Carriages will meet train at Fort Washington, leaving Philadelphia at 9.02 a. m., and down train arriving before 10 o'clock. Cars of Lehigh Valley Traction Company will also be met at same place. All cordially invited to attend.

10TH MO. 17 (SEVENTH-DAY).—CONCORD First-day School Union, at Goshen, Pa., Meeting-house, at 10.30 a. m. All interested are invited to attend.

VERY LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA, ARIZONA, MEXICO, NEW MEXICO AND OTHER WESTERN POINTS.

VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

Anyone desiring to make a trip to California, Arizona, Mexico, New Mexico or other western points, either for business or pleasure, can do so now at a small cost.

Daily until November 29th, 1903, inclusive, special one way colonists tickets will be sold via Southern Railway at rate of $49.75 from Philadelphia to Los Angeles, San Francisco and other points, proportionately low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates on fast trains, tri-weekly, high-class, personally-conducted vestibuled excursion sleeping cars between Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans and El Paso, in which the double berth rate is only $7.00.

Excursion sleeping cars leave Washington on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

GREATLY REDUCED RATES TO LOS ANGELES AND SAN FRANCISCO.

AND RETURN VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

On October 7th to 16th inclusive, special excursion tickets will be sold to Los Angeles and San Francisco via Southern Railway, account American Bankers Association, at very low rates, tickets good to return until November 30th, 1903. Round trip rate from Philadelphia $89.70, proportionate low rates from other points.

In addition to the Standard Pullman drawing-room sleeping cars, operated daily, the Southern Railway operates on fast trains, tri-weekly, high-class, personally-conducted vestibuled excursion sleeping cars between Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco without change via Atlanta, New Orleans and El Paso, in which the double berth rate is only $7.

Excursion sleeping cars leave Washington at 9 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will furnish all information.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

JUST PUBLISHED

Views and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hilborn, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia. 32 pages, paper. 5c. per dozen 50c.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.

Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;

$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.

'Phone 1-33-55.

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets
and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,

PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

Merchants' Trust Company,
611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
CAPITAL (paid in), 50,000.00
SURPLUS, 50,000.00
UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 49,349.99

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveyancing done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $5 and upwards, per annum

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President
HORACE B. PEARSON, 2nd Vice-Pres. & Treas.
CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.
WM. E. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS.

NICHOLAS BRICE, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
JOSEPH K. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
CHAS. S. HINCHMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
EDWARD S. SAYRES, EDGAR DUVAL FAIRIES,
JOHN H. CRAVER, HORACE B. PEARSON.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)

Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamond & Co.,
1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

MILTON PHILLIPS
Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

BREAD MACHINE
FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
Sifts the flour and mixes 10 lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (TRUSI MILNERS, Inc.) 520 & 2 Media Sts., Philadelphia

Seventeen Cents per year for
One Thousand Dollars of Life
Insurance for Fifteen Years!
This is the record of policy No.
43,964, maturing July 5th, 1901.
Particulars free on request.

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
921-3-5 Chestnut St.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, $ 4,457,613.08
Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,264.17
Assets of the Company, 61,618,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
Asa S. Wieg, Vice-President
Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept
J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
David G. Alsop, Actuary
J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
Samuel H. Troth, Treasurer
C. Walter Borton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

James V. Watson,
William Longstreth,
Edward H. Ogden,
Thomas Scullergood,
J. Preston Thomas,
Robert M. Janney,
Marriott C. Morris,
Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000

ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES.

ASSIGNEE, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION.

FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. REGISTER AND TRANSFER AGENT.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.

Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults. E. B. MORRIS, President.

TOUR TO THE PACIFIC COAST.

VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, ACCOUNT MEETING NATIONAL BANKERS' ASSOCIATION.

On account of the meeting of the National Bankers' Association, to be held at San Francisco, Cal., October 20 to 23, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company offers a personally-conducted tour to the Pacific Coast at remarkably low rates.

This tour will leave New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and other points on the Pennsylvania Railroad east of Pittsburg, Wednesday, October 14, by special train of the highest grade Pullman equipment. A quick run westward to San Francisco will be made, via Chicago, Omaha, Cheyenne, and Ogden.

Five days will be devoted to San Francisco, allowing ample opportunity to visit the near-by coast resorts. Returning, stops will be made at Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs, Denver, and St. Louis. The party will reach New York on the evening of October 31.

Round-trip rate, covering all expenses for eighteen days, except five days spent in San Francisco, $190.

Rates from Pittsburg will be $5.00 less. For full information apply to Ticket Agents, or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

WHY PAY MORE ?

$12.50 FOR A BRAND NEW DROP Cabinet, sold elsewhere for $25.
$15 for the $30 kind, $18 for the $25 kind, $20 for the $30 kind, and for $25 the Latest Automatic Life Bicycle Co. Beating Drop Cabinet, in all cases the money can buy, usually sold at a small deposit secures bargain.

PENN SEWING MACHINE CO.,
934 Girard Avenue. Open Evenings.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

United Security
Life Insurance
and Trust Company
OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General
Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
Assistant Treasurer.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.
STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue, Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
J. C. WHITNEY, 2d W. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, TENTH MONTH 3, 1903.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for Catalogue.

Friends' Select School,

1811 I STREET, N. W., WASHINGTON, D. C.

A school of all grades for boys and girls. Has prepared students for twenty different colleges and technical schools.

Certificate privilege to Lehigh, Dartmouth, Swarthmore, Georgetown, Columbian, Vassar, Smith and Wellesley.

Excellent Gymnasium and Play Grounds.

THOS. W. SIDWELL, Principal.

FRIENDS' SCHOOL,

GREEN STREET, GERMANTOWN,

Under care

RMANTOWN PREPARATIVE MEETING.

Kindergarten, Primary, Intermediate and Higher Departments. Manual Training.

For circulars address

ELIZABETH M. ROBERTS, Principal.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business.

The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal.

For circulars, address Jenkintown, Pa.

CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogozot, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR

BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
Locust Valley, N. Y.

Three Months for 25 Cents

WE will send FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER till the end of the year for 25 cents, beginning with the week the subscription is received. Will our subscribers send us the names of Friends who might like to take advantage of this offer, but who may not see the advertisement? We will write to them.

WANTED.

WANTED.—IN A STEAM-HEATED HOUSE in country village, a reliable and capable woman as working house-keeper, in small Friends' family, where one servant is kept. Address, stating terms, Box 112, Central Valley, Orange county, N. Y.

WANTED.—IN THIS CITY A MOTHERS' helper, to have care of one child a year old, and to assist otherwise in light work. One who has had experience with children, a Friend preferred. Address No. 9, this Office.

WANTED.—A SMALL ADULT FAMILY (NOT over three) to take furnished house, 18th and Diamond Streets, to exchange for board of owner. Address B, this Office.

WANTED.—MATRON FOR FRIENDS' Home, Baltimore. Please address Rebecca J. Broomell, 2128 Bolton Street, Baltimore, Md.

WANTED.—BY THE HOME FOR DESTITUTE Colored Children, a position on a farm for a boy about fifteen years of age, with privilege of attending school. Address "S," Lansdowne, Pa.

WANTED.—EVENING EMPLOYMENT. TO assist physician with accounts and correspondence, or other work. A. B. C., this Office.

BOARDING.

BOARD.—FOR YOUNG WOMAN, GOOD neighborhood, at $4. City. Address X. Y. Z., this Office.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1877 I St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

FOR RENT.—TWO NEATLY FURNISHED third-floor rooms, well lighted and heated. Address 331 N. 40th Street, West Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—FURNISHED, SECOND FLOOR rooms. 855 N. 23d Street.

FIRST MORTGAGES FOR SALE, BEARING 5 per cent. interest; $2,000, $3,500, $3,000, $1,500, $4,000; new and elegant Philadelphia houses. DAVID H. WRIGHT, 1420 Chestnut Street.

FOR RENT.—S. W. COR. TWENTYFIFTH AND Arch Streets, attractive house, 13 rooms and 2 baths, in thorough order. Would rent to private family at moderate figure. Apply to Girard Trust Company.

TO RENT.—NICE HOMELIKE HOME, LANGHORSE, Bucks county, Pa., from Tenth month 31, 11-room house, on main street. Bath, water closet, new plumbing, heater. Laughorse spring and other excellent water; porches front and back; old shade, stable, carriage house, fruit. Best location. Trolley to railroad. Apply 5000. Dr. John Paxson, Newtown, Pa.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class instruction.

For circulars address

ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
Swarthmore, Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

A pleasant vale; bright fields that lie
On gentle slopes and knolls of green;
Steep mountains sharp against the sky;
Clear streams and tiny lakes between.

—Horatio Nelson Powers.

PHILADELPHIA Tenth month 21, 1903.

To the Friends of Buck Hill Falls:

The Inn is approaching the close of a successful season, and the books show a satisfactory profit from the summer's operations. The problem of providing sufficient accommodations for next season is now confronting the management. Our present dining room, seating about three hundred, with the kitchen and pantries, is large enough, but the sitting room, or exchange, is the original room built three years ago for a building of twenty bed rooms. It was greatly overcrowded last year, when the Inn was increased to fifty rooms, while this year, with guests from the thirty cottages and twenty tents, there has been positive discomfort.

To overcome this crowded condition, we have planned an addition to the Inn, to be ready by next season, which contains an assembly room, seating comfortably three hundred people, four good-sized sitting and writing rooms, space for an elevator, a toilet room for women on the first floor, a sun parlor and thirty-eight bed rooms, twenty of them with private baths attached, and all provided with steam heat. The need for all these accommodations was very pressing the present season. We do not anticipate the slightest difficulty in filling these extra rooms. Fully five hundred people were disappointed in not securing accommodations at Buck Hill Falls this summer.

In order to provide funds for this extension and the furnishing, which will require about $15,000, we offer to the present stockholders and those Friends and friendly people who wish to be identified with the enterprise, one hundred and fifty shares of the capital stock of the Company, now in the treasury. The value of the stock is $100.00 per share. It is hardly necessary to say that it is fully paid and non-assessable.

As the money for this improvement will not all be needed at once for building purposes, 25 per cent. of the amount subscribed may be paid, if desired, at the time of subscription, 25 per cent. Third month 31, 1904, 25 per cent. Fourth month 31, 1904, and 25 per cent. Fifth month 31, 1904.

During the past three years the property of the Company has greatly enhanced in value. It consists of about 520 acres. One hundred and twenty-five building lots have been sold and thirty-two cottages erected. Several miles of road have been laid out, bridges and stairways built, a barn, carriage house, dormitory for the help, office, library and other necessary buildings have been erected; a reservoir has been built and water

(Continued on next page, second column.)

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

Friends' Intelligencer Association,
(LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers. Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.

No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
* TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XL. 625
POETRY: IMMORTALITY. 625
ILLINOIS YEARLY MEETING. 625
AN ADULT SCHOOL LESSON:
What Does it Mean to Follow Christ? . . . 626
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON:
General Resurrection. 628
EDITORIAL:
Silent Meetings. 630
Notes. 631
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS. 631
SOCIETY NOTES. 632
YOUNG FRIENDS' ASSOCIATIONS. 632
FRIENDS IN MEETING AND HOME:
Alliance, Canton, Colerain, Mt. Pleasant,
East Pittsburg. 632
A TEN DAYS' TOUR IN ULSTER. 634
EDUCATIONAL:
The Value of Athletics. 636
Swarthmore College Notes. 637
Swarthmore College Lecture Course. . . . 637
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC., . . . 638
LITERARY NOTES. 639
CURRENT EVENTS. 639
NEWS NOTES. 639
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS. 640

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of

OUR LUNCH AND DINING ROOM,
1317 Filbert Street

These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patronage give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.

J. J. WILLIAMS, Proprietor.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT

Undertaker
and Embalmer

1728 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia

TELEPHONE, POPLAR 29-38 D.

THE WALTER SANITARIUM

The Original
Wernersville Sanitarium

Nearest, largest, best, it has its own Post Office,
WALTERS PARK, PA.

Avoid delays: do not address Wernersville. Illustrated booklet.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

(Concluded from First Page.)

and sewerage system installed, all of a permanent and substantial character. It is estimated that not less than $500,000.00 has been spent in improving the property by the Company and the thirty-two individuals who have erected cottages. During the past season nearly two thousand guests have shared the hospitality of the settlement, and as stated above, hundreds were unable to secure accommodations during the rush of the summer. The proposed addition to the Inn will strengthen the Company, as it will add considerably to the income and enable us to give the accommodations demanded by many, while the expense of management will not be materially increased. We therefore feel, with seasons equal to those enjoyed in the past, that dividends can safely be returned at the near future.

The whole Pocono region offers many advantages for investment. Its almost equal proximity to Philadelphia and New York, its elevation, fine air and views, good drainage, and wholesome water have been dwelt upon. Another important point is that the railroads are spending thousands of dollars in giving it publicity. The trout service has been, and is being, greatly improved. In every way they are working to increase the popularity of these mountain resorts.

While the desire to make a great deal of money has never actuated the promoters of the enterprise, still it has always been the intention that the se who have invested should receive a satisfactory return on their stock.

The Directors early adopted the policy of never personally asking or urging their friends to invest in the enterprise. They will, however, welcome the interest of all those who approve of the object and plan of the settlement, who wish to see it succeed, and who wish to share in its success.

For further information, if desired, address,

CHARLES F. JENKINS, President,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.,
Or

MORGAN BENTING, Secretary and Treasurer,
15th and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA
Conveyancing and investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OFFICES: 693 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
375 SWEDER STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

J. Liodeo Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson
HEACOCK & HOKANSON
ARCHITECTS
Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philada.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuendig
R. W. Richards. Atlantic City, N. J.

THE PENNINGTON,
Permanence and Transient Boarding
for Friends.
215 E. 15th Street, New York City.

The Pennhurst, Second Home
from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. R. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,
1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE.,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like
and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

EASTON SANITARIUM.

Select class of nervous and mental patients received.
Twenty-five years' experience; late First Assistant Physician in Middletown, N. Y. State Hospital; visit here before deciding. C. SPENCER KINNEY, M.D. Easton, Pa.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.

CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to se-ing families. Office 603 North
Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
239 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered
Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

Established 1850 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trad-
—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEORGE C. CHILD,

27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

NOTICE.

THE BIDDLE PRESS, PRINTERS,

Edward T. and Howard Biddle are now
ready for business at the S. E. Cor.
Tenth and Filbert Streets, Second floor,
Edward T. Biddle having resigned from
The Leeds & Biddle Co. of 1019-21
Market Street.

We will be pleased to see our friends at the above address.

THE BIDDLE PRESS,
PRINTERS,
S. E. Cor. Tenth and Filbert Sts.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, TENTH MONTH 3, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 40.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.

XL.

THERE is a danger in this topsy-turvy twentieth century of taking great for small, and small for great.

ARTHUR ROWNTREE.

In an address to The Mount and Bootham Schools, England.

IMMORTALITY.

THE caterpillar did not die
While changing to a butterfly :

He only quit his coat of skin, eight-legged house that he lived in.

The butterfly had truly been in caterpillar's fur and skin ;
But born again to wings of air, it took no thought, it had no care

For caterpillars lowly are, of what they eat or what they wear.

How different is the butterfly,

A blithe and airy thing,

From when it crawled upon the ground, before it took its wing,
A caterpillar first was he, a crawling worm from birth—
Perhaps he knew what was within—

A life above the earth.

The truth about this matter is,

Two mansions here we see,

Of many in our Father's house, prepared for you and me.
So when we leave our skin and bones, and rise like butterfly,
We'll know we only change our form,
And never, never die.

—Gathered.

ILLINOIS YEARLY MEETING.

Held at Clear Creek Meeting House, Putnam County, Ill.

ON Seventh-day morning Ninth month 12th, at 10 o'clock, Illinois Yearly Meeting commenced its sessions with the meeting for which was fairly well attended, several ministers being present and having considerable exercise. We were told of the saying of Jesus, "If ye love one another as I have loved you, ye shall be my disciples," and we were reminded that without this love it was impossible to be a good minister or elder; with it, we shall work harmoniously. We were desired to pay attention to the little monitions of truth during the sessions here. We should place ourselves in close communion with the living God, thus becoming His children, and in His hand is the blessing of life, which is the crown of righteousness, which we will receive if we do the duty that is assigned us.

MINISTERS AND ELDERS.

THE OFFICE OF ELDER.

The question was asked, "What are the duties of elders, and are we performing them in the right manner?" Attention was called to the early history of our society, when ministers were sent out by twos to different places, and this movement was attended with good results. Elders need not be old persons; the young are often gifted with powers of discernment equal to those older. They were advised in the beginnings of ministry, to go to the persons thus exercised, in the spirit of love and kindness, to encourage, advise, and if necessary, restrain the expression that might become troublesome, thus watching over one another for good.

The Eldership has sometimes been compared to snuffers; if used judiciously they are a great help to the light of the candle, by trimming off the charred and now useless and hurtful portion of the wick, but if hurriedly and carelessly used, will extinguish the flame entirely.

We were told that while example is good, it is strengthened by precept; we should refer the child to the guide within.

FIRST-DAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE.

In the afternoon the First-day School Conference held its first session, the second one being on Third-day evening of the next week.

FIRST-DAY.

First-day morning was cloudy with every appearance of rain, preventing, doubtless, the attendance of many, as the meeting was smaller than usual; the weather clearing by noon, many more were present in the afternoon.

The vocal exercises of the morning meeting commenced with a prayer of thankfulness for favors received, not the least of these being the presence of Friends from a distance. We were reminded of the promise, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength," and we can set our seal to this promise, some waiting for the moving of the spirit to convey that which will give strength, others waiting to receive this strength, and thus knowing the Saviour in our hearts we will be strengthened and enlightened by the power of God.

CONVERSION.

The subject of conversion was freely dwelt upon, and the saying of Jesus quoted, "Verily, I say unto you, except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of Heaven." The speaker felt that the attention of many honest, earnest minds had that morning been turned to the thought of conversion, desiring to know the real meaning of the word. Saul's conversion, as narrated in the Bible, was miraculous, but it is not necessary for all to experience it in the manner in which he did; to some it comes quietly, almost unnoticed, it is so imperceptible; to others it is an instantaneous change, but in both cases the conversion can be equally real; it means to turn from a course of wrong-doing and embrace the right, thus leading a better life in obedience to the voice of the spirit. It is not a cause for anxiety and trouble because the date and manner of conversion cannot be absolutely certified to. Cease to do evil, learn to do well, is conversion.

"To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness to the truth." Humanity has always desired, and is still looking for witnesses, before it will believe. It is not the creed but the life that God looks to. A man may have a creed a rod long and do business by the short yard. We need not fear that religion will detract from our enjoyment, it adds to it. True, it may restrain some undue indulgence. We must know the light shining in our own hearts if it is to do us good.

What God reveals to the human mind is no longer a mystery, but is revelation. Jesus said, "Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world," not for us, but as an example to us, and does not release us from the duty of overcoming for ourselves; we are under as much obligation to do our duty as was our great exemplar, and if we daily do our duty thus, we will, at the end of each day, feel saved. The living, not the believing only, was the doctrine of Jesus, and our beloved poet Whittier thus writes, in confirmation of this thought:

"What asks our Father of His children, save
Justice, mercy and humility,
A reasonable service of good deeds,
Pure living, tenderness to human needs,
Reverence and trust, and prayer for light to see
The Master's footprints in our daily ways;
No knotted scourge nor sacrificial knife,
But the calm beauty of an ordered life,
Whose very breathing is unworded praise!"

The world, life, is largely what we make it by our every-day actions. The divine power may be felt in every walk in life, the guidance of truth presenting itself in many ways. Finally, it is the life of Christ, not the death of Jesus, that saves us.

THE FOES OF ONE'S OWN HOUSEHOLD.

We have heard the expression, a man's foes are those of his own household, and have perhaps wondered how this can be, for surely our parents, our brothers and sisters who constitute our family and who love us dearly, cannot be our enemies; but our tongues, our eyes, nay our thoughts, may become our foes to work evil for us; the tongue can speak words of affection, but when unbridled and let loose what mischief it can and does do: when we think good thoughts what a help they are to us, but unless we keep watch over them they may lead us to say the unkind word, followed, it may be, by the unkind act, for "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he"; our eyes, too, if allowed to see evil sights will become our foes, so we must be careful to control these inmates of our household that they do not become our enemies.

SECOND-DAY. REPRESENTATIVE COMMITTEE.

Second-day morning was cloudy and oppressively warm. The Representative Committee met at the usual time, 8 a. m., with no business minuted or new. A member of the committee, commenting thereon, remarked that it was singular that a body like this, intended to represent the whole Yearly Meeting during the intervals of its assembling, had found nothing to do, had nothing to report, and suggested a few changes in our mode of transacting business. A committee was appointed to take the subject in charge and inform the next session of the result of its deliberations; the matter was referred to the Yearly Meeting, and its action will be published in our minutes.

THE YEARLY MEETING.

At 10 o'clock the Yearly Meeting proper assembled in its twenty-ninth session, and the silence was broken by the voice of earnest prayer for wisdom and strength to perform the various duties devolving upon us during the transaction of the business of the meeting. This was followed by a few remarks from another member, in which he said Friends had been called a "peculiar people," and one "peculiarity" is the habit we have of not responding as promptly as we should to the business at the clerk's table, and hoped there would be an improvement in this respect in order to facilitate the work. Some committees were then appointed and notice taken of the attendance of Friends from a distance and minutes of welcome prepared for them.

(Conclusion to follow.)

AN ADULT SCHOOL LESSON.

[The following is taken from a little volume of "Twelve Lessons by Six Members of Adult Schools." 1]

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO "FOLLOW CHRIST?"

By William Littleboy, Birmingham.

THERE is one command of Christ which comes over and over again in the Gospel narratives—"Come after Me" or "Follow Me." Sometimes it is addressed to individual men (Matt. iv., 18-22; ix. 9; Mark x. 21; Luke ix. 59, 60). In these cases it no doubt means that these particular persons were to leave their ordinary calling, and join the little company that followed Jesus up and down the country. But not many could possibly do this and now-a-days it is the same. Some few are called to give up home and business that they may spend their lives, here or abroad, in telling men the good news. But these must always be a small minority. Most of us have to earn our bread by hard work. Jesus always took such a reasonable view of human affairs that we are sure that He saw that the great majority of men must always follow some trade or handicraft; and indeed He set us an example in this as in so many other ways by working for years at the carpenter's bench. Let us look at two other passages (Matt. xvi. 24; John xii. 26). Here you see there is no limitation; it is clear enough that "any man"—be he who he may—who wishes to be a Christian must "follow Christ." We cannot get out of this if we would; each one of us must obey this command if we are to be what God meant us to be. But we can't obey a command until we know what it means. "Come to Jesus," "Follow Jesus," they tell us; what does it all mean? The words are simple enough in themself; but often they leave no clear idea in our mind. You and I are to "follow Christ"; how are we going to set about it? Let us see if we can get a little light on the question.

¹ Published by Headley Brothers, 14 Dishopsgate St., Without, E. C., London. It may be obtained through Friends' Book Store, Philadelphia.

If we are to follow Christ, we need to know something of the Person we are to follow. Now what strikes you as the most remarkable thing about the earthly life of Jesus? "His power of working miracles?" Well, that is certainly a striking thing about Him; but I am not sure that it is really the most wonderful. Anyway, you and I cannot follow Him in that particular thing; so we may put the miracles aside for the present. "He spoke with such authority; He set aside old customs with a quiet 'But I say unto you.'" Yes; that was what struck His first hearers as much as anything. But here again we cannot follow Him; it would never do for one of us to take upon himself to lay down the law in that way. "His sinlessness?" Ah, now you are going deeper. Nothing certainly could be more wonderful than that, and to become sinless is what we must all aim at; although the more sinless our lives become the more we shall realize how much sin there is left to get rid of.

I think my own answer to that question would be, His absolute simplicity. The wonder of His life lies as much in what He refrained from doing as in what He did. Suppose you had been living in Palestine just before Christ came; suppose you had known that the long-expected Messiah was at last about to appear; and had known also that He was to be a Divine Man. What would you have expected? Such a wonderful person must surely appear at Jerusalem—the Capital; He would come of one of the leading Jewish families; His life would be lived in the full glare of publicity; His name would be upon every tongue all over the civilized world—in Athens, in Alexandria, in Rome, and even in far away Britain. I think such an expectation would have been quite reasonable. And if it had been thus, what use would it have been for Him to tell commonplace people like you and me to "follow Him"?

What did actually happen? You know, of course, that His mother was a peasant girl, and that the first night of His life was spent in a stable for want of better accommodation. But did it ever strike you that thirty out of His short thirty-three years were passed in an obscurity so deep that scarcely a single echo of that quiet life has reached us? You have read biographies of great men, and you have noticed how much they tell you:—first chapter, "Childhood"; how even in his cradle his mother's watchful eye saw signs of his future greatness; second chapter, "School Days"; how he won all the prizes, besides being first in athletics; and so on. Yet of Jesus Christ until He was thirty years old we are told practically nothing; and this can only be because there was nothing to tell. So it comes to this, that this most wonderful Life which was being lived for men was spent—nine-tenths of it—in a little cottage smaller than many of your houses, in an out-of-the-way village up a valley in Galilee; and that the very name of Jesus was unknown during all these years a few miles from His own home. And He spent His time at the bench earning a living for His mother and the younger children, James and Josés and the rest. You city men sometimes think your lives dull. You have no idea of the quietness and monotony of village life—each day like the one before it; the same round of small duties and small interests. This was the life that Jesus led. I don't think He found it dull—He lived too near to God for that; but at all events it was quiet and simple enough.

At last the long privacy came to an end, and Jesus—began His life's work? No, certainly not. All through those thirty silent years He had been engaged on His life's work—the work of drawing men to God and helping them to understand Him. We could ill afford to lose the lessons of that quiet time. But in due time He began His more public labors. At the outset He had to decide on the lines on which He should work. This was the question He had to settle in the desert when He was tempted of the devil. We can't go into that incident now; but you will see that each temptation was designed to draw Him away from the path of simplicity, that path in which He walks by our side in our humdrum lives; and to induce Him to seek His end by means of some cheap display of miraculous power, or by putting Himself at the head of a great political movement with all its glory and distinction. Did you ever think how much depended on Christ's steadfastness at this time? Suppose, for instance, He had turned that stone into bread in order to satisfy His hunger. We should have lost our Brother. We could not have believed in His sympathy with our privations if He had had such an unfair advantage over us. No. He could feed the famished multitude; but He Himself would be dependent for His daily bread on the kindness of others. He turned from the tempting bait, and chose to live a hard and simple life.

Now think how simple His public life was—how human. "He worked miracles." Yes, He worked miracles, but what were they? Simple works of mercy, springing from an overflowing sympathy with human sorrow. They were not what we call prodigies. A prodigy, you know, is an act that produces amazement—that fills us so full of awe and wonder as to take away for the time our power of thought and reason. There was simplicity and gentleness about almost all the miracles of Jesus. He worked them as privately as possible; He hid from applause. He kept entirely aloof from current politics. His quiet, simple life reminded one of His disciples of something He had read in one of the old Hebrew writings and never understood before. Will you turn to it (Matt. xii. 15-21).

How did He spend His time? "In preaching." Yes, at first; but perhaps less than you think. He does not seem to have done very much in the way of public teaching after the first year or so. After that I think He was chiefly engaged in the quiet work of training the twelve—preparing them as they walked from village to village for the work they were to undertake after He left them. For the rest, He spent His life in doing acts of homely kindness; in moving about among simple country folks, and trying to brighten their lives and give them a helping hand. One of His disciples at a later time could think of no better words to describe this part of His life than this simple sentence—"He went about doing good." Look at that first miracle at Cana (John ii. 1-10). Here is a village wedding. Everyone in the place knows the young couple, and has come to the marriage festivity. By some mistake they run short of wine. How mortifying for the bride and bridegroom! But Jesus was there and His sympathy was stirred. He would not have this bright day clouded; He could not bear that the young people should feel that this first day of their married life had brought a misfortune with it. And out of pure overflowing kindness of heart, He stepped in to supply what they needed. Now that was just like Jesus, and is a fair specimen of the things He was doing every day. "Do I believe in the miracles?" Yes, I can't help it. They are so characteristic—just the kind of things you would expect such a one as Christ to do. And most of them help to show us how simple was the human life that He lived. They were part of His great mission—to make men's lives purer and nobler and happier.

Will you turn now to Matt. xi. 2-6. Can you account for this strange fact, that John who a year ago had been the first to welcome Jesus, had now begun to wonder whether he had not made a mistake? John, like all the Jews, had his own notions as to what the Messiah was to do. Month after month he had watched and waited for some great act which should arouse the Jewish nation and startle the world. And he had waited in vain. Here, he thought, was Jesus wasting His time in this almost unknown Galilee, and in teaching and mixing with ignorant, and often very disreputable people; wasting His energy in curing sick villagers and blessing little children; whilst all the time the great wicked world was waiting for its Deliverer; waiting for one who by one brilliant stroke should overthrow the Roman Empire and set up the Kingdom of God on earth. Put yourselves in John's place; was not there some excuse for him? Is it astonishing that he failed to understand that quiet simple life? Perhaps we may also be tempted to ask, Was there not a waste of power? Was it really necessary for the Son of God to come down to earth to live such a life as this? Yes. No one but the Son of God could have lived a life so original, a life so exactly suited to meet our needs. For it has taught us by its beautiful simplicity that the religion of Jesus is a thing for the people; that as its Founder was a Carpenter and spent His life amongst working-men, so He looks for His followers amongst factory hands, labourers, clerks, warehousemen, just as much as amongst lords and ladies. Had He chosen to live in a palace, He might have appealed to "the upper ten," but where would you and I have been? Living in a cottage, He appeals not to a select few but to all. There are no "reserved seats" at a guinea each in His Kingdom: "all seats free" and no respect of persons.

Have we not found some light on the question

we started with, "What does it mean to follow Christ"? We have seen that He walked in a path in which all of us may follow Him—a path so simple and so straight before us that none of us can excuse himself on the score of not understanding it. We are not asked—most of us—to do any great thing, to change our whole sphere of life. It is in your own particular calling that you are to follow Christ; as a carpenter perhaps, or a lathe hand or a labourer. You are to be Christlike men in your workshop, or behind your counter, or in the street, and above all in your own homes. To follow Him you need not go a step out of your way. And what are the outward signs by which men will know that you are following Jesus? This also we have learnt from thinking about the simple life He led. To follow Him means to "go about doing good" as He did. It means to always think of others first; to be on the look-out to do them a service, even if it be but to offer them a cup of cold water; to try to brighten other lives; to forget one's own convenience or one's own credit or reputation in seeking the welfare of one's fellowmen. The man who is truly following Christ will give up an evening at the club to help the tired wife who has been washing all day; he will even miss a football match if need be to pay a call on a sick neighbor; he will not refuse to serve any longer on a school committee because his opinion has been over-ruled; he will sit quietly by whilst another runs away with the credit which is due to him; he will not be satisfied unless like Christ he is trying to carry other people's loads and to make their lives happier.

"You think a man has a duty to himself too?" Yes, he has; and the less he thinks about it, the better will he do it. One act of self-forgetful kindness done to another will do more for you in the long run than whole years spent in seeking your own advantage; because unknown to yourself it will have helped to mould your character into the likeness of Him who are trying to follow.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 35.

GENERAL RESURRECTION.

GOLDEN TEXT.—When Christ who is our life shall be manifested, then shall ye also with him be manifested in glory.—Colossians, iii. 4.

Before study of Lesson read I. Corinthians, xv., 12-58.

In the subject of a general resurrection we have another example of the progress of Paul's ideas. It is plain that in the early part of his ministry he laid great emphasis on the belief that, when the Christ should come again, there would be a general uprising of those who died in the faith, to join with the living believers in forming the Messianic kingdom. The belief in a general resurrection was not original with the Christians. It was one of the points of difference between the Pharisees and Sadducees, the former accepting, the latter denying it. Paul made use of this difference to arouse dissension in the Sanhedrin, before which he was brought for trial at the time of his arrest at Jerusalem (Acts, xxiii., 6, 7). Paul based his argument chiefly on the fact of the resurrection of Jesus (I. Cor., xv.); and, as the general rising would be inaugurated by the second advent of the Messiah, he of course expected it during his own lifetime, or that of his own generation (I. Thess., iv., 16, 17). It was his preaching of the resurrection which turned the Athenians from him when they heard his address on Mars Hill (Acts, xvii., 32), and the resurrection was at the foundation of his reply to the Thessalonians who queried as to the fate of those Christians who died before the Christ came again (I. Thess., iv., 13-18).

After Paul began his work in Corinth his mind turned from this and similar questions, which are of a controversial nature, to others which he felt to be more practical. He determined not to know anything among the Corinthians, "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified" (I. Cor. ii., 2). He saw the Corinthians given over to luxury, worshipping gold and splendor, longing always for great spectacles, for pomp, for glory. Should he allow the faith which he taught to so descend as to merely promise them a new glory, a greater spectacle? Should his Messiah condescend to be a mere competitor with the Cæsars and their corrupt representatives in the east, as a dispenser of patronage, as an organizer of display? No! To these people sated with shows and gauds he would present the glory of self-sacrifice. Crowned suffering should compete with crowned greed; love, even unto death, should enter the lists with the selfish and heartless struggle of each for his own personal interest. Not the "mysteries of God," but the sufferings of the Christ should be his theme thenceforward. It would not, of course, be expected that the change would be an abrupt one. Old ideas cannot be eliminated by a sudden stroke, and new ones take their places. It is plain, however, that Paul has left behind him the idea of a great and spectacular grave-delivery, and is thinking chiefly of the greatness of the eternal life that opens up before him. He has not given up the idea of a speedy coming of Christ, with all that accompanied such coming (I. Cor., xv., 52), but the importance of the time and details of that reappearance have shrunk into comparative insignificance.

In the latter part of his argument Paul deals with some practical difficulties which some have found in the idea of the rising of the dead. "How are they raised, and with what manner of body do they come?" Paul's answer has been used by some to support a belief in the resurrection of the material body. It is not easy to see how such an interpretation can be put upon the language of the apostle. Is the new plant that grows from the death of the seed the same body as the seed? Why, then, should the "celestial body" be supposed to be the same as the "terrestrial body," especially when Paul makes a point of contrasting them. The statement seems to mean about this: You are very foolish to worry yourselves about the nature of the risen body. God gives appropriate bodies to all things, and may safely be allowed to attend to this matter for himself (xv., 38). The writer rises into splendid poetry under the inspiration of his theme:

"It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption;
It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power;
It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."

In connection with the once important doctrine, still incorporated in certain historic creeds, of the resurrection of the body, we should note also the apostle's statement that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven." Nevertheless, the doctrine came to be established, and some amusing discussion has been preserved for us from the great dignitaries of the mediæval church, as where St. Augustine gravely considers the question as to who shall own the material in cases of cannibalism, and decides in favor of the eaten rather than the eater because of his prior claim.

In Paul's later experience the importance of death, and therefore of rising therefrom, fades away still more. Death is a mere incident in continuous life—an incident not to be dreaded, but rather to be longed for, as involving a closer comradeship with the Master; "Being in this tabernacle we groan, being burdened, not because we wish to be unclothed, but because we wish to be clothed upon, that what is subject to death may be swallowed up by life" (II. Cor., v., 4). And finally death is shifted from mere mortal dissolution, coming to be rather the condition of those who have not yet risen to the broader life under the control of the Christ. "You being dead through your trespasses . . . did he quicken together with him, having forgiven us all our trespasses" (Col., ii., 13). "Having been buried with him in baptism wherein ye were also raised with him through faith in the working of God who raised him from the dead" (Col., ii., 12). "For ye died and your life is hid with Christ in God." No more does the apostle think of an appointed day with sound and glory and a general uprising. All men are dead in sin; all men may find life eternal by faith in Christ.

Is not this final view worked out of the vital experiences of the great apostle, that which we find also in the teaching of him who was the great apostle's Master? Only he who loseth his commonplace, un consecrated life really finds life that is worthy of the name. Those who hold fast to the mere existence of selfish struggle have not yet passed out of death, have not yet risen into life. Has the Christian church of to-day, have the individual Christians, have we, found this life?

CULTURE.—Culture can no longer imply a knowledge of everything—not even a little knowledge of everything. It must be content with general knowledge of some things, and a real mastery of some small portion of the human store. Here is a profound modification of the idea of cultivation which the nineteenth century has brought about. What portion or portions of the infinite human store are most proper to the cultivated man? The answer must be, those which enable him with his individual personal qualities, to deal best and sympathize best with nature and with other human beings.—[President Charles W. Eliot.]

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, TENTH MONTH 3, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

SILENT MEETINGS.

IT is usual among us to exalt the dignity and beauty of silent worship when we speak of it, and then proceed to suggest ways and means of having shorter periods of it in our meetings. Occasionally some one feels that a silent meeting is a "make believe," the only real periods of religious instruction being during the presentation of thought or exhortation by some one present. While few Friends hold this extreme view, there is no reasonable doubt that some of our members have a feeling that so much silence is wasted time, and a spirit of restlessness sometimes prevails, which prompts the suggestion of this and that device for furnishing "food" for contemplation without resorting to a fixed order of service. This unrest is evidence that the silent meetings are not serving the purpose that the devotional hour is supposed to accomplish for us. If Friends' meetings based upon silent communion with the Father do not serve our highest need, then we should at once arrange for addresses, readings, etc., to supply the need. But before we vary from the custom of our fathers in the conduct of meetings, we need to feel an assurance that the present basis of the hour for worship is not capable of being the most effective means of help to those who assemble and strive to use the silence well. This assurance we do not feel, and therefore approach the subject from the standpoint that it is our application, not our plan of worship that is at fault.

No one questions our need for instruction, the advantages of conference together and comparison of views and experiences, our need of intellectual food, intelligently and constantly presented. The Society of Friends amply provides for this need through Friends' papers, the First-day School, the Philanthropic meetings, the Friends' Associations and the General Conference. Those who have ability to contribute thoughts and facts for the consideration of others are afforded ample opportunity to freely use both tongue and pen; and those who desire to hear the presentation of themes of general interest may find abundant occasions for the satisfaction of this feeling without in any way encroaching upon the province of the meeting for worship. The latter holds a distinct and pre-eminently important place in our religious organization. We have spiritual natures that need food in order to develop strong and vigorous spiritual life. We draw this strength from the source and center of strength and power which we call God, directly, if our channels of spiritual connection are open and ready, or through human instruments, if we are not yet able to be still and know the voice of the inspeaking God.

In this single hour set apart for turning our hearts toward the great heart of the Infinite and receiving of His vitalizing power, we do not want to be fed upon the intellectual treasures of any man's brain. The latter may be of great value in their own time and place, but their contemplation during the period of worship would crowd out our one stated opportunity to leave the perplexities of intellectual pursuits and open the way for God to minister to our needs.

The exalted idea of silent worship is the most thoroughly spiritual form of religious observance that has yet entered into the thought of man. Why then this unrest and effort to substitute some form of expression in its place? Because we grow slowly into the stature of complete spiritual manhood, because the intangible barrier between mental and spiritual concepts makes it difficult to separate their activities, because it is infinitely easier to displace our own wandering and often unprofitable thoughts by the entrance of intellectual ideas, than to quiet the pulses of care and make ready in silence for the operations of the spirit.

The symbolic religion of the Hebrews, the litanies and confessions of faith of to-day all attest the extreme difficulty of realizing spirit apart from tangible expression. The history of the past shows a few rare souls who walked with God; the masses of the people whom they lived among seemed only dimly to apprehend Him. We expect much when we look for every member of our body to be capable of putting away self and its interests at a stated hour and coming into a state of divine communion which is our method of worship.

We need infinite patience in leading the way through the intellectual efforts of our many agencies for the instruction and training of Friends, to an ability to really worship God in stillness,—an ability which brings to us the fullest realization of the divine within us.

Those upon whom rests the responsibility of bringing the meetings to a close, should realize the difficulty on the part of many attenders of making a long silent meeting really a continued season of help and strength, and close the meeting when it seems probable that it has served its highest purpose for that day, rather than according to a traditional standard of length.

FRIENDS who are looking about for the best means of taking up and carrying on Bible study work, but who have not the time nor opportunity to go to college or university to get their start in such study, will be interested in The American Institute of Sacred Literature, Hyde Park, Chicago, Ill. This institute, which is under the control of the Council of Seventy, including the leading biblical scholars of the country, offers correspondence courses in the study of the English Bible, as well as in Hebrew and in New Testament Greek. In a folder just received, among other reasons given why those interested in religious work might well take an active part in promoting Bible study in the meetings to which they belong are the following: Because the air is full—for good or ill—of questions about the Bible; because if religious leaders do not inform themselves on these questions great harm is likely to result—on the one hand from an unreasoning and unreasonable insistence upon old views as necessary to be maintained—"else Christianity is lost"—and on the other, by the rash and unreasonable adoption of new views; because, though one may not set up as a biblical scholar, and may not be able to answer all questions which may be raised by First-day school teachers and by the young people, he can at least set the example of open-mindedness, with hospitality to and confidence in the truth, and help bring about a more wide-spread knowledge of the great truths of the Bible; because nothing contributes so much to good results in religious work, to steadfastness, stability and strength as steady, systematic study of the Bible. The circular adds very suggestively that the Bible for general use is far better to furnish subjects and material for thought and contemplation, and is quite as varied and appropriate to modern life, as the morning paper, with its reports of political disturbance. Those who think they may have a little time to give to the study of the Bible under scholarly and sound guidance, will do well to correspond with the Institute.

THE results of temperance teaching in the schools are becoming so evident to liquor men that they leave no stone unturned to bring it into disrepute. There is just enough injudicious teaching of this subject (as of all other subjects) to give some color to the charges that are made, and from time to time articles appear in the newspapers attacking the manner in which physiology is taught. An incomplete report of the proceedings of the Pennsylvania Medical Society at York last week, which appeared in some of the Philadelphia papers, has been widely copied and gives a very erroneous impression of the action of that society. The facts of the case are these:

A few years ago a committee was appointed by this society to examine school text-books on physiology. Nearly all the books on the subject were passed in review by the committee, and the criticisms upon them were published in the Pennsylvania Medical Journal. These criticisms were answered in detail in a pamphlet issued last spring by the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Pennsylvania, entitled "Science the Arbitrator," copies of which were sent to 9000 Pennsylvania physicians. The report of this text-book committee, read at the recent convention of the Pennsylvania Medical Society, severely condemned the books indorsed by the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and this report has been published in a number of papers as the action of the convention itself. The truth of the matter is that the tone of the report was offensive to the many good friends of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the convention. In the executive council the report was laid on the table by a vote of 35 to 5, and the committee was discharged. Afterward the incoming president was authorized to appoint a new committee of five to continue the work of examination and scientific comment upon the text-books of physiology used in the schools.

BIRTHS.

HANAN.—At 839 West End avenue, New York City, Seventh month 31st, to Addison Garthwaite and Lillian Josephine Hanan, a son named Leonard McDowell Hanan.

JONES.—At Fellowship, N. J., Fifth month 15th, 1903, to Charles D. and Hannah Lippincott Jones, a daughter, who is named Emma.

WAY.—At Starstown, Pa., Eighth month 24th, to Edwin B. and Martha W. Way, a son, who is named David Caleb Way.

MARRIAGES.

BUSHONG—RAKESTRAW.—At the home of the bride's mother, Christiana, Pa., under the care of Sadsbury Monthly Meeting of Friends, Ninth month 10th, Marvin Eavenson Bushong, son of Gilbert and Edith K. Bushong, to Lydia Rakestraw, daughter of Mary Jane and the late Fenny Rakestraw.

WITTIER—BAYNES.—Under the care of Blue River Monthly Meeting, near Salem, Indiana, on Ninth month 9th, 1903, at the home of the bride's parents, Isaac and Minnie Baynes, Curtis Wittier to Maggie Baynes.

DEATHS.

BRITT.—At Mamaroneck, N. Y., Ninth month 16th, 1903, after eighteen weeks' suffering, David F. Britt, in the 83d year of his age.

The deceased had been prominently identified with the interests of the town for sixty years. Besides conducting a large grocery business, he was a director of the First National and Union Savings Bank and a member of the Board of Trade. He was a birthright member of the Society of Friends and his interest in its welfare continued through life. His success in business was owing to his industry and strict integrity. He was universally honored and respected, and all his fellow-citizens mourn his death. * * *

BUNTING.—At San Francisco, California, Ninth month 27th, 1903, Alice Griffen, wife of Joseph Newburg Bunting, and daughter of Jane A. and the late Stephen Griffen, in the 41st year of her age; a member of New York Monthly Meeting.

CLOUD.—In Lansdowne, Pa., Ninth month 24th, 1903, Herbert Scull, son of J. Cooper and Mary S. Cloud, in the 21st year of his age.

This young man was an earnest member of Lansdowne Monthly Meeting, taking an active part in its business, and had also served faithfully for several years as librarian of the First-day school. He was beloved by old and young, and all who knew him are better because of his beautiful life.

GARRETT.—Third-day morning, Eighth month 25th, Henry Garrett, in his 79th year. He was a regular attender of Wilmington, Delaware, Meeting.

MATHER.—Third-day morning, Eighth month 25th,

Joseph M. Mather, in his 85th year. He was a regular attendant of Wilmington, Delaware, Meeting.

SMITH.—At her home in Lower Makefield township, Bucks county, Pa., after a long illness, Ninth month 24th, 1903, Jane B. Smith, widow of the late Oliver P. Smith, in her 78th year. She was a daughter of Seneca and Ann (Briggs) Beans. Interment at Makefield burying-ground.

WATSON.—Mary L., wife of B. Frank Watson, at her home in Doylestown township, First-day afternoon, Ninth month 13th, 1903, aged 55 years, of paralysis of the nerves of the stomach.

The deceased was a daughter of the late James and Sara B. Malone, of Buckingham. She was a life-long member of the Society of Friends. A husband and two daughters, Letitia and Edith, the latter a teacher, are left to mourn her loss. She quietly sleeps in God's acre, and will be remembered more tenderly with each year that brings her loved ones nearer her and home.

"One less at home!

The charmed circle broken—A dear face
Missed day by day from its usual place
One less the pilgrim's daily cross to bear,
One more the crown of the blest to wear

At home in heaven." E. R. W.

WILLIAMSON.—In West Chester, Pa., at Friends' Boarding Home, on Third-day, Ninth month 22d, Amy Pim, widow of the late John P. Williamson, in the 80th year of her age; a member of Chester Monthly Meeting of Friends. Interment at Media, Delaware county, Pa.

SOCIETY NOTES.

A FRIEND writing from Highlands Creek, near Salem, Ind., (within the limits of Illinois Yearly Meeting) says, "Our meeting this beautiful day was one of deep interest, rendered the more so by the fullness of young life, and not without a thought akin to autumn days, as many of these are on the eve of going out in different parts of the State, returning to their work of teaching and other occupation. . . . The spoken word to-day was from the advice of the Master to the young man who queried what he should do to inherit eternal life. A message was also given from the words, 'The Master is here and calleth for thee.' In the reverent silence that followed the unspoken prayer went up that we might always keep our heart in readiness to hear the Master's call."

Members of the Conference Program Committee who expect to attend the meeting of the committee at Buck Hill Falls can go on train leaving Broad Street Station at 7 a. m. or 12 m. on Seventh-day.

The D. L. & W. Railroad has made arrangements for special autumn excursions on Tenth month 3d to the Pocono region. Round-trip tickets will be sold from New York, Brooklyn, Hoboken, Newark, Passaic and Paterson at a rate of $2.00. These tickets will be good only on regular trains on Tenth month 3d, and will be limited to return to Tenth month 5th, 1903. Half excursion tickets will be sold for children between the ages of five and twelve.

Wilson S. Doane was at Fall Creek Meeting First-day, and spoke beautifully of David standing at the open window looking toward Jerusalem, making the application to us of this day having the windows of our hearts open so we can hear our Heavenly Father's voice speaking to us now in the 20th century.

J. L. T.

YOUNG FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The executive committee of the Conference of Young Friends' Associations held its regular autumn meeting in the Y. F. A. Building in Philadelphia. Thirty members were present representing twenty-three Associations. All the yearly meetings were represented except three. The principal business before the committee was to arrange for the autumn conference of Young Friends' Association. The conference is to be held in Wilmington, Delaware, on the 14th of Eleventh month. The program for the two sessions—morning and afternoon—was discussed and left in the hands of a small committee. It will be published in full when finally arranged.

The Committee on the Advancement of Association Work reported that it had communicated with 41 Associations and received response from 27. This committee arranged for a meeting in the interests of Young Friends' Associations in connection with the Central Committee meeting at Salem, Ohio, and to it was assigned the duty of preparing the program of the Young Friends' Association sessions of the General Conference at Toronto next summer.

Since the last meeting two new Associations have been formed. A letter from the Richmond, Indiana, Association was read, expressing appreciation of the value of membership in the General Association even though distant from the center where the conferences are held. It was remarked that the Richmond Young Friends meet every First-day evening for devotional meetings; instead of merely holding meetings in which they talk about religion, they hold religious meetings. Instead of giving all our attention to study and teaching of history young Friends must learn to preach the gospel.

A nominating committee was appointed to bring forward the names of Friends to represent the Associations on the Central Committee of the General Conference.

The Executive Committee will meet hereafter on the third Seventh-day of Ninth and Third month. A special meeting will be called between the sessions of the conference in Wilmington.

The Wilmington Association is asked to provide a chairman for the conference, the Media Association a secretary.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

FRIENDS IN MEETING AND HOME.

ALLIANCE, CANTON, COLERAIN, MT. PLEASANT,
EAST PITTSBURG.

My friend Susan W. Janney and I left Salem, Ohio, for Alliance on the morning of Second-day, Ninth month 7th. The meeting nearest this city is the one attended by Joseph S. Hartley, which is known as West Meeting. The house is five or six miles from Alliance, but a trolley line from that city runs within half a mile of it. Some of the members live as far away from the meeting-house in an opposite direction. But two meetings are now held here each month, the monthly meeting, and a meeting for worship on the first First-day in the month, which is followed by a meeting of the Young Friends' Association; during the winter this association meets at private houses. As we were not able to attend this First-day meeting it was thought that a parlor meeting held in Alliance in the evening would be better attended than an appointed meeting in the meeting-house.

In the afternoon we took a ride into the country, making several calls on Friends. We enjoyed the fertile fields on either hand and the substantial farm-houses. In the yard of every home in town and country there was a wealth of flowers in full bloom, including geraniums, fuchsias, asters and variegated double petunias. We were especially impressed with the abundance of quince trees laden with tempting golden fruit.

At the parlor meeting in the evening, held at the home of John and Edith Mather, nearly thirty were present, including the family of our host. These were all Friends, descendants of Friends or married to Friends. Before and after the half-hour's religious meeting there was pleasant social mingling. Several of those who do not often attend meetings expressed their strong attachment to the Society, saying that other forms of religious worship do not meet their spiritual needs as well as Friends' meetings.

On Third-day morning we took the train for Mt. Pleasant to complete the service in that neighborhood arranged by Anna B. Walker and others. We were glad of a wait of two hours in Canton as it gave us an opportunity of visiting the tomb of ex-President McKinley. The casket containing his remains is in a large vault at the entrance to the cemetery and may be seen through the iron gate, but no one is allowed to come within twenty feet of it. Two United States soldiers are constantly on guard night and day, pacing to and fro in front and rear of the vault. Thirty-six soldiers are stationed here who have nothing to do but to take turns doing sentinel duty and drill a few hours daily. Every two months the soldiers on duty here are relieved and thirty-six others sent in their stead. A flag-pole on an eminence just beyond the cemetery marks the spot where the McKinley monument is to stand. When the body of this president whom the people loved is laid in its final resting-place it is to be hoped that a guard will no longer be thought necessary.

The cemetery is tastefully laid out, containing fine trees, beautiful shrubs and many imposing monuments. At some distance from the entrance are the graves of William McKinley's parents and two infant children; these are marked with neat stones almost small enough for a Friends' graveyard.

On Fourth-day we attended Short Creek Monthly Meeting. Considerable life was manifested though the attendance was smaller than usual, there being fourteen women and five men present. Some of the men who are in the habit of attending were detained by sickness or other sufficient reasons. Owing to other engagements Susan W. Janney left in the afternoon for Pennsylvania.

Some of the Friends belonging to Short Creek and West Grove are quite active in the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. On Sixth-day afternoon I attended the regular meeting of the Georgetown Loyal Temperance Legion, and talked to the children concerning the care they should take of their bodies. Many of the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union were present and after the children were dismissed we had a mothers' meeting. What I said to the mothers concerning the training of children was based on observations made in many homes and my experience as a teacher.

On First-day morning I attended Concord Meeting, which is a mile from the village of Colerain. The house is a neat brick building, built eight or ten years ago on the site of the old house. It is smaller than the old building and has no partition. Perhaps the meetings would be larger if the house were in the village, but some of the regular attenders live some distance in the other direction. There were about fifteen present at the meeting, four of whom had driven over with me from West Grove. All remained for the First-day School class, which is conducted by an able leader. We read from Friends' Lesson Leaves the 30th lesson for both intermediate and adult classes and had an animated discussion suggested by the former.

In the evening a meeting was held in Colerain under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in a hall built and owned by them. There is no church in the village and this is used by several denominations for occasional religious meetings. The hall was well filled, Methodists, Presbyterians and the three branches of Friends being represented in the audience. A talk on the nature and effects of tobacco was well received. At its close a Presbyterian minister heartily endorsed what had been said, and gave additional reasons for abstaining from this poisonous weed.

This section of Ohio is good farming land, and there are many substantial brick farm-houses. These are usually built with a hall through the middle, two large rooms on each side, and a kitchen in the rear, one of the ground floor rooms being used as a bedroom. The whole country is underlaid with a vein of coal five to eight feet thick; many of the farmers have sold their acreage of coal to mining corporations, retaining the surface for farm purposes. Keeping a house warm is not a serious consideration here; by driving one or two miles any farmer may obtain coal at the opening of a mine for $1.25 a ton, or if he burns "slack" (fine coal) in his furnace, as many of them do, he can get it for 37 cents a ton.

On Second-day afternoon a visit was paid to the colored school at Emerson, a mile from Mt. Pleasant. The school term having opened that morning, only fourteen pupils were present, but in winter the attendance reaches thirty. This school is taught by an intelligent and gentlemanly colored man. I gave an object lesson on the hand and arm, with hints in regard to proper food, fresh air, cleanliness and industry.

From five to seven o'clock the same day the children of the Short Creek First-day school met on the lawn of Abel and Amy G. Walker (my temporary home) and we played games and told stories. At eight o'clock several Friends went with me to the Emerson Baptist Church (colored) where we had appointed a meeting. The attendance was good, and one third of the audience was composed of men and boys. My message to them was one of encouragement, its purpose being to arouse in them a desire for a higher life. At its close a Friend whose childhood was spent in Emerson, but who has lived elsewhere for thirty years, spoke of the great improvement she had noticed in the homes and bearing of the colored people in that time. The colored people of this village nearly all own their homes; these are neat buildings, most of which contain several rooms, and are surrounded by flourishing gardens and fruit trees.

On Third-day afternoon some of us paid a visit to the public school in Mt. Pleasant. The building is neat in appearance though not very modern, and the pupils appeared to be doing good work. After some time spent in one of the classes the pupils, 150 in number, assembled in the high school room and I gave a half-hour's talk on the advantages of abstaining from tobacco. After this the principal of the school, who is past middle age, told the pupils of the struggle he had had years ago to give up using tobacco and his final victory. Brief remarks were also made by Mercy Griffith Hammond and the County President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

In the evening a Woman's Christian Temperance Union lawn meeting was held at the home of one of the members, at which over forty were present. The only man in evidence besides the host was our staunch temperance friend, Richard E. Roberts, who encouraged the women by some remarks, as well as by his presence. My own part on the evening's program was to give an informal talk on methods of advancing scientific temperance instruction, equal rights for women and other departments of work.

On Fourth-day morning I bade farewell to my kind friends in Ohio and started homeward, taking the Mt. Pleasant stage-coach (hark they call it out here) for a twelve-mile ride to Wheeling. Although there had been no rain for six weeks, with the exception of one shower, the turnpike road was not very dusty, the air was cool, the sky cloudless, and the purple asters smiled undiscouraged by the roadside. With the exception of a poor old woman, whom the driver carried free for a few miles, I was the only passenger, and I thoroughly enjoyed the ride.

I stayed over night at the home of Courtland Lukens and his daughter Maggie in East Pittsburg, a busy, noisy, smoky little town 12 miles from the city of Pittsburg. The Friends of Pittsburg and vicinity had been invited to meet me there in the evening, but some of those most interested were away from their homes, and others were daunted by the distance and the difficulty of finding a strange place after night. The only ones who came were the daughter and son-in-law from next door, and two young men, one from Pitcairn and one from Pittsburg. We spent a pleasant social evening, the chief theme of conversation being the leading principles of Friends and the best ways of advancing them. The number of Friends in Pittsburg who are really interested in the Society is increasing, and it looks as though there could be a live Friends' Association there if some one who lives in the city would take hold and give it a start. E. L.

THERE are now 717 college Young Men's Christian Associations, equaling in number the city associations.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

A TEN DAYS' TOUR IN ULSTER.

EARLY one morning last month I took steamship for Bangor, County Down, passing the large steamers in course of construction along the shipyards of Harland and Wolfe, also naval vessels docked for repairs. An undulating hill country dotted with suburban residences extends for miles till reaching Bangor, a pretty seaside resort. A number of yachts are riding in the bay and across to Carrickfergus Roads awaiting a regatta towards evening. A fine view is obtained of the old ruined Castle Carrickfergus on north side of the Lough and stretching eastward a splendid high range of sea-girt towering rocks come to view, round whose headlands numerous caverns, smugglers' caves called the "Gobbins," have been excavated by the ocean during past ages. By means of stepping stones and narrow bridges of iron and wood thousands visit and climb round for a mile or two during summer. After a storm, the breakers and spray make a magnificent spectacle.

The Scotch coast, and Isle of Man are visible on a clear day, and numerous steamers are seen plying to and from Belfast to various parts of the world. In the afternoon returned to the city, took train for Lurgan, an old-fashioned town a few miles beyond Lisburn, both places well known in Irish history and Quaker lore. Entering the old meeting-house yard I met one of our ministers, who lives on the premises, mowing the grass in the grave yard. He is in the linen business, keeps a cow, and attends to the meeting-house. I boarded a few days with an overseer, living also in one of the holdings belonging to Friends, with his four nieces, who are in his care and two of whom attend Friends' boarding-school. They liked to hear all about America and wanted me to teach them American games. Next day went to Postadown. It was Fair Day and it was truly amusing to hear the dealings and peculiar ways of the country people. Inspecting a large linen mill I found them weaving the best damask table linen such as I told them I had sold years ago in Chappaqua, with the Postadown stamp on the piece. In the afternoon walked four miles out to Charles Lamb's nursery and jam factory at Rich Hill, and was much interested watching the women as well as men bringing in loads of strawberries and raspberries, some red currants and barrels of black currants, also gooseberries, of which he had a large plantation—hundreds of bushes, say three to four feet high, all loaded with rich red berries; at intervals were rows of dwarf apples and some pears though neither of these do as well as in the States. The small fruits are all boiled down to jam, and I tried hard to impress them to try and start a canning business, as one never sees any Mason's or other fruit jars as with us in America. They were high busy, as they say, as it was weck end, (another favorite word), and the fruit must be taken care of for the Day of Rest.

First-day attended adult Bible class, and morning meeting, then dined with Samuel Bell and brother and sister, residing a mile out of town. They have a beautiful location and grounds richly ornamented with tall yews, Scotch firs and Austrian pine, Auracarias, Petinosporas, and Thujas beside green-houses where tomatoes, peaches and grapes luxuriate. Engaged in the linen industry, one of the brothers visits New York frequently, so had an interesting good time. In the afternoon attended an outdoor mission meeting,—near 50 present. Some curious views expressed, but they enjoy these meetings during warm weather and they are quite frequent through Ulster. Evening meeting was opened by a minister reading a chapter from Luke and afterwards a Friend read from Hannah W. Smith's book, touching on good and evil being both necessary for our good and growth in grace if exercised thereby with patience. Rest of time was occupied as in Friends' usual manner.

Second-day walked out to Lough Neagh on which I enjoyed a row for an hour or two with two Friends' boys home on vacation. This is the largest lake in Ireland and same shape and size as the Isle of Man. An old myth relates how the giant ere stepping across to Scotland in a fit of anger seized the hill country where the lake now is, and carrying it over set it down in the sea making the Isle of Man.

Third-day attended Lisburn General Meeting of Friends' Ulster Provincial School, where Prof. Letts, of Belfast Queen's College, gave a fine educational address. Prizes were given out to many of the students, eight of whom passed examination for college preceptors, both boys and girls. After a bounteous lunch we all adjourned to the bath where the boys showed great skill in swimming matches, diving through hoops and after medals, also rescue work, saving life of one pretending to be half-drowned, etc. Boys' and girls' art gallery, photographs, designs, drawings, carpenter work and wood carving, etc., all very commendable, were next examined. I left them playing cricket, to take the evening train for Newcastle, some thirty-five miles southeast on Dundrum Bay, at the base of Sleive Donard, the first peak of the Mourne Mountains, about 1700 feet high and overlooking the ocean. In the hillside is a tunnel aqueduct $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles long, which conducts the water supply to Belfast. Crossing a small bay by row boat to Dundrum village I climbed the hill to an old ruined castle and tower some forty feet in diameter and seventy feet high, up which by stone steps had a grand view of the Mourne range and bays, sea and environs. The ruins cover over an acre, with its many ivy-covered walls and moat and dungeon and prison cells ranged in tiers on inside of tower. These all lead to meditation on the changes that ring out in the evolutions of the race.

Next day, strolled along early at base of mountain close to the rugged coast past headland and deep gorges and rock-bound shores, old moss and fern and vine-covered stone bridges under which the mountain streams rushed gladly down, mixed now and then with the music of the waves on the beach or the breakers on the rocks; stately ships pass by, sea birds hover over, and sky larks twittering till lost to sight, all nature joyful, and hillsides green, purple and yellow with ever changing variety of crops and grass. In this country the grass is mostly cut and bunched up in shocks, dried and kept for threshing out hayseed. American mowers and reapers are used but not often seen, and the plows are very heavy and much longer than in America. Passing Maggie's leap, (where she jumped over a deep chasm some six feet across with a basketful of eggs and never cracked one,) we come to the Bloody Bridge, the scene of some awful tragedy in battle waged centuries ago. Reaching Analong, a prettily located village close by the sea, rested at a farm house, partook of buttermilk and chatted with the family while eating some lunch taken with me. In this way one gets in touch with some of the inner life of people and they like to hear about America as so many have relatives there.

Before reaching Killeel had a most lovely view of the south side of mountain range some 25 or 30 miles and some rugged summits, and sketched the outlines. Beautiful white clouds of all shapes hovered round at times, bathing the tops of the hills, adding charms to the scenery. Nothing like a walk if you wish to thoroughly enjoy the country, especially along a rugged, rock-bound seacoast, with mountains thrown in the landscape. After a ten-mile stretch was glad to return from Killeel on top of the coach, or brake, and enjoyed a hearty meal ere retiring.

Next morning we, a party of three, had a row out beyond the bay to some smugglers' caves, and in one we entered though narrow, some 200 feet between perpendicular rocks, say 50 feet high. At far end the dark, gurgling waters sounded mysteriously as the rowers spun their yarns of old smuggling times. The air on the water was delicious, and we all felt invigorated on return to harbor. In the afternoon walked some six miles wandering through Lord Roden's demesne amid an array of gigantic forest trees, evergreen and deciduous. Over the mountain streams curious, narrow foot-bridges were laid, also under-layer old stone bridges overgrown with many and rare varieties of ferns, moss and creepers covering the arches looking centuries old. Cascades and lovely gorges and defiles varied the wooded views, and near the entrance stood in all its majesty the finest and largest specimen of the silver fir I ever saw. The main trunk fifteen feet from ground was some six feet in diameter, and with two main branches reached 108 feet with graceful pendants sweeping down to rear the ground on all sides. It was called the "Lord of the Forest."

Seventh-day—early breakfast and started on foot for Castlewellan, some six miles, on the way taking in the twelve arches, near which were two cromlechs, one composed of three upright stone pillars six feet high, on which was a solid rock of eighteen tons weight. How the Druids or Hittites ever raised such heavy rocks on these pedestals is a mystery. At Castlewellan walked two or three miles round Lord Annersley's grounds and lake. Back of the castle (where my Lord happened to be in his study) I ventured all through the superbly laid-out specimen gardens and lawn and greenhouses. Hundreds of rare evergreens, young and thrifty, and labeled with Latin names, tree ferns from Australia, palms from West Indies, and exotics and trees from all parts of the globe enchanted the eye and senses. The yew trees and holly, rhododendrons, laurel and box grow so tall, and often trimmed into fantastic shapes. Fuschias grow ten to twelve feet high, and round Newcastle form hedges miles in extent.

In the afternoon continued on foot eleven miles further through a rich hill country with many fine views, to the village of Rothfriesland, but this last walk was accompanied by a drenching rain and storm of wind for about two hours. Arriving at the Temperance Hotel, asked for a pair of blankets and jumped in bed as quickly as possible. Sleeping soundly for over two hours was awakened by the call, "Mr., your clothes are all dry." I was soon dressed and ready for a good tea, and truly thankful to escape a bad cold.

First-day was at their small meeting held in a very old stone house. Though strong efforts have been made of late years, true Quakerism seems nearly died out here. At 4 p. m. attended a mission meeting three miles out, to which about fifty came in spite of the rain. It was held in an upper room of a kind Presbyterian family, and we had a good meeting. Many sat on stools, boxes, etc., round the room, and across were benches. A dozen or so enjoyed a nice tea prepared by our sweet-spirited hostess, and in the evening Dr. Clark, of Bessbrook, drove me some twelve miles to his home, where I stayed the night, and next morning took train to Belfast to see the King and Queen.

S. R. SMITH.

Belfast, Eighth month 19th, 1903.

EDUCATIONAL.

THE VALUE OF ATHLETICS IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF CHARACTER.¹

YEARS ago when the head of the family was the general provider, when he raised the grain and gathered it by hand and ground his own meal, when he did his own butchering and curing of the meat, when he built his own house, did his own horse-shoeing and blacksmithing, when he made the shoes for his own family, when he raised the flax and gathered the wool, when he did the weaving and spinning,—in fact, when the men were trained to do all kinds of work that was necessary to have done for the happiness and comfort of the home, and when the women were taught to do all kinds of housework as well as help with the weaving and general providing for the family; when, too, the life was largely that of the open air, and not closed up in small, ill-ventilated rooms into which the sun scarcely, if ever, entered, or in offices, factories, stores, shops, or other places of confinement; then there existed a strong and hearty race of people, who were nearly always well and happy, and not much was heard on the subject of athletics.

But in these later years conditions have so much changed that we do not find one person doing all kinds of work, but instead each person has a particular line of work to do, leaving some one else to take another, and instead of any of us being independent we each must depend upon thousands for our daily comforts. Along with this division of labor and specialization has come the need of physical training or athletics.

It has long been known that man was a three-fold being, physical, intellectual and spiritual. God plans his work to be symmetrical and by experience man has learned that to cultivate one of these three, or two of them without at the same time the third one, is not carrying out the plan of his Creator and that he must suffer some punishment as a penalty. For a long time after there came the division of labor, the race was still a strong one physically, and it did not realize the fact that special training of the body was necessary for the maintenance of the human race, but gradually one disease after another fell upon us, and death claimed early the most promising of the rising generations. A study of conditions of races, both past and present, revealed the fact that proper attention was not being given to the body of man; as a result from this condition of affairs the gymnasium has been built, physical directors have been obtained and various systems of athletics have originated. All the large and many of the smaller educational institutions are giving a great deal of attention to this important subject at the present time. Not only the so-called educational institutions, but many religious organizations and even manufacturing companies are giving attention to athletics. What are the results? What change is being wrought upon the human family? It is not the purpose of this paper to answer all of these, but more particularly the value of athletics in the development of character: even then the term athletics is so broad—that is, it covers so many forms of exercise and games—that only a few generalizations can be given in a paper of this kind. To begin with, let me say that there is much prejudice in some circles against athletics in all forms, some of which is well founded, but much of which arises from an insufficient knowledge of the true facts, relations and conditions. Suffice it to say that those who condemn the whole subject in a wholesale manner are those who have themselves never taken an active part, or interested themselves enough in the subject to make a thorough examination of the real conditions.

Perhaps to the young student just entering the field of athletics the moral effect is not so evident as the physical one; through the natural activities of child life he is prompted to take part, but he finds that there are others who can do the feats which he is trying to do, even better than he, and he must learn his first great lesson of patience, for it is only by long preparation, by regular practice, by right living, and by perseverance, that at last he is successful in accomplishing that which he perhaps tried to do long ago at his first attempt.

On the athletic field is a good place to study the nature of those taking part. At first, if something goes wrong with some one he will be inclined to get angry; this he is soon taught will not do. If he wishes to succeed he must learn to hold his temper and show what is known as a true gentlemanly spirit at all times. If he learns this one lesson of self-control, he will find it very valuable later in life. Again, in a contest, such as a race, some boys want to get a start before the others, which would give them an unfair chance; if they do this they are put behind the others and then have farther to run; thus they soon learn that they must act fairly and be honest with those with whom they are associated.

With the many different branches of athletics there is abundant opportunity for every one to develop a splendid physique. Some say that as there is plenty of work to do, why not spend this energy that is given to athletics on something that is worth while. Let us see what it is that is worth while? Many of the answers to this question will include the gaining of wealth. Is that worth while? Is it more valuable than health? Even if it were, what work shall the person do?

There is no form of labor that brings all the different parts of the body into action as do the different forms of athletics; but rather each overtaxes some parts and requires nothing of others, and this does not maintain the symmetrical form that we had as little children. Even if labor could develop the body fully and symmetrically, as is done by the different forms of athletics, there are other reasons why it could not be substituted. It is the nature of the child to play. Is this merely to get exercise? No! more than that, there is something about it that greatly pleases the child and makes it very happy. Is it not then in harmony with the Divine plan? Now athletics are regular games for grown-up children based upon scientific principles.

It is needless to add that these different athletic contests are very popular. Great numbers are attracted to witness the performance of those who have carefully trained themselves and are now able to take part in public games. What are the effects of such a game? Let us examine a few of them. We will begin first with the little children. The game is the subject of their conversation, they are interested in the result, and especially interested in those who did excellent work in the game. They, child-like, then are soon starting similar games and trying to do just as the successful athletes did. This furnishes them with good exercise and at the same time gives employment to their minds. Is this not better than having them idle, or lounging on street corners, or getting into some form of mischief? They have been training themselves to observe the essentials and to remember. Now as to the older members of the audience. They have been interested, their minds have been relieved, they have learned to admire the strong, and the enduring and the fine development, and while their minds are thus engaged they are not thinking of crime or vice or other improper living. Now the effect on the athletes themselves. In order that an athlete may have a place on a team, he must go into training, as it is called; that is, he must take the very best possible care of his body. He must be careful of his diet, he must be regular with his exercise, regular with his eating and sleeping. He is not allowed to drink, smoke, or carouse around. He must be obedient to those who have charge of the team's work. He must not be selfish and try to win all the honors for himself, but he must work for the welfare of the team of which he is a part. Thus it is seen that while young and building up a strong body, the athlete is learning just those lessons that must be learned in later life. The athletic field is a small community, as it were, and there the participants must be responsible for the order and decorum of the place. If there is any quarrelling, it is usually among the audience and not with the teams themselves. I have seen great friendship grow up between teams that were opposing each other in contests during successive seasons. This friendship is also found to be very strong among members of the same team; sometimes such members are more intimate with each other than brothers.

¹ Read by Lorin H. Bailey, formerly of George School, at a meeting of the Central Committee, Salem, Ohio, Eighth month 28th, 1903.

If in any contest any one should be so unfortunate as to get hurt in any way, usually any one on either team is willing to make any sacrifice in order to do something that will in some way be a favor to the unfortunate person. They have a common interest, and you all know how that tends to make people closer friends, to have more sympathy and love for one another. When are two persons enemies? is it not when they have no common interest and love for each other? If this love could be established this enmity would disappear. Work in athletics surely tends to increase love for one another. In a contest, all cannot win, some must lose. So the athletes learn how to take a defeat as well as a victory. This is something which some people never seem to learn, but those who have learned it are in a position to receive the admiration of others, yes, even of those who have been the victors. But a defeat sometimes is as valuable to a team as a victory, because then they get down to hard work, and go to training with a determination which is sure to bring success. Each one tries to do a little better than he did before. Now this is a very desirable condition to have any person's mind in. When a person is trying to improve his present condition, he is at the same time bringing out the finer qualities of his nature. The way to elevate the human race is to bring out the very best that there is in each individual; if this is carried out completely then we have elevated the race to that extent. The last point that I shall mention is that athletics develop a strong body, which is able to ward off many diseases, and causes the person to be in good spirits. He feels well and stands up straight like a man, and is ready to look the whole world in the face. With his body in this attitude it is impossible now to think of higher and better things, because he is now in harmony with the spirit of Christ.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE NOTES.

Fifth-day, Ninth month 17th, the College year opened. In many respects a decided advancement is manifest. Firstly—the College has matriculated the largest Freshman class on record; secondly, the Faculty which was so efficient last year is still intact, with a few exceptions, viz.: Dr. Kleene, Professor of Economics, and Dr. Cummings, Instructor in Physical Culture.

Aside from a few changes in the household staff, due to resignation of Mary Satterthwaite, the life is the same.

Dr. Swain addressed the student body on First-day, the 20th, on the subject of "College Habits." His advice to young men was to retain their strong individuality unbiased and uninfluenced by unfavorable circumstances. The chief charm of college life is association, but the chief work is mental application.

Ninth month 24th the students listened to Professor Hoadley's lecture on "Southern California." Dr. Hoadley has spent some time in the West during the summer, and returned with valuable and interesting information, some of which was very much enjoyed by all who had the good fortune to be present. Accompanying the lecture was a display of blankets and pottery.

Dean Bond read a paper before the students at meeting on First-day, 27th, on "The Reality of Religion," which emphasized the fact that one is not held responsible for the wrongs of the whole world, but only for that small portion which he is.

F. N. P.

[Dean Bond's address will be published in the INTELLIGENCER next week.—EDITORS.]

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE LECTURE COURSE.

The many friends of the College, resident in the village and neighboring towns, have frequently expressed a desire to show their appreciation of the College Courses of Lectures by subscribing to them.

With this friendly expression in mind, the Lecture Committee has decided to ask the co-operation of the friends of the College, in the hope that the result will be a more frequent attendance on the part of our neighbors, and a better course of Lectures than the College alone could offer.

The Committee has secured for the year 1903-1904, the following evening entertainments, due notice of the dates of which will be published in the Phoenix, Friends' Intelligencer, and local papers:

The Saxophone Quartette, of Philadelphia; Mabelle C. Church, reading of the morality play, "Everyman"; Prof. J. Ernest Woodland, a lecturer on scientific subjects; John Manning, in a lecture recital on Chopin; Hon. Charles Landis, Congressman from Indiana; Leon Vincent, on the character of Lowell.

For the seventh evening, the Committee expects to secure N. Dwight Hillis, Hamilton W. Mabie, or some other equally well-known figure in the literary world.

Tickets for the course of seven entertainments will be offered at price of $1.00, reserved seats at $1.50; ticket of admission for a single evening, 50 cents; reserved seats, 15 cents extra.

A plan of the reserved seats for the course will be on view at Shirer's Drug Store, Swarthmore, where tickets and reserved seats may be secured. They may also be obtained by addressing the Chairman of the Committee, Benj. F. Battin, Swarthmore, Pa.

The first entertainment will be given by the Saxophone Quartette, on the evening of Fifth-day Tenth month 1st, at 8 o'clock.

BENJAMIN F. BATTIN, } Lecture Committee.
PAUL M. PEARSON, }

THE contract is soon to be awarded for the building of the magnificent terminal of the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio Railroads in Washington city, which is to be the finest railroad terminal in the world, as under the provisions of an act of Congress it must cost not less than $4,000,000, and conform in architectural effects to the Capitol, Congressional Library and other Federal buildings.

Dispatches from Manila show that the importation of opium in the Philippines, which in 1899 was 120,000 pounds, has in two years increased to three times as much under the administration of the United States. It is also found to be greatly on the increase in the United States. We need to adopt the Japanese policy of prohibition not only in the Philippines, but in our own country also.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

BUCKS FIRST-DAY SCHOOL UNION, LANGHORNE, PA.—The attendance at Bucks First-day School Union, which was held Ninth month 26th, in Middletown Meeting-house, was larger than usual. George H. Nutt, of George School, presided, and Edith Eyre, of Dolington, was secretary. The committee appointed to visit Fallsington First-day School reported that they were cordially received; as a result of their visit that school will continue its connection with the Union.

Informal reports were received from the nine schools composing the Union. Newtown reported that the experiment had been tried of holding the school continuously this year and that the attendance during the summer had exceeded their anticipation. Buckingham reported that they had two teachers for each class so that one could relieve the other as occasion required.

During the noon recess lunch was served in the school-house to those who had brought no boxes or baskets, with tea and coffee for all. The business committee, which met during the recess, decided to hold the meetings hereafter at places accessible by train or trolley, and as this would cause the Union to be held frequently in the same locality, all were requested to provide themselves with lunch in future. The next meeting will be held at Newtown.

At the opening of the afternoon session Cora Haviland Carver gave an address on "Hero Worship," which received the closest attention and opened to many a new line of thought. She said that the parent was the child's first hero. In school-days often some boy or girl who could do things better than he, became a hero to the child. During the period of adolescence children should make the acquaintance of some of the world's greatest moral heroes and thus become filled with high ideals. The thought should come gradually to the child that there is One who is greater than any human hero, to whom should be given the warmest admiration, the highest reverence and the deepest trust. When human heroes alone are worshiped, if these heroes prove faulty and disappoint their worshipers, these worshipers have nothing left to lean upon. The practical application of this is that each teacher should strive to be a hero to his class; the vital question for the teacher is, not what shall I teach the child, but what shall I do for myself that I may be more worthy? The aim of teacher and pupils should be, as they go up the hill of life, to reach forward with one hand to receive strength from those above, and backward with the other to give help to those below.

Several exercises were given by members of the Langhorne School, including an essay by Louisa P. Osmond, recitations by Reva Harding and Marguerite Bye, and a reading by William Longshore.

Echoes from Buck Hill Falls Assembly were given as follows: "Social Pleasures," by Maud E. Rice; "Administration of Oaths," by Stephen Betts; "The Idea of God," by Beulah Betts; "First-day School Teaching," by Abby K. Rice; and "Story Telling," by Martha Wilson. After a recitation by Edna Hillborn, of Newtown School, the Union adjourned.

YORK, PA.—On First-day Eighth month 8th, Jonathan Jessop read to the First-day school at York a paper on Mission Work, as follows: The history of the Christian religion is the history of missionary work. The doctrines preached by Jesus were radically different from any previously advanced, and when He commenced His active mission on earth He was alone; He gathered His disciples about Him from time to time, and it was by personal contact and instruction received in that way that they were prepared to go forth into the world and spread the Gospel. Without this missionary work there could have been no spread of Christ's teachings—there were no newspapers or books at that time. If Jesus had remained silent, had not given utterance to His doctrines, they could not have been spread. He could have lived and died and the world remained in darkness, at least until some other great teacher had appeared who was willing and able to take up the work.

Jesus was bitterly disappointed in the small results (seemingly) that He accomplished, knowing so well as He did know the needs of the world, and it is really very surprising that it has taken so long a time for the world to absorb the doctrines He set forth, as imperfectly as it has done. It would appear, when we reflect, that all our real happiness depends on our fidelity to his teachings, and that the world should be very much better than it now is—that we should all be much better than we are, and that it should not have taken 1900 years to so imperfectly spread the Christian religion over only a portion of the earth, leaving a large portion of it still in heathen darkness.

It is only those nations that have embraced Christianity that make and have made any substantial advance; the heathen nations are all far behind in all that makes life desirable.

It would appear that our duty to God and our fellow men demands that we all of us do what lies within our power to enlighten the world at home and abroad.

If our daily lives are what they should be, there will be an effect produced on those around us; every charitable institution has its effect, they prove the brotherhood of man as no amount of mere preaching could prove it, and all charitable and beneficial institutions are a part of Christianity. They are unknown in barbarous and heathen lands, and beneficial institutions enlarge and increase just in proportion as any country advances in enlightenment and Christianity.

There has been very much said, pro and con, about foreign missions, but if they are abandoned how are we to reach the foreigner?

We cannot live for ourselves alone, and slow and discouraging as the work is, it must be continued until the light of Christianity has reached every people.

We have right at home ample room for missionary work, and yet there is no one in this broad land that could not come within the influence of Christian teachings if he would.

It requires constant effort at home and abroad to hold the ground we have already gained, and we must make greater efforts to eliminate all the dark spots and make earth the Heaven that it could and should be. The harvest is great, but the laborers are few. Let us all do what lies within our power to advance the cause of Christianity, which is the cause of humanity.

BIRMINGHAM, PA.—The following is part of a paper read in the First-day school by a member of the adult class:

I do not presume to interpret the meaning of any part of the Book of Revelation; but I remember that when the late Elizabeth Darlington gave an address here a few years ago she used this expression: "Have you formed in your own minds your ideal New Jerusalem, and are you working persistently toward it?" So let us assume that the beautiful city was an emblem of a condition of perfection of character, possibly attainable by us. The city was four square, and on every side of it were gates. Three gates on the North, three gates on the South, three gates on the East, three gates on the West. Whatever road the traveler came by there was a gate by which he could enter the beautiful city. Whatever our previous life may have been, whatever may have been our environments, there is always a way by which we may hope to attain to a more perfect condition of character.

And all the gates were of pearl. The pearl is the emblem of purity. As the Divine Master has said: "The pure in heart shall see God." So in this beautiful city, within these gates of pearl a river of the pure waters of life flowed out from the Throne of God. O traveler, weary and footsore, enter into this beautiful city; here you will find God's rest. Here, also, is an opportunity for unlimited spiritual growth, for within these gates of pearl a river of the waters of life flows out from the Throne of God, and on each bank of the river grows the Tree of Life, which ripens fruit every month, and the fruit of every month is different. O Gatekeeper, I am indeed weary of the road that I have traveled, and hurt by many falls. I do indeed hunger for the fruit of the Tree of Life, and I thirst for the Waters of Life. But I cannot enter at this gate, for it is of pearl, and I am not pure in heart; I must find some other gate or enter the beautiful city by some other way. O traveler, there is no way of entering this city but through the gates: and all the gates are of pearl. But do not be discouraged. The Loving Father has given you the power to make your heart pure by watchfulness and prayer.

LITERARY NOTES.

Scribner's Magazine for Tenth month contains a graphic account, by the wife of John Quincy Adams, of her perilous journey by coach, in the winter of 1815, from St. Petersburg to Paris. She set out alone with her six-year-old son Charles Francis, to join her husband, who was then a member of the Peace Commission in Paris. Her journey was along the trail of Napoleon's army, and glimpses of the recent battlefields appear in the journal.

Agnes Repplier's description of "The Tourist," in Lippincott's Magazine, is marked by the keen wit that is characteristic of the writer. Her long residence abroad enables her to cover all nationalities in her comparisons. Maud Howe, daughter of Julia Ward Howe, continues her interesting experiences of life in Rome and gives a graphic description of "A Presentation to Pope Leo the Thirteenth."

CURRENT EVENTS.

SEVERAL changes have recently taken place in the British cabinet, as a result of the tariff agitation. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary for the Colonies, resigned because he believed that a preferential agreement with the colonies such as he favors, placing new duties on articles of food, would be unacceptable to the majority of the constituencies. Charles T. Ritchie, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lord George Hamilton, Secretary for India, resigned because they are pronounced free traders, and are opposed to Premier Balfour's proposition for a preferential tariff on manufactures. Broderick has accepted the Secretaryship for India; the other vacancies are not yet filled.

HENRY DEMAREST LLOYD died at his home in Winnetka, Ill., on the 28th. He was born in New York in 1847. From 1869 to 1872 he was Assistant Secretary of the American Free Trade League, organized by William Cullen Bryant, David A. Wells and other prominent reformers. He took an active part in the organization of the Young Men's Municipal Reform Association, of New York, in 1870, which contributed materially to the overthrow of the Tweed machine. He prepared a manual for voters with the characteristic title, "Every Man His Own Voter," which was distributed throughout the city in that campaign. He went to Chicago in 1872, and until 1885 occupied a position as an editorial writer on the Chicago Tribune. He is best known for his studies in Australia and New Zealand and his books "Newest England" and "A Country Without Strikes." He had an important part in the Anthracite Coal Strike investigations, personal counsel to President Mitchell.

The military strength of Russia in the Far East is now 250,000 men, distributed as follows:

In Manchuria proper, 50,000 men of all arms, including eighteen batteries of artillery. On the lines of communication between Port Arthur and the Amur province, 110,000 men. At Port Arthur and Taliennan, 90,000 men. Thirty forts have been erected at Port Arthur and fifty others are under construction. All the peaks in this district are being fortified. In addition to the land forces, there are always forty Russian vessels at Port Arthur and forty others constantly under steam at Taliennan. Three battleships, two cruisers and four destroyers are expected to arrive in Chinese waters by the middle of this month.

The renomination of Seth Low for Mayor of New York is of special interest to all who are working for better things in city government. Mayor Low being a Republican and this being the year before a presidential election made it very difficult to keep the strictly municipal issue from becoming entangled with national politics; and the fact that the Low administration failed to suit all who are interested in the reform movement made it very doubtful whether the good government forces could be kept together. But now all who are opposed to Tammany rule are uniting and the issue at the election will be simply between good government and the old time "graft" government.

THE revolution in Macedonia, which has been in progress for some weeks, has caused great distress. The revolutionists, as well as the Turks, have been guilty of inhuman atrocities. A conservative estimate states that 111 Christian villages have been entirely or partially destroyed. The American missionaries have asked the British and American governments to dispatch a Red Cross contingent, as the people are starving, having no food but roots and grasses. The wounded are dying unattended and pestilence is threatened.

PRESIDENT SCHURMAN, in his address at the opening of Cornell University, took up the matter of hazing, putting stress on the fact that at Cornell students expelled are never allowed to return if convicted of hazing. The Faculty is determined to enforce this regulation. "There is abroad in this country to-day," he continued, "a spirit of lawlessness and disregard for the rights of others. Let there be no blot on the university this year, at least. We have had our share of suffering." Secretary Moody has given orders that all hazing at the naval academy at Annapolis be stopped.

THE statistics of the Imperial Health Office show that the total spent on alcoholic liquors in 1902 throughout the German Empire was about $625,000,000, an average per head for persons over 15 years of age of $55. The Health Office has issued a pamphlet, in which, while not advocating total abstinence, it says total abstinence is not disadvantageous to health, and does not impair the working ability.

NEWS NOTES.

PRINCIPAL WASHINGTON has had, this fall, to refuse admittance at the Tuskegee school to 1,048 young colored people.

THE International Peace Congress in session at Rouen, France, passed a special note of sympathy "for those who are fighting the last for free trade in England."

BRIGADIER-GENERAL FREDERICK D. GRANT, his brothers and sister, wishing to preserve the Grant homestead in Galena, Illinois, have given it to the city authorities, who will probably convert it into a hospital.

PROFESSOR R. L. GARNER has again started for Africa, with an even better equipment than ever before, for the scientific study of the life and habits of monkeys, especially their rudimentary speech.

ALEXANDER BAIN, the Scottish philosophical writer and teacher, who ranks with Kames and Hume, Hartley, Dugald Stewart, Sir William Hamilton and the Mills, has died at Aberdeen, his native place, at the age of 85.

THE boss and operative potters have selected a committee of four, none of them in any way connected with the industry, to settle wage difficulties that affect the pottery trade of the country. The committee selects a fifth as arbitrator.

It is said that 1,000 men and women from Zion City and 2,000 from Chicago will take part in the Dowie mission in New York, and that Dowie hopes to raise $500,000 for this missionary effort. The work of this eccentric cult seems to be magnificently managed.

THE new bridge from Manhattan, New York, across the East River by way of Blackwell's Island into the Borough of Queens, will be one of the longest and, from an artistic and aesthetic standpoint, the most beautiful in this country. Unlike the Brooklyn suspension bridge, it will be of cantilever design.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

10TH MO. 3 (SEVENTH-DAY).—THE GIRARD Avenue Friends' Association will hold its opening meeting at 8 p. m., and as usual on the first and third Seventh-day evenings of each month. The program this week will consist of "Echoes of Vacation" from all members who are willing to contribute. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and young Friends especially are urged to come, either as listeners or speakers.

10TH MO. 3 (SEVENTH-DAY).—ILLUSTRATED lecture by President Swain on his recent visit to the Bible Lands, given under the auspices of Byberry Friends' Association, in the Town Hall, at Somerton, Pa., at 7.45 p. m.

10TH MO. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—AT BIRMINGHAM Meeting-house, Chester county, Pa., a circular meeting under the care of a committee of Concord Quarterly Meeting, at 3 p. m.

10TH MO. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—ACCONTINK, Va., Young Friends' Association at home of Joseph W. Cox.

10TH MO. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—A RELIGIOUS meeting will be held at Friends' Home for Children, 4011 Aspen Street, Philadelphia, at 3 p. m. The opening meeting of the season, a good attendance is desired. Ministering Friends and all interested in the Home are particularly invited. Mary Travilla has a prospect of attending.

10TH MO. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—BYBERRY Friends' Association at the meeting-house, at 2.30 p. m. Address by President Joseph Swain.

10TH MO. 4 (FIRST-DAY).—THE VISITING Committee of Salem Quarterly Meeting will attend the Meeting at Hancock's Bridge, N. J., on First-day morning at 10 o'clock.

10TH MO. 7 (FOURTH-DAY).—FARMINGTON Half-Year Meeting, at Farmington, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 2 p. m.

10TH MO. 7 (FOURTH-DAY).—NEWTOWN, Pa., Friends' Association, at the home of Mary Anna Packer.

10TH MO. 10.—MANSFIELD, N. J. YOUNG Friends' Association at the home of Anna and Thomas Bunting.

10TH MO. 10 (SEVENTH-DAY).—NEW YORK Monthly Meeting at Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, at 2.30 p. m.

10TH MO. 11 (FIRST-DAY).—A CIRCULAR Meeting, under the care of a Committee of the Western Quarter, at Penn's Grove at 3 p. m.

- ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
- BEYMER-BADLAR Pittsburgh.
- DAVIS-CHAMBERLAIN Pittsburgh.
- FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
- ANCHOR } Cincinnati.
- ESKSTEIN }
- ATLANTIC }
- BRADLEY } New York.
- BROOKLYN }
- JEWETT }
- ULSTER }
- UNION } Chicago.
- SOUTHERN }
- SHIPMAN }
- COLLIER } St. Louis.
- MISSOURI }
- RED SEAL }
- SOUTHERN }
- JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
- MORLEY Cleveland.
- SALEM Salem, Mass.
- CORNELL Buffalo.
- KENTUCKY Louisville.

DON'T be confused by all this talk about White Lead chalking, for this is one of its most desirable properties. Pure White Lead properly applied will not crack, peel or scale, but when it fails will do so gradually from outside wear.

It will protect whatever it is applied to as long as a vestige of the paint remains, and does not require to be scraped or burned off when repainting becomes necessary.

If interested in paint or painting, address

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

SAVE 1/2 YOUR FUEL

A Tea Kettle boils quicker on my chimney than on my Stove.

I can hold my hand over my chimney. No waste heat, I use a ROCHESTER RADIATOR.

Get all the heat you pay for. You really get coal at half price for at least ten years; with it, you make one stove or furnace do the work of two.

Fully Guaranteed. Write for Booklet on heating houses.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO.,
19 Furnace St., Rochester, N. Y.

10TH MO. 11 (FIRST-DAY).—READING Meeting will be attended by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit smaller Meetings, at 11 a. m.

10TH MO. 16 (SIXTH-DAY).—TWO-DAY (16th and 17th) celebration of anniversary of establishment of Miami Monthly Meeting of Friends at Waynesville, O. It will be participated in by both branches of Friends.

10TH MO. 17 (SEVENTH-DAY).—ABINGTON First-day School Union, at Upper Dublin, Pa., at 10 a. m. Subject for discussion: "Should Friends' Principles and Discipline be taught in our secular schools?" Carriages will meet train at Fort Washington, leaving Philadelphia at 9.02 a. m., and down train arriving before 10 o'clock. Cars of Lehigh Valley Traction Company will also be met at same place. All cordially invited to attend.

10TH MO. 17 (SEVENTH-DAY).—CONCORD First-day School Union, at Goshen, Pa., Meeting-house, at 10.30 a. m. All interested are invited to attend.

10TH MO. 18 (FIRST-DAY).—HOPEWELL, Va., Young Friends' Association at Hopewell.

ROUND "LUXURY IN TRAVEL." THE WORLD

"THE COLLVER TOURS."

Next party leaves in October by the splendid new steamship "Siberia," visiting Honolulu, Japan, China, Manila, Malay Peninsula, Ceylon, Southern and Northern India, Egypt, etc.

Small Members'p—Exclusive Features.

Mr. Collver will accompany this party personally. Escorted Parties and special facilities for independent travelers to Japan.

Itineraries on request.

LEON L. COLLVER,
368 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
5 PHONES.

If your lamp-chimneys break, say MACBETH to your grocer—loud!

He knows.

You need to know how to manage your lamps to have comfort with them at small cost. Better read my Index; I send it free.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

Men's and Women's Underwear.

People who are very particular about their Underwear should cultivate the acquaintance of this department; for there is little indeed worth having that we do not show in a full assortment, and prices are always the lowest that can be charged for equal grades.

There are four special lots of autumn Underwear on sale that we wish all our customers might have a share in:

Men's Shirts and Drawers

of medium-weight natural worsted; good seconds of a $1.50 quality—here at 85c each.

Men's Shirts and Drawers

of heavy ribbed cotton; a fine line, and a superior value at the price—50c each.

Women's Vests and Drawers

one hundred dozen, made of medium-weight ribbed cotton; all regular sizes; worth 37½c—here at 25c each.

Women's Vests and Drawers

two hundred dozen; of white cotton, in autumn weight; strictly firsts, and regular 50c quality—here at 25c each.

Strawbridge & Clothier,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Ambler, A. M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees have charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 12th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a. m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A MINISTER and his family were obliged to board for a time, and in the public dining-room the blessing at table was omitted. Soon afterward their five-year-old son made a short visit to friends, and was given into the care of a kind old lady. After getting him ready for bed, she said, "Come, now, hadn't you better say your prayers?" and was greatly astonished by the reply, "Oh! no, mamma says it's not necessary now that we are boarding."

VERY LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA, ARIZONA, MEXICO, NEW MEXICO AND OTHER WESTERN POINTS.

VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

Anyone desiring to make a trip to California, Arizona, Mexico, New Mexico or other western points, either for business or pleasure, can do so now at a small cost.

Daily until November 29th, 1903, inclusive, special one way colonists tickets will be sold via Southern Railway at rate of $49.75 from Philadelphia to Los Angeles, San Francisco and other points, proportionately low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates on fast trains, tri-weekly, high-class, personally-conducted vestibuled excursion sleeping cars between Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans and El Paso, in which the double berth rate is only $7.00.

Excursion sleeping cars leave Washington on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

BIBLE TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL,
81-83 East 55th St., New York City.

Incorporated by Regents of University of New York. Six departments. Two-year graded courses. Special one-year courses. Opens October 14th. Write for particulars about scholarships.

Address DR. WILBERT W. WHITE, President.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 6th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street,
From 735 Spring Garden Street

Thompson Shourds, 2125 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1222 Atlantic St., Tioga.
Richards & Shourds, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1225 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a, Pa
Phone 3-54-78 D Filbert.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.),
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents,
Patents, Estates managed and settled. Rents collected,
Keystone and Bell' Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING.
Mineographing a Specialty.

MARY M. KITE,
407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Streets, Phila.
Prices Moderate. Bell' Phone, 52-10 Walnut.
Keystone Phone, 70-9 Race.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK.
Telephones. Girard Building and
216 W. Coulter St.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

JUST PUBLISHED

Views and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hillborn, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia. 32 pages, paper. 50c per dozen 50c.

FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
Philadelphia, Pa

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,
FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike
Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
'Phone 1-33-55.

"The Best is the Cheapest"

Applies in a two-fold way to

"NICE"

Paints,
Stains,
Enamels,
Varnishes
Finishes.

They are the best quality possible, hence the most economical, and doubly so when you consider that they cost no more than inferior goods.

YOU CANNOT AFFORD,
Mr. Property Owner, to ignore these facts when arranging for exterior painting and interior finishing.

Send for Literature.

EUGENE E. NICE

272-274 South Second Street
PHILADELPHIA

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

LANSDOWNE, PA.

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANE VERLENDEN, Vice-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
 Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian of a Person. Will prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor. Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

LEARN SHORTHAND.

Taught by mail or in school. Moderate rates.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND,
 805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Stenography, Typewriting,
 Mineographing and Reporting.

LYDIA ARETE CONN,
 805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
 Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
 (Southeast Corner)
 Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

S. F. Balderston's Son,
 Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
 902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILAD'A.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
 Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamond & Co.,
 1624 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

MILTON PHILLIPS
 Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes
 142 South 11th Street

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETT.

BREAD MACHINE
 FOR HOUSEHOLD USE
 Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Sold subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (CHRIS CHAMBERS, Jr.) 52nd & Locust Sts., Philadelphia

Stint, stint, stint! Save, save, save!

What for?
 While you are answering this question, consider whether less saving, united with a policy of life insurance, will be more conducive to the happiness of your family and yourself. Consult the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000 Chartered 1836 SURPLUS 7,500,000
 AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION. REGISTERAR AND TRANSFER AGENT. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE. E. B. MORRIS, President.
 ASSIGNOR, AND RECEIVER. FINANCIAL AGENT FOR INDIVIDUALS OR CORPORATIONS. INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. Safes to Rent to Burglar-proof Vaults.

Do You Know SPEAR'S New Cooking Range

Burns only half the coal used in the ordinary Brick Set Range. Bakes and roasts perfectly. Top and bottom of oven evenly heated. Will broil a shad—head, tail and all. Will keep a fire in for 42 hours without adding fuel.

No gas or dust in kitchen from Range. Makes an abundance of hot water. Saves money, labor and nerves. Is made for Family, Hotel, or Institution.

Can be seen in operation at 1014 Market St., Philadelphia, where there is also a full line of Laundry Stoves, Heating and Cooking Stoves, Hot Air, Hot Water and Steam Heaters on exhibition. Let us look after this work for you at once.

Requests by mail will bring our representative to call on you. Nothing is too small or too large to receive prompt and careful attention.

James Spear Stove & Heating Co.
 1014 Market St., Phila., Pa.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.
 809 Master Street, Philad'a, Pa.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK UNDERTAKER

TELEPHONE
 1313 VINE STREET
 ESTABLISHED 1860

United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company OF PENNSYLVANIA

603-605 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Banking and General
 Trust Company Business

3 per cent. Interest on Time Deposits, or 2 per cent. on Deposits Subject to Check.

ACCOUNTS SOLICITED

WILLIAM M. COATES, President.
 JOEL COOK, Vice-President.
 ESMONDE H. AUSTIN,
 Second Vice-President and Treasurer.
 CLAYTON FRENCH BANKS,
 Assistant Treasurer.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.
 O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 30, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
 J. C. WHITNEY, ad V. P. and T. M. W. P. TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

Martha J. Warner

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PUBLISHED IN PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, TENTH MONTH 10, 1903.

Baltimore Yearly Meeting.

RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.

Friends desiring to attend the approaching Baltimore Yearly are informed that arrangements have been made with the railroad companies so that those near the following railroads can obtain excursion tickets to Baltimore and return at a special rate of one fare and one-third for the round trip.

By applying personally or by letter to the undersigned, or to Friends' Book Association, southwest corner of Fifteenth and Race Streets, Philadelphia, card orders on the ticket agents for tickets may be obtained of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Pennsylvania Railroad Division, any point east of Pittsburgh; Philadelphia and Erie Division, United Railroads of New Jersey Division, West Jersey Railroad, Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad, Philadelphia and Baltimore Central Railroad, Baltimore and Potomac Railroad, Northern Central Railway, and the Alexandria & Frederickburg Railway. Also the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, east of the Ohio river and south of New York City, or other leased or affiliated lines within these limits.

Tickets may be purchased from the 20th to the 28th of Tenth month, inclusive with limit of expiration Eleventh month 1903, inclusive.

These orders are not valid if presented at any point where the excursion rate is less than twenty-five cents. When orders are to be forwarded by mail a two-cent stamp should be enclosed to pay postage.

EDWARD STAEBLER, Jr.,
6 South Street, Baltimore.

W. THOMAS STARR,
North and Centre Streets, Baltimore.

LODGING ACCOMMODATIONS AT PARK AVENUE MEETING-HOUSE, BALTIMORE.

Friends desiring to avail themselves of the accommodations provided at Park Avenue Meeting-house, are informed that rooms will be rented for occupancy on Sixth-day, the 23d of Tenth month, for those who have early engagements.

For those who cannot be accommodated at the meeting-house, or who may prefer to lodge elsewhere, board or lodging can be obtained in the neighborhood at a moderate cost. The committee is prepared to furnish the names of those who offer such accommodations.

In compliance with the arrangements made in 1901, Friends who desire accommodations at Park Avenue Meeting-house, are requested to make known their wish to the committee appointed in each monthly meeting, who will forward the names to the proper persons in Baltimore. The committee on entertainment at Park Avenue can receive applications only through the monthly meeting's committee.

This arrangement, securing as it does, an equitable appointment to each monthly meeting, has been found to give general satisfaction, and it is hoped that Friends will conform as fully as possible to the instructions which have been forwarded.

JOHN J. CORNELL, Chairman Enter. Com.,
The Plaza.

BERTHA JANNEY, Secretary,
The Plaza.

Young Friends' Association

of Philadelphia will hold its regular meeting on Second-day evening, Tenth month 12th, at 8 o'clock, in the auditorium, Y. F. A. Building, Fifteenth and Cherry Streets.

PROGRAM.

Address by Annie H. Hillborn:
"THE BLESSINGS OF LABOR."

GENERAL DISCUSSION OF PLANS FOR THE WINTER'S WORK.

opened by Edward C. Wilson, J. Eugene Baker, Mary H. Whitson, Joseph C. Emley and Arthur C. Jackson.

A cordial invitation is extended to all.
CAROLINE F. COMLY, Secretary.

EASTON SANITARIUM.

Select class of nervous and mental patients received. Twenty-five years' experience. Late First Assistant Physician in Middletown, N. Y. St. Hospital; visit before deciding. C. SPENCER KINNEY, M.D., Easton, Pa.

Three Months for 25 Cents

WE will send FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER till the end of the year for 25 cents, beginning with the week the subscription is received.

Will our subscribers send us the names of Friends who might like to take advantage of this offer, but who may not see the advertisement? We will write to them.

WANTED.

EXPERIENCED NURSE WISHES CARE OF invalid or convalescent. Doctor's reference. City or suburb preferred. Address Nurse, 2724 Oxford St.

WANTED.—BY REFINED WIDOW AND daughter partly furnished house. Rent in exchange for board of owner. Privilege other boarders. Reference. Address No. 11, this Office

WANTED.—COPIES OF THE "PENNSYLVANIA FREEDMAN," published in Philadelphia. Either bound volumes or single copies. Cash will be paid for them. Address J. C., this Office.

WANTED.—BY A FRIEND, A POSITION AS companion and reader for invalid or elderly lady. Address No. 10, this Office.

WANTED.—A T. BOOTHWYN DEL. CO., 16 1/2 miles from Philadelphia, on B & O. R. R. (trains from 24th and Chestnut), a cook and a waitress; or a working housekeeper and helper. Must be accustomed to the country. Good wages and pleasant home for right person. Call or address Mrs. W. T. Harris, Boothwyn, Pa.

WANTED.—IN THIS CITY A MOTHER'S helper, to have care of one child a year old, and to assist otherwise in light work. One who has had experience with children, a Friend preferred. Address No. 9, this Office.

WANTED.—EVENING EMPLOYMENT. TO assist physician with accounts and correspondence, or other work. A. B. C., this Office.

BOARDING.

BOARD.—FOR YOUNG WOMAN, GOOD neighborhood, at $4. City. Address X. Y. Z., this Office.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH K. MATH EWS and SISTERS, 1827 15th, N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

LARGE, CHEERFUL, SECOND-STORY front communicating rooms, with board; also a pleasant third-story room, in Friends' family; in pleasant neighborhood, near trolleys, in West Philadelphia. Write or apply 628 North 23d Street.

FOR RENT.—TWO NEATLY FURNISHED third-floor rooms, well lighted and heated. Address 337 N. 45th Street, West Philadelphia.

FOR RENT.—FURNISHED, SECOND FLOOR rooms. 855 N. 23d Street.

FIRST MORTGAGES FOR SALE, BEARING 6 per cent. interest; $2,000, $2,500, $3,000, $2,000, $4,000; new and elegant Philadelphia houses. DAVID H. WRIGHT, 1420 Chestnut Street.

TO RENT.—NICE HOME-LIKE HOME, LANGHORNE, Bucks county, Pa., from Tenth month 11-room house, on main street. Bath, water closet, new plumbing, heater. Langhorne spring and other excellent water; porches front and back; old shade, stable, carriage house, fruit. Best location. Trolley to railroad. Apply 5008. Dr. John Paxson, Newtown, Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

Farewell, thou little Nook of mountain ground, Of that magnificent temple which doth bound One side of our whole vale with grandeur rare;

—Wordsworth.

The Inn at Buck Hill Falls will close Second-day the 12th inst., and for a while these weekly announcements will be suspended. As stated last week, the season has been the most successful one. Many new friends have been made and new interests centered on our wooded hillsides.

Work on the new extension to the Inn has begun in earnest and it will be a busy time for our superintendent from now until snow flies. Announcements of the opening up of forty well located lots on the slopes of Buck Hill and of the opening of the Inn in the spring will be sent later to all our old list and to those who may ask for them during the winter.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Young Friends' Aid Association Of New York

desires contributions for its Annual Fair, to be held Eleventh month 20th and 21st, 1903. As this will complete our thirtieth year of work, which depends largely upon the proceeds of the fair, we hope our friends will respond liberally.

Contributions of money or articles for sale to be sent to 226 East 16th Street, marked "For the Fair."

ROUND "LUXURY IN TRAVEL."

THE WORLD

"THE COLLVER TOURS."

Next party leaves in October by the splendid new steamship "Siberia," visiting Honolulu, Japan, China, Manila, Malay Peninsula, Ceylon, Southern and Northern India, Egypt, etc.

Small Membership—Exclusive Features. Mr. Collver will accompany this party personally. Escorted Parties sold special facilities for independent travelers to Japan. Itineraries on request.

LEON L. COLLVER,
368 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
Friends' Intelligencer Association,
 (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.

To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.

Single copies, 5 cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.

WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application. No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
 N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
 * * * TELEPHONE No. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XLI.	641
POETRY: EACH IN HIS OWN NAME.	641
THE REALITY OF RELIGION.	641
ILLINOIS YEARLY MEETING (Concluded).	642
ONLY ONE SUBSTITUTE FOR THE SALOON.	644
FRIENDS' SCRIPTURE LESSON: Justification by Faith.	645
EDITORIAL: The Art of Having Time.	646
Notes.	646
BIRTHS, DEATHS.	647
SOCIETY NOTES.	647
LETTER FROM MARTHA SCHOFIELD.	647
LETTER FROM ABBY D. MUNRO.	648
WOODBROOKE SUMMER SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY.	648
CENTENNIAL OF MIAMI MONTHLY MEET- ING.	650
COMMITTEE MEETINGS AT BUCK HILL FALLS.	650
EDUCATIONAL.	651
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.	652
LITERARY NOTES.	652
VERSE: The Forest Greeting; At Buck Hill Falls.	653
THE EVANGELICAL MOVEMENT IN RUSSIA.	653
MISCELLANY: Two Factors in the Race Problem: The Honesty of Indians; A Competitor of the Liquor Traffic.	654
CURRENT EVENTS.	655
NEWS NOTES.	655
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.	656

Morgan Bunting Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING and SHRIGLEY
 ARCHITECTS
 Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEMENT A. WOODNUTT
 Undertaker
 and Embalmer
 1728 Girard Ave., Philadelphia
 TELEPHONE, POPLAR 09-38 D.

THE WALTER SANITARIUM

The Original
 Wernersville Sanitarium

Nearest, largest, best, it has its own Post Office,
 WALTERS PARK, PA.

Avoid delays: do not address Wernersville. Illustrated booklet.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for catalogue.

Friends' Select School,

1811 I STREET, N. W., WASHINGTON, D. C.

A school of all grades for boys and girls. Has prepared students for twenty different colleges and technical schools.

Certificat privilege to Lehigh, Dartmouth, Swarthmore, Georgetown, Columbian, Vassar, Smith and Wellesley.

Excellent Gymnasium and Play Grounds.
 THOS. W. SIDWELL, Principal.

FRIENDS' SCHOOL,

GREEN STREET, GERMANTOWN,

Under care

GERMANTOWN PREPARATIVE MEETING.

Kindergarten, Primary, Intermediate and Higher Departments, Manual Training.

For circulars address

ELIZABETH M. ROBERTS, Principal.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS., PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; (arranges a practical, guarded education, and pre- pares for college.)

J. EUGENE BAKER,
 ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, Principals.

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to
 JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
 George School, Penna

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES

Near Jenkintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia. Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business. The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted wherever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
 Or, Jenkintown, Pa.

CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
 Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment. For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
 Locust Valley, N. Y.

Please mention FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER, when answering Advertisements in it. This is of value to us and to the advertisers.

Publishers' Notes.

We have received from Rising Sun, Md., a circular for three months' subscription, but the sender having omitted to place a name and address upon it, we are unable to send the paper.

A goodly number of these three-months' subscriptions have come in, but will not more of our friends take the trouble to send us names of persons to whom we may extend the offer?

On another page see the advertisement of Club Rates with other Periodicals, for next year. It is well to send in these subscriptions early, before the publishers become rushed with new-year work.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
 ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
 929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
 Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA.
 Conveyancing and Investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 OFFICES: { 63 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
 { Ambler, Montgomery Co., Penna.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
 CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
 619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
 325 SWEDS STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class enthusiasm.

For circulars address
 ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
 Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B. Amblor, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or in other school matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register. The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Seventh-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLOR, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mineographing and Reporting.

LYDIA ARETE CONN,
 805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873.

PHILADELPHIA, TENTH MONTH 10, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 41.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XLI.

The ministry of the Spirit must and does keep its analogy and agreement with the birth of the Spirit; that as no man can inherit the Kingdom of God unless he be born of the Spirit, so no ministry can beget a soul to God, but that which is of the Spirit.

WILLIAM PENN.

EACH IN HIS OWN NAME.

A FIRE mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell,
A jelly-fish and a saurian
And caves where cave men dwell,
Then a sense of law and beauty,
And a face turned from the clod—
Some call it evolution
And others call it God.

A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite, tender sky,
The rich, ripe tints of the cornfield
And wild geese sailing high,
And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the golden-rod—
Some of us call it autumn
And others call it God.

Like the tide of the crescent sea-beach,
When the moon is pale and thin
Into our hearts high yearnings
Come welling and swelling in,
Come from the mystic ocean
Whose rim no foot has trod—
Some of us call it longing
And others call it God.

A picket frozen on duty,—
A mother starved for her brood,
Socrates drinking the hemlock
And Jesus on the rood,
The millions, who humble and nameless,
The straight, bare pathway trod—
Some call it consecration
And others call it God.

WILLIAM HERBERT CARRUTH.

THE REALITY OF RELIGION.¹

IN the English Church service there occurs the impassioned petition "Take not thy Holy Spirit from us!" It may be said that this is only another form of the prayer to be prayed without ceasing, "Heavenly Father help us to hold ourselves near to thee in all our thought, and to act as in thy visible presence."

This is the reality of religion—that just as we try to make favorable circumstances for our bodily life; to have food and dress that satisfy us, to have physical environment that suits our wish and need, so we shall try to make the life of the soul harmonize with our ideal of God. The reality of religion becomes the reality of life. Religious words are not sure to be religious reality. It is easy for us to see that we may repeat every hour of the day the commandments of the decalogue, "Thou shalt not kill," "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not bear false witness"; and yet, there is no reality in our words unless we cherish the lives of all about us; unless we respect the property rights of our neighbors; unless we bear true witness of our neighbors. It is a temptation we have to face all through life—the substitution of words for realities. We have been reared in communities that name themselves Christian; in religious societies dedicated in the name of Christ to Christian service; in homes that claim to be Christian homes. But the Christian name, is after all, a matter of distinct individuality for us when we have arrived at college-age, let us say;—our claim to it we have to vindicate. Has the Christian name a meaning that we value? Does it bring before us the personality of Jesus Christ, the mission of his life, and of his death? Are we trying to honor this great name which we have come into by inheritance? Does the voice sound in our souls as for Peter and James and John on the Mount of Transfiguration, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, hear him!" Have we begun to make it the habit of our lives to search out the words of this "beloved Son" of the Father, this Elder brother of ours, and to listen to them, and to make them the chart of daily life? Then, religion has begun to be a reality to us; then the glimpses we get of spiritual things will be broader and deeper for every to-morrow. A practical suggestion has come to my mind which I will pass on to you, in the hope that it may reach some need. I believe there is stimulus for our spiritual life in responding literally to the appeal on the Mount of Transfiguration to hear the "beloved Son." Will you think what it might do for us, if on each Sabbath day we were to seek out seven messages of the "beloved Son," one for each day of the week before us, to be the leaven for that day's spiritual life, to be an early waking thought in the morning, to be a moment's retreat for our souls in the midst of daily work; to be our holy of holies that shall shine its approval upon all our pleasures. For this week there might be chosen these seven messages:

¹ Read before Swarthmore College students Ninth month 26th, 1903, by Dean Elizabeth Powell Bond.

First-day: Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

Second-day: Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

Third-day: Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God.

Fourth-day: Be ye therefore perfect even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

Fifth-day: All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.

Sixth-day: Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

Seventh-day: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

Do you think it would be possible for us to make such search for the words of the Great Teacher, with the purpose to "hear him" and to bring ourselves into obedience to his teaching, without becoming in some small measure leavened with his spirit? You remember that Paul wrote: "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness." It is only as we attain to this spirit which filled the life of Jesus, that we can know the best things of life, the things that endure, the things that are worth while. It is this spirit that binds us to God. It is only this spirit that can bring healing to all the sore places in our world.

If we are tempted to feel that individual attainment is so small as to be of no avail in the great world, we must remember that we are not held responsible for the great world, only for the small portion of it which we are. I hope it is a part of your blessedness in life, to be very close to some soul, father, mother, or friend, so filled with the heavenly spirit that you already know its power; and have come also to know that this is the reality of religion.

ILLINOIS YEARLY MEETING.

Held at Clear Creek Meeting House, Putnam County, Ill.

(Concluded from last week.)

EPISTLES FROM OTHER YEARLY MEETINGS.

The epistle from Philadelphia being read, we sympathized with them in the removal from their midst of valued workers, and were glad to note a growing interest in the various departments of philanthropic labor, and especially approved of the thought that we lose no opportunity to show our testimony against war and in favor of peace and arbitration.

We approved of Baltimore's suggestion as to examining papers and magazines before allowing them to come into our homes, thus barring out disreputable ones; were interested to know they had made a list of books suitable for children's reading, and that the revision of their Discipline had been approved.

It was remarked that instead of the mission of the Society of Friends being ended, as some have claimed, it was but just begun, and if faithfulness is continued, the world will be lifted to a higher plane; the truths of Quakerism are eternal and can never die. Our larger meetings have greater opportunities, therefore greater responsibilities, but there is no small duty in the sight of God; faithfulness in little things is a stepping-stone to greater; discouragement unfits for work; we should not lack courage to protest against things we know are evil; sometimes it takes more courage to stand firm for our moral conviction than to go to war in South Africa or the Philippines.

New York epistle spoke of the object of our society being to proclaim to the world the great principles of the gospel of peace, as promulgated by Jesus Christ. It also mentioned that they had met, for the first time, in joint session, the proposal to do so being well considered and unanimous.

Genesee epistle said we bring into the world different gifts, some gold, some granite, some clay only, but all filling their requisite places and doing their own duty, therefore all useful.

Indiana spoke of the messages of love and encouragement in these friendly epistles from one meeting to another, being often as bread to the hungry soul, and trusted that the devotional service spoken of by several may indeed be a living service, drawing all close together in light, love and life.

A friend who had attended Indiana Yearly Meeting was glad to see so many young people there, and to notice the coöperation between the old and the young, who are soon to become the burden bearers. We must prepare in the present for the future. The old can hardly grasp the needs of the young, for, although principles have not changed, the world has. In lamenting the removal of valuable co-workers we were reminded that the loss, though great, is not irreparable, for opportunities are as wide and as many as ever.

Ohio epistle suggested that the thought wave of great souls might start into harmony great action, as the sound of human voices on the high peaks of the Alps sometimes start in motion vast glaciers. They enjoyed having members of the Conference Committee with them. One evening during their meeting was devoted to the cause of Purity. Friends should reach out, and as the horizon broadens, not only let, but cause their influence to be more widely felt.

The general feeling was one of encouragement from the reading of all these epistles. There was quite a talk on the distribution of suitable Friends' literature, as well as other that is good, and we were advised to be diligent in doing this work.

THE QUERIES.

In answering the queries, the one relating to the reading of the Scriptures seemed to be rather lamely answered, and the hope was expressed that the time would come, when it would be answered more fully, for we are a Christian people, and believe these writings have a message to us, being the exposition of God's laws to man, and as such, are worthy of high honor, and while not the guide itself, are the guide to the true guide.

We were given a warning not to use alcohol as a medicine, and to be careful about its varied preparations as such, and were queried with as to whether we are doing all we can to help others, whose appetites are strong, and whose will-power is weak, to govern these appetites properly.

The weather being very threatening in appearance at the close of the afternoon meeting, it was decided not to hold a children's meeting, as has been the custom for years, and the result justified our course, for we had been at our respective homes but a few minutes, when rain poured in torrents, accompanied by a severe electrical storm, but we heard of no damage.

THIRD-DAY.

On going to meeting, found the roads covered in many places, for rods, with water, from last night's rain, and a hard shower overtook some of us on our way, but all was pleasant and dry within the house, and we felt comfortable in spirit, ready for the day's work, the continuance of the consideration of the queries and answers. The wording of the sixth query about divine qualification alone being essential to a well qualified ministry, has long been felt, not to be satisfactory, and it was shown, that while this is, and must necessarily be the foundation, other material can be used in the superstructure. One of the strongest supports to the ministry is the attendance of the members. While the minister may have meat to eat that others know not of, it is an encouragement and support to him, to feel that the Christian fellowship that should exist among them, will draw all to the meeting, and they will realize that thirsting after righteousness that shall be filled, and it will be a pleasure to fulfill the obligations that rest upon us, in belonging to a religious organization.

The committee on Isolated Friends made a very interesting and satisfactory report, showing much work done, by travel and correspondence, which seemed to be much appreciated by the recipients.

A communication was received from the Executive Committee of the General Conferences, stating where the next conference would be held. Some expressed surprise that a city where there are no bodies of Friends should be chosen; others thought it particularly desirable, for in that way, there would be opportunity to spread our doctrines among those who are now ignorant of them, for these meetings are not alone for ourselves, but for the world.

DISCIPLINE REVISED.

In the afternoon the "Revision of Discipline" came up for final adoption or rejection, it having been so advised at last meeting. After earnest, thoughtful consideration, the proposed revision, with a few alterations, was accepted, remembering that in framing a code of discipline, it is for those who come after us, as well as for ourselves. One speaker said the people of his meeting think the old discipline nearly perfect, but he was glad to see that we are alive to the thought of progress.

FOURTH-DAY.

The Representative Committee again met, and considered the subject referred to it from a former session, and as said before, the result will appear in our printed minutes.

MEETING FOR WORSHIP.

At 10 o'clock, we convened for divine worship, and after a period of silence, a feeling of thankfulness for many blessings was voiced in prayer, among these, the blessing of the impressiveness of silence; the blessing of the indwelling spirit and its unerring guidance.

"If thou wilt drink of the water I shall give thee, thou shalt never thirst; but the water that I shall give thee shall be in thee a well of water springing into everlasting life," was quoted, and the speaker said the desire of his heart, while waiting in silence of spirit, as denominationally we profess to do, that we might feel as did this woman of Samaria, when she said, "Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw," and not only for ourselves, but for others: she went her way and to the men whom she met, said, "Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Christ?" We want to share with others this gospel that is heaped up, pressed down and running over, that love of the Father, which sent his son, Jesus Christ, into the world, that all might have life. In this historic account the woman wondered where he could get that living water, as the well was deep, and he had nothing with which to draw, and then he told her if she knew who was talking to her, she would ask of him for water. If we drink of this living water, we shall never thirst in vain, never need to go to another well or source, but will always have a sufficiency ourselves. Religion is not for one day only, but for all days. God gives it to us in fullness, according to the measure of our capability; one is equally as acceptable as another, if equally faithful. There are sins of omission and commission, and it would seem sometimes, as if the former were as great as the latter. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

"Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." If that command says, "speak to the people," do it, for "there is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Our ideas of religion shape our exterior life: the Samaritan woman's conception of it was to save her the trouble of drawing water. The kind of gospel needed is to help other people; to bind up the broken-hearted, to illuminate the dark corners of the world. In the spiritual dispensation, we see God in every thing in the world. He is not revealed in noise, so much as in the still small voice, is the thought now; he whispers in every soul, "Do something to help another." We should efface as much as possible, denominational lines, and be as brothers, feeling the love of God shed abroad in the heart, and in all the world. The meeting concluded with earnest prayer.

"WOMEN'S MEETING."

Fourth-day noon the "Women's Meeting" held its usual session, some of our brothers having asked permission to meet with us, as they felt equally interested in the cause of Purity; we decided to invite them next year to do so. The afternoon was devoted mainly to the reading and consideration of the report of the Philanthropic committee. That on Social Purity, showing much good, aggressive work done, called forth words of special commendation, and the cigarette habit was spoken of as being a stepping stone to habits that degrade and pollute, physically, and a danger of making moral uncleanness, one of the leprosies of our day, and the speaker rejoiced that the wife's and the mother's hearts were stirred to labor in this cause. There are many fields, large and small, ripe for harvest; are we willing to answer our own prayers, and go, at the word of command from the Lord?

REPORT OF PHILANTHROPIC COMMITTEE.

When the report on Prison Affairs was read, one of the committee spoke of her visit to the Penitentiary, seeing so many confined, and being stirred to the depths of her heart, and learning that ninety per cent. were there, either directly or indirectly, from the effects of strong drink. Isaac Wilson recalled addressing a company of 750 convicts, and his heart was stirred, too, as never before, and in sympathy with them, so many being too weak to withstand temptation. We are not sufficiently aggressive in our protests against this giant evil, which is the cause of so much misery and crime. We should take our Christianity into our politics, rendering our work more effective.

A friend from another yearly meeting remembered when the proposition to unite with Illinois in Philanthropic work was first introduced into his meeting, it was listened to coldly, and doubts felt as to its propriety, etc., but the movement inaugurated in the youngest yearly meeting has made possible the gigantic conferences of the past few years. We of the West have difficulties to contend with in being so widely separated, that those in the East know nothing of and cannot appreciate.

FIFTH-DAY—CLOSING.

The morning was devoted to business committees, reading of the epistles prepared for other meetings, etc., and in the afternoon a finishing up of business, reading of the exercises, etc., after which there was a period of devotion, in which the comfort and satisfaction experienced was feelingly alluded to, and the young were exhorted not to withdraw the hand that had already been put forth to God's plow, which will pulverize what perhaps, had been fallow soil, and prepare it for the reception of good seed, that it might grow, and bring forth fruit in abundance. The divinity in our humanity will work in us, as did the divinity in the humanity of Jesus, if we will but let it, and we will then be as perfect in our measure, as he was in his. We feel that sometimes the richest things come to us in sadness, and we pray the Father to abide with us, when it is evening and the day is far spent, as did the disciples, in their journey from Jerusalem to Emmaus, when Jesus talked with them and they knew him not. We need more of Christ's spirit in the world, which we can have, if we copy his example, and imbibe his spirit by standing near him, praying that he may come within us, and bring us into conformity with his spirit. We felt that during the week no word has been uttered but in a kindly spirit. It is sad to say farewell, but meeting always means a parting, and we can say it has been good for us to be here. We must continue in our work, and though there may be obstructions, with God's help we can overcome them.

After the closing minute was read, a period of solemn, reverential silence ensued, followed by general hand-shakes, and earnest farewells, and Illinois Yearly Meeting of 1903 was no more, except in memory, in history, and in influence.

Holder, III.

ELIZABETH H. COALE.

ONLY ONE SUBSTITUTE FOR THE SALOON.

The following is part of an able article on "The Liquor Evil a Social Menace," by Henry W. Wilbur, in the Young Friends' Review for Ninth month:

More fundamental than writing the songs of a people, or even making their laws, is to make their homes and determine the quality of their social life.

Social helps may be considered to include all of those conditions and forces which contribute to the healthy physical and moral life of the people in their homes and in their social intercourse. Social menaces are those habits, customs and conditions which tend to poverty, ignorance, crime and moral indifference.

Whatever lowers the standard of living, and involves the struggle for existence, making it more serious and uncertain, is the enemy of the home and the healthy social life.

The standard of living for the family involves its giving its members a decent habitation, nourishing food, proper in quantity and quality, and comfortable clothing. That touches simply the physical life. But no standard of living is now adequate which ignores the stupendous fact that man is an intellectual and moral being.

Society scarcely can have an imaginary existence without homes, and homes are more than places in which men and women eat one or two meals a day, and sleep. The proper substitute for the saloon is not a coffee house, a squirrel inn or a professedly pious club, even with a prayer meeting attachment, but a home—the best and healthiest place in which the human animal can spend most of his leisure time.

Philanthropists who expect to kill the liquor traffic by substitution cannot better employ themselves than in helping the people to secure homes; to obliging the owners of rookeries to remove them, and put in their places decent habitations. But that can only be supplementary to something else.

Men of ordinary intelligence and observation live in an atmosphere of liquor demoralization, and fail to recognize its killing effects. They see wages squandered, and family want and poverty ensue, and refuse to perceive that the money spent for drink would relieve the pressure, at least to the extent of the amount spent for liquor.

The situation can be remedied by those who are now indifferent becoming interested. Educate regarding the evil effects of alcohol whenever and wherever it can be done. Labor for healthy substitutes for the saloon, but especially in the direction of securing better homes.

Well-to-do people who have pleasant homes should invite young men of good character who have no homes to visit them; many of these young men are living the precarious lives of ordinary boarders with no one interested in their social or moral welfare. This sort of social intercourse is worth many times more than the opportunities of Young Men's Christian Associations or other resorts of equally meritorious import.

Young men cannot be encouraged to build homes of their own if they know nothing of pleasant home life. Labor to kill the mischievous notion that the maintenance of a home is an ideal too high for them, or that they must necessarily have one so luxurious as to be beyond their means. That very notion is the beginning of much of that social carelessness which finally leads to drink.

Labor in season to kill the saloon. While it lasts it will make drunkards and all that goes with alcoholic indulgence faster than any sort of philanthropy can undo the damage, or substitute the evil by the good.

Decent society cannot be maintained without homes; homes are imperiled by drink, and finally ruined by alcoholism.

In fact, in our country, our government itself rests on the character of its citizenship. That citizenship in its virtue is despoiled and endangered by drink. Government cannot rise higher than this citizenship. The drink habit lowers citizenship.

Therefore our social life, good government, all the valuable interests of human progress depend upon the solution of the drink problem.

Those who love their homes, their fellows, and their country ought to turn in and help solve it.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 36.

JUSTIFICATION BY FAITH.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Being therefore justified by faith let us have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.—Romans, v., 1.

Before study of Lesson read Romans, ii., 12-15; iii., 19-24; v., 20, 21; vi., 1-11.

PAUL, the Pharisee of Pharisees, the adept at casuistry, profoundly instructed in the learning of the rabbis, could not, when he became a Christian, lay aside the whole subject of the Mosaic law as one of no importance. Though the "apostle to the Gentiles," he was also an apostle to the Jews, and must deal with their prejudices. Himself a Jew, he must needs think and speak in terms of his Jewish experience. The law which had been the whole subject matter of his university studies must have an ordered place in an orderly system. He had been under the law. Under the law Jesus was accused, for he had been "hanged on a tree." But on the road to Damascus Paul had been shown a revelation which he could not doubt that Jesus was not accused, but had risen and must master his life. But the power which could set aside the law must be even the power by which it was given. Instead of a dead law, then, man may take as his guide the living lawgiver if he will accept him—if he has faith. He is then made righteous—justified—by faith. Since the lawgiver directs the life there can be no more violation of law. Since obedience to the lawgiver is righteousness, one who is thus justified—"rightened"—cannot sin any more. He is dead to sin, having taken on the new life of the Christ. The "first man"—the old self guided by formulas, ordered as to this and forbidden as to that—has passed away; the new man "is the Lord from Heaven." It is not that man is saved by his faith from the consequences of sin, but he is saved from sin itself. The Lord cannot sin, and the Lord has been accepted as Master.

Yet the law had its place. Given as it was by the spirit of the Most High, it served to direct those who had not come to direct knowledge of their Lord. Those who lived by its formulas were the better prepared to live by the direct rule of him who gave it forth. It was therefore a "schoolmaster to lead them to Christ." It should be noted here that the word translated schoolmaster was the name given to a slave who led children to their teachers. Those who have obeyed the law are "counted righteous" (Rom., ii., 13), and have great advantage therein. Those who have heard, but have not obeyed, are worse off than those who have not known it; they shall be "judged by the law" (Rom., ii., 12); while those who "have sinned without law shall perish without law"; that is, unjudged by it. The Jew claims superiority because the law was given to his people. But that which comes by law is not superiority, but responsibility. Those who obey will benefit, indeed; but those who disobey come under condemnation. There can be no sin without law, for sin is violation of law. The law came, indeed, that there might be sin; that there might be responsibility; and if responsibility, then failure to meet it because of our human weakness. But out of the sense of weakness, born of responsibility and failure, comes the recognition of need for a ruler stronger than ourselves. We come to see that where sin abounds, grace abounds more exceedingly (Rom., v., 20). But perhaps some will say, then, that we should make sin abundant in order that grace may also be abundant. That is mere quibbling. The effect of grace is to make us righteous. If we accept it we can no longer sin. "We who died to sin, how shall we any longer live therein?"

This is the formal, dialectic statement of the doctrine of "justification by" faith—a doctrine which has been contorted and misinterpreted indeed by a perverted Christianity, but which in its simplicity is greatly true and must be fundamental in every Christian life. Those who are ignorant are innocent—unless, indeed, they are wilfully so. With knowledge comes responsibility, and therefore possible sin. Knowledge does not make righteousness, but opportunity for it. But even with knowledge and obedience we have not reached salvation. One who lives by formulas, however correctly, has not attained to life in its highest sense. We may keep the statute laws and so keep out of jail; we may observe the moral law and retain our position in society; but all this without the spirit of the Christ profiteth nothing. But when the Christ is made king—"we serve in newness of the spirit, and not in oldness of the letter" (Rom., vii., 6).

In the history of Christendom this truth, which may be expressed as the necessity for conversion, has again and again been changed to falsehood, its shadow being mistaken for substance, its form for its

(Continued on page 647.)

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER.

EDITORS: LYDIA H. HALL, RACHEL W. HILLBORN,
ELIZABETH LLOYD, R. BARCLAY SPICER.
BUSINESS MANAGER: CHARLES F. JENKINS.

PHILADELPHIA, TENTH MONTH 10, 1903.

Reading matter, for insertion the same week, must reach us not later than Third-day morning.

Please address all letters to N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia.

THE ART OF HAVING TIME.

THOSE who are engaged in civic and philanthropic work have discovered that if there is something that must be done without fail within a specified time, the one who can be depended on to do it is the busy person. If it is assigned to some one with no particular occupation and an apparent abundance of leisure it will probably be neglected and the excuse will be made, "I meant to do it but I really hadn't time." The reason for this is that the busy person has his work systematized, keeps it well in hand, and makes use of the odd hours.

In this hurrying, scurrying age there are a few people who die of overwork, but there are many more who wear themselves out because they try to do everything at once instead of being content to do one thing at a time, giving the mind to that one thing so that it may be done well and quickly. They have not learned the lesson taught to the discontented pendulum in the fable. The pendulum counted up how many times it would have to tick in the course of the year and was so overcome by the great total that it stopped discouraged; after it had been reminded that it had to tick but once in a moment and that for every tick a moment would be given, it took heart once more and went on ticking as usual.

The complexity of modern living prevents many people from having time for the things their hearts are longing for, but with a little courage one's life may be greatly simplified. If the thought in making a home was not to have it as near as possible like other homes, but rather to give expression to one's individuality, social life would be much more interesting than it is and housekeeping would be shorn of half its terrors. In one home we should find the simplest of furniture but an abundance of books; in another the strong point would be objects of art; in others it would be flowers, or china, or natural curiosities or family heirlooms. With simpler modes of living the bread winner would not have to run such a mad race for money, and he also would have more time for the things that are worth while.

The abuse of a good old maxim, "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well," is responsible for many a weary back and aching head. It is the part of wisdom to do a thing so well that it will answer the purpose for which it is intended, and undue haste is never a saving of time; but it is also well to know when it is not necessary to take pains. She was a wise mother who put the stitches close together just where the strain came on the buttonhole, but set them farther apart the rest of the way round; and it would be a waste of time that might be better used, to mend an old garment that can be worn but a few times more with as much pains as when the first break showed itself.

The secret of having time is to learn to do one's work in the best and easiest way, and then do each part when it ought to be done, making allowance for inevitable interruptions. With everything well systematized there is less wear and tear of brain and muscle, and with the mind quiet and cool fewer mistakes will be made. Then even in the busiest life there are leisure moments and it is the use that is made of these that counts. They may be utilized for the doing of many pleasant, helpful things that would otherwise be crowded out.

Finally, whoever would have time for the things that are more excellent must learn neither to worry nor to hurry. Cool, steady persistence will bring order out of chaos, and when one has done his best all the worry in the world will not make it any better; and to worry because we think we might have done it better will only wear us out and make us less fitted for to-morrow's duties. Let us have faith that God will give us time and strength to do whatever He requires at our hands, and so enter at once into the rest that remaineth for the people of God.

"He who, while here, lives the eternal life
Is through eternity set free from strife."

A PAMPHLET has come to our table entitled "The Passing of the Oath," by Benjamin P. Moore, of the Baltimore Bar, reprinted from the American Law Review. The writer shows that the oath is of pagan origin, was not used by early Christians, and is gradually being displaced by the affirmation. It will be news to many of our readers that the oath was done away with thirty years ago by our neighboring republic of Mexico, and the simple promise to speak the truth substituted for it by the constitution; it is the opinion of those high in authority that the administration of justice has not suffered by the change. The pamphlet concludes with the prophecy, "It is only a question of time when all religious tests affecting the admissibility or credibility of witnesses will be everywhere removed from the statute books."

BIRTHS.

BUNTING.—In San Francisco, California, Ninth month 27th, to Joseph N. and Alice Griffen Bunting, a daughter.

HALLOWELL.—At Boston, Mass., Eighth month 31st, to Robert Haydock and Rebecca Jackson Hallowell, a son, named Robert Haydock Hallowell, Jr.

PANCOAST.—At Woodbury, New Jersey, Ninth month 11th, 1903, to William and Amelia Pancoast, a daughter, who is named Elizabeth Kunitz Pancoast.

TOMPKINS.—At Mount Kisco, N. Y., on Tenth month 2d, 1903, to Daniel Garlock and Grace Annie Tompkins, a son, named Homer Virgil.

DEATHS.

BUNTING.—In San Francisco, California, Ninth month 27th, Alice Griffen Bunting, wife of Joseph N. Bunting. Interment at San José.

HAINES.—On Ninth month 18th, in her 67th year, Ellen B. Haines, widow of the late Job S. Haines, and a valued member of Woodbury Monthly Meeting, N. J., Mickleton being her particular meeting.

"The loved and lost!" Why do we call them lost?
Because we miss them from our onward road,
God's unseen angel o'er our pathway crossed,
Looked on us all, and loving her the most,
Straightway relieved her from life's weary load.

She is not lost; she is within the door
That shuts out loss, and every hurtful thing,
With angels bright and loved ones gone before,
In her Redeemer's presence evermore,
And God himself her Lord and Judge and King.

Death hath made no breach
In love and sympathy, in hope and trust,
No outward sign or sound our ears can reach,
But there's an inward, spiritual speech
That greets us still, tho' mortal tongue be dust.

LONGSHORE.—Eighth month 8th, 1903, at the residence of his parents at Fairhill, Philadelphia, Edward William Longshore, son of Alfred A. and Mary J. Longshore, in his 28th year. He was interred at Fairhill on the 12th of the month.

NEW TESTAMENT SERIES.—No. 36.

(Continued from page 625.)

spirit. The faith which makes faithful has been assumed to mean a mere acceptance of creed; the death of the "first man" has been supposed to mean the mere rite of baptism; the danger from which we need salvation has been supposed to be the wrath of God—all of which assumptions are, of course, absolutely false. But every vital revival of Christianity has turned back to this "rightening by faith" which is the "gift of God"; and each vital revival must so turn. We must seek this gift; we must pray for this help; we must strive for this spirit, holding fast the angel till it give its blessing. Our formal respectability, our conformity to social and moral usage, our righteousness formula, are all "filthy rags," which we must seek to replace by the seamless robe of the spirit of the Christ.

A MEETING was recently held in Chicago by representatives of certain farmers' co-operative associations, to take steps toward the organization of all farmers in what may be called an agricultural trust, the purpose being to build grain elevators and warehouses at convenient points throughout the country where farmers may store their crops until the desired price is reached.

SOCIETY NOTES.

THE committees to arrange the program for the conference at Toronto met at Buck Hill Falls on the 3d and 4th and decided upon the subjects to be presented. As it is probable that some of those selected to present these subjects and to preside over the different sessions may be unable to perform the service asked, only the subjects will be made public at the present time and changes may be made in these.

Beginning on Sixth-day, Eighth month 16th, the subject for the morning will be "Peace," for the afternoon, "Our duty to Neglected Children." The conference will be formally opened with a religious session on Sixth-day evening when the theme of the principal paper will be "The Friend and His Message."

Seventh-day morning there will be two papers, one on "Graded Lessons for First-day Schools" and the other on "The Teacher." In the afternoon "The Period of Adolescence" will be presented in two papers, treating respectively of the social and religious influence. Seventh-day evening will be devoted to a social reception.

On First-day there will be meetings for worship morning and evening. The meeting in the afternoon will be under the care of the Young Friends' Association.

Second-day will be devoted to the subject of education. The topic for the morning is "The Value of Education to the Religious Life"; for the afternoon, "Parental Responsibility"; for the evening, "Teaching the Bible." It is intended that the last topic shall include biblical teaching in the First-day School, the secular school and the home.

The topics for Third-day are "Treatment of Criminals" and "The Race Question." The evening will be left free for rest or recreation.

One hour of Fourth-day morning's session will be a meeting for worship, the topic for the rest of the time is "Service and Consecration." The meeting in the afternoon will be in charge of the Young Friends' Association. In the evening two phases of the temperance question will be considered, the work of the Anti-Saloon League, and the saloon evil as we must face it to-day.

Fifth-day morning will be a Purity meeting, the topics being "Personal Purity" and "The Things that Make for Purity." The closing session in the afternoon will consider "Individuality in Social and Spiritual Life." The evening will be devoted to social mingling.

THE address of Edward Coale has been changed from Bloomington, Illinois, R. R. No. 3, to Ellsworth, Illinois, R. R. No. 45. This does not mean any change of residence, but merely a re-arrangement in rural route matters. Edward still lives at his home near Benjaminville, Illinois.

LETTER FROM MARTHA SCHOFIELD.

SCHOFIELD SCHOOL opened on the 1st with a larger number of boarders than last year though many are still in the fields picking cotton. We would have a hundred in a month if they had the money to pay board, only $6.00 and $6.50 a month.

One excellent young woman only brought five dollars, and said to a teacher, "I did many things to get that, I sewed, I trimmed hats and I made two and sold them." She is lame, can't walk a step without a crutch (one that a dear friend of ours sent her,) yet she picked some cotton, and being motherless has long had to do for herself, and is now desirous of being a good milliner.

Every year the burden on my heart grows heavier with the desire and anxiety of young women to earn money for a trade and education. Who will help me raise the $5,000 fund, the interest to be used for this especial purpose? To whom must I look if not to my own dear Society?

It is not book-learning alone they hunger for, it is educated habits, and educated ways of building up homes and character. I was talking to parents who had brought back as a boarder their girl of fourteen years, and would that every woman who reads this could have heard that crude, uneducated country mother (whose own parents were slaves) say to me so modestly, "Youse did her so much good, why I had company, and I could be stayen' to entertain them, and when she called us out to eat, she had knowed how to place everything on the table, and she had different diets on the table, I didn't know about till I seed 'em, I was proud of her myself, I was proud." Can you not see the uplifting to a girl of fourteen in five months? A touch of motherhood is the Father's holiest gift. We who have been given a double portion must use it for His little ones who need.

We opened on the 1st with many short speeches from the Faculty and others. Our famous Conference Organizer told us that in his three months' travel through the state, he always found in the homes of Schofield School students, not only front yards but back yards in order, also that those who managed their tongues got along best, you can hurt yourself with your tongue more than anything else, so learn to keep your tongue and-act more.

This term we take as foremen in two of the shops, two old graduates. Quentin Dullin was our first student to receive certificate of ability from the Harness Department and after several years successful work elsewhere, returns to take charge of it.

William Rhodes (who has lately married our graduate, Ida De Ladsen) went from here to Tuskegee where he took a full course in blacksmithing and iron work. In his bright little speech after saying as many do, they owe Schofield School for what they are, he told that he had heard Mr. Booker T. Washington say many a good thing, "but the one that helped me most was to keep on kicking. He told us of two frogs that fell in a cream jar, both kicked awhile but one gave up and went to the bottom. The other got tired and discouraged, but he kept on kicking, till he made a pat of butter, and then he sat on it, till the dairy maid came and threw him out; so I tell you to keep on kicking."

We now opened the much needed department for mechanical drawing and the first teacher, John Mc Lendon told of his interest and desire to help us. Old instructors gave words of welcome and Miss Quik who begins her first experience with us.

From the audience a mother, H. Badger, whose five daughters have been educated here said, "When Miss Schofield opened her school 35 years ago, I was then a little tot, but I was there, and I thank the Lord he let me live till now to voice my thanks here again, for this is 24 years I have not missed being here at the opening. I can tell you the best material in the young men and women of Aiken, mechanics and others, are those who stepped out of the Schofield School." To many students it is coming home to the highest type of a home they ever knew, yet hungered for, we build more than intellect, we build the eternal qualities and virtues, needed to make races and nations.

Who will help us and who will help us now? We need larger sums, we greatly need an engine to work for the departments, $500 would do it. We need our blacksmith shop doubled that we may varnish and paint the carriages and buggies we repair. Only by doing can we teach it, $500 would do it. Can any one write these checks without feeling it a sacrifice? Please feel our need, and help us to be free to go on doing. My feeble pen must see that over $500 a month is secured to pay the employed.

MARTHA SCHOFIELD.

Aiken, S. C., Tenth month 3d, 1903.

LETTER FROM ABBY D. MUNRO.

My teachers have all written me that they are ready and waiting anxiously for school to begin. I do hope the Friends will come promptly to the aid of the schools. There never was a time, in my estimation, when the colored people needed the support of their real friends, in every sense of the word, more than they do now, when it has become a sort of fad to bring all their faults and failings to the front, and lose sight of what is good and worthy of respect in them; judging by the worst instead of the best of the race. I believe, though, that God will over-rule even this to their good. I am about ready to start for Mt. Pleasant, and I feel as I am about to begin my work how dependent we are upon our friends. It surely is a work of faith.

Bristol, R. I., Ninth month 27th, 1903.

WOODBROOKE SUMMER SETTLEMENT FOR RELIGIOUS STUDY.

The last three weeks as reported in the British Friend.

In the fifth week the place that would have been filled by Rufus M. Jones was taken by Dr. A. E. Garvie who gave a course of four lectures on "The Gospel for To-day." His object was to bridge the gulf that is often felt to exist between evangelicalism and modern thought, by endeavoring so to restate what is essential in evangelical Christianity as to win acceptance from persons who, on account of certain crudities in its popular presentation, feel compelled to turn their backs upon it. The greatest need of the age, he said, was a restatement of the Gospel which would both preserve the continuity of religious faith and life and satisfy the demands of the modern mind. Beginning with a treatment of Sin he showed how the fact of sin needed no support from the supposed historicity of the story of the fall in Genesis. Conscience would be aroused not by a man comparing himself with the imaginary innocence of Adam, but by coming into touch with Jesus Christ, particularly in His death. Orthodoxy had been apt to lay stress on punishment rather than on sin itself as the evil to be escaped; it had failed in-so-far as it had represented punishment as a future judgment rather than a present fact. In another lecture the supreme significance of the Cross was set forth. With the question, why was the Cross of Christ necessary, Christian thought has been battling through the centuries and a final solution is not yet in sight. We need not be surprised at this, for the necessity of the cross was not, at one time at least, perfectly obvious to the Lord Himself. "If it be possible," He prayed, "let this cup pass from me." Theologians are on dangerous ground when they undertake to demonstrate the absolute necessity of what Jesus thought might possibly pass from Him. But He submitted to the will of the Father and found that led Him to the cross. The effects of the cross are not magical but spiritual; and though we can dispense with scholastic theories, we must seek to enter into its meaning and its worth. The conditions of such understanding are a matter of spiritual experience rather than of intellectual scrutiny. It is when we understand more of what love is, and what sin is, that we shall understand why, when they come together, it involves the cross. A very full report of this lecture is given in the British Friend for Ninth month. In the final lecture the importance of the Protestant conception of Justification by Faith was insisted on, as magnifying the freeness and fullness of the grace of God, and keeping men from Pharisaism "the last stronghold into which sin retreats." But "faith" must be rightly understood, not as belittling human reason but enlarging it. Faith really means personal submission to personal influence, not the assent of the mind to doctrines. We have no right to say every one is "either saved or unsaved." Rather, the two elements are, in each of us, in some degree, in conflict, and we all need more saving. A man has just as much hell in him as he has sin, and as much heaven as he has goodness. The true source of goodness for the Christian is fellowship with the living Christ. The real proof of faith is not emotion, but a growing reproduction within us of the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ.

Five lectures were given by W. C. Braithwaite on "The Sources of the Gospel Narratives" during the fourth week.

During this week Edward Grubb, M. A., had the Bible class and took as his subject "The Teaching of Christ on Social Questions." The interest shown in this course was so great that the drawing-room in which the class was held was crowded to its utmost capacity by nearly the whole body of the students. The subject was treated under the headings, "Jesus as a Reformer," "The Family and the Home," "The Use of Wealth," "Charity False and True," and "Christian Citizenship."

Two excellent lectures by T. Edmund Harvey, on Francis of Assisi, beautifully illustrated with lantern slides, made up in part for the absence of Paul Sabatier, the great authority on St. Francis who was to have been present; and a sympathetic account by Charles E. Stansfield, of the life and work of John Woolman, helped to deepen the impression of the value to the world of practical saintliness of life.

Besides the evening lectures two evening conferences were held—one on "The Teaching of the Bible in Schools," and one on "Education in the Society of Friends."

Several lectures were very kindly put in on open evenings by Professor Starbuck of California, on the "Submerged Nine-tenths of Life," "The Control of Life from Within," and "Old Age." To quote the exact words of the British Friend, "Keeness of thought, incisiveness of illustration, and a grasp of the spiritual issues of life, marked the utterances of this American scholar and Friend, who has hitherto been known to us only as the author of a valuable work on 'The Psychology of Religion.'"

During the fifth week, five valuable lectures were given by John William Graham, on "Religion and Modern Psychology," in which the results of the careful scientific investigations of the Society for Psychical Research into the phenomena of clairvoyance, thought transference, etc., were reviewed in their relation to Quakerism.

In the first lecture it was pointed out how, up to twenty-one years ago, science had narrowed her field, and did not deign to inquire into the powers and destiny of the soul; and how on the other hand religion resented any intrusion of the scientific method, welcomed elsewhere, into what she regarded as her peculiar province. But the Society for Psychical Research formed in 1882, by a band of eminent Cambridge graduates, has as a result of a most painstaking inquiry changed all this, and, by cautious scientific method and courageous loyalty to truth, has brought the support of science to our deepest intuitions. John William Graham said that the course was in some sense a "pious tribute to the memory of his masters," Prof. Sidgwick and F. W. Myers. Prof. Sidgwick was the first President of the Society, John Ruskin, Alfred Tennyson were among its vice-presidents, F. W. Myers, Edmund Gurney, were among its chief workers. These men, while faithful to the scientific method, hoped to bring the intuitions of religion into the large realm for which science already vouches.

Out of the great mass of material accumulated by the Society in its twenty-five volumes, J. W. Graham selected a number of typical cases and carefully conducted experiments, convincingly proving, the reality of telepathy, or thought transference without physical contact. He showed how, this being proved, it followed that many positions, already attained by Quaker intuition, were made more evidently real and exact to all. A new epoch in thought has been entered, and a new dimension as it were has been added to the universe. Human service and human love are seen to be one with Divine service and Divine love. The importance of preserving in our meetings for public worship the purity and enthusiasm of mutual love and esteem, is due to the true nature of the act of worship. This is more essential than eloquent sermons, moving music and glowing architecture, love being the perfect bond in earth and heaven, uniting us to God and transforming the earthly into the heavenly. The telepathic law is one of expression of the great Cosmic purpose.

In the concluding lectures, reference was made to the connection between the subliminal or sub-conscious self and the works of genius, Quaker ministry, the perception of states and conditions, and the healing of disease. The mingling of truth and error in what has been called "Christian Science" was clearly pointed out. The reasonableness of the New Testament miracles became more and more apparent as the lectures drew to a close, and many valuable references to the right conditions for vocal prayer and ministry were much appreciated.

John William Graham also conducted a New Testament Greek class during this week, in which the "passages bearing on the death of our Lord" were taken up.

Kersopp Lake, of Oxford, lectured on "St. Paul and the Corinthians," and on the problem of the sources from which the first three Gospels drew their material.

Evening lectures were on Art and on the Ramayana, the delightful popular gospel of the Hindus, and Elizabeth Powell Bond repeated her lecture on Emerson. Eleanor Wood, an American Friend of the Orthodox body, gave an interesting account of Settlement Work in Chicago.

During the last week there was a lecture on "Indian Religions in relation to Missionary Effort"; an evening lecture by Dr. Hodgkin on "Modern Thought and the Missionary Motive"; a course of five lectures by Professor Ramsay, of Aberdeen, on "The Surroundings of St. Paul"; a lecture on "Marcus Aurelius," by Mary Wallis, who is now associate editor of the British Friend; a lecture on the Code of Hammurabi, the oldest code of laws in the world, and one on "Babel and Bible," by C. H. W. Johns, a complete master of what is known of early Babylonian history; on the "Composition and Canon of the Old Testament," by A. Neave Brayshaw, Dr. Edwin D. Starbuck, Professor of Education at Stanford University, California, now on his way to the Continent to spend his Sabbatical year, lectured from the point of view of a psychologist on the question, "What is religion?" These lectures caused considerable interest, and provoked frequent discussion and reply, being somewhat different from the current point of view in psychology. His style was lively, conversational and unconventional; and "both he and his wife," says the British Friend, "will leave a pleasant memory and many friends behind them."

The British Friend says, "To our minds the most striking feature of the Summer School has been the extent to which the students have been led, behind and below the opinions that divide, into the region of the great facts that unite. Representing different schools of thought, both in the Society of Friends and out of it, they found a unity and fellowship in the common search for spiritual knowledge and experience, which, once enjoyed, can never be forgotten. The spirit of love and communion, the brooding presence of the Heavenly Dove, was over all those six delightful weeks."

CENTENNIAL OF MIAMI MONTHLY MEETING.

AT WAYNESVILLE, OHIO.

ARRANGEMENTS for the Centennial Exercises of Miami Monthly Meeting at Waynesville, Ohio, have been completed and an interesting program prepared. The exercises are to be taken part in by Friends of both branches. They cover two days, Sixth-day and Seventh-day, the 16th and 17th of Tenth month, with three sessions on Sixth-day at 9.30 a. m., 1.30 p. m., and 7.30 p. m., and two sessions, morning and afternoon, on Seventh-day. Our friend Davis Furnas is chairman of the Committee of Arrangements. Seth H. Ellis, a minister in the Orthodox branch of Friends, who is well known in the West as a lecturer and writer on agricultural matters, is to preside at some of the sessions.

Historical papers are to be presented by Clarkson Butterworth, of Waynesville, Eli Jay (Orthodox) of Richmond, Indiana, and Davis Furnas. There will be biographical sketches of Joel Wright by Jesse Wright, of Springboro, Ohio, of Robert Furnas, Samuel Linton, Abijah O'Neill, and Samuel Kelley.

W. H. Venable, the poet and historian of Cincinnati, has written for the occasion a poem, "As the Spirit May Move," which he will read. Esther S. Wallace, of Richmond, Indiana, will also read a poem.

Testimonies of Friends will be presented in papers on "Slavery," by May Pemberton (Orthodox), of Milton, Ohio; on "Quakerism and the Recognition of Women," by Mary Battin Boone, of Richmond, Indiana; on the "Ordinances," by Dr. Robert E. Prewitt (Orthodox), of Wilmington, Ohio; on "Temperance," by Esther Pugh, of Selma, Ohio; on "The Trend of Modern Religious Thought toward Quakerism," by Professor J. B. Wright (Orthodox), of Harveysburg, Ohio, and on "Peace and Arbitration," by Professor Elbert J. Russell (Orthodox), of Earlham College.

Besides this full and interesting program there will be addresses by Dr. R. G. Boone (Orthodox), Superintendent of Schools of Cincinnati, on "The Influence of Quakerism on Education"; by President Albert J. Brown (Orthodox), of Wilmington College, on "The Message of Quakerism to the World—God is Love, and he that dwelleth in Love, dwelleth in God and God in him"; by Dr. Joseph S. Walton, of the George School, on the "Fundamental Doctrine of Quakerism—The Indwelling and Inspeaking Spirit of God," and by Wilson S. Doane, of Indianapolis, on "The Vital Message of Quakerism for the World To-day."

Arrangements have been made for reduced railroad fares within the limits of the Central Passenger Association.

All who expect to attend should notify William T. Frame, Waynesville, Ohio.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS AT BUCK HILL FALLS.

ABOUT thirty members of the committees to arrange a program for next year's conference at Toronto were able to accept the invitation of the Buck Hill Falls Company to hold their committee meetings in one of the most delightful of autumn resorts. A goodly number of these left Philadelphia early in the morning of Seventh-day, Tenth month 4th, some of them having eaten a hasty breakfast by candle-light (or its modern equivalent) before leaving their homes.

The scenery between Philadelphia and Trenton consists mainly of glaring advertisements of soaps, cigars, breakfast foods, toilet powders, hooks and eyes, and a brand of whiskey accompanied by the words, "That's all." One of the party whom light-minded people might call "a temperance crank" said he would want no better theme for a temperance address than this catchword.

Northward from Trenton the Delaware river added beauty to the landscape and by the time the Water Gap was reached the varying tints of reds and yellows displayed by many of the trees gave promise of the gorgeous robe that soon will be worn by Dame Nature in all its completeness. The change at Cresco from car to mountain-wagon was a pleasant relief. The air was mild but refreshing, the trees and shrubbery grew brighter and brighter and our spirits rose higher and higher as we neared the Inn and dinner time, knowing that friendly hand clasps and an appetizing meal awaited us.

The dining-room was not so full as in the days of the First-day School Assembly but the buzz of conversation would have done credit to a hundred tongues. The dinner was all that we had anticipated and the branches of maple and dogwood which adorned the walls, mingled with the rich green of laurel and rhododendron, added to the enjoyment of the meal. Two committees met immediately after dinner and adjourned in time to allow a hasty trip to the falls before supper. Some of us who took this enjoyable walk realized that we are getting too old to come up long flights of steps in a hurry.

A second installment of the committee arrived in time for supper, including the chairman, Dr. O. Edward Janney, and five yearly meetings were now represented. All the guests at the Inn were invited to attend subsequent meetings of the committees, which were held in the evening, and after meeting and after dinner on First-day. The sessions of the committee were full of interest and very harmonious, although widely different opinions were expressed.

After a free discussion there was full unity on certain points. All were agreed that there is a prospect of a large attendance at Toronto, probably reaching the 3,000 promised by the Toronto Globe. Other points decided on were that there could be no early devotional meeting as Friends would be quite widely scattered, that there should be no sectional work, and that the afternoon sessions should occupy but an hour and a half each. As the program now stands very few have been selected to prepare papers who are not members of the Society, and these few will ask no compensation. The papers will generally be short, and it is believed that ample time has been left for discussion. During the sessions of the committee there was no lack of the discussion that Friends so enjoy, there being a particularly lively interchange of opinions on the subject of conversion.

The sitting-room was quite well filled during the meeting for worship on First-day and many helpful words were spoken. Among those who ministered were Jesse H. Holmes, O. Edward Janney, Caroline Worth, and Joel Borton. Dr. Janney said that one of the greatest benefits arising from Friends' conferences is the spiritual growth of those who have been active workers in them.

The committee meetings were held in the library, which is already partially dismantled on the outside, as it is to be moved bodily to a spot northeast of its present location to allow for the enlargement of the Inn. A few members of the committee arose early enough Second-day morning to cross the substantial bridge which now spans the valley between the two hills and go on to the top of the observatory which crowns Buck Hill. Here we looked down on the roof of the Inn and around on the wooded hills that needed but the unveiling of the sun to transform them into a blaze of glory. Before we had done full justice to the appetites our walk had given us the coaches were at the door, but the basket of apples that is always on hand in the sitting-room was passed around as we said good-by; so if we were not stayed with flagons we were comforted with apples as we again rode through the beautiful woods, this time on our homeward way. E. L.

EDUCATIONAL.

GEORGE SCHOOL.

SCHOOL opened Ninth month 22d with an attendance of one hundred and ninety-six students. Of this number one hundred and fifty-five are boarding pupils, seventy-nine boys and seventy-six girls, and forty-one day-pupils.

G. W. Morden, of Queen's University, Ontario, has been secured to fill the position left vacant by the resignation of Prof. R. Grant Bennett. Prof. Morden comes highly recommended, and has had an experience of twelve years' work in the High School of Pictou, Ontario, Canada.

Seventh-day evening, Ninth month 26th, T. J. Elms, Minister of the Presbyterian Church of Newtown gave his experiences of "Boy Life in Australia" to a highly appreciative audience of teachers and students. Following the lecture, the annual reception of the old students to the new was given in the parlors.

A new departure this year is the organization of a new society. The object in view is the promotion of interest and enthusiasm between the two old societies, the Whittier and the Penn. Besides this, it will afford opportunity for higher and more advanced literary work, since it is proposed that the regular work of the other two societies be of such a character as to include any member who is not prepared for the advanced work. The first meeting was held Seventh-day evening, Tenth month 3d. The following program was very successfully given:

Recitation, "Lasca," Beulah Hurley; Recitation, "Haunted by a Song," Harry Sherwood; Society paper, Bertha Pancoast; Recitation, "Uncle Eben and the Trolley Car," Jeannette Jackson; Oration, "Side by Side," Elma Gregg; Shakespearian Signs and Smiles, a Medley; Original Song. F. B. S.

LOCUST VALLEY.

Friends' Academy opened Ninth month 14th with prospects bright for the usual good attendance. The girls' side of the building is full, and from present indications the boys' rooms will soon all be taken. The caliber of the student body as a whole seems to be even better than usual, and those in charge feel much satisfaction at the present condition of affairs at the Academy.

The organization of classes and arrangement of the school work has been completed in a remarkably short time, and cheerful coöperation on the part of teachers and students augurs well for a most pleasant and profitable year for all concerned.

The funeral of W. W. Waldron, who for a term of three years, ending last spring, rendered valuable service as janitor and general utility man at the Academy, took place Ninth month 29th, at Locust Valley. He will be much missed about the school.

Mrs. Blanche Mead, of Philadelphia, who assumes, this year, the direction of the household department, has had considerable experience in her line of work and comes well qualified to fulfill the duties of her position. She is assisted by Lydia A. Cocks, of Cornwall, who was also assistant last year. Mrs. J. McGeorge Steadman, former head of this department, left Ninth month 15th for Iowa, with her two daughters, to join her sister there.

Percy P. Pike, Instructor in Science and Mathematics at Friends' Academy for four years, is this year studying medicine at the University of Pennsylvania.

Eloise Leland, for four years the efficient head of the primary and lower intermediate department, was married in Sixth month to P. Ross Jewell, who was for three years an instructor at Friends' Academy. They now reside in Connecticut, where Mr. Jewell is principal of a high school.

Emily R. Underhill, who for three years strongly influenced the life at the Academy for good, is this year teaching in Larchmont Manor, N. Y., where she will undoubtedly render invaluable service.

Prin. Jackson has been notified by the Board of Regents at Albany that all papers sent up in Sixth month have been accepted and the students who took the examinations registered as passed.

The Faculty for this year is as follows: A. D. Jackson, B.S., Swarthmore, Principal, Mathematics; Elizabeth B. Flanders, Framingham (Massachusetts), Normal and Radcliffe, Assistant Principal, History and English; Marshall Pancoast, B.L., Swarthmore, German and United States History; Lucia E. Avery, A.B., Middlebury (Vermont), Latin, Greek and English; J. Donald Zulch, B.P., West Chester (Pa.), Normal, Science and Mathematics; M. Elizabeth Lamb, B.L., Swarthmore, French and English Grammar; Edna B. Downing, Metropolitan College of Music and School of Applied Music, Music; Anna C. Jones, Oneonta Normal, lower intermediate; Emily F. Jackson, George School, secretary.

On Tenth month 15th Professor George L. Maris will give the first lecture of the year to the students and their friends, in the afternoon. Professor Maris will talk of his impressions of the "Sunny South." Other lectures will follow. M.

Conferences, Associations, Etc.

BYBERRY, PA.—On Seventh-day evening, the 3d of Tenth month, the Friends' Association invited its interested friends to enjoy with its members an illustrated lecture on "Egypt," given by Dr. Joseph Swain, President of Swarthmore College, whose travels recently in that country enabled him to present pictures never before given to the public, and a lecture which was descriptive of his actual experiences and the scenes observed there. An audience of over two hundred greeted the speaker in Ervin's Hall at Somerton, where the public meeting was held, and the trip taken on that occasion by proxy was much enjoyed as was testified by the manner in which interested listeners pressed forward to voice appreciation and ask questions, at the close of the lecture.

On the day following, which was the regular time of meeting, Tenth month 4th, at the meeting-house at Byberry, was the largest gathering the Friends' Association ever held, many being present who had never attended before. William P. Bonner gave the Scripture reading, the 104th Psalm, and after the minutes were read, Dr. Joseph Swain, the speaker of the afternoon, gave his most excellent address on "A View of Nature and the Bible." Comparing or contrasting, as he did, the two studies he clearly showed how they fitted together,—the study of science (which is but the revealer of nature's laws) only corroborating the Bible truths. The study of biology, of physical science, of astronomy, all showed the learner in an especial manner, the glory of God; the Heavens declaring anew to the appreciative student His handiwork. These studies far from alienating the thoughtful mind from Christianity, tend rather to lead one from nature to God, since a view of creation implies a Creator.

All through this beautiful address ran the clear thought and reverential attitude of the speaker, until upon the minds of his hearers was impressed the great, fundamental truth of the grandeur of God's works. Appreciative remarks were made at the close by Arabella Carter, Sarah C. James, Nathaniel Richardson, Edward Comly, and Ida R. B. Edgerton. After a moment of silence the meeting adjourned. A. C.

CORNWALL, N. Y.—The Friends' Association met at the home of J. Quimby Brown, Tenth month 4th. The paper of the afternoon was written by Edmund A. Cocks, and read, in his absence, by Alice M. Brown, entitled "Visions." It was an earnest discussion of the two meanings of the word vision, first, that it is something of the imagination only; second, that it is a revelation from God, with a decided preference for the latter. The writer speaks of Paul and his vision, saying, "Although the words which he heard could not be reproduced upon a phonograph, nor would the light which shone around him have made any impression upon a photographic film, yet these facts did not render the vision any less real or vivid to him." From this he passes to other revelations from God, showing that the great movements for good have been started by these seers of visions.

The paper called out some discussion, led by Elizabeth K. Seaman. It was followed by the following readings: "The Footsteps of Christians," by Jennie Westervelt; "The Queries," by J. Walter Styer; "The Silent Meetings," by Charles F. Seaman. These selections were much appreciated, the last being especially interesting. The meeting was well attended, thirty being present. A. M. B., Cor. Sec.

WARRINGTON.—Dr. O. Edward Janney of Baltimore, accompanied by some Friends from York, attended the regular Ninth month meeting at Warrington.

The meeting-house surrounded as it is by a beautiful grove, affords a very pleasant place for any gathering. People come from many miles to attend the Fall meeting at this place. This building is one of the oldest landmarks in the neighborhood. There were a goodly number in attendance on First-day the 27th.

O. Edward Janney presented the belief of Friends very forcibly, giving as the fundamental principles of the Society; The Indwelling Christ Spirit, Belief in the Bible, Peace, Temperance and Honesty. He dwelt at length on each of these and in closing expressed a strong desire, that if all those in that neighborhood who believed these principles to be right, would support them, the meeting-house could again be reopened for regular First-day meetings and the influence for good would be felt in their midst.

Hiram Griest of Menallen offered a beautiful prayer, closing with an earnest wish, that all might know the Father and receive his blessing of "Well Done."

After meeting there was some talk concerning the possibility of a First-day School being opened there, and we think if such a movement could be started it would be successful in awakening Friendly interest. B. K. C.

LITERARY NOTES.

TURKEY is the last place in which an American would expect to find the new woman, but Anna Bowman Dodd, in this month's Century, assures us that she is there. Although there are still harems enough in Turkey to satisfy the most exacting tourist, the writer says that the majority of the upper ten thousand follow the European fashion of monogamy. The laws of Mohammed confer upon women a greater degree of legal protection than any code of laws since the middle Roman law. The provision for securing to the wife the free and uncontrolled possession of her property is minutely stipulated in the marriage contract, and a sum is arranged for her maintenance suited to her husband's rank.

In the Review of Reviews Dr. Edward T. Devine's illustrated story of the achievements of the Low administration in promoting the welfare of the masses in New York is at once a masterly argument for the continuance of the reform city government in power and a message of encouragement to municipal reformers everywhere who are striving for social betterment in their various communities. The much-talked-of socialist legislation of New Zealand, as viewed in its actual operation by an observant American business man, is described by Dr. L. C. Warner, while some interesting comments on the relation of trade-unionism to the principles of democracy are contributed by "A Tired Australian."

Representative McCall contributes to the Atlantic Monthly an article on the usurpations of the Senate, and forecasts a conflict between the houses which he predicts will be decided in favor of those great principles of popular government which underlie the American Commonwealth. Booker T. Washington describes the evolution through which the South and the negro are passing; he says that there is no color line in commerce, and that in industrial training lies the solution of our national race problem and the salvation of his race.

In Harper's Magazine Mary Applethwaite Bacon tells the story of an industrial school in the Southern mill district. An interesting result of the children's share in the furnishing and arrangement of the different parts of the house was their gradual perception of the fact that in a properly appointed dwelling certain rooms are to be used for certain purposes. When the first cooking lesson was announced there was an unexpected mutiny,—“We didn't come here to do you-all's cookin'!” The violence of the refusal grew out of the idea that certain forms of labor done for another are dishonoring.

THE FOREST GREETING.

Good hunting!—aye, good hunting,
Wherever the forests call;
But ever a heart beats hot with fear,
And what of the birds that fall?

Good hunting!—aye, good hunting,
Wherever the north winds blow?
But what of the stag that calls for his mate?
And what of the wounded doe?

Good hunting!—aye, good hunting,
And ah! we are bold and strong;
But our triumph call through the forest hall
Is a brother's funeral song.

For we are brothers ever,
Panther and bird and bear;
Man and the weakest that fear his face,
Born to the nest or lair.

Yes, brothers, and who shall judge us?
Hunters and game are we;
But who gave the right for me to smite?
Who boasts when he smiteth me?

Good hunting!—aye, good hunting,
And dim is the forest track;
But the sportsman Death comes striding on:
Brothers, the way is black.

—Paul Laurence Dunbar, in the Century.

CHORISTERS.

O WIND and waters, ye alone
Have chanted the primeval tone
Since Nature first began.
All other voices change, but ye
Abide, the soul of harmony
Interpreting to man.

He listens, and his heart is fain
To fashion an immortal strain,
Yet his sublimest lay
Is but the music of a tongue
Attuned to silence, and among
The echoes dies away.

—John B. Tabb, in the Atlantic Monthly.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

AT BUCK HILL FALLS.

NOT breezes from the cisterns of the glen,
Nor nets of falling spray, wetting the ferns;
Nor oars a-drip in amber-rippled burns,—
Not these alone I prize, and praise to men:—

Not floods a-thunder down the shaken ravine;
Not drift of mist or shade on distant hill,
Nor monarch pines, keeping their secret still,—
Not these alone—these elsewhere have I seen.

No; more to me the cordial voice and hand,
The brother-tie renewed, the life new-planned,
The unselfish spirit and the friendly voice
Bidding us lift our burden and rejoice.

THE EVANGELICAL MOVEMENT IN RUSSIA.

An agitation quite similar to, yet quite distinct from, the evangelical movement in Austria and in France, has recently been making itself felt in Russia. Details concerning it are given by Dr. Lipsius, the German specialist on religious conditions in the Orient, in his journal, the Christliche Orient. We condense his description as follows:

Although the Gospel has been making noteworthy progress in Russia, yet little is being done to hold what has been acquired. Various branches of evangelical Christianity have been making headway, the strict Baptists alone now numbering at least one hundred congregations. Yet the bulk of these are people who are not perfectly clear and established in their faith. As a result, the movement is badly divided and the various denominations show great intolerance of each other. They differ on such subjects as the Holy Scriptures, on the nature of baptism, on the Lord's Supper, on regeneration, and kindred doctrines. As a rule, however, all believe in baptismal regeneration. Regeneration is regarded not only as a new birth, but one that indicates a special blessing from on high, and the line of demarcation between the regenerated and the unregenerated is sharply drawn.

In conversion, it is deemed absolutely necessary that the sinner must shed tears, and this weeping is called conversion. Accordingly all revival services in these evangelical congregations of Russia are characterized by much weeping and a loud confession of sins, and an onlooker often must have fine nerves to witness such a scene. But the act of weeping is a conditio sine qua non, and a member who has never shed tears in public is never considered altogether converted. The Christian congregation is considered as consisting of believing and baptized persons, so that the chief bond of union is not external membership in an organization, but a union between the Christian and Christ. Accordingly the Russian Evangelical has a deep distrust of denominations as such. On the question whether Saturday or Sunday should be the day of public worship, there is much dispute, and this discussion has injured the Gospel cause, particularly in Southern Russia, and has driven not a few back into the Greek Catholic Church and its stagnant creed and life. The wrangle over the question whether the brother or the sister who has not received the baptism of faith shall be admitted to the Lord's Supper has become a chronic evil among the Evangelicals.

More recently a new problem has arisen, namely, whether a child of God can enter military service or must refuse to obey the order of the Government in this regard. Can an officer or a soldier really be or become a child of God? The answer that is generally given is an emphatic negative. It is this feature in the evangelical movement that has made the Russian Government very suspicious, but as yet nothing aggressive has been undertaken against the movement by the authorities. Another question of prominence is whether a Christian can become a judge or participate in political work.

Concerning preaching, the singular view is entertained that when a brother acts in this capacity he is immediately inspired, and whatever he says is to be regarded as the genuine word of God. The presbyter is the instrument and medium of God, and what he commands is the law of heaven. Everybody who has wept, that is, who has been truly converted, may become such an oracle of God, and such absolutely rule the lives of the average member. They condemn the studying of explanations of the Scriptures, and some even go so far as to declare all books outside of the Scriptures as works of the devil. Hostility against all learning and science is very apparent. In many cases, a decided type of fanaticism is developed, one of the leaders, a certain Malzowany, recently declaring that he is "the first-born son of God." This spirit is particularly apparent in the Baptist sections. In some cases movements like that of Dowie's exercise great influence among these people. The whole evangelical movement, although spreading, is yet superficial and without great promise. On the fundamentals of faith these people have anything but clear ideas, and the whole propaganda is one that produces chiefly fanaticism and a multitude of sects.

These facts, as reported by Dr. Lipsius, have called forth interesting comments in many journals. The most noteworthy is from the pen of Dr. Harnack, of Berlin, and appears in the Christliche Welt. Harnack himself was born and reared in the German Baltic provinces of Russia, his father having been professor of theology in Dorpat; but his comments are those of a church historian, drawing attention particularly to similar movements in earlier days in the Russian empire. He concludes substantially as follows:

The underlying tendencies that are here operative can be readily detected also in the sources of the history of the church in the first and second centuries. Just of this nature were thousands of Christians in that period; in the same way those primitive believers loved and hated and fought and felt. But they were not all so. Had this been the case, then there would have been nothing fixed or firm in earliest Christianity. And what is this movement as we find it here and as it existed then? Nature religion or natural religion, as this is developed on a low stage of culture. The Christian element is only a slight factor, and force is the essence of the whole agitation, which is only a slight progress beyond the stage of orgiaism and primitive fetishism. All religions that call forth the consciousness of an inner rapture and disharmony are an evil for mankind, unless they also know how to heal and to help. They produce only fanaticism and hatred. The life-giving power of Christianity they do not possess. The Russian movement is not something absolutely but only relatively new. It is history repeating itself.— [Translated for The Literary Digest.]

Two Factors in the Race Problem.

THE Boston Pilot has unearthed an interesting editorial upon the race question written thirteen years ago by John Boyle O'Reilly, but never printed. Mr. O'Reilly was a man of generous instincts, but he did not favor equal rights for women. His article in the main is fair and high-minded, but the little war betrays itself when he says: "The keys of the problem are education, temperance and frugality in the colored men, and purity in the colored women of the South." There is not the slightest recognition here of the need for purity on the part of the men of the South, either white or black. Yet two of the difficult factors in the problem are the assaults upon white women by colored men, and the seduction of colored women by white men.

It is true of the social evil in general that it can never be cured until men are willing to furnish their share of virtue; and this is doubly true where the men belong to the stronger, more educated and more highly developed race. It is hardly fair to expect the poor colored women to furnish all the virtue for themselves and for the white men, too. When will men of all races and nationalities awaken to their responsibility for doing their share to maintain the purity of social life, instead of throwing the whole burden of it upon the women? The best men are already awake to it. We must work to persuade the others to open their eyes.— [Woman's Column.]

The Honesty of Indians.

STEWART EDWARD WHITE, in a recent number of The Outlook, relates that Mr. MacDonald, of Brunswick House, once discussed with him the system of credits carried on by the Hudson's Bay Company with the trappers. Each family is advanced goods to the value of two hundred dollars, with the understanding that the debt is to be paid from the season's catch.

"I should think you would lose a good deal," said Mr. White. "Nothing could be easier than for an Indian to take his two hundred dollars' worth and disappear in the woods. You'd never be able to find him."

Mr. MacDonald's reply struck him, for he had twenty years' trading experience.

"I have never," said he, "in a long woods life, known but one Indian liar."

A Competitor of the Liquor Traffic.

HOT milk is becoming a dangerous competitor of the liquor traffic in Stockholm. Professor Curt Wallis is a warm champion of the idea of combating the liquor evil with the aid of milk, and recommends the method introduced by Miss Utrecht in Stockholm. This is quite simple—just an automatic contrivance, something on the order of the slot machine, so popular in this country, where for a small coin, 5 oere, a quarter of a litre of milk, heated to 70 degrees C., can be secured. The experiment was begun last winter with two machines. In four months 18,000 mugs of hot milk had been disposed of. The experiment was considered so successful that four more machines were added. The purpose of Miss Utretch was to supply night workers and those who went to work early in the morning with a stimulating and warming beverage, and to guard against the temptation of visiting the liquor shops. Professor Wallis is of the opinion that the idea will be adopted all over Sweden and other countries, and will prove an untold blessing not only to the working men, but to the world at large.—[National Temperance Advocate.]

CURRENT EVENTS.

As an outcome of the recent conference between the Czar of Russia and the Emperor of Austria a telegram has been sent to the ambassadors of these countries in Constantinople. These two Powers "insist on the execution in their entirety of those reforms which were accepted by the Porte" last winter, deplore the fact that the suppression of insurrections has been accompanied by excesses and cruelty, and urge the necessity of supporting the inhabitants who have been deprived of all means of existence and restoring their villages. The two Powers have also addressed the Bulgarian Premier urging his Government to take measures against the revolutionists.

To supply the vacancies in the British Cabinet noted last week, Austen Chamberlain, who was Postmaster General, has been made Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Alfred Lyttleton, Secretary for the Colonies. Other changes have been made as follows: H. O. Arnold-Forster succeeds William S. F. Broderick as Secretary for War, Graham Murray succeeds Lord Balfour of Burleigh as Secretary for Scotland, and Lord Stanley is made Postmaster General. The Duke of Devonshire, leader of the Conservative Party in the House of Lords, has resigned as Lord President of the Council because Premier Balfour in a recent speech asked for a "reversal of the doctrine that taxation should never be imposed except for purposes of revenue." Lord Milner refused a place in the Cabinet in order that he might return to the difficult task of restoring prosperity to South Africa.

A CORONER'S jury at Lynchburg, Tenn., recently rendered a verdict charging 27 men with murder for having participated in the lynching of a negro and 14 of them have been arrested. This is in striking contrast to the action of the grand jury at Wilmington, Del., which refused to indict any of the mob that burned the negro at the stake last summer.

The officials of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and the employees have succeeded in adjusting their differences peaceably by means of mutual concession. After having met a number of times the conference on the 5th ended in an amicable settlement. The men withdrew the claim they had made for the expenses of the conference and paid their own expenses.

The Jewish year book for the year 5664, which has just been published by the Jewish Publishing Society of America and edited by Cyrus Adler, gives some interesting figures about the numerical growth of the race in this country. New York now has the largest Jewish population of any of the States, with 500,000, and then come Pennsylvania and Illinois, Massachusetts being fourth with 60,000. The total Jewish immigration through the ports of New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore for the past 12 years has been 761,598, and during the past year 58,079 arrived at the port of New York alone. Among these were 30,536 Russian, 18,113 Austrian, 8,314 Rumanian and only 527 German Jews. The total Jewish population of the United States is now 1,127,268, while there are only 276,614 in the British empire.

The colored Congregationalists have recently held a national convention for the discussion of the race problem, and the Boston Transcript says that during the four days of the services, "there was not a moment when we forgotten self-restraint and self-poise." In their declaration of principles they said: "While not accepting the wholesale denunciation of the race, we yet assert that there is too much crime amongst us, and we call upon the home, the school and the church to use their utmost influence in leading the race to abstain from every form of evil and to cleave to that which is good. While preaching against evil we also appeal for fair play in the public press, justice in the courts and fairness at the ballot box."

NEWS NOTES.

GENERAL BRADLEY T. JOHNSON died on the 5th at the home of his son in Goochland county, Va.

RALEIGH, N. C., after a hard contest, voted on the 5th, by a majority of 194 against the saloons and in favor of one dispensary.

The National Convention of United Boys' Brigades was held in Baltimore from the 2d to the 4th, with some 500 boys in attendance.

UNITED STATES SENATOR REED SMOOT has been re-elected an Apostle of the Mormon Church and leader in the governing body of that organization.

SERVICES in celebration of the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Jonathan Edwards have been held this week at the Andover Theological Seminary, Massachusetts.

At an informal Cabinet meeting held in Washington on the 2d it was decided that the franking privilege should no longer be allowed to the Government officials of Porto Rico.

PLATFORMS of county conventions in Hawaii nominating candidates for the fall election, are unanimous in recommending that a strong fight for Statehood be made in Congress.

PRESIDENT BUTLER, in his annual report, declares that Columbia needs $10,000,000 in order to carry out the plans of the University. $1,721,895 has been received in gifts during the past year.

The Legislative Council of the Moro Provinces has passed a law prohibiting slave-hunting in all territories under its jurisdiction, and providing for the confiscation of all vessels engaged in the trade.

It is already announced that the feature of next winter's naval bill, now in preparation by the House Naval Committee, will be five new battleships of 16,000 tons each.—[Advocate of Peace.]

The Government has sent Consul General Skinner, of Marseilles, on a mission to Menelik, King of Abyssinia, with the view of increasing American Commerce with that well-governed and prosperous country.

HARRY A. GARFIELD, son of the late President Garfield, has accepted the chair of Political Jurisprudence at Princeton, left vacant by Dr. John Houston Finley, now President of the College of the City of New York.

The officers of more than 600 employers' organizations met on the 29th ultimo in Chicago and organized to oppose union labor, and promote the interests of employers and independent workmen by all legitimate means.

DESPATCHES to the London Times declare that public feeling in Serbia is insisting on the removal of the assassins, and nothing can be called stable as long as the King retains around his person officers connected with the assassination.

PRESIDENT MITCHELL says that the coal mining situation in this country is more peaceful than ever before since the organization of the United Mine Workers, and that not in many years have three months passed with fewer disagreements and strikes.

NEW YORK publishers and book-dealers have noticed a material decline in novel reading during the past few months. The failure last month of the New Amsterdam Book Company is said to have been directly due to the decreased demand for works of fiction.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS.

10TH Mo. 10.—MANSFIELD, N. J. YOUNG Friends' Association at the home of Anna and Thomas Bunting.

10TH Mo. 10 (SEVENTH-DAY).—NEW York Monthly Meeting at Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, at 2.30 p. m.

10TH Mo. 11. (FIRST-DAY).—A CIRCULAR Meeting, under the care of a Committee of the Western Quarter, at Penn's Grove at 3 p. m.

10TH Mo. 11 (FIRST-DAY).—THE FRIENDS of White Plains will gather at 52 S. Lexington Ave., White Plains, at 11 a. m. *

10TH Mo. 11 (FIRST-DAY).—READING Meeting will be attended by Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting's Committee to visit smaller Meetings, at 11 a. m.

10TH Mo. 11 (FIRST-DAY).—NOTTINGHAM First-day School Union at Oxford, Pa., at 2 p. m. Questions pertaining to First-day School work will be discussed. All interested are cordially invited to attend.

10TH Mo. 15 (FIFTH-DAY).—YOUNG Friends' Association of Quakertown, Pa., at the home of Milton and Martha Johnson.

10TH Mo. 16 (SIXTH-DAY).—TWO-DAY (16th and 17th) celebration of anniversary of establishment of Miami Monthly Meeting of Friends at Waynesville, O. It will be participated in by both branches of Friends.

10TH Mo. 17 (SEVENTH-DAY).—ARINGTON First-day School Union, at Upper Dublin, Pa., at 10 a. m. Subject for discussion: "Should Friends' Principles and Discipline be taught in our secular schools?" Carriages will meet train at Fort Washington, leaving Philadelphia at 9.02 a. m., and down train arriving before 10 o'clock. Cars of Lehigh Valley Traction Company will also be met at same place. All cordially invited to attend.

10TH Mo. 17 (SEVENTH-DAY).—CONCORD First-day School Union, at Goshen, Pa., Meeting-house, at 10.30 a. m. All interested are invited to attend. Friends desiring to be met at "Chester Road" on the Philadelphia trolley leaving 63d and Market Sts., at 8.30 a. m., will please notify J. Hibberd Bartram, West Chester, Pa., as early as possible.

10TH Mo. 17 (SEVENTH-DAY).—WESTERN First-day School Union will be held at Penn's Grove Meeting-house, at 10 a. m. All interested are cordially invited. Friends will be met at Elkview Station,

B. C. R. R., if timely word is sent to Samuel H. Broomell, Cochranville, Pa.

10TH Mo. 18 (FIRST-DAY).—HOPEWELL, Va., Young Friends' Association at Hopewell.

10TH Mo. 18 (FIRST-DAY).—A MEETING at Radnor appointed by the Visiting Committee of Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting, at 3 p. m.

10TH Mo. 20 (THIRD-DAY).—WESTERN Quarterly Meeting at London Grove, Pa., at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before, at 11 a. m.

10TH Mo. 21 (FOURTH-DAY).—EASTON, and Granville Half Year Meeting at Easton, N. Y., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.

10TH Mo. 22 (FIFTH-DAY).—CALN Quarterly Meeting at Sadsbury, Pa., at 11 a. m. Ministers and Elders, same day at 10 a. m.

10TH Mo. 24 (SEVENTH-DAY).—WESTBURY Quarterly Meeting at Flushing, Long Island N. Y., at 10.30 a. m. Ministers and Elders, day before at 3 p. m.

10TH Mo. 26 (SECOND-DAY).—BALTIMORE Yearly Meeting at Park Ave. Meeting-house, Baltimore, at 10 a. m. Ministers and Elders Seventh-day preceding at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. Information as to accommodations and railroad arrangements will be found in advertising column.

Coal is abundant this year, but very high in price. The public will be given the opportunity to pay the expenses of the big fight of last year. There is one known way to evade it and get coal at half price. That is to use the Rochester Radiator advertised in our columns. They absolutely save one half the fuel, or your money refunded.

J. Linden Heacock Oscar M. Hokanson

HEACOCK & HOKANSON ARCHITECTS

Telephone Connection 931 Chestnut Street, Philad'a

Autumn Hats for Men and Boys.

The autumn styles have narrowed down to a comparatively small number; it is the "survival of the fittest." But even among these there is one that is best fitted to each man's face. Let us help you to find it:

Stetson Hats—the comfortable "self-forming" Derbies at $3.50, and the Soft Hats at $3.50 and $5.00.

S. & C. Special Hats—Derbies of a superior quality that we do not think has an equal at the price—$3.00. Other excellent Derbies and Soft Hats at $2.00 and $2.50.

Silk Hats—autumn and winter shapes—$5.00 and $6.00.

Opera Hats—One of fine all-silk, well-made and handsomely trimmed, at $5.00; and the very best that can be bought—$8.00.

Automobile Caps—of cloth or leather—$3.00.

Boys' Hats—Derbies or Soft Hats, in styles as good as men's—$1.50 and $2.00.

Caps—for men and boys; golf, college and Rob Roy styles—50c, 75c and $1.00.

Strawbridge & Clothier, PHILADELPHIA.

Y. F. A. Building,

140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a,

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike
Table d'hote 25 cts.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p. m.
Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a. m. Supper, 6 to 7 p. m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:
One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week.
Two occupants, 50 cents each, per night;
$2 each, per week.

Address ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk.
Phone 1-33-55.

Young Friends' Review

Published by the
New York Young Friends' Association.

HENRY W. WILBUR, EDITOR,
232 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.
Monthly, 75 cents per annum. 25 cents for six months' trial.

With FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER $2.50; with Scattered Seeds $1.00; all three $2.85.

SEND FOR SAMPLE COPY.

MILTON PHILLIPS Ladies' Fine Custom-made Shoes

I can duplicate shoes furnished by MRS. S. E. BERTOLETTI.
142 South Eleventh Street, Philad'a

J. T. JACKSON & CO. Real Estate Brokers

Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

— SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —

CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.

5 PHONES.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR. LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

THE CHELTENHAM,

E. T. Kuendig Atlantic City, N. J.
R. W. Richards.

The Pennhurst, Second House from Beach.
MICHIGAN AVENUE, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
Every comfort and convenience, including elevator to street level. Write for booklet. WM. K. HOOD.

THE KATHLU,
1126 CENTRAL AVE., OCEAN CITY, N. J.
Open all the year. Hot water heat. Home comforts.
K. E. LEWIS and L. C. CONARD.

THE AQUARILLE, OPEN ALL THE YEAR
OCEAN END OF TENNESSEE AVE., Atlantic City, N. J.
Steam heat, electric bells, heated sun parlor, home-like and comfortable. Write for booklet.
M. E. and H. M. HUMPTON.

BIBLE TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL,
81-83 East 55th St., New York City.
Incorporated by Regents of University of New York. Six departments. Two-year graded courses. Special one-year courses. Opens October 14th. Write for particulars about scholarships.
Address DR. WILBERT W. WHITE, President.

LEARN SHORTHAND.

Taught by mail or in school.
Moderate rates.

PROVIDENT SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND,
805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

STENOGRAPHING, TYPEWRITING.
Mimeographing a Specialty.

MARY M. KITE,
407 Lippincott Building, 12th and Filbert Streets, Phila.
Bell 'Phone, 52-10 Walnut.
Prices Moderate. Keystone 'Phone, 70-09 Race.

STENOGRAPHER GEO. B. COCK,
Telephones. Girard Building and 216 W. Coulter St.

ORNAMENTAL IRON WORKS
IRON FENCING

FRANK PETTIT, late of the Pettit Fencing Co.
809 Master Street, Philad'a., Pa.

CAROLINE RAU, North side, below 9th St.
PLAIN MILLINERY,
Removed to 823 Spring Garden Street,
From 736 Spring Garden Street.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MILK.
CONSHOHOCKEN Special attention given to serving dairies. Office 603 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
JOSEPH L. JONES.

BREAD MACHINE
FOR HOUSEHOLD USE 'Sifts the flour and mixes to lbs. of best bread in 3 minutes. Send subject to trial and approval. Send for Booklet. Agents wanted. Scientific Bread Mach. Co. (OTUS GRAMBERS, Jr.) 62nd & Media Sts., Philadelphia

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER
TELEPHONE
1313 VINE STREET
ESTABLISHED 1860

VERY LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA, ARIZONA, MEXICO, NEW MEXICO AND OTHER WESTERN POINTS.
VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

Anyone desiring to make a trip to California, Arizona, Mexico, New Mexico or other western points, either for business or pleasure, can do so now at a small cost. Daily until November 29th, 1903, inclusive, special one way colonists tickets will be sold via Southern Railway at rate of $49.75 from Philadelphia to Los Angeles, San Francisco and other points, proportionately low rates from other points.

The Southern Railway operates on fast trains, tri-weekly, high-class, personally-conducted vestibuled excursion sleeping cars between Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco without change, via Atlanta, New Orleans and El Paso, in which the double berth rate is only $7.00. Excursion sleeping cars leave Washington on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Charles L. Hopkins, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, 828 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will take pleasure in furnishing all information.

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSION.

LAST LOW-RATE VACATION TRIP VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD FOR THE SEASON.

On October 16th the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run the last popular ten-day excursion to Niagara Falls from Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington for the present season.

On this date a special train will leave Philadelphia at 8.10 a. m., running via Harrisburg and the picturesque valley of the Susquehanna.

Excursion tickets, good for return passage on any regular train, exclusive of limited express trains, within ten days, will be sold at $10.00 from Philadelphia and all points on the Delaware Division; $11.25 from Atlantic City; $9.60 from Lancaster; and at proportionate rates from other points, including Trenton, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Cape May, Salem, Wilmington, West Chester, Reading, and principal intermediate stations. A stop-over will be allowed at Buffalo within the limit of ticket returning.

Special trains of Pullman parlor cars and day coaches will be run through to Niagara Falls. An extra charge will be made for parlor-car seats.

An experienced tourist agent and chaperon will accompany the party. For descriptive pamphlet, time of connecting trains, and further information apply to nearest ticket agent, or address Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Established 1870 at 824 North Second Street.
WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.
GEORGE CHILD,
27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

Thompson Shours, 912 Wallace Street.
Charles W. Richards, 1292 Atlantic St., Toga.
Richards & Shours, Jobbing attended to.
CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS,
1125 Spring St. (first street above Race), Philad'a., Pa
Phone 3-54-76 D Filist.

J. H. Ringe, Jr., Thos. Biddle Ellis,
Ringe & Ellis, LAW (Pa. and N. J.)
REAL ESTATE.
Insurance, Collections, Mortgages, Ground Rents, Patents. Estates managed and settled. Rents collected. Keystone and Bell 'Phones. 929 Chestnut St., Phila.

EDWARD T. BLACK
(S. W. BLACK'S SON)
REAL ESTATE AGENT AND BROKER
The entire care of Real Estate a specialty
616 Sanson Street. Philadelphia, Pa.

AQUILA J. LINVILL,
Dealer in Choice Lehigh Coal,
1827 North 10th Street, Philadelphia.

PURE FOOD

skillful preparation, and excellent service are distinctive features of
OUR LUNCH AND DINING ROOM,
1317 Filbert Street
These characteristics, unique specialties, reasonable prices, and class of patrons give this restaurant a rank peculiarly its own. We are seeking and securing custom of ladies and substantial business men.
J. J. WILLIAMS, Proprietor.

JUST PUBLISHED

Views and Testimonies of Friends

An address, by Isaac H. Hillborn, delivered at a meeting of Friends and others, held in the Girard Avenue Meeting-house, under the auspices of the Committee on Membership of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia. 32 pages, paper. 5c; per dozen soc.
FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION,
Philadelphia, Pa

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE

LEAD ALL OTHERS IN

Carpets
and Rugs

As Manufacturers and Importers we have a prestige that commands the very best in quality, the choicest in design and at the greatest economy in price.

Retail Stores

1220-1222 MARKET STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

Represented by W. J. MacWatters.

LANSDOWNE AND DARBY SAVING FUND AND TRUST COMPANY

LANSDOWNE, PA.

Full Paid Capital, $125,000.00.

2 per cent. paid on Check Deposits, 3 per cent. paid on Savings Deposits.

GEORGE FOSTER WHITE, President, Treasurer and Trust Officer; W. LANE VERLENDEN, Vice-President; JOSEPH T. BUNTING, Second Vice-President; MORGAN BUNTING, Secretary; LEWIS LAWRENCE SMITH, Solicitor.
 Acts as Executor, Administrator, Trustee, Guardian or Agent. Wills prepared and kept free of charge where this Company is named as Executor, Aims at perfect service and perfect Security. Either the Franklin National Bank or the Girard National Bank will receive deposits for this company.

Merchants' Trust Company,

611-613 CHESTNUT STREET.

CAPITAL (subscribed), $500,000.00
 CAPITAL (paid in), 250,000.00
 SURPLUS, 50,000.00
 UNDIVIDED PROFITS, 47,349.79

Interest allowed on Deposits. Titles to Real Estate insured, and conveying done. Loans made on Mortgage and Approved Collateral. Surety entered for Administrators and others. The Company also acts as Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, etc. Safe Deposit Boxes to rent from $5 and upwards, per annum

JOSEPH R. RHOADS, President.
 JOHN F. LEWIS, Vice-President.
 HORACE B. PEARSON, and Vice-Pres. & Treas
 CHARLES P. EARLY, Secretary.
 WM. B. LANE, Title and Trust Officer.

DIRECTORS.

NICHOLAS BRICH, J. BOLTON WINFENNY,
 S. DAVIS PAGE, WARREN G. GRIFFITH,
 JOSEPH R. RHOADS, EDWARD G. MCCOLLIN,
 JOHN F. LEWIS, ALFRED I. PHILLIPS,
 THOMAS R. GILL, GEORGE M. WAGNER,
 CHAS. S. HINGSMAN, FRANK W. PAUL,
 EDWARD S. SAYRES, EDGAR DUDLEY FARRIS,
 JOHN H. CRAVEN, HORACE B. PEARSON.

FLORIDA BY SEA.

Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.

STEAMSHIP LINES

FROM

PHILADELPHIA AND BALTIMORE.

Best way to reach all Southern points. Accommodations and cuisine unsurpassed. Send for Tour Book and Particulars.

O. F. LUCAS, Agent, Pier 10, N. Delaware Avenue. Uptown offices, 828 and 1005 Chestnut Street, Philad'a.
 J. C. WHITNEY, 2d V. P. and T. M. W. P.
 TURNER, G. P. A. General offices, Baltimore, Md.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL

Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.

He was 57; he looked about 40, despite daily business cares and responsibilities innumerable, about which he refused to worry.

Why?

The future of his family was made secure, his own old age provided for by a policy in the

PENN MUTUAL LIFE,
 921-3-5 Chestnut St.

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY

N. E. Cor. Broad and Chestnut Sts.

CAPITAL, $2,500,000

Chartered 1836

SURPLUS 7,500,000

ACTS AS EXECUTOR, ADMINISTRATOR, TRUSTEE, ACTS AS TRUSTEE OF CORPORATION MORTGAGES, ASSIGNOR, AND RECEIVER. DEPOSITORY UNDER PLANS OF REORGANIZATION. REGISTERAR AND TRANSFER AGENT. INTEREST ALLOWED ON INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATION ACCOUNTS. ASSUMES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL ESTATE.

Safes to Rent in Burglar-proof Vaults.

E. B. MORRIS, President.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. of Philadelphia

409 Chestnut Street Capital $1,000,000, fully paid

Surplus and Undivided Profits belonging to the Stockholders, $ 4,457,613.08
 Surplus belonging to Insurance Account, 6,317,764.47
 Assets of the Company, 61,615,271.43

Insures Lives, Grants Annuities, Receives Money on Deposit, Acts as Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Trustee, Assignee, Committee, Receiver, Agent, Etc.

OFFICERS.

Samuel R. Shipley, President
 T. Wistar Brown, Vice-President
 Asa S. Wing, Vice-President
 Joseph Ashbrook, Manager of Insurance Dept.
 J. Roberts Foulke, Trust Officer
 David G. Alsop, Actuary
 J. Barton Townsend, Assistant Trust Officer
 Samuel H. Froth, Treasurer
 C. Walter Barton, Secretary

DIRECTORS.

James V. Watson,
 William Longstreth,
 Edward H. Ogden,
 Thomas Scattergood,
 J. Preston Thomas,
 Robert M. Janney,
 Marriot C. Morris,
 Frank H. Taylor.

Boxes in Modern Safe Deposit Vaults, $5 and upwards.

WALL PAPER of

Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
 Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,

1624 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.

902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

Club Rates: Other Periodicals, 1904.

We announce our Club Rates for other Periodicals for 1904. Read the figures given, and also read the notes below.

We will send FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER one year, with any of the periodicals named below, for the amount stated "for both."

WEEKLIES.		MONTHLIES.
Periodicals.	Price for both.	Periodicals.	Price for both.
Springfield Republican, ($1),	$2.90	British Friend, (6s, 6d & postage),	$3.75
The Nation, ($3),	4.80	Scribner's Magazine, ($3),	4.85
Literary Digest, ($3),	4.50	The Century Magazine, ($4),	5.60
Christian Register, ($2),	4.00	Harper's Magazine, ($4),	5.30
Scientific American, ($3),	4.60	Atlantic Monthly, ($4),	5.30
Sunday School Times, ($1),	2.85	North American Review, ($5),	6.10
Journal of Education, ($2.50),	4.35	St. Nicholas, ($3),	4.60
The New Voice, ($1), new subs.,	2.65	Lippincott's Magazine, ($2.50),	3.80
Renewals,	2.95	The Chautauquan, ($2),	3.90
City and State, ($2),	3.60	Scattered Seeds, ($0.50),	2.35
The Outlook, ($3),	5.00	The Farm Journal, ($0.50),	2.40
The Youths' Companion, ($1.75),		Table Talk, ($1),	2.85
New subscriptions,	3.35	Harper's Bazar, ($1),	2.90
Renewals,	3.75

Persons wishing other periodicals than those named above should write to us and we will give prices.

Where several periodicals in the list are wanted, find the net price of each (if ordered through us), by subtracting $2.00 from the rate given under the heading "price for both."

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

A Religious and Family Journal

PHILADELPHIA, FIFTEENTH AND CHERRY STREETS, TENTH MONTH 17, 1903.

Baltimore Yearly Meeting.

RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.

Friends desiring to attend the approaching Baltimore Yearly Meeting are informed that arrangements have been made with the railroad companies so that those near the following railroads can obtain excursion tickets to Baltimore and return at a special rate of one fare and one-third for the round trip.

By applying personally or by letter to the undersigned, or to Friends' Book Association, southwest corner of Fifteenth and Race Streets, Philadelphia, card orders on the ticket agents for tickets may be obtained of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Pennsylvania Railroad Division,—any point east of Pittsburg; Philadelphia and Erie Division, United Railroads of New Jersey Division, West Jersey Railroad, Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad, Philadelphia and Baltimore Central Railroad, Baltimore and Potomac Railroad, Northern Central Railway, and the Alexandria & Frederickburg Railway. Also the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, east of the Ohio river and south of New York City, or other leased or affiliated lines within these limits. Tickets may be purchased from the 20th to the 28th of Tenth month, inclusive with limit of expiration Eleventh month 4th, 1903, inclusive.

These orders are not valid if presented at any point where the excursion rate is less than twenty-five cents. When orders are to be forwarded by mail—a two-cent stamp should be paid by postage.

EDWARD STARK, JR.,
6 South Street, Baltimore.
W. THOMAS STARR,
North and Centre Streets, Baltimore.

LODGING ACCOMMODATIONS AT PARK AVE. MEETING-HOUSE, BALTIMORE.

Friends desiring to avail themselves of the accommodations provided at Park Avenue Meeting-house, are informed that the rooms will be ready for occupancy on Sixth day, the 23d of Tenth month, for those who have early engagements.

For those who cannot be accommodated at the meeting-house, or who may prefer to lodge elsewhere, board or lodging can be obtained in the neighborhood at a moderate cost. The committee is prepared to furnish the names of those who offer such accommodations.

In compliance with the arrangements made in 1902, Friends who desire accommodations at Park Avenue Meeting-house, are requested to make known their wish to the committee appointed in each monthly meeting, who will forward the names to the proper persons in Baltimore. The committee on entertainment at Park Avenue can receive applications only through the monthly meeting's committee.

This arrangement, such as it does, an equitable apportionment to each monthly meeting, has been found to give general satisfaction, and it is hoped that Friends will conform as fully as possible to the instructions which have been forwarded.

JOHN J. CORNELL, Chairman Enter. Com.,
The Plaza.
BERTHA JANNEY, Secretary,
The Plaza.

The Principles of the Religious Society of Friends, and Some of Its Testimonies.

By John J. Cornell.

Fourth edition, with recent portrait of author. 45 pages, paper. 10 cents; per dozen, 90 cents. Endorsed by Conference of Young Friends' Associations. For sale by ARTHUR K. TAYLOR, care of the Friedenwald Co., Baltimore, or FRIENDS' BOOK ASSOCIATION, Philadelphia.

The Plan is the Thing that counts most for or against effective advertising. Consult

THE BIDDLE PRESS,
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS
S. E. Cor. 10th and Filbert Sts., Phila.

WANTED.

WANTED.—COPIES OF FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER of Tenth month 2d, 1903. Address this Office.

WANTED.—IN ATLANTIC CITY A MOTHER'S helper to assist in the care of two children and the sewing. Address No. 15, this Office.

WANTED.—SMALL FAMILY TO LIVE IN house with physician, in Tioga. Rent, light and heat in exchange for board of physician and wife. Address No. 12, this Office.

WANTED.—COPIES OF THE "PENNSYLVANIA FREEDMAN," published in Philadelphia. Either bound volumes or single copies. Cash will be paid for them. Address J. C., this Office.

WANTED.—BY A FRIEND, A POSITION AS companion and reader for invalid or elderly lady. Address No. 10, this Office.

WANTED.—EVENING EMPLOYMENT, TO assist physician with accounts and correspondence, or other work. A. B. C., this Office.

BOARDING.

REFINED BOARDERS WANTED. FRIENDS. Second-floor front and single room. Ellen K. Leedom. 1615 Green Street.

BOARD.—FOR TWO YOUNG WOMEN, second-story front, good neighborhood, at 24. City. Address X. Y. Z., this Office.

PERMANENT AND TRANSIENT BOARDERS desired in a Friends' family in Washington. Address SARAH R. MATTHEWS and SISTERS, 1827 Ist., N. W., Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE AND FOR RENT.

TWO SECOND-STORY ROOMS TO RENT, either with or without board, in a Friends' family. Address S. J. R., 1933 Vine Street (N. Logan Square).

TO RENT.—CITY, FULLY FURNISHED, 11-room modern house. Choice resident location, northwest. Will be rented to refined private family for board of owners. Address No. 14, this Office.

LARGE, CHEERFUL, SECOND-STORY front communicating rooms, with board; also a pleasant third-story room, in Friends' family; in pleasant neighborhood, near trolleys, in West Philadelphia. Write or apply 628 North 3rd Street.

FOR RENT.—TWO NEATLY FURNISHED third-floor rooms, well lighted and heated. Address 332 N. 40th Street, West Philadelphia.

FIRST MORTGAGES FOR SALE, BEARING 5 per cent interest: $2,000, $2,500, $3,000, $3,500, $4,000; new and elegant Philadelphia houses. DAVID H. WRIGHT, 1420 Chestnut Street.

J. T. JACKSON & CO.
Real Estate Brokers
Chestnut and 13th Streets
(Southeast Corner)
Rents, Sales, Mortgages, etc., etc.

WILLIAM S. YARNALL
Manufacturing Optician

118 S. 15th St., (4th door below Chestnut St.), Phila.
Morgan Bunting, Arthur Shrigley
BUNTING AND SHRIGLEY
ARCHITECTS
Fifteenth and Cherry Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

BUCK HILL FALLS.

We have three horses, in use at Buck Hill Falls last summer, which we do not need, and which will be sold cheap.

1st. Small bay horse, suitable for a woman to drive, town or country. Just adapted for a small country place.

2d. Small sorrel mare, used the past summer as a saddle horse. Good for driving.

3d. Small strawberry roan, saddle pony, a handsome little horse; has been driven double and single. Would be suitable for phaeton.

If not sold promptly at the reduced prices we are asking for them, will entertain offers from those who will take them for their keep until 1st of Fifth month next.

BUCK HILL FALLS CO.,
1024 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Young Friends' Aid Association Of New York

desires contributions for its Annual Fair, to be held Eleventh month 20th and 21st, 1903. As this will complete our thirtieth year of work, which depends largely upon the proceeds of the fair, we hope our friends will respond liberally.

Contributions of money or articles for sale to be sent to 226 East 10th Street, marked "For the Fair."

Prof. Daniel Batchelor has made a special study of the voice in relation to health, especially as regards nasal and throat troubles.

Correct Habits of Breathing and intonation taught. Address 3104 Euclid Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Home in the Puget Sound Valley.

THE Peoples University, of Olympia, Wash., has for sale some very desirable residence property, improved and otherwise, in the capital city of the State of Washington. It being endowment property a time sale, with annual interest will be acceptable. It also has some well located acreage property, especially desirable for fruit growing. All these properties will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Write for further information to

THE PEOPLES UNIVERSITY,
Olympia, Washington.

WALL PAPER of Attractive Styles

Popular Prices
Samples Free to any Address

A. L. Diamant & Co.,
1624 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. Balderston's Son,

Wall Papers and Decorations.

Window Shades Made to Order.
902 SPRING GARDEN ST., PHILA.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
Friends' Intelligencer Association,
 (LIMITED)

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 PER ANNUM.
 To subscribers residing west of the Mississippi river a discount of one-fourth from this rate, making the price $1.50 per annum.
 To those who get up and forward "Clubs" we will give one extra copy, free, for each ten subscribers.
 Single copies, 5 cents.

DESCRIPTIONS MAY BEGIN AT ANY TIME.
 WHEN IT IS DESIRED TO DISCONTINUE, NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN. WE DO NOT "STOP" PAPERS EXCEPT UPON ORDER OF SUBSCRIBER.

ADVERTISING RATES.—For transient advertisements, 5 cents per line. For longer insertion reduced rates, which will be furnished upon application.
 No advertisement inserted for less than twenty cents.

OFFICES: Y. F. A. BUILDING,
 N. W. Corner Fifteenth and Cherry Sts., Philadelphia.
 *3 TELEPHONE NO. 1-33-55.

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903.—XLII.,	657
POETRY: God's Love,	657
THE LESSON LEAVES,	657
THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS AND THE BIBLE,	658
FRIENDS' NEW TESTAMENT LESSON: Form and Spirit,	661
EDITORIAL: On Being Neighbors,	662
Life from Death,	663
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS,	663
NOTES,	664
COMMUNICATION: Ministry and Silence,	664
FRIENDS AND MONEY-GIVING,	665
FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF FRIENDS' PRINCIPLES IN CANADA,	665
NEW WORKERS WANTED,	665
A WHITTIER PILGRIMAGE,	666
WOOLMAN'S JOURNAL AS A SCHOOL CLASSIC,	667
EDUCATIONAL: Swarthmore College,	668
CONFERENCES, ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.,	668
LITERARY NOTES,	669
AUTUMNAL DAYS,	670
MISCELLANY: One Lynchers's Confession,	670
CURRENT EVENTS,	670
NEWS NOTES,	672
CALENDAR OF EVENTS OF INTEREST TO FRIENDS,	671

CRANE'S MAKE BUT ONE GRADE OF ICE CREAM AND CAKES, AND THAT IS, THE BEST THAT MONEY AND SKILLED WORKMANSHIP CAN PRODUCE. CALL AND SEE IT MADE AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELF. GOODS SENT TO ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.
 — SEND FOR CATALOGUE. —
CRANE'S, 18th and Filbert Sts.
 5 PHONES.

THE WALTER SANITARIUM

The Original
 Wernersville Sanitarium

Nearest, largest, best, it has its own Post Office,
 WALTERS PARK, PA.

Avoid delays: do not address Wernersville. Illustrated booklet.

Swarthmore College

SWARTHMORE, PENNA.

JOSEPH SWAIN, LL.D., President.

Under care of Friends. Send for catalogue.

FRIENDS' SCHOOL,

GREEN STREET, GERMANTOWN,

GERMANTOWN PREPARATIVE MEETING.

Kindergarten, Primary, Intermediate and Higher Departments. Manual Training.

For circulars address

ELIZABETH M. ROBERTS, Principal.

Friends' Central School,

FIFTEENTH AND RACE STS.,

PHILADELPHIA.

Under care of the Monthly Meetings of Philadelphia; furnishes a practical, guarded education, and prepares for college.

EUGENE BAKER, } Principals.
 ANNA W. SPEAKMAN, }

Circulars on application.

George School,

NEAR NEWTOWN, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

Under the care of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Course of study extended and thorough, preparing students either for business or for College.

For catalogue, apply to

JOSEPH S. WALTON, Principal,
 George School, Penna.

Abington Friends' School,

FOR BOARDING AND DAY PUPILS OF BOTH SEXES.

Near Jeokintown, Penna., 10 miles from Philadelphia.

Under the care of Abington Monthly Meeting. Liberal course of study. Students prepared for college or business.

The home-like surroundings make it especially attractive to boarding pupils. Students admitted whenever there are vacancies. Send for circulars to

GEORGE M. DOWNING, M. S., Principal,
 Or, JENKINTOWN, PA.

CYNTHIA G. BOSLER, Sec'y, Ogontz, Pa.

Chappaqua Mountain Institute,

A FRIENDS' BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The building is modern, and the location is the hill country thirty-two miles north of New York City.

For circulars, address

CHAPPAQUA MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE,
 Chappaqua, New York.

Friends' Academy,

LOCUST VALLEY, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

A Boarding and Day School for Boys and Girls, under the care of Friends. Thorough instruction to fit for business or to enter college.

Terms are moderate by reason of endowment.

For particulars address

A. DAVIS JACKSON, B. S., Principal,
 Locust Valley, N. Y.

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL,

New stone buildings; cottage plan; light, heat, ventilation, and drainage the best; combined advantages of individual attention and class education.

For circulars address

ARTHUR H. TOMLINSON, Principal,
 Swarthmore, Pa.

The Committee on Education of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting has appointed Louis B.

Ambler, A.M. (University of Pennsylvania), Superintendent of Educational Interests. Committees having charge of Friends' Schools, wishing assistance in securing suitable teachers or to other scholastic matters, are invited to communicate with him, and all Friends qualified as teachers and desiring positions are invited to register.

The superintendent will be found in Room 3, Friends' meeting-house, at 15th and Race Streets, each Sabbath-day, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Correspondence should be addressed to LOUIS B. AMBLER, 140 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

JOSEPH L. THOMAS,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 106 Market Street, Camden, N. J.

G. HERBERT JENKINS,
 ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW,
 929 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
 Also member Montgomery county Bar.

WILLIAM G. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 No. 133 SOUTH TWELFTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA.
 Conveyancing and Investing.

JOSEPH T. FOULKE,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 OFFICES: { 662 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Penna.
 } Ambler, Montgomery Co., Pa.

ALFRED L. SELLERS,
 CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT,
 619 Mutual Life Building, Philadelphia.

JOHN FABER MILLER,
 325 SWEDGE STREET, NORRISTOWN, PENNA.
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 Practicing in Montgomery and Philadelphia counties.

WILLIAM TAYLOR,
 ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
 Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Stenography, Typewriting, Mimeographing and Reporting.

LYDIA ARETE CONN,
 805 Provident Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Established 1850 at 824 North Second Street.

WATCHES.

As one of the oldest houses in the watch trade—established three generations ago—and up-to-date in every feature of the business, we are able to offer the best and most serviceable watches for the least money. Give us a call.

GEORGE C. CHILD,
 27 S. 9th St., (above Chestnut, opposite Post Office.)

Y. F. A. Building,
 140 North Fifteenth Street, Philad'a

FOR FRIENDS AND OTHERS.

Convenient, Restful, Homelike

Table d'hote 25 cents.

Dinner, 12 to 2 p.m.

Breakfast, 7 to 8.30 a.m. Supper, 6 to 7 p.m.

COMFORTABLE ROOMS:

One occupant, 75 cents per night; $3 per week

Two occupants, 50 cents each per night;

$2 each, per week.

Also attend ELIZA H. WORRELL, Clerk

*Phone 1-33-55.

ELLWOOD HEACOCK
UNDERTAKER
 TELEPHONE
1313 VINE STREET
 ESTABLISHED 1860

FRIENDS' INTELLIGENCER

Established 1844.
The Journal 1873. }

PHILADELPHIA, TENTH MONTH 17, 1903.

{ Volume LX.
Number 42.

GOOD WORDS FOR 1903. XLII.

WHILE people's minds run in the earthly, after the creatures and changeable things, changeable ways and religions, and changeable, uncertain teachers, their minds are in bondage, and they are brittle and changeable, tossed up and down with windy doctrines, thoughts, notions and things; their minds being out of the unchangeable truth in the inward parts, the light of Jesus Christ, which would keep them to the unchangeable.

GEORGE FOX.

From his Journal.

GOD'S LOVE.

THE dial

Receives many shades, and each points to the sun,
The shadows are many, the sunlight is one.
Life's sorrows still fluctuate: God's love does not,
And his love is unchanged when it changes our lot.
Looking up to this light, which is common to all,
And down to those shadows, on each side that fall,
In time's silent circle, so various for each,
Is it nothing to know that they never can reach,
So far, but that light lies beyond them forever?

OWEN MEREDITH.

For Friends' Intelligencer.

THE LESSON LEAVES.

At the next summer's conference a decision must be reached as to the nature and scope of the First-day School Lesson Leaves. Would it not be desirable to talk over in the columns of the INTELLIGENCER some of the matters connected therewith? This article is intended rather to open up such questions by presenting one person's view, than to answer them in any final way.

Two matters have been frequently brought up by correspondence and in discussion, one of small importance and one of very great importance. The first is the numbering of the lessons instead of dating them. The reason for the former plan is that no system of dating would be correct for all schools. Some have vacation in winter, some in summer, while a few—a very few—have no vacation at all. A system of dating which would suit one set would not suit another unless a lesson was prepared for every First-day in the year. This used to be the plan and it is satisfactory to the few schools which meet every First-day in the year; but it results, of course, in breaking up the continuity of the lessons for all the others. If each lesson were an isolated unit, unconnected with any other, this would make no difference; but it is very desirable, is it not—that there should be continuity. And this will be attained by publishing no more than will be generally used during the year and by numbering them instead of dating them. There would be very little labor involved if, when the quarterlies arrive each teacher would date all of them for his class, or the superintendent for the school, which would meet all the demands of both views.

The other matter is a more serious one. There is a demand more or less strong and constant for lessons which—at least as to the portion of Scripture used—shall be uniform for all grades, and which by preference shall be the selections of the International Series. The reasons advanced in favor of the uniform lesson are; (1) the sentimental fitness of the whole school working on the same topic, (2) the advantage to the opening or closing exercises of having all minds engaged alike, (3) the convenience in home preparation of the whole family working on the same subject, (4) the great advantage in the way of lesson helps, since the same matter will be available for teachers of every grade. For the International Series in particular, in addition to these things, there is the wider sentiment involved in feeling that our work is in the same line with that of thousands of others, and the more practical reason that it enables us to join with schools of other denominations in local unions. The further reason is sometimes advanced that we are thus armed for supporting our own point of view at the time when such preparation is most likely to be needed. The great mass of materials in daily and weekly papers, as well as in lesson quarterlies and books of commentary make the fourth general reason to apply with special force to the International Series.

It will somewhat clear the ground perhaps if we stop here to note the aim of the First-day School. In the writer's opinion this is to give opportunity for such training and development of the expanding soul of the child as will make for conversion for the "new birth" for the "laying down of life" in order to find greater and fuller life. In the orderly course of young lives the period for this momentous fixing of ideals falls in the period of adolescence centering about the fifteenth year. The years leading up to maturity demand very various subject matter, very various teaching. Now which shall be primary and which secondary—the members of the class or a sentimental desire for uniformity, the members of the class or the general exercise. Shall we adopt the lesson to the child or to the end of making possible a general review? Such questions need only to be asked to be answered. But cannot both ends be met by adopting the same subject matter to different grades? The suggestion is plausible—it is possible, but only by omitting much material valuable for different grades, and often by distorting the meaning of the Scriptures. There is no more interesting matter in the Bible for little folk than the story of Joseph and his brethren, or of Moses in the bulrushes; but these are not available materials for mature minds. The prophets deal with questions which are near and vital to older people but much of their writings is wholly unsuited to children. What would a child of seven to ten years do with Revelation or with the Epistle to the Hebrews? A recent book on "Principles and Ideals for the Sunday School," by Professors Burton and Mathews, of the University of Chicago, says that an effort so to teach "inevitably results either in the maltreatment of the Scriptures or the confusion of the child, and usually in both." Again the book quoted says "almost every argument that can be urged for uniform lessons in the Sunday-school might be urged for such a course in the public schools." Does any one advocate such a plan in the public school?

That it would be desirable for home study to have uniform lessons is certainly true—if the lessons are proper ones for the students, not otherwise. As to lesson helps they are available, or may be made so, for all grades. Those so widely published in connection with the International Series are in many cases worse than no helps, in that they are frequently misleading or false in both direct statement and in implication; and where the matter is unobjectionable otherwise it is often trivial to the last degree. I open a Quarterly widely used, now before me, and see the creation of Adam set down at 4000 B. C.; the selection of Saul as king told in a thoroughly misleading way; Goliath is confidently stated to have been "nine or ten feet high," and the whole Bible story is presented in perfectly literal and dogmatic fashion. At the end of lesson 11 we pass abruptly from the story of David's kingship to a lesson from the first epistle of Peter. Many commentaries are valuable, it is true, but our teachers generally have no means of distinguishing and are often at the mercy of prejudiced doctrinal presentations.

The arrangement of a properly graded course will be the subject of another paper. It is hoped that general consideration of this subject can be brought about during the coming year.

JESSE H. HOLMES.

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS AND THE BIBLE.

Read at a "Friends' Social Evening," Sydney, Australia, by William Benson, and published in The Australian Friend, for Eighth month.

THE following paper must be accepted as one of several on the same subject. It does not profess to cover the whole ground. It deals with one aspect only, and would be inadequate, if not misleading, if it were thought to do more.

I have not seen the papers contributed by others, but I understand them to be studies of the views of our earliest Friends, and so there seems room left for me to touch on the present-day aspect of the question. Yet, since the present has its roots in the past, I must myself begin with some historical preface, that we may realize what was vitally distinctive in the Quaker standpoint, and why it should have seemed so novel and unsound a doctrine to the Christian professors in England 250 years ago.

In all questions of faith, man, since earliest times, has longed for some infallible guidance.

Our Saviour gained the ear of the multitude for His teaching because He taught as one having authority.

In later ages and even down to this day, the great Church of Rome has based its claims upon the alleged divine and infallible authority, centered in the Pope as Christ's sole representative on earth.

But at the epoch of the Reformation there had been an absolute and violent rupture. England with other Protestant countries had altogether severed itself from Rome, rejecting its authority, and scouting its pretensions to interfere or pronounce in matters either spiritual or temporal.

What was now to fill the vacant place as the Soul's court of appeal?

The claim of Rome to prescribe the world's belief was ousted by the demand for the right to exercise individual judgment. But upon what foundation was private judgment to build? There was but one answer. The Bible; interpreted, every man for himself. Even yet we hear around us the echoes of the long contention, still unsettled. The strife has often been very bitter, and partisans on either side have pushed their arguments and assertions beyond all reasonable limits.

They were doing so in George Fox's time. To oppose the prestige of the Roman hierarchy with its wealth of long descent, its unbroken tradition, and its priestly succession inherited through the laying on of hands from the very times of the Apostles (a sanction then esteemed most essential)—to oppose all this, the latter found it necessary to invest their new guide with an authority equally divine, infallible, and convincing.

They clothed the Bible with every divine attribute. They declared it, and not the Pope, to be the sole and absolute rule of faith and conduct—the complete and all-sufficient revelation of God's will and purposes, beyond which nothing was to be hoped for or accepted—and the sole medium between God and man for the present and the future, as it was the sole record of His dealings in the past.

The doctrine of the inspiration of the Scriptures was pushed almost to the length of declaring every word to be of equal weight and value—absolute God-given truth—free from all taint of human imperfection. The human element was to be wholly ignored. The Scriptures were to be accepted as flawlessly divine, unhesitatingly, unquestioningly, and in the spirit of a worshiper.

Thus was the letter deified. The Bible itself bore record that the letter killeth—the flesh profiteth nothing—while the Spirit is the true source of light and life, but this was forgotten, and as the marvelous outburst, which we speak of as the Puritan era, gradually lost its first fire and chilled into formalism, the general religious life of England sank to a lower level, it bred more than enough of controversy, but it manifested less and less of holy living in the Spirit of Christ.

Such were the conditions that surrounded those who became the first to bear the name of Friends. They were men and women of deep feeling, earnestly seeking to know more of God. They loved their Bible, but they craved for something more. Its pages did not fulfill all the heart's needs, for they felt the want of more light to enable them better to understand.

Fox was but one among hundreds yearning for light, going to every place and person where help might be possible, to seek it, and turning away time after time well-nigh heart-broken because no man could aid him. At last the light did dawn upon him, when from within his own breast came the message, "There is one even Christ who can speak to thy condition"—the Spirit of God, the promised Comforter, to lead into all truth. Surrendered to this direct guidance, and living in the same spirit which had moved holy men of old, Fox and others had, to use their now quaint phrase, "wonderful openings out" of truth. The Bible, far from falling into a lessened esteem, became more precious than ever to those who felt their spirits to be akin to the spirit in which the Scriptures themselves had been given forth. How could it be otherwise? Only those that are in the spirit can discern the things of the spirit. The most telling appeal in a foreign tongue does not move us, because we do not understand it. Even in our native speech it moves us little if we listen to it with hostile or indifferent minds, but if we are one in spirit with the speaker, how his words strike home with richness of meaning, lift us and carry us on to heights we had hardly before dreamt of. And so it was with our early Friends and the Bible. They found its teaching to accord with the teaching of the light within their own hearts by which they were enabled to discern the things of God in the Bible itself and in all the daily concerns of life.

Those times were very ignorant as we measure knowledge. Scholastic analysis—the higher criticism—all those new and, to some, doubtful sidelights that now perplex the path of the timorous were then unthought of. Every age has its own difficulties. Our forefathers in the faith took their Bible as they found it, accepting it as written from beginning to end to testify to Christ. In the light of the Spirit they recognized its divine side, but they equally clearly saw its humanity too. As an idol they could not worship it, but as the sole record of our Saviour's life and teaching, and, as such, the outward guide for faith and conduct, they could and did revere and accept it, but not solely upon its own authority but because it was commended to them by the Holy Spirit. At this point the divergence between George Fox and the current teaching of the time becomes clear. It was as to the question of the ultimate authority in matters of religion. Infallible Rome had arrogated that position for herself. Then the reformers had claimed it for an unchallengeable, infallible Bible. Now the Quakers were claiming it for the light of the Holy Spirit shining in the heart of man, by which even the Bible itself was to be tried. Hence they so jealously discriminated between the "Word" made flesh and dwelling amongst men; and the record, be it ever so holy and inspired, that did but tell of Him.
